Promotion is based on the publicity which Betty Grable and Jackie Coogan, stars in "College Swing," have received as "America's most beloved young Mr. and Mrs." and bears an endorsement of the home laundry by Betty Grable.

Exhibitors throughout the country will have a full line of attractive accessories, offered by Bendix. Two thousand special 24-sheets will be posted throughout the country and will be available for local sniping with theatre playdate by exhibitors.

In addition to the 24-sheet poster there will be available for theatre owners a special five-color; one-sheet size poster suitable for window and inside displays at dealers. A national advertising campaign is under way which includes 600, 400 and 200 line ads in 175 key city newspapers with art of Betty Grable and full credit to "College Swing." Theatre owners will also have for local use a one-minute trailer in which Betty Grable announces the playdate of the picture and outlines full details of the local contest with the top prize being a new Bendix Home Laundry.

Preview Night In Altoona

Advertising Thursday nights as "preview nights," City Manager Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa., ran stories in local dailies inviting audiences to select the pictures they would like to see previewed. Cards with list of pictures are distributed on which patrons write their choice, and thus the Strand's cash customers are satisfied each week and that the picture they will view, shall be one of their own choice.

Phonograph Records Sell "Firefly"

Irving Lipnick, Warners' Jeffrey Theatre, Chicago, to publicize his date of "Firefly" secured the phonograph record song hits from the picture and played them over his amplifying system. Horns were placed in the outer lobby on low volume and records were played during the peak hours on the breaks and after the box office was closed.

Tieup was also arranged with local dancing school for a kiddie revue on the stage of the Jeffrey. Talented youngsters performed for prizes.

Music Hall Displays "Jezebel" Magazine Ads

Taking advantage of the numerous publicity breaks accorded "Jezebel" in several of the most important national magazines, the Radio City Music Hall recently constructed an effective lobby display around this large publicity barrage.

Full page layout, covers carrying pictures of Bette Davis and other publicity material were mounted on an easel with copy calling attention to the large amount of space accorded the film.

"Beloved Brat" Ads In American Weekly

Striking full page ad for "Beloved Brat" will appear in the May 1st issue of the American Weekly, which is circulated to about 7,000,000 families throughout the nation. The ad contains drawings of scenes from the film and presents a ten-point test for parents, tying in with the background of the picture.

The ads have space for the insertion of theatre names and the dates, which will be changed in each territory, so that local theatres will receive full benefit of the circulation in their communities.

Governor Heads Citywide Parade For 'Snow White'

Intensive campaign was instituted by Manager Dewey Mousson, Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., for his premiere of "Snow White." Private screening was held for underprivileged children, after which Governor Gordon Browning led a parade through the principal streets of the city, followed by the seven dwarfs, Snow White and the audience. Through tieup with local ice cream company, booth was erected in front of theatre, at which the kiddies were served cones.

Snow White mingled with the children, station WLAC broadcast the activities. This transcription was broadcast that night and again the following week. Newspapers picked up the story and played it up big in amusement section.

Snow White and the dwarfs also visited orphanage with Mousson, where the theatremen told the children the story of the fairy tale. Art work and publicity breaks were secured on this in all local dailies. Tiein netted the theatremen considerable goodwill.

All principal street intersections, sidewalks and crossings were stenciled with playdates and drawings of the dwarfs in colors. Leading store devoted three of its windows to a display with staff of store's artists reproducing the dwarfs' home and woodland scene, using King Cole figures. Beautifully lighted, such scenes as the dwarfs marching home from work over fallen tree-trunks with waterfalls were depicted.

Merchants Aid

Through tieup with chain grocer, five-foot counter displays and window showings were planted, fleet of trucks were properly bannered with title and playdates and 130 newsstands and drug counters carried color cards.

Traffic squad of police department co-operated by placing four color banners on every parking zone and safety sign and standard in city and suburbs. Leading preachers urged their parishioners to see the show, devoting their sermons to a discourse on the film. At special screening, comment cards were distributed, and all sang paeans of praise. Board of Education decreed the Disney Art Study course an immediate part of the curriculum in all Nashville grammar, junior and senior high schools and an extensive radio campaign was launched over WLAC and WSIX. Transcriptions were landed once daily on each station with plug both before and after broadcast, in addition to four spot announcements.

All street cars in Nashville and suburbs carried jumbo cards on dashboards and the Union Station was bannered with a 52-foot cloth display featuring sketches of all the dwarfs. This was also duplicated on viaduct in downtown section of city where it attracted considerable attention.

Newspaper free space was considerable, including front page stories, streamers, stories on woman's page, sport, magazine sections, book pages, etc., with art and editorials to boot.

Shown above is interior of one of United Airlines Mainliners, which will convey Quigley Grand Awards winners Jules Seltzer, Warner Brothers, Philadelphia, and Ted Kirkmeyer, Rio, Helena, Montana, across country to Studioland. Preparations are practically completed to honor the showmen out there, while in New York the first quarter of the 1938 Quigley Awards draws to a close and entrants are advised that deadline for these campaigns is April 16th.

Much Free Space on "Goldwyn Follies"

Extraordinary newspaper publicity breaks featured the "Goldwyn Follies" campaign as executed by Manager Jim Luntzell of the Oriental Theatre in Chicago. Special stories were planted in leading papers with layouts and double trucks. Four column art was landed in Sunday Herald and Examiner, front page in the Chicago Evening American and second section contained full picture credits on Zorina as she passed through.

For a reported first time in three years, the Chicago Daily Times was cracked for a five-day Charlie McCarthy wisecrack contest. Cash and tickets were awarded winners, and stories together with winners' names were run daily. Special front was constructed for the engagement on which were used several enlargements of the important scenes in the film. Panels were completely covered with stills and 40 by 60 easel with blowups from Life was used on sidewalk in front of house.

Special stories and art were placed in the hands of all radio editors at all papers and radio tieup was effected with Station WENR to find Chicago's outstanding radio ventriloquists. Announcements were made and eliminations were held at the NBC Studios, with winner presented over local radio amateur hour. Wires received from Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy with loving cup, which was presented to the winner on stage. Inscription on same which carried picture credits was read over air and stories ran in radio columns following day. Full window in Civic Opera Building showed the loving cup, cards and stills on the picture, thus giving the date additional plugs week before.

Radio headliner on the Herald and Examiner's Homemaker Hour presented a fine plug for the picture by doing an imitation of the Ritz Brothers. Outstanding among Luntzell's street gags was the use of five girls, each wearing Charlie McCarthy masks, top hats and chest banners, who paraded downtown sections (see photo in Round Table picture section). Ballyhoo which theatreman reports as virtually stopping traffic brought him front-page breaks. At designated periods during the day girls joined theatre's roving "man-on-the-streets," where they would broadcast, getting in plugs for the picture. Special luncheon for the girls and newspaper critics was held and the party also included Frank Marshall, original creator of Bergen's first dummy.

Tieup was effected with chain drug stores in which they paid for and distributed 500 special fountain streamers with full picture credits and theatre mention throughout their 50-loop and outlying stores. Streamers were used at fountains and on outside windows, still used was one of Ella Logan drinking a soda.

Fox Theatres Hold Amateur Contest

The Fox Theatres in the Denver territory are sponsoring a series of amateur contests in their houses. Winners of the contests held in the various local house will go to Denver to compete in the finals on the stage of the Denver Theatre. The winner will be given a trip to New York and the opportunity of appearing on Major Bowes' program.

How We Staged College Nights In Canada Cities

by CHRIS. G. HOLMES Manager Avalon Theatre

With two Collegiate Institutions in the immediate neighborhood, housing some 3,000 students, the natural desire would be to get as many of these students into your theatre each week as possible.

Throughout the week these students are tied up with school and home studies, and both parent and teacher frown upon anything which might tend to be an inducement to the student to neglect his or her duties.

Barring Saturday, which is, or should be a show night, Friday is the only night left on which the students are free, so it was decided to use Friday night as "Collegiate Night."

With admissions already at a very low ebb, due to extra keen competition in the city, to use cut-rate as the inducement would be unprofitable, besides being poor showmanship, so it was necessary to hit on some kind of an added attraction with appeal to students.

Possessing an excellent stage, which, with a little money spent on it, would equip it for perfect use, what could be better than to include a thirty-minute stage show featuring talent supplied by the Collegiates?

To elevate the idea, "amateur," "contest," "prizes" and all the other angles associated with Amateur Night were studiously omitted from all announcements, approaches and publicity connected with "Collegiate Night." Great pains were taken to disguise the whole set-up by making it appear each performer taking part was semi-professional, at least.

Engages Talent Scout

A talent scout was secured, one who knew the majority of the students, and it was his job to secure the best possible talent. Remuneration was set at $2.00 for a single act, $4.00 for a double, $5.00 for an aggregation, with the complete stage presentation to cost not more than $15 for talent.

To curtail expense, I took the job of master of ceremonies myself, which gave me the opportunity of getting closer to the audience, and of doing a little plugging of policy.

Our first "Collegiate Night" was a huge success, giving us (in the face of Collegiate Hockey and an annual concert in one of the Collegiates) the best Friday in months. In addition, comments from patrons were very favorable and expressions of appreciation for developing local talent were numerous.

Rehearsals and auditions are held each Sunday afternoon, with everyone getting a great kick out of it.

At the second "Collegiate Night" we were fortunate in securing an excellent amateur Hawaiian orchestra, and the stage presentation wound up with Community singing. My assistant, Bob Martin, who has worked hard in helping make "Collegiate Night" a success, acted as master of ceremonies and did a swell job. In fact, the entire staff showed wonderful cooperation, giving much of their own time in a concerted effort to put the show over.

DENVER "SNOW WHITE" ADS

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

M. C. McALEXANDER

at the Fox Hanford, Hanford, Cal., has just passed his 11th anniversary in showbusiness. Mac started at the old National Theatre, Stockton, and was transferred from there to the Broadway in Chico as doorman and assistant. Resigned to enter other fields, but the urge was too strong and after a few brief months returned to the theatres as assistant manager of the Toaky, in Lodi. While at that spot this theatreman learned projection and entered the booth. After a time at the Strand in Oakdale in the same capacity Mac went to the front of the house and accepted a job as assistant at the California, Santa Rosa, which position he held until going into the Hanford.

down in Raleigh, N. C., is assistant manager of the Wake Theatre for the North State Theatres. Wallace started at that house as doorman and assistant, which position he held for two years before being transferred temporarily to the White Theatre as house manager and publicist.

is the assistant manager of the Rio Theatre in Billings, Mont., and started as usher at the Liberty there. From that spot in the same capacity Nelson served at the Lyric and Rio Theatres and in addition to acting as assistant at the Rio is in charge of exploitation.

manages the West End Theatre in Atlanta, Ga., and we are mighty glad to welcome this Lucas and Jenkins theatreman, since most of this circuit's men are members of the Round Table. When attending high school, Bill started at the West End as usher, later doorman and then assistant manager.

in Troup, Texas, manages the Texas Theatre for the Lutzer Brothers, and started back in 1931 in the usual jobs of ushering, etc., even working in the booth for a time, until he became full time projectionist, which position he held for a period of four years until becoming manager of the Texas.

in Westfield, Mass., manages the Strand Theatre for the Western Massachusetts Theatres. Cormier started as doorman at the Paramount Theatre there and worked up until attaining his present job. Since we number many active members from Albert's circuit, we hope to add his name to the roster of those who report to us frequently.

in Baltimore, Md., manages the Broadway Theatre for the Rome Circuit, starting there as doorman and was later transferred to the Rialto as doorman. Worked there for a time and was then promoted to the position of manager, at which spot he remained for two years before going over to the Broadway.

PATTY LOU SEFF, daughter of Manager Ely E. Seff, Garden Theatre, Davenport, Ia., is the avid reader of Motion Picture Herald. Being the showman that he is, Seff is doubtless breaking in Patty Lou at a tender age.

PAUL M. JOHANCEN

at the Capitol in Harrisburg, Pa., started as usher-manager of the Capitol Theatre and when the Paxtang and Star Theatres were added to the Hill Amusement Circuit, was made manager of the Capitol in addition to doing the advertising for all three houses. Well, Johancen, we shall anticipate hearing from you, so please send along those reports. Harrisburg is well represented in our section, and we look forward to a little lively competition.

manages the Warner Theatre in Memphis, Tenn., and has been associated with local theatres and various local amusement promotions, both legitimate and screen, for a period covering 30 years. Morrison has worked at Loew's Palace, Majestic, Pantages and operated dramatic stock and straight vaudeville for several years. This new member is no stranger to our pages and has already contributed, but this is just the official Round Table welcome which we extend to all new members.

in Hope, Arkansas, is managing the New Theatre, one of R. V. McGinnis' houses. This showman started in the business as assistant manager of the Liberty Theatre in Jonesboro, Ark., and is now working for one of our good friends. Remember, Gene, signing on the dotted line means that you are morally obligating yourself to keep us posted on your activities, so let's hear from you real soon.

manages the Roosevelt Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., an independent house. Previously Kleinerman was assistant manager of the Harlem Casino, a large cabaret in Pittsburgh, before entering the theatre. Saul says the Roosevelt is the first house he has ever managed, so we extend a cordial invitation to him to tell us how he puts over his shows.

is the assistant manager of the Bell Cinema in Brooklyn, and started with Loew's as an usher, later as a reel boy. Eventually Sid joined the Museum Theatre Corporation as an usher and was later promoted to his present position. Between Ginsberg and Deborah Washer, we expect to have this circuit well represented and meet them personally soon.

is the assistant manager at the Princess Theatre in Montreal and is another Famous Players theatreman to join our ranks. In 1930, leaving his position as a structural draftsman, Bill started as spare time usher at the Princess, then was promoted to chief of service and now is assistant at that house, from which spot we look forward to hearing from him frequently.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Our uncle, Nimrod Jenkins, was mixed up in that gold rush of "Forty Nine" and we looked to see if we could see him in the cast of "Gold Is Where You Find it," but he wasn't there, unless Russell Simpson played his part, but we guess that couldn't be because our uncle was a rather short, stubby feller, while Russell was tall and skinny. Then we got to wondering if Allen Jenkins could be a grandson of our uncle.

We cease to wonder at the preparations for war when we see 'em dance the Big Apple, which must be a reproduction of the Sioux Indian war dance. Johnnie, get your gun.

It has been quite common for some producers to advertise their star as "the divine" such and such. They may not know it, but that kind of advertising acts on the public like a dose of castor oil.

It isn't "the survival of the fittest" any more. Our observation of late is that the expression should be changed to "the survival of the crookedest."

The other day we saw a picture in the HERALD of our friend, Bill Weaver, and a Hollywood star, Marsha Hunt, making imprints of their hands in cement at the opening of the National Screen Service studio. In time these imprints will wear off, but the imprint on the public mind that Bill is putting in this magazine will wear until Old Father Time has to get a new scythe.

The paper says that Wallace Beery is to be "best man" at the Garbo-Stokowski event. Gee whiz, what's the matter with the "divine Greta," anyhow. Doesn't she know that Jimmie Durante, W. C. Fields and Joe E. Brown are at leisure? What's the matter with these boys, we'd like to know.

Last night we attended another double feature program at the Moon theatre. The first one was "The Black Doll." We don't know whether they finally found the murderer or not, as it was too deep for us, and besides that, we fell into a doze at the end of the second reel.

The second offering was "She Loved a Fireman." When this started we woke up, and so will you if you love firemen thrills.

Now that Hitler has Austria, what will he want next? Will he want Czechoslovakia, Poland, Serbia and Rumania, and after that, be like the Kaiser, want to rule the whole world? We hope this country has given up the idea of "making the world safe for democracy." What we hope is that this "White Spot" will be kept safe for thrifty people. But then, Ernie hopes we will stop right here and give the people a much needed rest, therefore aufwiedersehen.

COLONEL J. C. JENKINS

Aviation Writers Invited To Paramount Studio

Paramount and Transcontinental Western Air Company have invited 40 aviation editors and writers for magazines and newspapers to attend a four day celebration in Hollywood to mark the start of production on the Paramount picture, "Men with Wings" and the opening of the new TWA scenic route through Boulder City, Nev.

The editors and writers will arrive in Hollywood via TWA on March 31st and will make their headquarters at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel. Shortly after their arrival they will be guests at a hangar luncheon and air exhibition at the flying field where the picture will be filmed in color.

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 films reviewed and classified by the National Legion of decency in its listing for the current week four were found unobjectionable for general patronage, five were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Girl of the Golden West," "Der Lachdokter" (German), "People of Bergslagen" (Swedish), "Rose of the Rio Grande." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for adults: "Gasparone" (German), "Jezebel," "Tipoff Girls," "Sailing Along," "Waian" (Balinese). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Divorce of Lady X."

Record of Clippings Presented to Goldwyn

Two bound volumes of full page publicity breaks received in newspapers by ten leading circuits throughout the country for Samuel Goldwyn productions this year, compiled by Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, were presented to Mr. Goldwyn in New York this week.

The volumes, bound in white leather and embossed in gold, included 342 full pages of pictorial and editorial matter from newspapers in all sections of the country on "Stella Dallas," "Dead End," "The Hurricane," "The Goldwyn Follies," and "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

The publicity directors who contributed to the volumes and their circuits are: Oscar Doob, Loew's theatres; Harry Goldberg, Warner theatres; Frank Starz, Interstate circuit; Rick Ricketson, Fox West Coast; E. V. Dinerman, RKO theatres; John Nolan, Comerford circuit; Bill Hollander, Balaban & Katz; Charles Schlaifer, United Artists and Embassy theatres, San Francisco; Joe Lightstone, Orpheum theatre, Montreal, and J. J. Parker, Portland, Ore.

Strausberg and Leff In New Partnership

Samuel Strausberg, operating 30 theatres in and around Greater New York, effected a partnership Tuesday with Abraham Leff in Mr. Leff's six Bronx theatres, the Freeman, Granada, Lido, Casino, Tower and Zenith.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

VOL. 131, NO. 1

"JOHNNY-ONE-NOTE"

AN outstanding characteristic of "Time," a weekly topical review, is its use of the militant and frequently poisonous adjective. People recorded in its pages are often given one-shot treatments in words such as "beefy," "paunchy," "hirsute." Special delight is had with opportunity to be unpleasant with "hunchback" and its ilk. Friendly mention makes women "plump." Disapproval records them "fat."

¶ This pertains to a technique of journalism which serves two more obvious purposes. It has "inside" connotation calculated to camouflage the fact that the job is a rewrite from some clippings collected by a college-boy-office-boy—known as a "C-B-O-B" in the patois of the "Time" plant—and collated for the rewriter by a spinsterish college girl with flat heels and a collar-and-tie bearing. With the clippings, a collection of news photographs, a lexicon and a certificate of four years' residence in New Haven, a "Time" rewriter is a journalist. In addition to the camouflage, the one-shot adjective system is calculated to challenge attention, which it does, somewhat like an inverted belch in the drawing room. With his typewriter in a cubicle up in the Chrysler building in New York he gets intimate with the personages and scenes of any part of the map, be it Siberia, Stalin's office, Galapagos, or Mr. J. P. Morgan's sickbed. The implication is of the x-ray eye, with television attachments, all wired for sound and in natural colors. The technique started in "Time" with a practice of using obscure middle names of conspicuous persons, and has now expanded to an inference of cosmic penetration.

¶ So it came the other day—"Time" dated March 7—that a "Time" rewriter doing a chore for the department entitled "Cinema"—motion pictures, they mean—while discussing some anti-double bill legislation in Chicago, found opportunity to give a treatment to Mr. Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of Motion Picture Herald, thus:

"Motion Picture Herald's Martin Quigley, Johnny-one-note of the trade press, was plaintively sarcastic: 'This industry is going to be fixed up fine,' wrote he, 'When all the experts get through—making it safe for babies, supplying adult education on the screen and carrying the messages of the assorted propagandists. After all those functions are served the subject of entertainment can be considered . . .'"

¶ "Time," by its remote reporting system, achieved a typical percentage of errors in this paragraph. The "Herald" belongs to Mr. Quigley, not he to it. He is never plaintive, seldom sarcastic. The expression quoted was written by the editor of The Herald.

But "Time" did score a bullseye, with its one-shot characterization of "Johnny-one-note."

The reference was to the long sustained contention of Mr. Quigley, and his publications, that the motion picture's business is entertainment—and entertainment only, so far as the motion picture theatre screen is concerned.

That for several years, in fact ever since the militants of causes and movements became conspicuously pestiferous with their pressures on the screen, has been the one-note of this Johnny-one-note.

¶ From printed page and public rostrum Mr. Quigley has, with the acute disapproval of the propagandists and chiselers-in of other fields of expression, insisted on the right of, and the necessity for, the amusement business tending to its own business.

¶ Smarty "Time," with the x-ray eye and the cosmic comprehension, attending to everybody's business from gynecology to statecraft, neither understands nor approves. There is, to be sure, just a possibility too that "Time" is a shade conscious of the fact that Motion Picture Herald has not always approved the works of the highly entertaining "March of Time" in its bringing to the screen such strange manifestations as the LaGuardia pictures in the midst of a campaign, or such a controversial mess as its "Inside Nazi Germany." Our Johnny-one-note considers the theatre badly served by pictures calculated to stir hates and hisses.

¶ The persistent quality of "Time's" capacity for misunderstanding was early made manifest. At the first editorial attention of a critical nature in The Herald, Mr. Quigley was informed that it was clear Mr. Terry Ramsaye was prejudiced against "Time." More recently Mr. Ramsaye has been informed that the "March of Time" considers that there has never been anything wrong with its pictures, and so it is inescapable that The Herald's attitude can only be explained on the assumption that Mr. Quigley does not like Mr. Henry Luce, publisher of "Time" and its several off-spring. Both assumptions are irrelevant, erroneous.

So it must be said again that Mr. Quigley's Johnny-one-note tune is that the business of the amusement business is amusement—and nothing else.

¶ On the One-Note theme it may be observed that it has been characteristic of the Martin Quigley attitude and technique for many years. Now about a decade ago, it found first important documentary expression in the drafting and promotion of the Production Code. The one note was Decency. It was Mr. Quigley's contention that the motion picture must fortify itself against the temptations of success-at-any-price showmanship willing to compromise and exploit by devices of pictorial harlotry and in contravention of the mores of the civilized elements of the screen audience.

¶ The Production Code became a fact, and in time, with Johnny-one-note persistently piping, it became also effective

"Free" Silver

Raw stock producers and other consumers of "free" silver are expected to benefit materially by the break in the world price of silver, it was said in Washington this week after the government announced its intention of discontinuing the purchase of Mexican metal. The government's stand resulted in the New York price of silver dropping one cent on Monday and another cent on Tuesday. The film stock and jewelry industries are the two largest consumers of "free" silver—the metal available on the London market. It was predicted in Washington that withdrawal of the Treasury's support of the London market may drive the world price down as low as 30 cents an ounce or less. The United States Treasury has been buying up to 5,000,000 ounces of Mexican silver monthly at 45 cents an ounce.

Theatres throughout Mexico are showing trailers urging support for the Government.

in a period of crisis as a document of redemption for a screen sore beset by ills within and critics without.

¶ The Production Code is a Johnny-one-note job. Further, its plan of operation and application is a Johnny-one-note job, made possible by his determined zeal, and the motion picture industry's own appreciation and acceptance of his purpose—cooperation with it.

¶ The currently piped One-Note, the policy of entertainment only for the entertainment screen, is the policy by which the screen rose to dominant position in the amusement industry, and is the policy by which it can continue its dominance.

¶ This is no divergence of policy, but is essentially a derivation and expansion of the One-Note policy of Decency—all pertaining to the contention that the motion picture theatre screen must tend strictly to its own business, being unsullied by panderings and harlotries, by propagandists, up-lifters, downpushers, special pleaders, sensationalists and heckling journalism left, right and center.

Mr. Martin Quigley and his Motion Picture Herald will continue the One-Note policy until Hell freezes over, and thereafter on the ice.

TERRY RAMSAYE

Entertainment Thesis

Dr. Edgar Dale of the bureau of educational research of Ohio State University has written to Martin Quigley arguing against recent expressions in MOTION PICTURE HERALD which set forth the thesis that the sole function of the theatrical screen is entertainment and that it should be reserved for that.

Dr. Dale's letter and comment by Mr. Quigley in the form of an answering letter appear on pages 12, 13 and 14.

No Action

The United States Senate failed to take any action on the Neely anti-block booking and anti-blind buying bill this week when the measure was reached during the calling of the senate calendar. Andrew Edmiston, Democrat of West Virginia, introduced an identical bill in the House of Representatives Wednesday. Little chance was seen for any action on it this year. The week also brought the filing of a brief by the government in the Dallas Interstate Circuit trust case against distributors, and the instituting of a $300,000 damage suit by Laurel Theatres, Los Angeles, against Fox West Coast Circuit and distributors.

These and other developments are explained in detail on page 24.

Mary Will Tell

Speaking before the Woman Pays Club in luncheon session Tuesday at the Hotel Warwick in New York, Mary Pickford, sharing the table as guest of honor with Irene Kuhn, author of the newly acclaimed "Assigned to Adventure," announced that there's to be a new Pickford book. This time it will be an autobiography, and Miss Pickford averred that she would be locked up with her reminiscences and her secretary in a stateroom all the way to Europe on the Normandie.

Miss Pickford's last book, written prior to her marriage to Buddy Rogers, was "Why Not Try God?"

Meanwhile there are reports from Hollywood of negotiations for Mrs. Kuhn's story for production, and reports of her reaffiliation with the motion picture business. While more especially famed for her newspaper and magazine work, she has also been "a Hollywood writer."

Films in Austria

The fate of American film business in Nazified Austria this week still awaited word to home office executives of official announcement of new regulations covering the exporting of United States production to Austria. The majority of companies are marking time pending receipt of word about the impending restrictions, but United Artists has continued to ship films into the country.

The situation is explained on page 20.

Television Suit

The infant television industry took its growing pains into court this week as the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company initiated a legal struggle with the Radio Corporation of America for control of important patents bearing on the electrical processes of the medium.

Details of the suit and other news of the television laboratories are recorded on page 22.

In "Teatro al Día"

A number of new editorial features have been incorporated into the April issue of Teatro al Día, out this week. Heretofore covering only the physical theatre in its editorial scope, this Spanish quarterly, a Quigley publication, beginning with the present number, will also devote itself to the film end of the business. The current issue includes reviews of pictures of special interest to the Latin-American exhibitor, news and views of the trade, and contributions from Teatro al Día correspondents in the foreign markets.

Arts Bill Tabled

The House Education Committee has decided to lay aside a number of educational bills, including those looking to the creation of a Department of Fine Arts, pending further study of a report just prepared by the President's Advisory Committee on Education.

The committee's report does not deal with films in education and only in passing with radio, suggesting that the Government should continue to administer a national program of education by radio "to the extent to which such type of program proves to be desirable."

That Philco Case

Chancellor Josiah C. Wolcott in chancery court at Wilmington, Del., Saturday, denied Radio Corporation of America's petition for reopening and rehearing the litigation brought against it by the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, parent organization of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, to which PSB sought to enjoin RCA from terminating a licensing agreement.

England's Films Bill Establishing New Quotas Becomes a Law

The British Government on Wednesday finally reenacted the Cinematograph Films Act establishing by law for another ten years the proportion of motion pictures to be distributed with imports in the kingdom.

Following previous passage by Commons, the House of Lords Wednesday acted favorably on the bill, and royal assent immediately was given, thus ending one of the longest and sharpest controversies ever witnessed both within the motion picture industry in Great Britain and between various factions of the industry and the Government.

Continuing in existence a quota law which has controlled distribution and exhibition these past ten years, England, through the new law, revises and extends the protection accorded domestic product in its competition with films from abroad. The new law raises the British film quota for distributors from the old graduated scale of 7½ per cent in the first year to 20 per cent in the tenth, to a new scale of 15 per cent in the first year to 30 per cent in the tenth. Similarly, the quota for exhibitors is raised from the old graduation of 5 per cent in the first year to 20 per cent in the tenth, to a new scale of 12½ per cent in the first year to 25 per cent in the tenth.

The Cinematograph Act becomes law for distribution on April 1st (Friday), replacing the old 10-year quota, but does not become applicable to exhibitors until September 30th, the beginning of the new show season.

The exhibitors' short subject quota will begin at 12½ per cent and rise to a high of 22½ per cent, while the distributors' short subject quota will begin at 20 per cent and rise to 30 per cent in the last year of the law.

The two other most important elements of the new measure, particularly as concerns foreign product, are the clauses calling for triple quota value and reciprocity.

The "reciprocity" clause gives a distributor who undertakes to distribute a British feature anywhere else in the world, credit on his quota in England for such distribution.

The so-called "triple quotas" clause permits a producer making an expenditure of at least £37,500 ($187,500) in British studio labor costs, to count that film for three pictures under the distributor quota.

A Films Council is established, with wide discretionary powers, under the general jurisdiction of the Government's Board of Trade. Oliver Stanley, who sponsored the new quota law in Parliament, is president of the Board of Trade.

One other phase of note in the measure is that which excludes from quota consideration those pictures produced in the British dominions, including Canada and Australia.

The trade in England, except British producers, opposed a still higher quota scale unsuccessfully proposed by the House of Lords.

Cables from London Wednesday to the United States carrying word of the quota bill's passage created the impression in the industry here that the bill as finally enacted is better than was forecast in the original report by the Moyne Committee, which was appointed by the Government in March, 1936, to consider the future position of British films in view of the then approaching expiration of the old Cinematograph Act. Not that the new bill is everything to be expected, however. Important film factors here still hope for further consideration in connection with the new general U.S.-British trade treaty conversations now being held at Washington between Secretary of State Cordell Hull and representatives from the British Government.

There appears to be a feeling of appreciation on this side for the efforts made by Joseph P. Kennedy, new ambassador to England, in behalf of the American film interests with regard to the final provisions of the bill.

DEBATE SCREEN AND EDUCATION

DR. EDGAR DALE of Ohio State University's bureau of educational research has written Mr. Martin Quigley seeking to make argument against expressions of Mr. Quigley and MOTION PICTURE HERALD urging that the sole, exclusive business of the motion picture theatre of entertainment is entertainment. Dr. Dale appears to believe that the theatre should share responsibilities with the classroom. He says, incidentally, nothing about asking the classroom to share with the theatre. Mr. Quigley, writing in response, reasserts to Dr. Dale the policy of entertainment only for the amusement screen, pointing out that the motion picture business of today is the normal product of a normal demand, not to be invaded with impunity. —THE EDITOR.

March 12, 1938.

MR. MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief,
MOTION PICTURE HERALD,
Rockefeller Center,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Quigley:

I was very interested in the editorial in the March 4, 1938, issue entitled "New Meddling," in which you criticize the March release of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, "Movies and Propaganda." In fairness to yourself, your publication, and your readers, as well as to the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, it is my conviction that you should publish this letter of comment in the Motion Picture Herald. As a member of the Advisory Board of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, I should like, then, to make the following reply.

You make the statement, "The motion picture has done fairly well in becoming the world's greatest entertainment medium by devoting itself to its own special function of entertainment, by tending to its own business."

In either writing or approving this editorial, you have completely reversed your position, as it was so well stated in your book "Decency in Motion Pictures." In it, you said,

"Not only to youth but to the whole public the motion picture is an agency which assists in establishing ideas and standards. It causes the acceptance of or rejection of ideas, dependent upon the manner and the purport of the presentation. . . .

"What, then, shall this influence be?

"Shall it be for better or for worse?

"There are those who profess themselves to be puzzled that any such questions should be asked. There are others who say that the questions are out of order and out of place; that the motion picture has no responsibility other than to entertain." (Pages 6-7.)

You then proceeded to sharply criticize those who believed that the motion picture has no responsibility other than to entertain. Have you forgotten what you wrote previously, or have you changed your mind?

That the motion picture industry itself recognizes that there are important educational residues from so-called entertainment pictures is illustrated again by a quotation from the Motion Picture Herald:

"Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, spent the full noon hour on Tuesday in private conference with President Roosevelt at the White House. . . . Mr. Hays' visit, it was permitted to be understood,

March 28, 1938.

Doctor Edgar Dale,
Ohio State University,
Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Doctor Dale:

In accordance with your implied request Motion Picture Herald publishes herewith your letter of March 12. Upon this letter which you represent as a reply to the Herald editorial of March 5 I wish to offer the following comment:

In the book "Decency in Motion Pictures" I addressed myself realistically to a consideration of the theatrical motion picture as it is; I did not aim at theoretical discussion of a type of motion picture which does not exist.

The statement you quote, if examined in its context, clearly indicates that I refer to the moral influence of the conventional motion picture. This kind of a picture narrates a dramatic story, presenting persons in action and in reaction upon each other, meeting and somehow solving problems of human conduct. It is my thesis that the manner of presentation of characters in such a story, the explicit or implied attitude toward principles of morality which their conduct assumes, necessarily constitute an influence tending to increase or diminish the respect of audiences for the traditional moralities of civilized man. It is true that the screen behavior of characters in a motion picture assists in establishing ideas of behavior and standards of conduct.

Having assumed this position it necessarily follows that I should insist that the motion picture producer is not free to present a story of immoral implications, however high such a story may rate when considered only on its entertainment potentiality.

I did, as you observe, criticize those who believe, or say they believe, that the motion picture has no responsibility other than to entertain. The argument was addressed to those who contend that the considerations of art warrant the repeal of the Ten Commandments; that an artistic creation even though it tends to deprave may be sanctioned. Least of all did I imagine that among persons assuming to prepare youth for its future duties as citizens and parents there would be confusion as to what was meant.

I can well understand that if a person is inclined to dismiss the code of man's traditional morality as an outmoded fetish he might on occasion be forgetful of the screen's responsibility for decency, upon which I endeavored to insist, and perhaps search for something else as the meaning of the reference quoted. However, I must say that normally this would

was for the purpose of informing the President about the progress to date of the organized motion picture industry in its survey to determine the suitability and advisability of entering America's classrooms, a survey which has been underway since last fall, when the MPPDA engaged several educators to inspect the vaults of member companies to determine what films might be available for school use." (January 22, 1938; Page 8.)

This quotation shows very clearly what was stated in the issue of the Institute of Propaganda Analysis, namely, that education and entertainment are inextricably bound together. It shows, further, that this point of view has been accepted by Mr. Hays himself.

Frankly, I am confused by your arguments. In the release of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis dealing with motion pictures, we spoke with high favor of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "The Life of Emile Zola," "Dead End," and other motion pictures of this type. The release stated these motion pictures did provide social insight, that they did "illuminate problems of human conduct." Do you disagree with our observation that other motion pictures of this type should be produced? Do you object to showing pictures of this sort on the screen? If so, you have been strangely silent about it in your editorial columns.

We part company, of course, on your flat assumption that the kinds of films shown on the screens in the theatres of America are none of the business of the educator. If you

"We part company . . . on your flat assumption that the kinds of films shown on the screens in the theatres of America are none of the business of the educator."

Mr. Quigley:

"In my opinion it is the business of educators . . . to encourage the production of better films and to oppose anything . . . that may judiciously be regarded as harmful to the moral well-being. . . . I do not believe that it is the business of educators . . . to dictate to the end of causing entertainment films to be camouflaged as educational films and vice versa."

really believe this, then you ought to criticize sharply those exhibitors throughout the entire country who have been trying to get the aid of the schools in seeing that the pupils attend excellent motion pictures. You would rightly object to the schools being concerned, through courses in motion picture discrimination, with the kinds of movies that children see.

One final word: If you object so strongly to any kind of propaganda on the screen, why don't you specifically describe and denounce the advertising of specific products that has appeared from time to time in feature productions of at least one major company? Also, why were you silent when the motion picture screen was being used in California to defeat Upton Sinclair? Or do these two examples come under the heading of entertainment?

*Yours very truly,
EDGAR DALE.*

"Substitution of Soapbox": Quigley

not be expected when the excerpt under consideration was from a book entitled "Decency in Motion Pictures."

Hence, you will observe, I have not forgotten what I wrote previously and I have not changed my mind.

I do not deny that there may be, as you put it, important educational residues from so-called entertainment pictures. Even though there are such residues, this, it seems to me, has nothing to do with the project you espouse of seeking to force the entertainment business of motion pictures to attempt the profession of education.

There is a vast difference between a film which incidentally or in part may be of an educative character as compared with a studied effort on the part of producers of entertainment to school the young mind and inculcate knowledge. The former in effect is equivalent to much of the ordinary experience of living; the latter process is known generally—with the exception, it seems, of a few educators—as formal education. As to formal education most intelligent persons expect it to be afforded by institutions especially appointed to the task, and not by producers of motion pictures.

I deny that education—if you mean formal education—and entertainment are inextricably bound. If you mean that experience of a generally educative character and entertainment are inextricably bound then you are solemnly and with unnecessary emphasis proclaiming the obvious. Education in a broad and miscellaneous sense—a sense in which one does not expect the term to be used by an educator—naturally begins at the cradle and ends at the grave. A walk down Main Street, attendance at a baseball game and game of kelly pool are all educative in a broad and miscellaneous sense. But I would not classify them as education.

No, I do not know that Mr. Will Hays accepts the thesis that formal education and entertainment are inextricably bound. Rather I do know that the dominant thought in the motion picture industry and the prevailing American public opinion as well insist that the motion picture producer stick to his job of entertainment. You have not, I trust, forgotten the widespread and emphatic press and other comment which supported my definition of this status at the Williamstown Institute of Human Relations last August.

I do agree that other pictures of the type of "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola" should be produced. As to "Dead End" I agree somewhat conditionally. However, I am actuated in my agreement by reasons which differ radically from those which prompt your conclusions.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur" is an excellent picture. In it you see perhaps a vindication of radicalism. I see in it an interesting entertainment based on the story of Louis Pasteur, a great scientist who left the world a better place to live in—not, however, by first destroying the good on an off-chance that he might replace the good with something better. This film is not biography, neither is it a scientific treatise. It is an excellent entertainment, which indeed is all that it was intended to be.

"The Life of Emile Zola" is an important and popular picture but certainly not a learned and scholarly inquiry into the life and times of Zola. It is biographical drama which utilizes in plenteous measure that license to fictionize which is allowable to the producer as it is to the playwright and author. The character of Emile Zola is idealized. The film does not present an authentic portrait of the historical figure nor of the times and conditions in which he lived. Dramatic purposes require sharp and uncompromising delineation. It would not do to attempt to paint Zola in his heroic proportions as an apostle of justice and at the same time sketch him as the writer of pornographic literature. No motion picture intended to be a popular entertainment for a vast audience could treat competently with the social, political and religious complexities involving the public career of Zola. As an evening's en-

"... the motion picture industry itself recognizes that there are important educational residues from so-called entertainment pictures. . . ."

Mr. Quigley:

"Even though there are such (educational) residues (from entertainment pictures) this . . . has nothing to do with the project you espouse of seeking to force the entertainment business of motion pictures to attempt the profession of education."

ertainment "The Life of Emile Zola" is excellent; to consider it serious biography and history is absurd.

"Dead End" is a notable contribution of a realistic character. I do not happen to have the same measure of enthusiasm for this type of play as those who see in it an aid to the propagation of social and economic discontent. I do not happen to be among those who attribute all to social and economic environment and nothing to free will. I do not begrudge apostles of The New Order their satisfactions over pictures of this type. Such pictures add spice to the season's program but an abundant helping of them would give indigestion to theatre audiences. The vast millions who regularly attend the theatres do so to escape the problems, perplexities and burdens of everyday life. Plays like "Dead End" except as rarities would not give to them that which they seek to purchase with their admission price.

It is in the liberal viewpoint to insist that if what the public wants in the theatre is lawful it should be given to them. In the philosophy of totalitarianism, as in the thought of some amongst us, it is insisted that the theatre give the public what someone with an ax to grind determines is good for them.

You have incorrectly attributed to me an assumption that the kinds of films shown are none of the business of educators. In my opinion it is the business of educators to reckon with the enormous influence of films as with other environmental factors, to resort to every reasonable effort to encourage the production of better films and to oppose anything in the cinema that may judiciously be regarded as harmful to the moral well-being of the individual and the state.

I do not believe that it is the business of educators to order the production of entertainment films or to dictate to the end of causing entertainment films to be camouflaged as educational films and vice versa.

I am not aware that in current usage propaganda and advertising are interchangeable terms. I am under the impression that propaganda means rather a system for propagating a doctrine. I hope that academic circles have not become so intent upon far-off hills that respect for precision in language is being lost. We do not often hear of toothpaste propaganda and government-ownership advertising. But, anyhow, I have not specifically described this screen advertising to which you refer because I am not in possession of supporting factual data as to its identity. That which you have I would be very glad to examine. However, even if the details are made available I shall not be able to denounce it as propaganda. Any discussion of this alleged practice would necessarily come in a different category. As an industry policy the advertising of specific products in feature productions may be a questionable practice. I do not see that it necessarily violates the public interest.

I do not recall whether the screen was used locally to defeat the candidacy of Upton Sinclair and if it were I do not remember whether I expressed appropriate disapproval. Wrong procedure on the part of certain factors in the industry, if it occurred, and a delinquency on my part, if that too occurred, hardly constitute valid arguments against the principle that it is neither right nor reasonable for the screen to deal with political propaganda.

And finally, Doctor Dale, I am constrained to wonder whether this demand which you and your colleagues make, that the entertainment screen assume an educational function, may not in reality be calculated as the preliminary step in a grandiose scheme to dominate.

Certainly were any such function recklessly and foolishly assumed by the entertainment screen your dissatisfactions would mount momentarily, meanwhile you would be supplied with better reasons than at present exist to insist, now that the screen had assumed to educate, it must perforce be instructed by the educator just how to fulfill the function of education. It is perhaps understandable that some educators may be irked by the narrow confines of the classroom and its attendant limitations and yearn for the wide open spaces of the theatrical screen, together with its not inconsiderable facilities for production.

But this audience was created through the mighty efforts of industry pioneers and their successors out of the pleasurable satisfactions of the entertainment film. It is not likely that it would view with equanimity the substitution of the soapbox for the screen they know. And it is equally unlikely that the industry will dedicate its heritage to your experiments, however noble.

Yours very truly,

MARTIN QUIGLEY.

FOX LISTS 52 FEATURES FOR '38-'39; REPORTS $8,617,114 PROFITS IN '37

58 One-Reel Subjects Besides Newsreel Issues Are Also An- nounced at Company's Sales Convention in Kansas City

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation on Friday announced 52 feature pictures, 58 one-reelers and 104 issues of its newsreel for 1938-39.

John D. Clark, general sales manager, will disclose the identities of the subjects and the 160 associate producers, directors, players and writers who will create them, as he presides over the annual sales convention, Friday and Saturday, at the Muehlbach hotel, Kansas City.

Twentieth Century-Fox is the second large distributor to get its new season's activities actually underway, following the four regional sales conventions and the product announcement for 52 features of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Individual exchange meetings to acquaint salesmen with new policies and product will be held throughout the country on Monday and Tuesday.

Compares with 52 This Season

The company's schedule of 52 features for 1938-39 compares with 66 features announced for the present season.

For the first time since it undertook distribution, five years ago, for Educational Pictures, Fox will have no short subjects from the E. W. Hammons company, its contract expiring in August, without renewal. With Educational's 66 comedies, Paul Terry's 26 "Terrytoon" musical cartoons and 12 subjects from its own producers, Fox this past season had 104 one and two-reelers. For the new season, and without Educational's 66, there will be 26 new "Terrytoons" and 32 one-reel subjects produced by Fox itself, under supervision of Truman Talley, who also continues in charge of Fox Movietone news.

The convention this weekend in Kansas City follows product conferences in Hollywood attended by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board; Sidney R. Kent, president; William Goetz, vice president; Darryl F. Zanuck, vice president in charge of all Hollywood production, and Mr. Clark.

One hundred home office and studio executives, and district and branch managers from all over the country and Canada are attending.

Mr. Clark will read to the conventioners a wired comment from Mr. Zanuck in Hollywood on the pictures to be made. Expressing "great enthusiasm and optimism for the coming season's screen outlook," Mr. Zanuck adds that "the program selected is the most ambitious in the company's history."

The complete program of feature release for 1938-39 from Twentieth Century-Fox, including two in color, three with Shirley Temple, and 47 others, is as follows:

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND
SUEZ
KENTUCKY, in color.
STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE
JESSE JAMES, in color.
KING OF THE KHYBER RIFLES
SPLINTER FLEET
LIFE OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL
UNTITLED MUSICAL, starring Dionne Quintuplets.

PAUL MUNI DECLINES STATUETTE AWARD

Paul Muni, returning Saturday after vacationing in Europe, declined to accept a bronze statuette awarded him for his work in "The Life of Emile Zola."

"I don't accept any of those things," he told a representative of the Manischewitz Foundation of Fine Arts, who brought the statuette to the liner President Roosevelt, and the representative had the award under his arm when he left the ship.

"Zola" was selected as the best production of 1938 by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

ELLIS ISLAND
FALLING STAR
DANCE HALL
NIGHT BEFORE THE DIVORCE
HE MARRIED HIS WIFE
SONG OF THE ISLAND
SUNNYSIDE UP, starring Shirley Temple.
SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES, starring Shirley Temple.
LITTLE PRINCESS, starring Shirley Temple.
THEY MET IN COLLEGE, starring Sonja Henie.
UNTITLED picture starring Sonja Henie
STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW, starring the Three Ritz Brothers
MOONSTRUCK, starring the Three Ritz Brothers

THREE CHARLIE CHAN PRODUCTIONS
THREE "MR. MOTO" PRODUCTIONS
FOUR "JONES FAMILY" PRODUCTIONS
THREE "TRUE STORIES" PICTURES
THREE UNTITLED sports dramas
FOUR "ROMANTIC ADVENTURE" pictures
THREE UNTITLED PICTURES, no available credits.

64 Stars and Featured Players

Mr. Zanuck's telegraphed message to the convention also announced the complete staff of studio executives, executive producers, 11 associate producers, 64 stars and featured players, 18 directors and 64 writers who will appear in or work on the new program. Edward Ebebe will remain as production manager. Executive producers are Sol M. Wurtzel and Harry Joe Brown, with Mr. Zanuck in charge over all. The production roster follows:

Net Is $894,160 Larger Than for 1936; National Theatres and Subsidiaries Show $65,019 Increased Profit

Net profits of $8,617,114 for last year, $894,160 more than the $7,722,954 netted in 1936, were announced this week by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, as the company's executives and field forces were converging on Kansas City for conferences getting a new selling season underway.

In the figures for both years, dividends from National Theatres Corporation are included in the amount of $1,134,000 for each year. These dividends were received in the fourth quarters for the respective years. The profits for the fourth quarter of 1937 were $3,718,200 compared with $3,472,275 for the fourth quarter of 1936 and $1,143,400 for the third quarter of 1937.

National Theatres and its voting controlled subsidiaries had consolidated net income of $2,988,228 for 1937 compared with $2,923,209 for 1936. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation's 42 per cent interest in National Theatres indicates an interest in these earnings of $1,255,055.

Twentieth Century-Fox paid dividends on the preferred stock in 1937 of $1.50 per share and on the common stock—$2.50 per share. Total dividends paid amounted to $5,754,703.

Current assets of Twentieth Century-Fox and wholly-owned subsidiaries as of December 25, 1937, including $7,635,006 cash, amounted to $30,274,728 and current liabilities were $7,991,499, comparing with cash of $5,718,032, current assets of $25,874,018 and current liabilities of $5,587,259 on December 26, 1936.

Consolidated income account for 52 weeks ended December 25, 1937, compares as follows:

PLAYERS PARADE AT GEHRIG FILM OPENING

The Twentieth Century-Fox Picture "Rawhide," which features Lou Gehrig, New York Yankees baseball star, had its premiere at the Capitol theatre in St. Petersburg, Fla., last week. The entire personnel of the Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals, who are training in St. Petersburg, attended the opening.

A parade proceeded the showing.

"Rawhide," which was produced by Sol Lesser, will be nationally released April 8th.

had been signed for another season as the Jones family.

Paul Terry, producer of Terry-Toons, is changing his affiliation from Educational to Twentieth Century-Fox, to continue distribution through Fox. He will include six color cartoons in the 26 he will make for next season. This will be the first time he has used color.

Mr. Terry also plans a cartoon feature in color, for release within a year. Twentieth Century-Fox presumably will handle it.

The combined total of 1938-'39 contracts and long-term franchises already sold is 11.5 per cent ahead of the 1936-'37 volume at this time last year, it was said by the sales department. This, it was said, indicates an earlier buying trend.

Selling Started in January

Twentieth Century-Fox sales forces have been selling the 1938-'39 lineup since January. So far, the eastern division, headed by William Sussman; the southern district, managed by Harry G. Ballance at Atlanta, and the Dallas branch, managed by H. R. Beiersdorf, are the leaders in their respective classifications in new season contract volume. Seven-eighths of the contracts obtained by the Dallas branch represent franchises. Southern and eastern branches were prominent in early selling also last year. The distribution department anticipates that more than a third of the company's total of 11,800 possibilities will be sold by mid-April.

The convention opens Friday morning at 10:30 with a conference in the Trianon room of the Muehlebach Hotel. On Friday night the delegates will be guests at a dinner celebrating "the greatest single organized selling performance in the history of the industry—Twentieth Century-Fox's 1937 Kent Drive." Cash awards, most of which will be shared by employees throughout the United States and Canada, will be distributed to managers of branches which finished highest.

John Clark, general manager of distribution, will preside over the meetings, with Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, and Harry Brandt, studio publicity head.

O'Loughlin Wins Honors

James P. O'Loughlin, Canadian district manager for Fox, again will lead the S. R. Kent Drive in 1938. He had the double distinction of leading the 1937 drive and winning the president's prize, a platinum watch, for having placed his district in first position in the last drive.

Cash awards went to 478 employees in 15 exchanges. Edward English's Montreal staff won in the campaign, followed by Winnipeg, Indianapolis, and Vancouver in that order. Pittsburgh was first in the short subjects Educational competition and Dallas topped the Movietone News contest. Indianapolis was leader in ad sales delivery.

Home office representation at the convention included Felix A. Jenkins, William Sussman, William C. Gehring, W. J. Kupper, William J. Clark, Dan Michalove, Jack Sichelman, Martin Moskowitz, Edwin H. Collins, Clarence A. Hill, Ted A. Shaw, Jack Bloom, Harry Mersay, George Sussman, Sam Epstein, Eugene McEvoy, Isadore Lincer, E. W. Holmberg, Charles E. McCarthy, Arch Reeve, Earl Wingart, Morris Kinzler, Rodney Bush, Truman H. Talley, Lew Lehr, Paul Terry, Harvey Day, Lee Balsly, Edward Hollander, W. W. Caldwell, Jerry Novat, Don Reed, Walter J. Hutchinson, Edward F. Lomba, Irving A. Maas, Leslie Whalen, Charles Mayer (Batavia, Java, branch manager).

Twentieth Century-Fox stock on the New York Stock Exchange, the net profit for 1937, which was equivalent to $4.11 per common share after preferred dividends were paid, indicates a return on the investor's money equal to more than 20 per cent. The $4.11 was not paid, of course, the difference between that figure and the $2.50 which was paid going into reserve.

Consolidated balance sheet of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. and wholly-owned subsidiaries, as of December 25, 1937, compares as follows:

250 FEATURES ALREADY LINED UP BY SIX COMPANIES FOR '38-'39 SEASON

RKO Tentatively Plans 48;
United Artists at Least 20;
Grand National 26; MGM Announces 198 Shorts for Year

With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer having previously made known a definite schedule of 52 features, and Twentieth Century-Fox this week announcing a similar number, the construction of 1938-39 feature programs is further advanced by the latest, though tentative, decisions of RKO to contribute 48, Grand National 26, and United Artists 20 pictures for the new season, adding to the 52 already tentatively determined by Paramount—a grand total of 250 features scheduled by the six companies thus far.

Titles of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's 52 pictures, which were disclosed two weeks ago at the first of a series of four MGM regional sales conventions, appeared in Motion Picture Herald on March 19th. Identities of the 52 scheduled by Fox, as announced Friday in Kansas City at that company's annual convention, appear on page 16.

RKO's decision to produce 48 features for the 1938-39 season, the same number as scheduled for the current season, was made at a seven-day discussion of new production plans at the studio. Participating were Leo Spitz, president; Pandro S. Berman, production head; Ned E. Depinet, distribution executive; J. R. McDonough, vice-president; Jules Levy, sales manager, and S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director.

Mr. Spitz and Mr. Berman continued the discussions this week. The company will reveal details when it holds its national sales convention either the last week in May or the first week in June, probably in Chicago.

Of its current program, RKO has 24 features remaining for delivery, with eight, set for release between now and June, already completed.

No important changes in the company's sales policy are being considered for next season.

First and second places in the Ned E. Depinet Drive of RKO for completing bookings on the 1937-38 pictures, are occupied by Canadian exchanges, M. Plottel's Montreal branch being the leader, with W. S. Jones' Vancouver branch in second place.

United Artists has scheduled a minimum of 20 features for the new season with Samuel Goldwyn producing five; Walter Wanger, five; Alexander Korda, five; Edward Small, three, and David O. Selznick, two.

196 Shorts from MGM

At its fourth and final regional sales convention, held at the Hotel Astor, New York, this week, MGM announced a program of 196 short subjects for release in 1938-39.

The short subjects include:

104 issues of the semi-weekly newsreel, "News of the Day."

Six "Crime Does Not Pay" melodramas.

Thirteen Pete Smith releases.

Eight Robert Benchley vehicles.

Twelve FitzPatrick "Traveltalks."

Ten Carey Wilson psychological and scientific subjects.

Twelve "Our Gang" comedies.

Fifteen cartoons.

Six two-reel musicals.

STORY COMES FIRST DECLARES MANNIX

"Bigness," without substantial stories, means nothing in motion pictures, E. J. Mannix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president, declared in New York this week before leaving for the Coast.

A film spread on a large canvas must still have an idea behind it, he said. Musicals, too, must contain "good substantial story ingredients" to strike a popular chord, Mr. Mannix declared.

A new series, "The Passing Parade," featuring John Nesbitt, radio commentator.

Jack Chertok, under whose supervision the present group of one and two-reel series has been built up by MGM, will produce 53 of the new season shorts.

The meeting was attended by W. F. Rodgers, general sales manager; T. J. Connors and E. M. Saunders, division managers; Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity; W. R. Ferguson, E. W. Aaron, A. F. Cummings, Jay Gove, M. L. Simons, H. Postman, Charles Deeson, I. Hirsch, C. K. Stern, C. J. Sonin, J. S. MacLeon, Arthur Lacks, Irving Helfont and all district and branch managers from the east and south.

No general increases will be asked by MGM for its 1938-39 program, Mr. Rodgers said at the third of the four regional meetings in Chicago last week. The prices to be written into contracts, he said, will depend on individual situations, with local conditions being taken into consideration. The company's sales campaign, he added, will get underway immediately.

While the New York meeting was underway, MGM studios announced extension of contracts for eight persons. They are three players, Wallace Beery, Spencer Tracy and Claudia Morgan; four writers, Anita Loos, Phil Rapp, Martin Berkeley and Jack Singer, and an orchestrator and arranger in the music department, Leonid Raab.

Warners' Plans

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager for Warner Brothers; Carl Leserman, Mr. Sears' assistant; Sam Schneider, financial expert for the company, and Mort Blumenstock, eastern director of advertising and publicity, left New York for the coast to confer with studio executives on production plans for the new season.

In Hollywood, Jack L. Warner declared Warner Brothers considers musicals the best box-office material and will continue to make them.

Norman Moray, head of the company's short subject sales, returned from a trip around the country and announced that Warner Brothers will continue its series of historical shorts in color and also will include several musicals in the new season program.

Paramount's short subject production schedule for next season was termed "just about complete" next week. It is expected that the schedule will be approximately the same as for the current season.

GB will have approximately 24 features available for release in the United States next year, according to Arthur Lee, managing director. The current schedule consists of 16 features.

Grand National starts its selling season this Friday. The sales organization reduced to a skeleton staff during the winter, will be strengthened with the addition of 50 men in the field, Edward Peskay, vice-president in charge of distribution, said. Mr. Peskay listed four films which will be released to get the new season underway. They are "Renfrew Rides North," second in a series; "International Crime," one of the Shadow series; "He Loved an Actress," and "Zamboanga."

The complete program, it was announced this week in Hollywood by Edward Alperson and Lloyd Wright, co-trustees, will include 26 features and 16 westerns. The schedule is in accordance with plans for the company's reorganization.

Companies Halt Films to Austria

Most American distributors have halted shipments into Austria pending word of new regulations following absorption of the nation by Germany.

United Artists, however, has continued operations in Austria. Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, said that the only difficulties encountered thus far, outside of the exchange restrictions have been in connection with exhibition, Austrian exhibitors having been instructed to show a preponderance of German pictures, thus reducing playdates for American product.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and RKO Radio decided to suspend activities temporarily, at least.

Warner and Paramount were awaiting word from overseas.

At Universal it was said that "it looks like the end of the Austrian market." The company had received no word from its Vienna branch manager, William Satori, an Austrian by birth, who had taken out his first citizenship papers in the United States. Home office officials cabled the Paris office in an attempt to divert the prints of "Mad About Music" to other points.

While only 28 American pictures were released in Germany last year, contrasted with 120 in Austria, at the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America it was pointed out that the 28 in Germany represented a gain over 1936.

This was attributed to a dearth of German films and the decision of Nazi officials that it would be better to import American pictures than close the theatres.

The Vienna branch of MGM has been converted into a subsidiary of the Berlin office. Felix Bernstein, Vienna manager, will be transferred.

RKO had received no word from its Austrian branch manager, Michael Havas.

Twentieth Century-Fox's plans are in the hands of Benjamin Miggin, European manager, at Paris. Frederick Fleminger was Austrian branch manager.

FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF TELEVISION PATENTS OPENS IN FEDERAL COURT

Demonstration of "Image Emitter" System Made in New Jersey; Narrower Radio Band to Be Used

Conflicting opinions and predictions on the development of television were heard in various sections of the country as Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company this week launched a legal battle against the Radio Corporation of America for control over important television patents.

The action, instituted in United States district court, Wilmington, Del., seeks to have the court adjudge Vladimir K. Zworykin as the original inventor of certain television systems and to have Westinghouse assigned the entire rights. The patents in question are assigned to Henry Joseph Round and RCA holds a full interest in them.

The week also brought a demonstration in Upper Montclair, N. J., of a new television principle which, it is claimed, will reduce greatly the cost of the ultimate home television receiver and simplify its inner construction. Allen B. DuMont, inventor of the new "image emitter" system, also said the system is expected, through the use of a narrower radio band for television broadcasting, to make it possible for two or three stations to operate where only one may now send.

The system will receive any type of picture regardless of what definition or image size is sent out, Mr. DuMont said. In using the system, he added, all that will be necessary is to turn on a set and tune it to the required wave length, as in sound broadcasting reception. Because the number of tubes in a television receiver operating on his principle may be reduced by six or seven, the manufacturing costs, he said, will be reduced by 25 to 35 per cent.

Screen Figures in New Patent

The granting of a patent to C. P. Henroteau of Ottawa in Washington brought a claim from Mr. Henroteau that under his method he can produce clearer pictures than are now possible. The heart of the apparatus is a screen, on which the television pictures are impressed by light.

After a two-day hearing in the Westinghouse case against RCA, John P. Nields, judge, set May 10th as the date for filing briefs and May 20th for argument.

In July, 1936, Westinghouse filed action against RCA, asking that the United States commissioner of patents be directed to issue patents on television systems for which the plaintiff corporation had made application on the invention of Mr. Zworykin.

In the bill of complaint, Westinghouse alleged that Mr. Zworykin had made inventions of television systems and applied to the commissioner of patents but that interferences were declared by the commissioner because of applications made by several later inventors of television systems. After several hearings, Westinghouse charged, the commissioner decided in favor of the patent applications of Henry Joseph Round on the principles at issue.

Witnesses at the hearing, all in behalf of Westinghouse, included Jonah B. Nathanson, Charles K. Strovel, and Joseph T. Tykociner,

NEW "CONTINUOUS" PROJECTOR MADE

Believing that when commercial television becomes a reality, transmission by means of films will constitute a "substantial part" of a program, the Farnsworth Company in Philadelphia this week announced it has developed a "continuous" projector.

The film passes through the projector at a constant rate of speed without interruption and the picture is focused upon the cathode area of a high fidelity dissector tube, developed some years ago by Philo T. Farnsworth, it was explained at a demonstration.

The projector and the tube, the company announced, constitute "a very definite contribution to the television art, making it possible to reproduce motion picture film with a higher degree of excellence than is usually obtained." The projector, according to plans, will be built to handle either 16 or 35 millimeter film.

Two lens discs are used, each carrying a total of 24 lenses and rotating in opposite directions. They overlap sufficiently, it was explained, so that at any instant two lenses are active in conjunction with each other. A shutter masks all lenses except the two functioning at a given time.

all of Pittsburgh and all three classified as television experts.

The principles in dispute include a "method of signalling comprising energizing of light-sensitive devices in accordance with the corresponding elements of a visual area of representation"; controlling "storage units" and connecting these with a transmission channel; the use of "electrostatic charges" and application of them to transmission, the use of "plural light sensitive translating devices," "uses of plural light sensitive cells," use of "electrically separated elemental areas with separate storage elements in each area" in a light sensitive device; the use of a "light sensitive elemental areas energized according to the character of the associated visual area."

Goldsmith Addresses Teachers

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, former vice-president of Radio Corporation of America and present technical consultant to the company, speaking before the convention of New York State Science Teachers assembled at Syracuse, N. Y., said that "television was in a sense the superlative art of communication," since many of its aspects could be described only in terms of "most." He said it was the most scientific form of communication, the most luxurious form of broadcasting and the most difficult type of communication.

Charles F. Kettering, vice-president in charge of research for General Motors Corporation, speaking in Dayton, Ohio, said that television will be the nation's next big industry. "In fact," he continued, "television is here right now. In England more than 10,000 sets have been manufactured and sold. It is just a matter of time before the manufacture of television sets in this country will be started. How soon that will be I cannot say."

However, in Philadelphia, Sayre M. Ramsdell, vice-president of Philco Radio and Television Corporation, replied to Mr. Kettering by declaring that so many obstacles confront commercial television that it will be "many years" before home reproduction of voice and image will be a profitable industry.

"Television is an offshoot of the radio industry and never will supplant radio," Mr. Ramsdell said.

"Television in Great Britain, limited to the London area, is not an outstanding success. Sales of receiving sets there will have increased from 1,300 to about 10,000 by the end of the year only because of reductions bringing prices to between $175 and $275 a set. To sell at a profit, the sets should retail at $500."

A similar viewpoint was taken by Dr. Irvin E. Deer of Chicago, field representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in a recent address before the East St. Louis Better Films Council at East St. Louis, Ill. He said commercial television will not be practical for public use for from five to 10 years.

"Luxury Market"

In the opinion of Joseph J. Weed, head of Weed and Company, station representatives, television for a period of time after its commercial introduction will be a luxury market for advertisers.

Midland Television, Inc., Kansas City, Mo., is conducting two daily television broadcasts for demonstration and experiment in its studios in the tower of the Kansas City Power and Light Company. Using concentric cables, the pictures are transmitted from one floor to another where they are picked up on a 90-line screen, until the completion of a 441-line screen now under construction. The work is being conducted under the direction of J. R. Duncan, chief engineer, who also constructed the equipment in the Midland laboratories.

Experiments in the last year in transmitting large screen television images by wireless and in color were successful, John L. Baird announced at the annual meeting in London of Television, Ltd.

Moving Forward in France

Television, still definitely in the experimental stage, is nevertheless making rapid strides in France, where demonstrations are being offered and where prospects are considered bright for further development in 1938.

The demonstrations are under the direction of the National Radiodiffusion Department, a section of the Ministry of Post, Telegraph and Telephone. Three different systems are used in France, the French Thomason-Houston, which runs to 455-line images, and for which the basic principles are similar to RCA and British E. M. I. Marconi; the de France system (Radio Industries), and the Barthelmy system (Compagnie des Compteurs), for which the pioneer, M. Barthelmy, plans television broadcasting on a screen of larger size.

Perc Westmore, head of the makeup department at Warner Brothers, has announced that he has created, and is working on the further development of a line of makeup which will be intended solely for television.

The Don Lee Broadcasting System, Los Angeles, has been granted authority by the FCC to increase the visual power of its television station W6XAO, from 150 to 1,000 watts.

SENATE TURNS FROM NEELY BILL; JACKSON ACTS IN DALLAS CASE

Department of Justice Files Brief in Anti-Trust Suit; Los Angeles Exhibitor Sues Fox West Coast and Distributors

Washington's attention to motion pictures centered this week on the "cold-shoulder" given in the United States Senate to the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking and anti-blind buying bill, and the filing by the Department of Justice of its brief with the supreme court in the Dallas Interstate Circuit trust cast against large distributors.

Film anti-trust matters elsewhere included the filing of a $300,000 damage suit under the Clayton Act by Laurel Theatre, Los Angeles, against Fox West Coast Circuit and distributors; the filing of a bill of particulars by Orange County Theatres, New Jersey, in its trust suit against major companies; the ordering of written briefs by both sides in the California suit of independents against Paramount for alleged fraud in non-delivery, and the formal ending of legal action in the same situation involving Paramount in Philadelphia.

Objections voiced by several senators on Friday prevented consideration of the Neely bill when the measure was reached in its routine order during the calling of the senate calendar. It will be called anew when again reached in the regular course of business.

In the field, the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio adopted a resolution reaffirming its endorsement of the measure. The action, the resolution stated, refutes "the insidious propaganda that this organization does not favor" the legislation.

A majority of the members of Allied Theatres of New Jersey vote in favor of the bill.

Members of the Oklahoma unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America voiced their objections to the bill in letters to the state's representatives in Congress. Morris Lowenstein, Oklahoma leader and national secretary for the MPTOA, reported that Oklahoma members were supporting the stand of Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, that there are no conditions within the industry that cannot be corrected without legislation.

Justice Department Files Brief

With the Dallas Interstate Circuit case to be heard next week, the Department of Justice on Monday filed its brief with the Supreme Court, disclosing that its major contentions would be that the distributors did engage in a conspiracy to restrain trade and that the privileges of the copyright law do not include immunity from anti-trust prosecution.

The brief answered the two major defenses of the distributors: (1) that there was no conspiracy and (2) that the provisions in the exhibition contract complained of, requiring subsequent-run houses in Texas to charge a minimum admission of 25 cents and prohibiting double features, were merely the exercise of rights granted by the copyright law.

"There can be no doubt," the department contended, "that the evidence shows there was conspiracy to impose restrictions," and that the unanimity with which the distributors acted "requires the conclusion that the distributors acted pursuant to agreement and were parties

FCC QUESTIONNAIRES SENT BROADCASTERS

The Federal Communications Commission, in line with its wholesale investigation of the radio chain industry, this week began distribution of questionnaires on which every station in the country, regardless of size, frequency or ownership, will be required to report on intimate details of its financing and its receipts and expenditures for 1937.

In the case of chain stations, revenues from networks are to be shown separately from other income, and such broadcasters also are to report the average number of weekly sustaining program hours furnished by the station and the difference between the network revenue reported and the amount of net billings to users for such network broadcasting, with respect to the time of the station.

The reports must be filed with the FCC by April 25th.

The financial survey, ordered at a meeting of the commission last week, is designed to provide data both for the chain investigation, also ordered last week, and to make up deficiencies in information possessed by the FCC as pointed out by T. A. M. Craven, commissioner, in his report on the social and economic aspects of broadcasting.

to a common plan and undertaking constituting conspiracy."

The distributors had contended that the exclusive rights granted them under the copyright law permitted them to come to an agreement with their first licensees as to the terms on which subsequent showings were to be made. The Government, however, contended that if such an agreement is in restraint of trade the practice cannot be defended and the "copyright law merely confers upon the owner a monopoly in the use which he makes of his copyright, it gives him no authority to effect an unlawful restraint of trade by combining his privileges with the privileges of another copyright owner."

George S. Wright and Thomas D. Thacher will argue in behalf of the distributing companies and the Interstate Circuit. The government's brief was filed by Robert H. Jackson, newly appointed solicitor general.

Says Three Choices Were Given

The government stated that independent exhibitors were forced to accept one of three choices because of the restriction: raise admission prices to 25 cents and be free to show any pictures; they could charge less than 25 cents and be unable to obtain the best pictures; or they could charge 25 cents admission on certain days and show restricted pictures while charging less on other days.

In addition to Fox West Coast, the defendants named in the $300,000 anti-trust action instituted by Laurel Theatres, Inc., included Wesco Corporation, National Theatre Corporation, Chase National Bank, Loew's, Inc., and six production companies.

The plaintiff, engaged in the construction of a theatre at Ventura and Laurel Canyon Boulevards, charged the defendants conspired to prevent Laurel Theatres from obtaining films on a suitable clearance schedule. The company also charged that Fox West Coast sought to discourage construction of the theatre by threatening to build a new theatre nearby and to acquire another house in San Fernando Valley in which to play first-run product.

In the suit, the Laurel company asks that it be awarded an injunction to restrain the theatre circuit and an order to get pictures after a 21-day clearance schedule from Los Angeles first runs.

The defendant producers are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO, Warner Brothers, Universal, First National, and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Conspiracy Charged

In the bill of particulars filed by the Orange County Theatres, Inc., it was charged that a conspiracy was formed between 1936 and July, 1937, and that during that time the plaintiff "was prevented from obtaining a sufficient supply of desirable motion pictures for the successful operation of the Academy Theatre by the refusal of the defendants to lease the product." Defendants in the action are Paramount Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox, Big U Film Exchange, United Artists, RKO, Netco Theatres Corporation, Eugene Levy, George Walsh and Joseph Lee. The action is in the United States district court.

After hearing oral arguments on a Paramount demurrer to the newly amended suit charging fraud over the non-delivery of eight pictures during the 1936-37 season, which was brought by 20 Southern California exhibitors, Leon R. Yankwich, federal judge in Los Angeles, ordered both sides to present written briefs.

In a lengthy court appearance, Dean Warner, attorney for the exhibitors, charged Paramount committed acts of fraud in making oral agreements to deliver the pictures. Walter K. Tuller, representing Paramount, contended the oral agreements carried no weight because of written agreements. He also pointed out that the exhibition contracts carried a substitution clause.

All Paramount court actions against Philadelphia exhibitors arising out of the "buyers' strike" against the company last summer were formally ended with the signing of a federal court order authorizing withdrawal of the suits. Paramount had charged violation of the conspiracy laws in the boycott of Paramount product but termination of the suit was agreed upon as part of the conditions of the settlement of the "strike" last fall.

The exhibitors adopted the "buyers' strike" after charging Paramount had not delivered certain scheduled features.

Sets "Monastery" Deals

Irvin Shapiro, general manager of World Pictures Corporation, has closed territorial deals for "Monastery" with Harry Thomas of Thomfilms, Inc., for the eastern states; Special Attractions for the Chicago territory, and Harry Segal for the New England states. Mr. Shapiro left New York this week for the midwest to supervise the openings in Chicago and Detroit, and to close other territorial franchises.

Copyright Ruling Clarifies 3 Points

Refusal of the United States supreme court to review a circuit court of appeals decision this week established law on three questions vital to the motion picture industry, according to Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The higher court's ruling, given in the case of Frederick Beck Patterson against Samuel Cummins and Century Productions, Inc., means, according to Mr. Hess, that:

1. Motion pictures, other than photoplays, are entitled to the same copyright protection as dramatic productions.

2. A copyright notice imprinted at the beginning of the first reel of a multi-reel film is sufficient compliance with the copyright statute.

3. A copyright secured for an unpublished motion picture film, other than a photoplay, remains valid when prints of the film are loaned for "free showings."

Mr. Cummins, Century Productions, Inc., and other defendants sought to have the supreme court review the copyright infringement judgment rendered against them last May in the southern district of New York. The district court held that the producer defendants in making their film, "The Jungle Killer," took over 1,000 feet of film from Mr. Patterson's copyrighted travelogue, "Shooting Big Game With a Camera."

The court also ruled that the defendants further infringed on the copyright by exhibiting their film with those scenes. The judgment was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals. No appeal was taken from the finding of piracy, the defendants resting upon the contention that Mr. Patterson's copyright not only became invalid but did not include exhibition rights.

The supreme court's refusal to review the case, Mr. Hess said, is of special importance to producers and distributors of newsreels, travelogues, educational and scientific subjects, speciality film acts, and animated film cartoons, all of which are registered in the copyright office under Class M, "motion pictures other than photoplays."

"Approximately 10,000 such Class M registrations have been made during the past 10 years," Mr. Hess said, "and they exceed in volume the Class L registrations for photoplay films. The opinion holds that property rights, in the form of exclusive right of exhibition, exist for Class M film (in this case a travelogue on African animal and native life), on the ground that unauthorized projection thereof violates the exclusive right 'to copy' granted by subsection (a) of Section 1 of the Copyright Law. All previous court opinions in respect of exhibition rights were handed down in cases involving only photoplay films. The right there so recognized was based upon a copyrighted photoplay film being a species of 'dramatic work.'"

"Another point of interest is the sustaining of a Section 11 copyright, secured for an unpublished motion picture film other than a photoplay, as valid and infringed. The court further held that Patterson's distribution, after securing his Section 11 copyright, of 35 mm. and 16 mm. prints of his film to thousands of charitable, religious, and education institutions, by way of loan for 'free showings' before hundreds of thousands of persons, was neither a 'reproduction in copies for sale' nor an act of publication indicating his intent to dedicate the work to the public; therefore plaintiff did not forfeit his rights by failing to deposit two complete copies of his film in the copyright office and to re-register the claim to his Section 11 copyright."

Mr. Hess also pointed out that "a statutory notice of copyright imprinted at the beginning of the first reel of Patterson's multi-reel film was a sufficient compliance with the statute in any event."

National Theatres Heads Meet in New York

Plans for the 1938-'39 buying season, business prospects, box-office drives and general operation matters were to be discussed in New York Thursday and Friday at a meeting of division heads of National Theatres, the Fox-Chase circuit. Conferences were to be held with Spyros Skouras and S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox.

Those expected to attend the session included Charles Skouras, head of West Coast operations; Arch Bowles, San Francisco; E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City; Rick Ricketson, Denver; H. J. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee; Frank Newman, Seattle; J. J. Sullivan, West Coast film buyer, and William Powers, National Theatre's film buyer.

Hatch Joins Warners as Ad Accessory Manager

Stanley Hatch has joined Warner Brothers as sales manager of the Advertising Accessories Department. Mr. Hatch formerly was a sales executive with Grand National, a position he occupied after long experience as newspaperman and film branch manager for various companies in St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City and Detroit.

52% of British Films Made with RCA Sound

Of all feature films made in Great Britain during February, 52.6 per cent were recorded with RCA Photophone sound track, according to a statistical report received this week by Van Ness Philip, export manager for the company.

In the last half of 1937, 35 per cent of all British pictures were recorded with RCA sound, Mr. Philip said, adding that the next nearest percentage figure for a competitive system was 23 per cent. The company's sound recording and theatre equipment activities in the United Kingdom are handled by RCA Photophone, Ltd., in London.

AMPA Officers Renominated

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will be held in New York April 21st. All officers have been renominated and the board of directors has reported favorably on the entire slate. The officers are Ralph Rolan, president; Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., vice-president; Lester Thompson, secretary; Paul Benjamin, treasurer. Nominated as directors are Vincent Trotta, Martin Starr, Eli Sugarman, Gordon White, Mort Blumenstock; trustee, Rutgers Neilson; auditing committee, Herbert Berg, chairman, Al Sherman, Ralph Lund, counsellor, Hap Hadley.

The Cinema de Paris, New York, has been renamed the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, the name it had when it was opened in 1926. Foreign product will continue to be shown.

Warners Plan Theatre Survey

Gradwell L. Sears, sales manager of Warner Bros., announced in Hollywood Wednesday inauguration of a national theatre survey to provide a gauge of the box office popularity of its players. Conferring with Harry M. Warner, Jack L. Warner, Hal B. Wallis and S. Charles Einfeld on 1938-'39 product and policy, Mr. Sears said the checkup will be an annual pre-production season event to enable Warners to give its production "better box office name balance."

The 32 key cities' branches will participate in the checkup. Exhibitor cooperation will be required.

"Ten new Warner productions will be used for the purposes of this 'barometer,'" Mr. Sears said. "Our selling force in the field will contact personally all theatres, from first-runs to subsequent-runs, playing these pictures, in order to get first hand information concerning audience reaction to the different Warner players appearing in them. The data will be forwarded eventually to our Burbank studio for compilation and analysis to guide those in charge of assignment of players to our pictures."

The pictures to be used in the test are "Jezebel," "Fools for Scandal," "The Adventures of Robin Hood," "Cowboy from Brooklyn," "Golddiggers in Paris," "White Banners," "Crime School," "When Were You Born," "Four's a Crowd" and "Secrets of An Actress."

Australian Seeks Better Relations

Leon S. Snider, joint managing director of the Snider and Dean circuit of about 65 theatres in Australia, arrived in New York City this week for the expressed purpose of seeking improved exhibitor-distributor relations in Australia. He plans to remain in New York for four weeks, during which he will confer with foreign sales managers.

Speaking as official spokesman for the New South Wales Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, Mr. Snider announced he will attempt to obtain a reconciliation of differences looking to stabilization of the industry on the Australian continent.

"In the interest of the industry generally," Mr. Snider said, "a closer understanding should be created between the distributor and the exhibitor. Unless better relations are fostered, there is a danger that further inroads along the path of restrictive regulation may be made by the government. We feel such a position should be avoided."

Commenting on the pending Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking and anti-blind buying bill, Mr. Snider said that if it is adopted Australian exhibitors probably will seek similar legislation. Overbuying, or overselling, is a serious problem in Australia, he said.

The three Australian studios, Cinesound, National Studios, and Master Craft, face a difficult situation because of the exclusion from the British quota of dominion films, Mr. Snider explained.

Texas Exhibitors Fete Depinet

NED E. DEPINET, vice-president of RKO, was guest of honor last Saturday at an industry testimonial at the Hotel Baker in Dallas, attended by 400 of his friends and associates. They came from among his exhibitor customers and his film selling competitors, from Hollywood and from Broadway, to honor him on his thirtieth anniversary in motion pictures. Karl Hoblitzelle and Bob O'Donnell, of Interstate Theatres, sponsored the tribute, joined by their fellow exhibitors of the Texas country which Mr. Depinet adopted as his native state, Dallas as his home city, after he left his birth-place, Erie, Pa. Among those on the dais were Jesse L. Lasky, J. R. McDonough, Richard Rowland, George Sprague, Mayor of Dallas; A. H. McCausland, George Skouras, Herman Robbins, J. L. Mullen, Samuel Pinanski, R. E. Griffith, Sam Dembow, Y. Frank Freeman, Gunther Lessing, Willard McKay, Oscar Oldknow, L. L. Dent, H. T. Nolan, Claude Ezell, W. G. Underwood and Phil Reisman.

At right, John Fitzgibbons, general manager for Paramount theatres in Canada, and Arthur Lee, head of GB in America, arrive for the festivities.

DUTCH DISTRIBUTORS' GROUP 15 YEARS OLD

Reception, Press Stories Mark Anniversary; East Indian Exhibitors Form New Unit

by PHILIP de SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

The 15th anniversary of the foundation of the Bedrijfsadeeling Filmverhuurders, distributors' department of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation, was celebrated recently and the importance of the organization to the trade was stressed in newspaper stories of the event. The board of directors of the Federation, which, under the name De Bioscoop Bond, unites the distributors and exhibitors in one organization, were hosts at a reception in honor of the anniversary at the Carlton Hotel, Amsterdam.

Special articles were devoted to the occasion in the official organ of the Federation and in the Dutch cinema trade paper Nieuw Weekblad voor de Cinematografie.

Exhibitors in the Dutch East Indies are now organized in the Nederlandsch-Indischen Bioscoop Bond (Dutch East Indian Motion Picture Federation) founded by representatives of theatre owners in Java. The group is organized on the same basis as the Dutch Bond and has 56 members representing the management of 94 theatres. Government approval of the Bond was granted after a general meeting recently in the Sampoerna theatre in Soerabaja. Plans have been made to issue an official organ, the Projector.

New Dutch Picture Ready

A new Dutch picture starring well-known stage artists, but made in Rome under the direction of Kurt Gerron, has been finished. It is "Drie Wensen" ("Three Wishes"). The premiere took place in the Metropole Theatre in The Hague, managed by A. G. van Tol. Though the picture is not as good as the last domestic production, "Pygmalion," the criticisms are rather good. The film is distributed by the domestic company Odeon, The Hague.

16mm Circuit in Receivership

The Dutch N. V. (Incorporated Company) Hofgeest, operating 16mm film theatres in Haarlem, Hilversum and Rotterdam under the name of Cineone-Theatres, has gone into receivership, shortly after its foundation.

The circuit was founded as a reaction against the Dutch Motion Picture Federation, in order to release 16mm features. However, the quality of the pictures, mostly German productions, was very low, and though the admission prices of the Cineone-theatres were moderate, the plan was not a success.

Newsreel Theatre Planned

About two years ago a newsreel theatre modeled on one in Paris under the name of Cineac was opened in Amsterdam under the same management, in cooperation with a leading newspaper, the Algemeen Handelsblad. This theatre, showing only newsreels and shorts in a 60-minute program, has been profitable, and a second Cineac under the same management, and equally in cooperation with the same newspaper, will be built in Amsterdam.

The Rembrandt theatre, belonging to the German UFA, has been reopened with a new Lilian Harvey picture, "Fanny Ellsler." The theatre is one of the most modern in Amsterdam and will show the German UFA production exclusively. Leading theatres in Amsterdam are now the Tuschinski (1,500 seats), the City (1,600 seats), the Rembrandt (1,200 seats), the Cinema Royal (1,400 seats). Other premiere theatres are the Roxy (550 seats), the Corso (500 seats), the Alhambra (500 seats) and Rialto (500 seats). MGM releases are shown in the Royal, Corso and Alhambra; RKO Radio brings its productions to the Tuschinski theatres (Tuschinski and Roxy) and the Royal, Corso and Alhambra. Columbia pictures are released in the City theatre and Warner and Fox have contracts with the Tuschinski circuit and Royal, Corso and Alhambra (under management of Metro). Tuschinski also shows the Paramount and Universal productions.

Educational Film Released

A new domestic production, an educational picture under the title "Rijksmuseum," has been released to Dutch theatres. The film shows the most important products of the Dutch painters of the 17th century, especially of Rembrandt (The Nachtwacht). It was produced and directed by Otto van Noyenhoff. Distribution is through the Universal Film Booking office N. V. in Amsterdam.

Theatre Receipts

Box-office receipts and attendance in the Dutch key cities, Amsterdam and Rotterdam, during the third quarter of 1937, recently made, are as follows:

	Attendance
	1936	1937
Amsterdam	2,311,078	2,342,678
Rotterdam	1,380,385	1,238,375
	Gross receipts less taxes
	1936	1937
Amsterdam	fl. 841,850,—	fl. 857,001,—
Rotterdam	fl. 530,207,—	fl. 522,188,—

In spite of the fact that one of the leading Amsterdam theatres has been closed since April, 1937 (the Rembrandt theatre of UFA) the attendance in comparison with 1936 improved and the gross receipts were higher. However, the first six months of 1937 show a decline of fl. 117,000—in comparison with 1936, and though better results for the last three months of 1937 are expected in Amsterdam, the total amount of gross receipts during 1937 will show a decline again.

In Rotterdam no improvement of box-office results is seen, but the average admission price shows an increase, though the total attendance was smaller than in July, August and September, 1936. The average admission price was fl. 0.42 during this quarter, and fl. 0.38½ for the same months of 1936.

The Hague, too, shows an improvement, though figures are not known now. September was the worst month of this period.

One American dollar at present exchange is fl. 1.80. The population of Amsterdam is about 800,000; Rotterdam, 550,000, and The Hague, 400,000.

Marvin Young has been promoted to the post of assistant western division program manager under John Swallow, who is in charge of all program activities of the western division of the National Broadcasting Company.

38 Italian Films Cost Five Millions

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO

Italian producers spent $5,000,000 in the production of 38 features during 1937, the first year of the country's attempt to become a leading European producing nation, and to attain self-sufficiency of film supply. The country's annual requirement is 300 pictures.

In 1937 there were 245 films imported, of which more than 75 per cent were from the United States. The remainder were French, German and British. Although most of the estimated $25,000,000 spent last year by Italians at film theatres went for American product, due to currency restrictions most of the money is still in Italy.

ERA, the new name of the former Ram company, has started work on "Rigoletto," its first operatic film. The company, which originally was formed by Mussolini's son, Vittorio, and Hal Roach, was reorganized a short time ago and its capital stock increased to 900,000 lire. Both Mr. Mussolini and Mr. Roach are still on the board of directors, but it is generally known here that Mr. Roach has no connection with the company, other than to lend his name to the enterprise.

What were to have been Italy's two greatest films, "Scipio l'Africano" and "I, Condottieri," have turned out to be only mediocre films. Each ran only one week at a first-run theatre in Rome.

Library Gets Griffith Films

David Wark Griffith, pioneer film director, and producer, has turned over to the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, New York, material covering his work in motion pictures from the time he made his first full length film, "Judith of Bethulia," in 1913 through "Isn't Life Wonderful," in 1924. Besides films which total a quarter of a million feet Mr. Griffith donated stills, musical scores with orchestration for 15 productions, press books and scrap books of clippings, correspondence, business papers and other memorabilia covering more than a decade in his career.

Loew "Forecasts" Reach 300,000

A circulation of 300,000 is claimed by Screen Forecasts, four page tabloid publication distributed among schools by Loew's circuit in New York. The publication started a month ago and is used to publicize current and coming films, with the publicity element subdued. It is planned to make the publication a monthly. Because of conflicting bookings editions will not be published for theatres outside the metropolitan area.

Fox Closes Two Houses

Fox Rocky Mountain Theatres has closed two houses in the Denver for all but one day a week, when Spanish films will be shown. They are the Del Rio, Las Cincas, N. M., and the Kit Carson, La Junta, Col.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Renaissance

A renaissance of activity is promised at the Denham Studios and is likely to take place in the course of the next few weeks. Though no official date has been mentioned it is understood that Alexander Korda will recommence production shortly, probably starting with a film entitled "Lions Starve in Naples," a circus story adapted from a recently published novel. This is to be directed by Michael Powell, whose "Edge of the World" was one of the prestige successes of the last production year.

Robert Kane, who has arrived in this country but who has not yet announced his precise production plans, is expected to make six for 20th Century-Fox.

Closing Operations

Rock Studios, Ltd., and Leslie Fuller Pictures, both of them backed originally by John Henry Iles, and producers of modest British features—and of the Foula film, "Edge of the World"—are to be dissolved.

Compulsory orders to close their books have been executed on the petition of Kodak, Ltd., which claimed it was creditor of Leslie Fuller Pictures to the extent of £1,197 ($5,985) and of Rock Studios for £5,741 ($28,705). The petition against Rock was supported by creditors totaling £26,800 ($134,000).

Leaves Pinewood

The entire Gaumont British production organization has now quit the Pinewood Studios where it had been working for some time, and is at the old studios of Gaumont British at Lime Grove, Shepherds Bush. It is not impossible that the next Jessie Matthews picture, temporarily delayed, will be made there.

Increasing Output

Among the studios whose activities have not been affected by the present production situation is Gaumont-British-Gainsborough, which has added three to the list of films already announced.

Alfred Hitchcock is to direct "Perjury," with probably Nova Pilbeam in the leading role.

Other subjects to be made include a special adaptation of Roland Pertwee's novel "Such An Enmity," and "The Empty World" and "Death of a Ghost."

A romantic team, consisting of Margaret Lockwood and the new discovery Michael Redgrave, is being sponsored by Gaumont-British-Gainsborough for a series of pictures to be made this year. Pictures under schedule in which the two are to play opposite each other include "Rob Roy," "The Wheel Spins," which Alfred Hitchcock is to make at the Gainsborough studios, "Blue Lagoon," and the recently acquired Roy Vickers story, "The Girl in the News."

Sabu, Indian lad who won fame in "Elephant Boy," with Desmond Tester who appears with him as a drummer boy in Alexander Korda's London Films production, "The Drum." The film is directed by Zoltan Korda and made in colour.

Itemized

"Queer Cargo" which is based on the play by Noel Langley, and in which Judy Kelly, John Lodge and Kenneth Kent appear, has taken the floor at Associated British Studios, Elstree.

* * *

Austin Melford, British author and screen writer, has joined the writers' department of Warner-First National Productions at Teddington. Mr. Melford has been associated with script work on the George Formby comedies made by Associated Talking Pictures.

* * *

A series of two-reel films entitled "Seeing Stars," introducing British film folk to British film audiences, has been launched by Charter Film Productions and will be directed by Roy Boulting. Among those who already have been featured are Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh, Richard Goolden, Vic Olivier and Binkie Stuart.

* * *

Recent acquisition to the cast of "St. Martin's Lane" is the London-born Irishman Edward Lexy, whose success in Eric Pommer's "Farewell Again" and Victor Saville's "South Riding" has brought him to the front rank of London character actors. Lexy has been playing the part of a Cockney landlord in "St. Martin's Lane," his fifteenth film in fifteen months.

* * *

For Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," Gabriel Pascal has set up at Pinewood a replica of St. Paul's Church, Covent Garden.

"Husbands" on Floor

"Too Many Husbands," film version of the stage play "Mirabelle," is now on the floor at Worton Hall and is being produced by Liberty Films. Leading players in the film are mostly those who have appeared with success in the stage version and include Iris Baker, Jack Melford and Geoffrey Sumner. Ivar Campbell is directing and Ernest Palmer is in charge of the cameras.

The story revolves around an absconding share-pusher who, though supposedly a victim of an air crash, turns up at Monte Carlo, much to the embarrassment of his wife.

Bible in Color

Howard Welsh, chief of Vogue Film Productions, a British company which has just produced a musical, "Kicking the Moon Around," announces that his organization is preparing to produce the Bible in color.

Mr. Welsh says he will spend £400,000 ($2,000,000) on the production and that his enterprise will give work to 10,000 persons in a year.

The picture, he adds, will be directed in separate parts, by different directors, at Pinewood.

OFFER BY JAPAN TO BUY REPUBLIC REJECTED, YATES TELLS INVESTORS

President of Consolidated Says Republic Has $6,000,000 in Bookings in Hand; RKO's Old Indebtedness Is Cleared

Financial and corporate operations and structures of both Republic Pictures Corporation, state-right producer-distributor, and Consolidated Film Industries, were explained to stockholders last week at the annual meeting of Consolidated in New York, by Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated, which holds substantial interests in Republic. Consolidated is the largest film developing and printing project in motion pictures.

Mr. Yates said Consolidated had had various offers for the purchase of Republic, including one from the Japanese Government for use for "propaganda purposes," and that today Republic has $6,000,000 in exhibition bookings in hand.

No longer is RKO indebted to Consolidated; Technicolor is not considered a competitor of Consolidated, and business for 1938 has good prospects, although there was a fall-off last month, he told the stockholders.

Japanese Offer Rejected

Mr. Yates said the Japanese Government's offer, which was rejected, would have given Consolidated a $1,000,000 profit over the total investment in the picture company. He said he surmised that the Japanese wanted to purchase the company to have control of an American producing and distributing organization for "propaganda purposes."

Although the only official business before the meeting was the election of four directors for three-year terms, the stockholders plied Mr. Yates with questions. In answer to a query as to the earnings of Republic, Mr. Yates said an amortization table was being set up and until that was completed it would be difficult to estimate the earnings accurately.

He promised he would make a statement on earnings at the end of Republic's fiscal year, April 30th. However, after the meeting he privately estimated Republic's earnings last year at $200,000. He also pointed out that the franchise holders had earned $800,000 in the same period and that he considered the two amounts unbalanced. He said he would ask the franchise holders to reduce the percentages charged for distribution, which range from 20 to 45 per cent.

The unpaid balance of Consolidated's loans to Republic amounted to $2,211,783.78 as of the first of this year. In 1937 the parent company paid $902,100 for Republic's stock and this brought a query from a stockholder who wanted to know why Consolidated became so heavily involved.

"Consolidated has been interested in Republic since June, 1935," Mr. Yates replied. "Since 1917 it has been lending money at interest to film companies to control their printing. It has been our experience that producers, after emerging from their swaddling clothes, opened their own laboratories or forced down the price of printing."

"When Consolidated went into Republic it was on a basis of having control. We saw an opportunity where a lineup of product at a

BILL OF 23 YEARS AGO IS RECALLED

The State of New York Constitutional Convention, to convene in Albany, April 5th, which it is expected will consider resolutions affecting the motion picture industry, brings to mind the last Constitutional Convention of the state which, however generally unknown or remembered, gave consideration to film censorship.

Held in the spring and summer of 1915, the convention considered 725 proposals, many of which were amended. One of the resolutions introduced was by Delegate Mark Eisner of New York City, whose bill provided for "amending Section 8, Article 1, by prohibiting the censorship of motion pictures by providing that no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of the motion picture screen."

medium cost of from $55,000 to $100,000 per picture would be acceptable to exhibitors. The company has been through the usual trials and tribulations of building a picture company. It is now in its third year and I don't think I'm exaggerating to say that it has a tremendous future. In due time it will earn more money for Consolidated than all of its other companies combined."

He said Consolidated now owned 150,000 shares of Republic stock direct and 155,000 shares through the Setay Corporation. Consolidated also has an interest in the Kajo Corporation which owns 225,000 shares.

Republic's Business Growth

While informing the stockholders that Consolidated's profits in February were off sharply from a year ago, Mr. Yates announced that Republic, in the last four weeks, had done more business than in any comparative period since it was started, and that playdate bookings would increase. He said the $6,000,000 in exhibition contracts held by Republic is a lien owned by Consolidated since the parent corporation has first call on collections.

Republic rejected an offer of $500,000 for Gene Autry, its top acting name, Mr. Yates said. He said differences between Mr. Autry and the company over salary would be settled "in a week or two."

The decline in Consolidated's February profits was attributed by Mr. Yates to the fact that studios sent a smaller number of films to be processed during the month.

Subsidiaries Report

Ralph Poucher, head of Consolidated Film Laboratories, reported this subsidiary "in excellent shape." He said he was negotiating for a new account which would add about 30 per cent to gross business. The contract would be for five years.

R. W. Altschuler, president of American Record Company, another subsidiary, announced his company was showing a profit and that business was as good as in 1927 and 1928. He said the retail price of the company's records would be increased from 25 to 35 cents on April 7th. The company, he reported, is planning to obtain a national distribution of its product, and a contract has been made with Electric and Musical Industries, Ltd., providing for European distribution.

A report on another subsidiary, Consolidated Moulded Products Corporation of Scranton, formerly part of American Record Company, was submitted by J. P. Case, president.

RKO Indebtedness Cleared

RKO has liquidated its past indebtedness to Consolidated and owes the company nothing except current bills, Mr. Yates reported.

Although the company is keeping up with color technique, it has discontinued color film development after an investment of more than $250,000, Mr. Yates said, adding that if the industry turns to color, the laboratory can begin production "over night."

While noting that Technicolor is not in competition with Consolidated as yet, Mr. Yates said that "if they can ever get their process down to the cost of black-and-white, they would be a serious threat."

There was no discussion of a recapitalization plan for Consolidated. M. H. Lavenstein, attorney for the Yates enterprises, said the Delaware courts had held invalid the plan approved by the stockholders in 1936, on the ground that it required the unanimous consent of the stockholders. He invited suggestions on a new plan, but only two or three stockholders made proposals.

One of the suggestions was made by Norman Johnson, plaintiff in the action in which the original plan was held illegal. He said he was working on an alternative proposal which he would submit to the officers soon.

Eastern Production Unprofitable

Mr. Yates disclosed that the Biograph Studio in the Bronx, New York, is owned by a separate corporation. He said that he had found eastern production unprofitable, but would not give any indication as to whether the lease on the studio would be renewed when it expires next fall.

E. H. Seifert, described by Mr. Yates as general manager of Consolidated's laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J., was elected to the board of directors to succeed Ben Goetz, who resigned a few months ago to become a production executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in England. Three directors reelected are H. W. Coffman, J. E. MacPherson and M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions.

Fifty persons attended the meeting, a total of 510,496 common and preferred shares of stock being represented. There were 924,973 shares outstanding as of Dec. 31, 1937.

Miller Named Universal Manager

Dave Miller, Cleveland branch manager for Universal, has been appointed district manager for that territory, with supervision over the branches in Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. A. J. Herman, district manager, who was formerly located in Boston, will move his headquarters to New York and supervise a new district which includes branches in Boston, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia and Washington. Joe Engel, Universal branch manager in Philadelphia, who has been shifted to Cleveland, was tendered a testimonial dinner at the Warwick Hotel, Philadelphia, Monday, by his friends.

HAYS CITES ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF SELF-REGULATION, HITS PROPAGANDA

Opposes Advertising in Films; Emphasizes That "Function of Entertainment Screen Is to Entertain"; Protests Quotas

Industrial democracy no longer can be taken for granted anywhere in the world but must be defended, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, warned on Monday in his annual report to the board of directors.

Mr. Hays lauded self-regulation in the motion picture industry and cited seven accomplishments which, he said, have been attained through self-rule. "There is no real substitute for successful self-government in industry," he declared. "There can be no permanent progress for a creative industry controlled in the interest of economic regimentation or political dictatorship."

Mr. Hays also:

Denounced propaganda in motion pictures, declaring that even if disguised as entertainment it "would be neither honest salesmanship nor honest showmanship."

Declared that exhibitors share a joint responsibility with distributors in keeping "social hygiene" and other "bootleg" films from the screen.

Warned that extension of advertising into the entertainment on the screen invites public ill will toward the industry.

Reaffirmed the industry's contention that films should pass freely between nations without artificial restrictions or quota barriers.

Advised that there are still millions of persons who cannot be counted as regular patrons and that "in this fact lies the importance of our work in bringing new customers to the motion picture theatre."

Reported that the industry is continuing its cooperation with educators who seek to develop the usefulness of the motion picture in the processes of pedagogy.

In speaking of industrial democracy, Mr. Hays pointed out that self-regulation in the film industry was a successful laboratory experiment of self-government in industry in general.

"Industrial democracy can no longer be taken for granted anywhere in the world," Mr. Hays continued. "It must be defended. The problem of our national economy very properly has been stated to be the problem of maintaining to the highest degree initiative, enterprise and freedom in industry and business. But these are rights that must be matched by equivalent responsibilities, both social and economic."

"There is no real substitute for successful self-government in industry. There can be no permanent progress for a creative industry controlled in the interest of economic regimentation or political dictatorship. Yet every error of judgment in the movies brings immediate criticism and inevitably jeopardizes the essential freedom of expression and action on which our democracy has been built. Our own industry is an important and significant case

HAYS REELECTED MPPDA PRESIDENT

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was reelected for the 17th consecutive year at the annual meeting of the board of directors Monday.

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, was elected a member of the organization and of the board of directors, succeeding R. H. Cochrane, former head of Universal. All other officers and directors were reelected.

Officers are Carl Milliken, secretary; Frederick L. Herron, treasurer, and George Borthwick, assistant treasurer. Directors are Barney Balaban, Mr. Blumberg, Harry D. Buckley, Jack Cohn, Cecil B. DeMille, E. W. Hammons, Sidney R. Kent, Sol Lesser, Hal Roach, David Sarnoff, Nicholas M. Schenck, Leo Spitz, and H. M. and Albert Warner.

study of the economic, artistic and social achievement of self-government in industry."

The seven gains achieved through self-regulation were enumerated by Mr. Hays as follows:

"1. The development of moral and artistic standards in motion picture production which have vastly improved the supply of popular entertainment and raised the artistic stature of the screen.

"2. The maintenance of the highest possible advertising standards to make certain that pictures are properly exploited to the proper audiences on the basis of non-suggestive and honest advertising.

"3. The creation of a widespread and consistent educational campaign to bring new audience elements to the theatre and secure support for the better pictures.

"4. The establishment of a successful system of self-government and arbitration in the employer-employee relations of the industry. Today our labor wage scales are among the highest in the world; employment conditions in our studios include every provision for safety and health; the problems incident to the employment of children artists have been satisfactorily solved; and a Central Casting Bureau is operating successfully to meet the conditions imposed by the employment of thousands of 'extras' in Hollywood.

Trade Practice Structure

"5. The upbuilding of a trade practice structure in the industry, which, whatever additional implementation it may still require, today functions in the interest of more than 16,000 theatres throughout the country, allows for a distribution system which makes available the most expensive production of the industry at a price within the means of the smallest theatre in the land, and maintains a level of admission prices to the theatre within the economic means of our population.

"6. The organization of safety and conservation measures which have reduced to a fraction fire and other losses incidental to the handling of 27,000 miles of film per day through the motion picture exchanges of the country.

"7. Finally, through the success of self-regulation, a new economic foundation has been built for the industry. The motion picture public is no longer the millions more or less conditioned to the suggestive and sensational. It is a universal public attracted to the movie theatre by a vast variety of clean and artistic entertainment."

Mr. Hays cited the motion picture criticism published by the press as one of the definite contributing factors to the better picture movement.

"The fact that the cinema, like the stage, the concert hall, and literature, has a public that wants and looks for the best in the art, and also has a body of critics who weigh and appraise, is excellent proof of the fact that the cinema has really come of age," he said.

At the same time he emphasized that propaganda has no place on the entertainment screen, and that while propaganda has reduced the artistic and entertainment validity of the screen in many other countries, American motion pictures "continue to be free from any but the highest possible entertainment purpose."

"The industry," he declared, "has resisted and must continue to resist the lure of propaganda in a sinister sense persistently urged upon it by extremist groups."

"The function of the entertainment screen is to entertain, by whatever wholesome theme or treatment writers, artists, and dramatists can create. There is no other criterion. Only those who have selfish purpose to serve can cry out against such a policy."

The theatre, Mr. Hays contended, can afford the soft impeachment that pictures reflect no higher sense than to entertain, "with 'escapist' entertainment if you please."

"As for 'bootleg' films, Mr. Hays explained that only a mere fraction of American picture footage is outside the code of self-regulation. Some in this class, he added, are importations, while others are domestic product of a purported purpose to aid in educational campaigns to meet the menace of social disease. "To open the general entertainment screen to such films without restriction is to invite crowd psychology to do its worst," he warned.

Mr. Hays said the industry's policy is still firm against use of the screen for advertising purposes. He said it was recognized that small theatres have developed a "reasonable" use of advertising trailers as an element of support.

Concurring in the industry's contention that foreign quotas and restrictions should be eliminated, Mr. Hays pointed out that the motion picture is the favorite entertainment of the peoples of the world and that it is an unofficial ambassador of goodwill and understanding.

Commenting on studio trends, the MPPDA head advised that the "American theatre public may look with confidence upon a continuing high quality of motion picture entertainment."

An experimental poll, taken at the close of 1937, indicated there are still 26,000,000 persons over 12 years of age in this country who do not attend motion pictures more than five times a year, Mr. Hays said, adding, "and there are millions more who cannot be considered regular patrons of the movies."

Mr. Hays plans to leave for Hollywood within the next two weeks for a visit of indefinite duration. A second meeting of the MPPDA board may be held next week to complete business which remained unfinished at the adjournment this week.

NO LICENSE REQUIRED TO DISTRIBUTE CIRCULARS

Ordinances Requiring City Permits Violate Freedom of Press, U. S. Court Decides

Establishing a precedent in a decision of importance to exhibitors in those hundreds of towns where local ordinances prohibit distribution of circulars, the United States Supreme Court on Tuesday ruled that no license is required for such distribution.

Theatre owners down through the years have been troubled by prohibitions placed on the common method of circularizing the public with handbills, so-called "throw-aways," and the like to announce their programs and playdates. The Supreme Court now holds that an ordinance requiring persons distributing circulars or advertisements first to obtain a license from the city manager, or other officer of the city government, violates constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes delivered the court's opinion that the ordinance "is invalid on its face." He announced no dissent. Justice Cardozo did not participate in the proceedings.

The case was one involving Griffin, Ga., in which the Workers' Defense League had filed an amicus curiae brief after Mrs. Alma Lovell, of Griffin, had been arrested for distributing literature about the sect Jehovah's Witnesses, of which she is a member.

Calls Ordinances Invalid

David L. Clendenin, treasurer of the League, said that all municipal ordinances restricting the free distribution of handbills and leaflets became invalid as a result of the Supreme Court's decision.

"Whatever the motive which induced its (the ordinance's) adoption, its character is such that it strikes at the very foundation of the freedom of the press by subjecting it to license and censorship," said the Chief Justice.

"Legislation of the type of the ordinance in question would restore the system of license and censorship in its baldest form."

"The liberty of the press is not confined to newspapers and periodicals," the court continued.

In Defense of Liberty

Because of this restriction on hand-bills and leaflets, many exhibitors in towns requiring circularization beyond the reaches of a local newspaper complained that their merchandising efforts were unfairly limited. Elsewhere, restrictions on hand-bills practically forced them to do their advertising in newspapers.

"The liberty of the press," said the Supreme Court, "necessarily embraces pamphlets and leaflets. These indeed have been historic weapons in the defense of liberty."

However, it was said, a local ordinance restricting public circularization may be limited to "literature" that is obscene or offensive to public morals."

FARM BUREAU BUYS FILM PROJECTOR

The Grundy County, Iowa, Farm Bureau has purchased a new film projector which they plan to use in community halls over the county.

The opening show was held at the Ivester Community hall and brought out more patrons than could be accommodated.

Poster Exhibition Opens in New York

The first annual one, two and three-sheet poster exhibition, sponsored by Transit Advertisers, Inc., opened Wednesday in Rockefeller Center, New York, with a total of 61 displays, which included those of 10 motion picture companies.

The film companies who entered posters are Warner Brothers, United Artists, Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox, GB, RKO Radio, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Amkino and Universal.

The exhibition is restricted to posters which have been used in the past year. Three prizes will be awarded in addition to honorable mention certificates. The exhibition will end on April 12th.

The fourfold purpose of the display is:

1. "To foster the idea that, because of its relative size in keeping with its surroundings, the small poster, artistically conceived and appropriately placed, can be made an adornment and colorful attraction to otherwise drab settings.

2. "To reveal the already wide use, by a host of varied advertisers, of the small poster and to show its usefulness when areas are limited in size and its value, as a close-up, where concentrated audiences are near at hand.

3. "To stimulate a keener interest for creative design and pictorial technique in poster art.

4. "Finally, to urge those engaged in the small poster business themselves, the importance of attractive framing, the individualization of displays by the elimination of crowding, and proper maintenance at all times, for it is only by scrupulous adherence to these essentials that the medium will be well received by the public, welcomed on their properties by landlords and accepted for its true value by advertisers."

Councilman Straus of New York City has suggested that a film depicting the operation of the city government under the leadership of Mayor LaGuardia be made at a cost of $50,000 and exhibited at the World's Fair next year. The film then would be turned over to the Board of Education for exhibition in New York and other cities.

Shelving of Patent Revision Indicated

Patent revision legislation, currently the subject of hearings in Washington by a House patents subcommittee, this week appeared unlikely or enactment at the current session of Congress as opposition to the several measures under consideration mounted rapidly.

Designed to divest the large corporations of their control of industry through the ownership of patents, bills sponsored by Representatives W. D. McFarlane of Texas and Lawrence J. Connery of Massachusetts would make possible the securing of licenses to manufacture under patents, under the McFarlane bill three years after issuance of the patent, and under the Connery measure where patents are used to control industries.

The hearings before the subcommittee have developed into a technical controversy between patent lawyers, with the majority of test many definitely opposed to the measures. Small manufacturers as well as large are against the measure, the former fearing that the latter will be able, after three years, to secure licenses under patents which they have developed, while the latter, naturally, fear that the small companies will take advantage of the opportunity to secure benefits under "hit" patents which promise to be profitable.

Members of the subcommittee are divided as to the desirability of the legislation and have called upon the Department of Justice for an opinion by the Attorney General as to whether the measures are necessary as a part of the Government's anti-trust drive.

Sponsors of the bill called attention to speeches by former Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, complaining that the efforts of the Department of Justice to stamp out monopoly were hampered because of the fact that another Government agency, the Patent Office, was issuing monopolistic charters in the form of patents.

Under the present law, the owner of a patent is the only person who may produce thereunder, except where he licenses others to manufacture—a monopoly extending over a period of years. The McFarlane bill would limit that monopoly to three years, after which time any person could apply to the Commissioner of Patents to manufacture on a royalty basis, regardless of whether the patent owner had gone into production under the patent or not.

The Connery bill would be more acceptable to the smaller industries, since it provides for involuntary licenses only where patents have been used for the purpose of dominating industry.

The bills avowedly are aimed at such organizations as American Telephone & Telegraph, General Motors and Aluminum Company of America which occupy dominant positions in their industries. In the case of the A T & T, however, it was charged the company not only dominated the telephone industry but was a major factor in the sound picture equipment business and threatened to dominate television.

SHARP UPTURN IN THEATRE RECEIPTS; FOX, GTE AND AGFA REPORT PROFITS

Admission Tax Collections for February Increase $306,000 Over January; Three Companies Report Larger Earnings

A series of healthful signs were discernible this week, pointing toward favorable operating conditions in several sectors of the business of the motion picture.

A sharp upturn in box office revenue was reflected in the tax collections reported by the United States Internal Revenue Bureau. February collections were $1,659,641, an increase of $306,000 over the $1,353,415 collected in January and $186,000 over the $1,473,353 collections of February, 1937.

Net profit of Twentieth Century-Fox Film for 1937 was reported at $8,617,114, some $894,160 above the $7,722,954 net of 1936, the upturn continuing through the fourth quarter, on a $3,718,200 net, which compared with $1,143,000 for the previous quarter, and $3,472,275 for the fourth quarter of 1936. (Details of Fox's financial statement appear on page 16.)

General Theatres Equipment Corporation earned $1,199,415, net, in 1937, compared with $959,509 in 1936.

Agfa AnSCO Corporation, raw film manufacturer, increased its net profits in 1937 to $723,025, from $157,486 in 1936.

Republic Pictures reported $6,000,000 in booking business for exhibition.

Consolidated Film Industries showed a slight fall-off for February, but reported the outlook bright. (Additional details of operations of both Republic and Consolidated, correlated companies, appear on page 30.)

The ticket tax increase, of course, comes from those theatres charging admissions of 40 cents and over, to which the tax is applicable.

The Internal Revenue Bureau's monthly statement showed that for the first seven months of the fiscal year, ending with February, collections from admissions of stage and motion picture theatres were $1,268,000 ahead of a year ago, amounting to $14,467,073 as against $13,199,206. For the first two months of the calendar year, however, revenues were $34,000 ahead of a year ago, totaling $3,013,056 against $2,979,029, it was shown.

Chiefly from Broadway Sector

Improved business in the Third New York (Broadway) District accounted for more than half of the total increase in collections over January, the bureau disclosed.

Total collections in that area were $506,240 against $339,074 in the first month of the year, most of the increase being attributable to heavier collections at the box office, which advanced from $271,505 to $417,766.

Other collections in the Broadway sector were reported by the bureau as follows: free or reduced rate admission, $5,249 in February against $4,966 in January; tickets sold by brokers, $26,643 against $15,535; tickets sold

OKLAHOMA SALES TAX COLLECTIONS

Oklahomans spent more money during February for groceries and meat than for any other commodity, an analysis of sales taxes collected for the month shows.

Motion picture theatres paid $18,886.58 in sales tax while athletic events and other amusements contributed $6,157.72 during February.

Groceries and meat markets throughout the state paid $147,831.29 sales tax, with department stores second. They paid $83,886.56.

by proprietors in excess of established prices, $4,230 against $243; permanent use or lease of boxes and seats, $2.95 against $5.84; admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, $52,349 against $46,819.

Agfa AnSCO Assets

Current assets of Agfa AnSCO Corporation as of Dec. 31, 1937, including $385,875 cash, amounted to $4,859,973 and current liabilities were $1,517,640 comparing with cash and marketable securities of $475,136, current assets of $3,982,553 and current liabilities of $383,936 on Dec. 31, 1936. Inventories were $3,219,976, against $2,523,122 at end of 1936.

Total assets as of Dec. 31, 1937, amounted to $8,723,798 comparing with $7,108,982 on Dec. 31, 1936. Capital surplus was $4,878,411 against a similar amount at end of preceding year, and operating deficit at end of 1937, was $776,911 compared with deficit of $1,259,941 on Dec. 31, 1936.

Employment, payrolls and Agfa AnSCO products in 1937 reached new high levels, Dr. Ernest Schwartz, president, said, adding that the year was marked also by plant expansion and marketing of new products. Among these was the development of two new high-speed motion picture films. Other new lines included super-panchromatic and super-plenachrome press film for amateur and professional still cameras.

In the year, payroll additions amounted to $101,071.

Toronto Theatre Shows Profit

Before payment of preferred and common dividends, the Imperial theatre, Famous Players Canadian house in Toronto, showed net profit of $44,056 for the last calendar year, as compared with net profit of $5,731 for the previous year, according to the annual report of Eastern Theatres, Ltd., the operating company.

Dividends totalling $16,000 were paid on the common stock, whereas none was paid in the preceding year. Current assets are figured at $246,321 and current liabilities at $27,067.

KAO To Reduce Common Stock

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation has notified the New York Stock Exchange that it proposes to reduce its authorized common stock from 2,000,000 to 1,400,000 shares. The move is being made as a franchise tax economy measure.

Syndicates Seek R. H. Cochrane's Universal Stock

Several syndicates are understood to have been formed to purchase Robert H. Cochrane's stock holdings in Universal Pictures, with either company officials or financial interests already identified with the company reported to be represented on each of them. Mr. Cochrane's holdings consist of 70,500 shares of common stock, or about 20 per cent of the total outstanding. At current market prices the holdings are worth approximately $260,000. Mr. Cochrane, former president, was one of the founders of the company with Carl Laemmle.

The negotiations are expected to be advanced with the return of Mr. Cochrane to New York this week from a vacation in Arizona. Mr. Cochrane will also consider various future activities, one of which is an executive post with a major company. Another involves his becoming associated with an advertising agency, together with P. D. Cochrane.

There is no deal on at present for the purchase of Electrical Research Products, Inc., security holdings in Universal, it was said. It was pointed out that ERPI does not regard the investment as a permanent one and that ERPI's policy is to relinquish all direct ties with producing and distributing companies, which means that the $1,250,000 ERPI investment in Universal will be disposed of in time.

CBS Casting Director Speaks at AMPA Lunch

A suggestion that all showmen, especially talent scouts, devote more attention to performers on sustaining radio programs was advanced last Thursday when Earle McGill, head of Columbia Broadcasting System casting department, spoke at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers luncheon at the International Casino, New York City.

The smaller radio programs, Mr. McGill declared, can serve as a testing ground for motion picture producers. He pointed out that radio stations can experiment with talent without heavy costs that are necessary in the production of films.

Signora Claudia Volta, Italian singer, entertained with two songs. Paul Lazarus, Jr., vice-president, presided in the absence of Ralph Rolan, president.

A program planned as a memorial to Martin Johnson will be held at Carnegie Hall, New York, Friday. Mrs. Osa Johnson will lecture during the showing of a film containing excerpts from the explorer's productions. A list of sponsors is headed by Mayor LaGuardia.

BRANDT TO TRY STAGE SHOWS IN 20 THEATRES

Circuit Head Says Public Has Tired of Chance Games; Other Houses Add Vaudeville

Believing the public has been surfeited with chance games and giveaways, the Brandt Theatres circuit this week revived its plans to introduce vaudeville into 20 houses in the metropolitan area of New York City.

Originally advanced four months ago when several theatres in other sections of the country also decided to experiment with stage productions, the Brandt plan was delayed pending completion of agreements with unions. Arrangements with the musicians now have been made, William Brandt said, but negotiations are still in progress with the stage hands' union.

"They want to charge us the same as they do in the Music Hall," Mr. Brandt complained, but predicted the differences would be ironed out soon and the proposed vaudeville-motion picture policy inaugurated.

Others Adding Vaudeville

Other houses which in recent weeks have turned to vaudeville include:

The Newman, Kansas City; the Main, Columbus, Ohio; the Palace, Akron; the State, East Liverpool, Ohio; Loew's, Worcester, Mass.; Keith's, Indianapolis; the Columbia, Alliance, Ohio, and the Fox, St. Louis.

To much emphasis has been put on "outside attractions" such as chance games, Mr. Brandt said, so that theatre operations now "need a hypodermic."

When vaudeville is installed at the Brandt houses, Screeno, which now runs in some of the theatres seven days a week, will be eliminated, and houses will be returned to single bills if the stage attractions are strong enough. There will be no change in admission prices.

The arrangement will provide 10 full weeks of playing time to stage performers in the New York area, with the possibility of arrangements with theatres in nearby cities to provide a vaudeville circuit of 20 or more weeks.

Kansas City Newman's Plan

The Newman Theatre in Kansas City had offered nothing from its stage in several years until it opened recently with Major Bowes' "collegiate" unit. The house will now present stage shows occasionally, Jerry Zigmond, manager, said.

A weekend policy of stage shows and pictures was adopted by the Main in Columbus, and the Palace, Akron, reinstated vaudeville after three years of a straight picture policy. At Worcester, Loew's inaugurated Sunday vaudeville, the only vaudeville the city has, and Keith's, at Indianapolis, launched its new Saturday and Sunday policy of stage shows and pictures with eight acts of vaudeville.

Thursday and Fridays were selected as stage show days at the Columbia, in Alli-

OMAHA WILL SEE MORE STAGE SHOWS

The Orpheum Theatre, Omaha, will book between 18 and 20 stage shows during the present year, according to Evert R. Cummings, district manager for Tri-States Theatres.

During 1937, nine shows were booked and in the previous year there were eight. Mr. Cummings' plan calls for one or two stage shows a month with a big name attraction in addition to a single feature. The house shows double features the rest of the time.

ance, Ohio, while in St. Louis the Fox adopted a full week policy of vaudeville and films. Although there were no advances in prices at the Fox, there was an adjustment of the time at which price changes are made. For Saturdays and Sundays tickets cost 25 cents until 1 P. M., 35 cents from 1 to 4 P. M. and 55 cents thereafter. On other days the admission is 25 cents until 1 P. M., 35 from 1 to 6 and 55 cents thereafter.

Exhibitors Elect In Two States

Aaron Saperstein was elected to serve his seventh term as president of Allied of Illinois at its convention held in Chicago last week. Van Nomikos was elected vice-president, Benjamin Bartelstein, secretary; Joseph Stern, treasurer, and Harry Nepo, sergeant at arms.

Members of the board of directors are Charles Nelson, Jack Rose, Benjamin Laske, Tippy Barison, Ludwig Sussman, Harry Reckas, Jack Kirsch, Samuel Roberts, Abe Gumbiner, Richard Salkin and Verne Langdon.

F. W. Huss, Jr., has been advanced from second to first vice-president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Sam E. Lind. Robert C. Menches has been named as second vice-president. Caldwell H. Brown of the Zanesville Theatres Company has been named a director.

Five national directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have informed Morris Loewenstein, secretary of the national association and president of the Oklahoma MPTO, that they are in favor of awarding the coming national convention to Oklahoma City.

They are Judge Roy Walker, Lampasas, Tex.; Sidney Lust, Washington; Ed G. Levy, general counsel for the MPTOA, New Haven, Conn.; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City, and M. A. Lightman, head of Malco Theatres, Memphis, Tenn.

Trade Commission Control Increased

Legislation recently given the approval of President Roosevelt expands materially the control of the Federal Trade Commission over advertising of foods, drugs, cosmetics, and other material coming under the food and drug act.

This enlarged authority will extend to both motion pictures and radio, but commission officials, although refusing to commit themselves do not believe that motion pictures will require much of any consideration or control.

Basically, the legislation was designed to give the Department of Agriculture a stronger control over foods and drugs, particularly drugs, in view of the great amount of improper, ineffective and undesirable preparations now on the market. Originally, it was sought to give that department the control over advertising, as well as over all other activities of the manufacturers coming under the food and drug act, but the advertising authority was given the Federal Trade Commission because that body already is vested with the responsibility of eliminating unfair methods of competition, including advertising.

So far as could be learned in advance of any formal action by the commission under the new act, it is not proposed to undertake any "drive" against food or drug advertising. Action will be taken only in individual cases called to the attention of the Government.

A study of the food and drug advertising disseminated through various media, including motion pictures, probably will be undertaken soon, to give commission officials a picture of the situation.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Upward Swing

The upward swing in new production continues. Twelve pictures started during the week. Total number of new films put into work during the past fortnight is twenty-five. During the past seven days eight features were finished.

Three pictures started at 20th Century-Fox. "The Mysterious Mr. Moto" will feature Peter Lorre with Mary McGuire, Henry Wilcoxon, Harold Huber and Otto Hoffman. The principal trio in "Three Blind Mice" is Loretta Young, Joel McCrea and Marjorie Weaver. "Handle With Care" will present June Lang, Dick Baldwin, Andrew Tombes and Sidney Toler among others.

Universal matched the 20th Century-Fox pace also by starting three films. Undoubtedly the most important, if merely as a matter of topical interest, is "The Rage of Paris." The studio's newest continental importation, French Danielle Darrieux, of whom much is expected, will make her debut with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Mischa Auer as the leading supporting players. The principals in "Letter of Introduction" will be Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. A serial, "Flaming Frontiers," also started.

Newly organized Progressive Pictures started "Wayward Daughters." Verna Hillie, Marjorie Reynolds, Dennis Moore, Sheila Bromley and Monte Blue are the most important players.

Paramount finally got its long deferred "Spawn of the North" under way. It will feature George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore and Georges Rigaud. The second picture, "Sing You Sinners," will team Bing Crosby and Fred MacMurray in the leads with Erin Drew and Elizabeth Patterson heading the support.

"Lord Jeff" was started at MGM. The first "long pants" picture for Freddie Bartholomew, it will also offer Mickey Rooney, Gale Sondergaard, Ian Hunter and Herbert Mundin among its name players.

Republic's contribution to the new work is "Under Western Stars." Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette and Carol Hughes head the cast.

For Columbia release, Larry Darmour started "Crime Takes a Holiday." Jack Holt, Russell Hopton, Douglass Dumbrille, Arthur Hohl, Marcia Ralston and Kathleen Howard are in the cast.

Warner Bros. are credited with three of the eight completed pictures. The important players to be seen in "Goldiggers in Paris" are Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Gloria Dickson, Melville Cooper, Mabel Todd, Fritz Feld, Curt Bois, Edward Brophy, Rosella Towne, Georges Renevant, the Schnickelfritz Band and the glamorous Goldigger girls. The cast of "White Banners" includes Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper, Donald Crisp, James Stephenson, Kay Johnson, Edward McWade, Frank Darien and William Pawley. Kay Francis, George Brent and Ian Hunter are the leads in "Secrets of An Actress." The support lists Gloria Dickson, Isabel Jeans, Dennis Moore, Penny Singleton, Selmer Jackson and Herbert Rawlinson.

CAGNEY AND O'BRIEN WITHOUT A FIGHT

Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien have been reformed. They won't indulge in any fisticuffing in "Boy Meets Girl." To the followers of the often repeated Cagney-O'Brien feud this transformation should be something in the nature of a minor millenium.

They fought, always over a woman of course, in "Here Comes The Navy," "Devil Dogs Of The Air," "The Irish In Us" (naturally) and "Ceiling Zero." But in the forthcoming feature not so much as a harsh word passes between them.

Two productions were finished at Paramount. Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, Lynne Overman, J. Carroll Naish, Delmar Watson, Larry Crabbe, Anthony Quinn, Dorothy Peterson, Johnny Downs, Regis Toomey and Fern Emmett will appear in "Crime Gives Orders." The stars of "You and Me" are George Raft and Sylvia Sydney. Robert Cummings, Lloyd Nolan, Harry Carey, Roscoe Karns, Guinn Williams, Warren Hymer and Vera Gordon will also be seen.

Progressive completed "Delinquent Parents," in which Doris Weston, Maurice Murphy and Helen MacKellar are featured.

"Thunder in Alaska" was finished at Republic. Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts, Lyle Talbot and Silver Wolf head the cast.

A serial, "Secret of Treasure Island," finished at Columbia. It will feature Don Terry, Gwen Gage, Walter Miller, Hobart Bosworth, George Rosener, Warner Richmond, William Farnum and Colin Campbell.

Hoofer De Luxe

We have had Number Two star Clarke Gable in about everything from a gangster, aviator, doctor, hitch-hiker up to Parnell, and there are rumors that he is going to be Rhett Butler. But in the meantime arrangements have been completed for Clark to take a course of lessons, prior to the filming of "Idiot's Delight," which are designed to train him as a full-fledged song and dance man. His role will be that of the hoofer with a Brooklynese accent, the same which Alfred Lunt made famous in the stage version of the story.

Maybe Albertina Rasch will teach him the terpsichorean rudiments. Applicants desiring to teach him Brooklynese please form on the right.

Get a Reputation

No sooner had the steed Battleship flashed under the wire a winner in the Grand National Sweepstakes, or at least as soon as some astute press agent could think of it, Wesley Ruggles contacted Randolph Scott, whose wife owns the horse, to get it for the role of "Uncle Dudley," the nag that saves the fortunes of Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Erin Drew and Elizabeth Patterson in "Sing You Sinners."

Says Ruggles, or maybe the press agent said it for him, "You just don't hire any actor for an important role, you get somebody with a reputation and I think Battleship's presence in the picture would help materially at the box office."

No doubt about it, and maybe Mr. Ruggles is one of that growing army which is rapidly coming around to the belief that animals are more intelligent than actors.

Itemized

It has been decided at Warner Brothers to start production immediately on "My Country First," the story of Haym Salomon's service to America in the Revolution. Claude Rains will have the lead, Crane Wilbur has written the original and the screen play and Lewis Seilers will direct.

Universal's follow-up for "Three Smart Girls," to be called "Three Smart Girls Leave Town," will have none of the original cast. Joel McCrea will have the male lead and Archie Mayo will direct. Both were borrowed from Goldwyn.

With Samuel Goldwyn in England, his studios have announced that "Graustark" will go into production this month with Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon and Sigrid Gurie. Miss Oberon left London for Hollywood last week.

MGM is negotiating to regain the rights to Edgar Rice Burroughs' Tarzan stories which it relinquished to Sol Lesser two years ago.

Twentieth Century-Fox, long sceptical of color, has announced that its production of "Jesse James," starring Tyrone Power, which will go before the cameras late in the summer, will be its first vehicle in that medium.

Barrett Keisling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studio publicity department will leave New York shortly on a tour of about 70 key cities during which he will contact newspaper editors and critics.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Rose of the Rio Grande

(Monogram)

Romantic Adventure

Any exhibitor who desires to provide his customers with high class entertainment will do well to start thinking of and talking about "Rose of the Rio Grande" right now. When exhibitors take advantage of all the showmanship material available and do their best to convince the public that "Rose of the Rio Grande" is an entertainment treat worthy of anybody's time and money, they probably will find it needs no extra inducements.

Only in rare instances, and very seldom in pictures produced at comparable cost, has so much pleasing entertainment been packed into a film which runs but sixty minutes. All qualities of this fictional historical romance of pastoral Mexico of a hundred years ago have been intelligently compounded and each exerts a direct influence on the other. The picture is a combination of romance, melodrama, excitement, pathos, music, comedy, all giving a new character and meaning to a subject treated many times before. The production may not present big names, but no players, directors, producers, writers or musicians have ever done much better.

Mexico has been despoiled. Comes an aristocrat, masquerading as an outlaw soldier, with a song in his heart and a burning desire to right the chain of wrongs. As a rebel he makes love to the girl who does not know he is the one she long has worshipped as her hero and the savior of her country. In his ancestral home, he fights a savage death duel with the outlaw chieftain. When peace is restored it is made known to the girl that the man she feared was the one she loved.

That's the theme. Embellishing features set it apart from the routine semi-historical romantic melodrama. The musical content, marching songs, love ballads and folk songs, sung by John Carroll, bear a Nelson Eddy comparison. Movita, heretofore an exotic South Sea Island native in pictures, is revealed as a singing, dancing personality of no little talent. The action, with its man-to-man and mass fights and chases, gives the film a tone of wild excitement. The production effects, interior and exterior settings, endow the film with pictorial class. All are so welded as to argue that "Rose of the Rio Grande" should become a formidable box office bet. The picture possesses peculiar power to make audiences believe what they see, to feel that they are actual participants in what is happening before their eyes.

Previewed in studio projection room in Hollywood. The selected audience, some of whom came as doubting Thomases, probably thinking more of how much they would enjoy the gastronomic epilogue than of the picture, was quick to place a stamp of approval on it. It may be recalled that Monogram's "Boy of the Streets" did surprising things to many box offices. There is ample reason to anticipate that this will fare at least as well and the chances are, if exhibitors really go out and do an exploitation job of it, that it will do better.—GUS MCCARTHY.

(Warners-Cosmopolitan)

Prison Melodrama

The central figure of this prison story is a husky Irish-American who has hopes of becoming a champion in the prize ring. Framed and sent to the penitentiary, he delights in the role of trouble maker until, under the guidance of the prison's chaplain, he loses some of his beligerency, develops into a singer and eventually proves his innocence.

The production is based on an original story by Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison—readymade exploitation highlight—that was adapted by Crane Wilbur and George Bricker. It inculcates Warden Lawes' theories of rehabilitation of prisoners.

Dick Foran, who, like many another actor, graduated to stardom from westerns, portrays the trouble maker and is aggressive enough for the role. June Travis is the girl. John Litel as the chaplain handles his assignment with fine reserve and sincerity. His performance is a continuation of the fine work he displayed in Vitaphone's historical short subjects, notably, "The Man Without a Country."

"Jerry Davis" (Foran) after much pleading is signed for his first prize fight. Knocked out by the first punch, he is disconsolate until he learns that he was doublecrossed by his manager. "Jerry" hits him and leaves the scene. A gangster settles a grudge with the manager by murdering him and the crime is pinned on "Jerry."

"Father Neil Connor" (John Litel) takes a liking to "Jerry" and when he learns that "Jerry" can sing he features him on his radio program. With the Governor of the State, the prison warden, the chaplain and "Kay Norton" (June Travis) all working to prove "Jerry" innocent, he escapes and confronts the murderer. The arrival of the priest saves "Jerry's" life. The pardon comes at a radio broadcast in the Governor's chambers.

Legionnaire Comedy

The American Legion convention in New York City enjoyed attendance and publicity in such measure as to make it a pretty practicable exploitation idea to shout to the local populace the news that this picture offers Victor McLaglen as one of the louder and funnier, albeit well intentioned and behaved, of the veterans taking part in the festivities. Brian Donlevy is his buddy this time, and the amorous rivalry which constituted the chief subject matter of previous Service comedies of the Captain Flagg-Sergeant Quirt cycle has slight and secondary part.

Messrs. McLaglen and Donlevy are seen as "Big Ben" and "Chesty," steel workers in the employ of "Bundy," another Service veteran, who sends them to the Legion convention in New York to break up at any cost a romance between his son, "Jack," and an unidentified showgirl. They mistake "Linda Lee" (played by Louise Hovick) for the object of "Jack's" affections and heap costly gifts and attentions upon her in an effort to win her away from him. "Jack" is really in love with one of the girls in "Linda's" chorus, but, learning the purpose of the Legionnaires, conspires with her and "Linda" to outwit them. The father finally comes on to put a stop to the expense and winds up by falling in love with "Linda" and marrying her in a lunatic asylum while a free-for-all fight between Legionnaires and attendants rages about them.

Sidney Clare and Harry Akst wrote the two musical numbers featured in the proceedings.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where the audience laughed loudly enough to drown out repeatedly the by no means subdued dialogue.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced by Sol M. Wurtzel. Distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Directed by George Marshall. Screen play by Lou Breslow and John Patrick. Original story by Norman Houston. Melodrama

Action is the keynote of this story of the Pennsylvania state police in conflict with coal mining racketeers. Featured are a group of Universal younger players, among whom have been sprinkled a few more experienced performers.

There is a slow spot or two in getting started, but once the picture goes into the real theme, things pick up.

Strong characterizations, smartly contrived and interesting situations and suspense, accentuated by menacing excitement and thrill, give the production a highly melodramatic pace. Romance has been included and there is slight comedy, but these are of secondary importance.

Forced to join the state police by his father, "Colonel Clark," the incorrigible play boy, "Private Smith," continues his antics, first making a play for "Sergeant Prescott's" girl, "Helen Evans." "Smith" goes AWOL during a murder investigation and at a time when honest miners are threatening to revolt against racketeer influences. Quitting the force, "Smith" turns renegade to lead a caravan of bootleg coal through the miners' barricade. At the same time, "Trigger Magee," henchman, believed dead, of boss gangster "Evans," returns to exact revenge. With the miners seething, "Prescott" holds them off until the arrival of reinforcements, but not long enough to prevent "Corporal Duffy" from killing "Magee." "Prescott" making "Smith" appear to be a hero in his father's eyes, the recruit policeman deserts a field competition for "Miss Evans'" favor.

Built to a tried and true formula, "State Police" serves up a kind of exciting entertainment which the action fans appreciate. In its field the exhibitors should experience no difficulty in selling it despite the absence of banner names. By telling the folks it contains plenty of fighting, shooting and suspense, little love but much hokum, they should know what to expect.

Penrod's Double Trouble

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy Adventure

Those elements naturally appealing to juveniles—comedy, adventure, suspense and surprise—comprise the essence of "Penrod's Double Trouble." A story about kids, it is intended for youngsters, although several parts of it are of interest to grownups. The picture was written, directed and played in a natural spirit, just as if a group of neighborhood kids were enacting any of the Booth Tarkington "Penrod" stories in a back lot. As it is developed on the screen it is crowded with potential showmanship material.

"Penrod" bounces "Rodney" out of the Junior G Man Club, whereupon there's trouble for "Penrod" and, in a way, for their fathers, "Mr. Schofield" and "Mr. Bitts." Forbidden to attend a carnival, but going anyway because "Rodney" is taking "Delia," "Penrod" hides in the basket of a captive balloon. The balloon gets loose and carries him with it. His parents and "Mr. Bitts," believing he will be lost or killed, offer a reward for his rescue. The parachute jumper contacts a pair of medicine show operators, "Professor" and "Tex," who have a boy working for them who looks exactly like "Penrod," and conspire to pass him off as the missing boy and claim the reward. Before the deception gets very far, "Penrod" returns, only to be kidnaped by the gang, but "Danny," repenting his participation in the fraud, joins "Penrod" and the young G Men in capturing the criminals. When "Penrod" is safe at home again, he prevails upon his parents to adopt "Danny."

The show moves at a speedy and exciting pace. Practically no time is wasted on non-essentials. Dialogue has been held down as much as possible. For a Saturday matinee offering, or at other times when a goodly attendance of children and family is desired, "Penrod's Double Trouble" should prove a strong attraction.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. While there were comparatively few youngsters in attendance, those present stamped their stamp of approval on the picture. The adult reaction was just as might have been expected from a crowd which patronizes a theatre which usually pre-releases more pretentious offerings, but some of the grown-ups evinced quite a bit of pleasure out of the experiences and escapades of the kids.—G. M.

Reckless Living

(Universal)

Light and Humorous

A quick assaying of the cast, plus the knowledge that "Reckless Living" is a story about race track folk, might not be sufficiently convincing that this production is more than routine entertainment. Yet it's a fast moving, evenly balanced piece of much good old-fashioned 10-20-30 hokum, pepped up with a few new twists, that is meant to get under the skins of the masses.

"Danny Farrell" heads a band of race track followers which includes "Laurie," "Stuffy," "Freddie," "Jeff," "Colonel" and "Dreamboat." Unfortunately the horses on which they bet rarely do right by them, and as "get-away" day approaches all are broke. "Danny," who wants to make a stake so that he can go home and quit the game, is having trouble winning "Laurie's" affections, and wealthy "Stanley" sticks his oar in. With humorous incidents interluding, "Danny" collects $300 damages for being hit by an auto, and, as some funny business having to do with a golden statue that smiles is rung in, he hits a winner for the crowd. On closing day he goes to the track with "Jeff" who, unknown to "Danny," has bet his little nest egg on a horse that runs second. "Danny" pays off out of his own bankroll rather than let "Jeff" be disillusioned, and as the crowd moves on to the next track, "Danny" is with it, with "Laurie" and a job that insures both a safe future.

The show can be sold as one that should bring smiles, in many cases good hearty laughter. Average audiences should find it keenly interesting, for it includes enough diversified romance, comedy, action and excitement to suit most regular folk.

Previewed in Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The audience, which had been watching "Mad About Music" and was awaiting a midnight benefit show, was of the opinion that "Reckless Living" was satisfactory average entertainment. The value of Miss Grey's song number was somewhat handicapped inasmuch as she was in competition with Deanna Durbin. The film may be used to round out any ordinary program.—G. M.

I See Ice

(Associated Talking Pictures)

English Comedy

As a specimen of the brand of unsophisticated comedy and inconsequential slapstick which amuses the English masses this is valuable. As an example of British production in its soundest moneymaking spirit it is significant. As potential entertainment for the American proletariat it is a bird of a different feather.

From a purely British standpoint, George Formby, regional comedian and second strongest moneymaker in British pictures, has never been seen to better advantage than in this effervescent trifle about a photographer's assistant who falls in love with a star of the ice, and encounters myriad slapstick pitfalls in so doing.

It is lowbrow nonsense of the most venerable variety, with ancient and bewhiskered gags repeated two or three times, but it is hilariously funny none the less, partly because its comedy gets down to bedrock and partly because Formby is, to English eyes, so human. The gags are, as we have suggested, none too resourceful, with a recurrence of the baby's diaper joke, some indelicate play with castor oil, and an inoffensively naughty episode in which George in lady's costume penetrates the ladies' room.

But the scene is an England which the English will recognize and relish. Lancashire dialect with its clipped prepositions and elongated vowels plays a not insignificant role. Yet "I See Ice" is hearty physical comedy of a brand the demise of which many showmen lament.

Directorially Anthony Kimmins has done a slick job. It's well knit and neatly paced construction with brisk treatment of the slapstick episodes serving as a model to English directors. (The word English is used deliberately.) Two sequences, a nonsensical passage where Formby gets involved in an ice ballet, and another where he is an unwilling referee at a hockey match, were voted by the trade show audience as infectious slapstick seldom seen in a year of film viewing. And Formby is constantly winsome, as much so in the more human moments as in those of physical duress. He is probably worst served of all in the singing episodes when his inimitable and rhythmic solos with ukulele accompaniment are photographed flatly without the remotest imagination or resource of cutting.

The Call

This production, despite the special circumstances attending a Broadway amusement screen presentation at the Astor Theatre, is in the nature of a religious document, addressed at a special audience interest. The picture was made in France primarily for showing at parochial schools and with little or no utilization of the technique of narration of the modern studio product.

The story, illustrated rather than pictured, concerns the spiritual adventures of a young officer of the French army stationed in the Sahara, following him through sin to redemption and to a martyr's death.

English dialogue has been dubbed into the sound track.

Blue Monday

(MGM)

Cartoon

Based on the United Features comic strip, "The Captain and the Kids," this issue of the series concentrates on the adult members of the Katzenjammer family. The Captain arises on a Monday morning in irate mood and vents his wrath on the long suffering Mrs. Katzenjammer, alleging that the household is poorly managed. She appoints him official cleaner-upper for the day. With the assistance (a matter of opinion) of the Inspector, the Captain goes to work. A washing machine, a vacuum cleaner and sundry other devices that are temperamentally inclined plus the complete inefficiency of the Captain and his satellite, the Inspector, causes havoc, which is the scene Mrs. Katzenjammer finds on returning home. Running time, eight minutes.

Andy Clyde Comedy

Andy Clyde forsakes both his feud with Robert McKenzie, who appears but briefly, and the usual locale, Mooneyville, to do here an adaptation of a story that appeared in Esquire. The sum and substance of the change is practically nil, for he is the same Andy and in lieu of McKenzie the feud is with Olin Howland. The setting is hillbilly instead of small town. Howland inveigles Andy to trade his favorite mule for Howland's dilapidated car when Andy becomes intrigued with the way the car takes a hill in low gear and goes downhill with the ignition turned off. When the car falls apart Andy goes gunning for Howland, but he tricks Andy into trading his gun for a grandfather's clock that doesn't work. And has the last laugh when Howland pulls the trigger of the overloaded gun and the explosion wrecks Howland's house. Running time, 17½ minutes.

Charley Chase Comedy

This involves a series of crazy situations and adheres to the familiar style of comedy seen in other Charley Chase short subjects. Charley is engaged to Louise Stanley, but before the marriage scheduled to be held in the afternoon of the day the story opens comes off Charley gets himself involved with a gangster and his girl friend. Louise calls the wedding off so Charley attempts to kill himself but without much success. He makes a deal with his new-found gangster friend, who agrees to "bump" Charley off. When Louise changes her mind and decides to marry Charley after all he is hard put to escape the designing gangster, who meanwhile has found other reasons for killing Charley. The gangster is played by Dick Curtis and his girl friend is played by Ann Doran. Running time, 16½ minutes.

EXHIBITORS OF ALL AUSTRALIA TO MEET

Powers of NSW Committee Expanded; Sydney Showmen at Outs with Newspaper

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

An agenda paper is being drawn up for an Australian Congress of theatre owners to be held in Sydney on April 11 and 12. Delegates will come from all States and from New Zealand.

Each interstate association and the New Zealand Association will be represented by three delegates, who will be empowered to announce their organization's policy towards general trade problems.

Quota laws, protection, standard contracts, licensing laws, admission prices and rejection rights probably will be the chief topics.

Committee Powers Broadened

A special meeting of the New South Wales Exhibitors Association decided by a majority of three to one to widen the association's rules and invest the controlling committee with considerably increased power.

In the past the executive committee had its hands tied because few decisions of importance could be made without going through the unwieldy procedure of contacting members, whose theatres are scattered throughout the State. This made the association almost completely an instrument of defense on industrial matters affecting theatre operators, and not the aggressive and spirited influence its most enthusiastic members desired it to be.

Discussing the result of the ballot, A. J. Beszant, president of the association, said the executive had spectacular plans for advancement of the organization as a political force in the industry.

Under the new rules, the committee of management is empowered to decide on a wide variety of matters. These include the right to handle disputes on behalf of members through the arbitration court, to enter into industrial agreements, and to decide disputes between members and distributors or other persons or organizations.

Mr. Beszant proposes to sail in the Mariposa on April 20 to make contact with all sections of the industry in the United States and especially to establish a closer affiliation between American and Australian exhibitors. It is probable that W. R. Harrop, honorary business manager of the association, also will make the trip.

Ad Rate "Warfare"

Open warfare has been declared between the Sydney Telegraph and city picture interests following the Telegraph's decision to increase its contract advertising rates from 9/- per inch to 12/-. Managements restricted their advertisements to 4 inches daily. In retaliation the newspaper then increased its rates to 16/6 and the theatres replied by reducing their advertisements to two inches daily. Thereupon the Telegraph jacked its rates to 19/6 and except in the case of MGM, and the Liberty theatre, which are said to have contracts at 9/-, all theatres withdrew all their advertising.

The Telegraph then published a film guide to its readers. Under the heading, "Our Advice Is," films were classified under three subheads which read, "Go to See These," "Stay Away from These," and "If You Like Stars." Under the subheading reading, "Stay Away from These," every picture mentioned was current at a non-advertising theatre.

The Telegraph is one of the four daily newspapers circulating in New South Wales and its published circulation averages 190,000 daily. Until a few months ago it received a moderate proportion of the amusement advertising revenue, but it then entered into an arrangement with theatre managements to publish each Friday a profusely illustrated motion picture supplement in return for a more generous proportion of amusement advertising allocations. The supplement proved extremely popular.

The Telegraph claims that in view of its bigger circulation the increased rates are justified. Theatre interests say that because the supplement they supported brought about this circulation or had a great part in it, they should receive more consideration.

Joseph S. Hummel, general foreign manager of Warners, who is visiting Australia, finds the industry in a much happier position than on his previous visit four years ago. That was at the time of the local "film war," when, he says, distributors were being painted as an octopus about to swallow up the business.

At a luncheon tendered to him by Hoyts, Mr. Hummel pointed to his company's 10-year franchise with the circuit as the most important ever made in this country.

Charles E. Munro, managing director, said that Warners and Hoyts had virtually become partners.

New UA Plan Aimed to Benefit Active Producers

A proposal for redistribution of United Artists stock to permit active producers to obtain an increased share in the earnings of the company and to make it possible, as well, for non-stock owning producers releasing through the company to participate in the earnings of their individual pictures, is being proposed to company partners by Samuel Goldwyn, it is understood.

Mary Pickford sailed Thursday for London to participate with Mr. Goldwyn and Alexander Korda and Douglas Fairbanks in conferences to determine company policies for next season. She admitted existence of discussions of a plan to redistribute United Artists stock, and added that there is no present possibility of any one of the five partners disposing of his or her holdings, declaring, also, that there is little likelihood of Mr. Korda withdrawing from the company.

Mr. Goldwyn's proposal reportedly contemplates stabilization of the controlling ownership of United Artists as it is now constituted, that is, without any sale of the stock interests held by Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Alexander Korda and himself.

The present inactive partners, however, are asked to exchange their present common stock for a new issue of preferred which would pay a fixed dividend rate. Active producers would exchange their present common stock for a new issue of common stock which would be entitled to participation in company earnings remaining after payment of dividends on the preferred.

For non-stock owning producers, percentage deals would be made on individual pictures and long term distribution deals between United Artists and individual producers would include options to purchase common stock, if desired by the producer.

Mr. Goldwyn's proposal is understood to have been tentatively approved by Mr. Chaplin, although Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks are reported not to have committed themselves on it.

The plan is said to have been put forth as an alternative adjustment method upon the recent discontinuance of negotiations by John Hay Whitney and Selznick International for the acquisition of a partnership stock interest in United Artists from either Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Chaplin, or all of them. The discontinuance of these negotiations, following the collapse last fall of the Goldwyn-Korda option deal for purchase of three-fifths stock interest not held by them, is said to have impressed the five United Artists stock owners with the futility of attempting to consummate a deal for the sale of the controlling interest at this time.

Arrange "Marco Polo" Dates

With 102 dates already set United Artists estimates that more than 300 bookings will be arranged for "The Adventures of Marco Polo" for its national release during Easter week. Loew's has scheduled the picture for 22 major situations to open two or three days before Easter Sunday.

"How would you like to win $5,000.00?" was the legend across the envelope front. But, confidentially, the next best thing is a trip to see 'Hollywood Hotel'."

From no less than authority than Francis Emmett Williams of St. Louis, champion antagonist of theatre chance games, we learn that this form of so-called "lottery" originated in 1889 when Yellowstone Kit, an Indian "medicine fakir," brought to Mobile, Alabama, a greased pig, a greased pole and a "greased" lottery called "Jubilee Night." A boy succeeded in climbing the greased pole one cold day, but no one could hold the greased pig, and a grand jury caught the "greased" lottery, which was eventually released by the Supreme Court and has been at large ever since.

The great Sarah Bernhardt had a sense of stark realism strange to the idealistic nature of some artists. No incident in all of her long life on the stage better exemplified this than the one described in "The Real Sarah Bernhardt." It shows that she was made of sterner stuff than some of the "prima donnas" of this day.

In 1874 Sarah Bernhardt was advised to give up acting if she wished to live, but she returned to the theatre as soon as she was able to leave her bed. When she was asked by an admirer what gift he could send her, she replied, "They say that I am to die, so you may send me a coffin."

A week later she was notified by a famous coffin maker that an order had been received for a coffin, to be constructed according to her wishes. Sarah was most particular about its design, finally agreeing that it should be made of rosewood, with handles of solid silver, later changed to gold.

For the remainder of her life this coffin never left her side, even during her travels. She had a trestle made on which it stood at the end of her bed, so she could see it without effort, on awakening.

"To remind me that my body will soon be dust and that my glory alone will live forever," she explained.

W. P. (Mayor Bernie) Bernfield "plugs" United Artists films pretty constantly, since that is his job as exploiter for the company in Kansas City. The other evening he was ballyhooing "Goldwyn Follies," when someone inquired in all seriousness, who are the parents of Charlie McCarthy.

"Mr. and Mrs. Hultz," answered Bernfield.

Freddie Bartholomew's $100,000-a-year salary from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is taxable to the extent of some $67,000, leaving him $33,000, of which $20,000 goes to relatives, $10,000 to his agent, and the remaining $3,000 to his lawyers, living expenses, claims against his estate, and an occasional Sunday lollypop. All of which brings us to the conclusion that Freddie could solve his court and relative economic problems merely by taking a voluntary cut of about $90,000, working for the comparative pittance of $10,000, on which he would only have to pay $3,420 to taxes, relatives and agents, and which would leave him $5,580 a year, instead of the $3,000 he now gets from the $100,000.

Alfred Wallenstein's NBC "Voice of Firestone" program on Monday was to play "Vienna, City of My Dreams."

Radio commentator Boake Carter the other morning was the central figure in a controversy in the House of Representatives, with Representative Virginia E. Jenkes (Dem., Indiana) assailing him for allegedly manhandling on the air a speech she had made in such a way as to favor Japan. It took eight full pages in the Congressional Record to outline her grievance, and plenty of taxpayers' money. The biggest disclosure was that Boake Carter really is Harold Thomas Henry Carter, and that he got the "Boake" from the name of his Russian birthplace, Baku, pronounced "Boake."

C. A. Paul used his "Charlotte Roundup" column in the Charlotte (N. C.) News to threaten local exhibitors with picket lines unless they bring "Snow White" to his town pretty soon. W. C. Daye, managing the Tryon theatre there, rushed right into print with a 14-inch advertisement, begging Mr. Paul to please keep those pickets away from his door, pleading that he has been trying and trying to get "Snow White," that he offered Walt Disney the terms he wants, and whatnot, to no avail.

Herbert Crooker, of Charlie Einfeld's New York publicity department at Warner Brothers, is, justifiably, right proud of the progress of his wife, Delight Evans, in the field of fan-paperism. Delight has delighted Herb with her conduct of the editorship of Screenland Magazine. She delighted him again, the other evening, when she carried home her first radio broadcasting contract. She'll do 13 weeks on the air with a chit-chat on Hollywood stars, a pleasant little topic, agrees Herb. It's to be hot off the griddle, sponsored by the American Stove Company.

Exhibitors who have thought that all the chewing gum made in this country is pasted on the bottoms of their oppry chairs, might feel a bit relieved to learn that the U. S. sold $1,177,521 worth of chewing gum to foreign countries in 1937, enough to buy some 588,760,500 wads of stick-gum, or 1,177,521,000 chicklets, and exceeding U. S. 1937 exports of false-teeth, fly swatters, golf balls, saxophones, razor blades and vacuum cleaners. The total gum shipments abroad would cover the underneath parts of every seat in Radio City's Music Hall, Grauman's Chinese theatre in Hollywood, Soldier's Field in Chicago and Minsky's on Broadway.

OBITUARIES

J. W. Beals Dies; 'Exhibitor' in 1896

J. Whitney Beals died March 28th in Milford, Conn. He was 71 and had been a broker in many cities in the East. He was a native of Boston.

Mr. Beals met Auguste and Louis Lumiere, inventors of Cinematographe, a picture projector based on the Edison Kinetoscope, in France in 1896. He brought one home with him.

William Randolph Hearst sent a tug down the bay to meet Mr. Beals and the new device. Mr. Hearst procured the projector and the film, which had their first showing Election Day that year. A film showing scenes of the Czar was projected against the wall of the New York Journal Building.

Mr. Beals married Winifred Quinby in 1905. She died in 1929. She was the daughter of the late William E. Quinby, former owner of the Detroit Free Press and United States Minister to The Netherlands.

J. H. Michael Dies; 40 Years as Exhibitor

Jules H. Michael, member of the board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and an early exhibitor in Buffalo, died of heart disease there March 26th. Mr. Michael was 68. He had spent nearly 40 years in exhibition.

A native of New York City, Mr. Michael started in 1901 as manager of a Boston theatre owned by B. F. Keith. He was with the Keith organization for 10 years. Later he managed several New York houses for Mitchell H. Mark. He went to Buffalo in 1918 as a partner of the late Henry Brock, with whom he operated the Regent and Academy. Thirteen years ago he became an official of the MPTOA and in 1933 he gave up active work as an exhibitor.

Joshua Smith Rites Are Held in Canada

Funeral services were held at Toronto Tuesday for Joshua Smith, artist and husband of Ray Lewis, publisher of Canadian Moving Picture Digest. Pallbearers included N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation; J. J. Allen, president of Premier Theatres Corporation, Hon. W. D. Ross, former lieutenant governor of Ontario, and J. P. Bickell, a director of Famous Players. Interment took place in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Edward Moncries

Edward Moncries, 79, stage and screen actor, who appeared in early Chaplin comedies, died in Hollywood last week from a heart attack.

Basil A. Barron

Basil A. Barron, 41, Comptroller of Educational Films Corporation, died at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, Tuesday night. Mr. Barron was formerly on the staff of Fox Film Corporation.

Films Seen Holding Popularity Abroad

Restrictions against American pictures abroad have been fostered by the governments and not by the people, by whom our films "ordinarily are received with admiration and enthusiasm," Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce, said this week following a study of more than 80 markets in which American film distributors do business.

"One may confidently and vigorously assert that American films retain a gratifying popularity with nearly all foreign audiences," Mr. Golden said.

"Foreign government restrictions, high taxes, exchange controls, tightening censorship in a number of countries, growing national tendencies to 'coddle' feeble local film industries—all these factors again were strongly evident in the foreign motion picture scene."

Willmark Expands Business, Offers Exhibitor Service

Willmark Service System, Inc., described by its officers as a "fact finding" organization, this week launched an expansion move, offering motion picture exhibitors a service designed to minimize the losses suffered by theatre owners through "leaks" at the box office and through inefficient management.

The corporation, with its main offices in New York, has 26 branch offices in key cities throughout the country and maintains a regularly employed field staff of approximately 600 men and women.

Post Forms Company

Harry A. Post, who recently resigned after a 14 year association with P. A. Powers, has organized Post Pictures Corporation. The new company will distribute 16 mm. and 35 mm. pictures and has opened offices at 723 Seventh Ave., New York.

Altec Servicing Fox Exchanges

Altec Service Corporation this week completed negotiations with Twentieth Century-Fox for the furnishing of Altec service to all the Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges in the United States.

Tri-Guild Ball April 21st

The tri-guild ball, sponsored by the Screen Actors Guild, the Screen Writers Guild and the Screen Directors Guild, will be held April 21st at the Hotel Ambassador in Hollywood.

Paramount Board Meets

A monthly meeting of the Paramount Board of Directors was held in New York Thursday. Barney Balaban, president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, are planning a trip to the Coast to confer on plans for the new season.

More than 300 theatres playing "Gold Is Where You Find It" will receive records of the Weaverville premiere broadcast, for possible use as lobby exploitation.

IN COURTS

Court Writ Petitioned In William Fox Action

The affairs of William Fox this week were again brought to the attention of the supreme court, Washington, with an application by Hiram Steelman, trustee, for an order directing the third circuit court of Appeals to announce its decision as to the validity of an order calling for examination of the books and records of the All Continent Corporation. This was the second time the trustee was forced to appeal to the high court for aid in his efforts to secure access to the corporation's records.

The order was issued in 1936 by the referee appointed by the New Jersey courts, following the refusal of Eva Fox, wife of the former picture magnate, to testify. All Continent has fought the case through several courts, and argument was heard in the third circuit court last December.

In asking the supreme court for a writ of mandamus, Mr. Steelman said that Mr. Fox and all Continent to all intents and purposes "are one and the same" and that for a definite appraisal of the Fox estate it is necessary to examine the corporation's books. Immediate decision of the third circuit court was desirable, he said, because the Fox estate may suffer irreparable loss due to the fact that assets of the All Continent Corporation have been hard hit by the recent stock market decline.

Harms Sued by April

April Productions, Inc., assignee of the Shubert Theatre Corporation and Shubert Theatrical Corporation, filed nine infringement suits seeking $900,000 damages against Harms, Inc., in the New York supreme court this week. The complaint charges that exclusive publication and mechanical rights were granted to Harms on songs from 11 Shubert shows, but that no radio rights were included. It is claimed that Harms has failed to account for royalties received from broadcast licenses. Harms has filed a general denial and contends that an account has been rendered to the plaintiff's predecessors.

Patent Upheld

Western Electric, in a statement issued Wednesday, said that its Wente Patent, covering the reproducing unit in its dynamic theatre speakers, has been upheld for the third time in United States district court in New York.

Ban on Liquor Scenes Shelved

The provision inserted in a House approved liquor bill to ban motion pictures depicting drinking, divorce or murder was rejected Wednesday by the South Carolina Senate Judiciary Committee.

Carl Strumpf Dies

Carl Strumpf, a member of Columbia Pictures' art department, who died Tuesday night in New York of a heart attack, was buried Wednesday in Mount Carmel Cemetery. He was 29 years old.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COUNSEL FOR CRIME: Otto Kruger—Quite a heavy drama. Well made and well received.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS ADVENTURE, A: Don Terry, Rosalind Keith—Very good action picture. Terry looks and acts the type he plays. Big, rough and human. Played March 7-8.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—This is supposed to be a special, but we would not even call it a program picture for a small town. Played to the poorest Sunday crowd in over a year. Played March 13-14.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kan. Small town patronage.

IT CAN'T LAST FOREVER: Ralph Bellamy, Betty Furness—Swell comedy. A bow to National Screen for a trailer that helped the B. O. Played March 9-10.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—Our crowd is strictly western and action fans, but took to this like a duck to water. Word of mouth built up a dandy second day. Played March 14-15.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

KING OF THE WILD HORSES: William Janney, Dorothy Appleby—A fine little picture. The horse Rex pleased old and young. A small town natural. Down to earth pictures like this one is what the small town needs. Played midweek to capacity house. Played March 16-17.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kan. Small town patronage.

LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN: Walter Connolly, Irene Hervey—This is a well made detective mystery drama that pleased the midweek crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN: Walter Connolly, Irene Hervey—O. K. mystery for double bill. Played February 28-29.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—Holt doesn't have the draw he did a few years back. Not much to this. Just fair. Played February 28-29.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TWO FISTED SHERIFF: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—This is the biggest boner any company ever made. It won't mean anything unless you have a western house and buy all the bang bangs available, but it could happen to you. Columbia sold us the Starrett series and a series of Tim McCoy reissues last year and here we are with Starrett in the same story that we played a few months back with McCoy. With very few exceptions it is word for word and scene for scene. If you've ever tried to explain to an irate patron, multiply the incident by a couple of hundred and you will understand what we were up against. Either one of the pictures are o. k. but two in one season. Ouch! Played March 18-19.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

First National

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Played return engagement on Bargain Night. Still a wonderful show. Stars great.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir—Not so good. Only fair. Many said they didn't like it, and I agree. Business no good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran, Ellen Clancy—The usual Dick Foran western. Some beautiful scenery and some singing. We could stand more singing by the "Singing Cowboy." Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—A stark drama with no comedy relief. Needs plenty of comedy on the program for contrast.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—Excellent production. Sure did go over here on Saturday date. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 12.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Grovetown, Tex. Small town patronage.

SHE LOVED A FIREMAN: Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan—Entertaining programmer. Will stand alone in smaller spots. A double in the big burghs.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Well, I can't say this is even up to par with a regular program picture, but if your people enjoy comedy, and plenty of spine chills, then give this to them and you need not be afraid that it will not please them. Would advise for Bank Night or any other Giveaway Night. It will please, but nothing to rave about. Running time, 54 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Drew E. Kolb, Municipal Theatre, Millheim, Pa. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ARSENE LUPIN RETURNS: Virginia Bruce, Melvyn Douglas, Warren William—Entertaining programmer. Okay in small spots. A double for the big spots. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe—Right up our alley again. MGM on this picture is the answer to small town exhibitor. "Navy Blue and Gold" and "Bad Man," this is all we can ask for from any producer. This man O'Keefe is going places. Miss Bruce in the small part she has was never better. Play it any day of the week. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—This was quite a disappointment, especially in the business it did on Sunday and Monday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DAY AT THE RACES, A: Marx Brothers, Allan Jones, Vivien Fay, Ivy Anderson and the Crinoline Choir. For those who relish the Marxian type of slapstick comedy this feature is made to order, for they clown their way throughout the picture in a typical manner. Allan Jones contributes several songs. Vivien Fay and her ballet add a twinkling toe dance routine which seems out of place, and Ivy Anderson and her Gang give a "swing" rendition of "All God's Chillun Got Rhythm." There is a nonsensical plot which amounts to nothing, but none is necessary as the picture moves along at high speed and is primarily a Marx Brothers vehicle. It is grand entertainment for the masses. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 19.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Billie Burke—Plenty good. Judy Garland can really sing and Allan Jones did good also. One thing, no opera singing small towners, they really liked it here. Business pretty good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Luise Rainer, Paul Muni—All due praise has already been given this truly great picture. However, its box office attraction failed in our town. Played four days. Didn't pay checkers' expenses.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Bob Montgomery is no matinee idol here, Rosalind Russell is not very popular and this struck a new Saturday-Sunday low. It is really better than the box office showed it to be. The trailer was the poorest one I ever ran and did not help the gross. At least I "learned" I do not want any more Bob Montgomery pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 4-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler—The headache came at the box office. Metro is slipping along with the rest of them, and while this picture is fair, the thing did not draw film rental. This makes two in a row for Miss George, "Madame X" and this one. No dice on either. The kids were the best part of the show and there is a newcomer, Frank Jenks, that I would put my shekels on, rather than Tone. What little part he had, that part of the picture he stole.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Better than her last two, and you can see why they put Spencer Tracy in: to bolster up a star that is on her way out. Tracy, "Manuel" in "Captains Courageous," is not a fisherman in this one. He is in the Coast Guard now, throwing out a life line to Crawford, and after "The Bride Wore Red," she is going to need it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—Played mid week, single bill to extra business and splendid patron reaction. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 9-10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Billie Burke—This one was a dandy. Did twice as much business on the second day. Best comedy put out to date. Beat "Topper." Don't be afraid of playing this one. Will need a lot of selling because of the star value, which is none as far as a draw is concerned. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 15-16.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Walter Pidgeon—Played this to a fair midweek audience which received it well.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—Poignant. Human. Magnificent. This mighty MGM picture truly a great picture of the past. Will make money if tieup with churches and schools. Fine performance by Huston, Stewart and Charles Coburn. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Miss Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Frank Morgan, Robert Young—Will stand alone in any spot. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell—Pleased almost everybody. Did not do as good as we would have on account of two stormy nights, and it must have been good to get them out at all. Played March 17-18.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE MAN: Tom Keene—This drew largely with the western fans and seemed to please.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE MAN: Tom Keene, Betty Compton—I did not like this western at all. I asked a few people and they said they liked it. Now I don't know what to say about it. Of course, some people like any western as long as they fight and race each other over the hills. I did not see anything about this but the scenery, which was good. Business off. Am afraid Tom Keene is no go here for me. Also too

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY: Mickey Rooney—Pleased a Saturday crowd and won a lot of favorable comments.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF THE DAWN: Jack Randall, Peggy Keys—Very good western, almost ruined by Randall's singing. Monogram, please don't let him sing. I'll never buy next year Randalls if he continues to sing. People complain very, very much.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE ORIENT: Regis Toomey, Esther Ralston—Monogram has given us so many good ones it wouldn't be fair to jump on this too hard. Let's say fair and let it go at that. Played March 9-10.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR: Judith Allen, Grant Withers—Second half of our Jack Randall bill and a whiz of a picture. Genuine flood shots well spotted in the disaster scenes in this picture. Weakest portion was the quick finish. Appeared as though the director said "Let's just quit here." Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 19.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—A really wonderful picture of its type. Stars, while none of them mean much at the box office, all are fine. Do not believe a better cast could have been selected in so far as their performance was concerned. Played this on Sunday and Monday and business went down 'way below average. Very beautiful scenery in this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye—It's a crime to charge admission for a thing like this, and that's what my patrons said as they tore for the exits. It drew well the first day, but didn't hold up after they found out what it was like. W. C. Fields was good, but this senseless bit of disconnected footage fell as soon as he left a scene. Running time, 93 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Not by any chance the best "Broadcast" of them all. Songs were pretty, if they would only sing them right. Martha Raye's singing is good, but lots could have been left off. Shep Fields' orchestra was okay. Lamour, Ross miscalc. Bob Hope not so hot. Kirsten Flagstad shouldn't have been in it at all. For small towns and the rest in this show of shows, it may be "Paramount on Parade," but it was a parade of walkouts for me. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Akim Tamiroff, Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame—This one was a dandy. Some showmen would think it too drawn out, but it is very fast in action and story. One would never realize that it was that long after seeing it. Running time, 125 minutes. Played March 11-12.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame, Akim Tamiroff—To say this picture is a failure at box office is too bad, but I am compelled from actual box office performance to tell you I grossed more money with "Thrill of a Lifetime" than with "The Buccaneer." After you see this marvelous Cecil B. DeMille spectacle, you will agree that he has surpassed himself and done his biggest picture. The cast is made up of some of the finest movie stars, two of the loveliest women in moviedom, Margot Grahame and Franciska Gaal, and March, Tamiroff and many more make a great big picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

EASY LIVING: Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold—This farce comedy sent the crowd into hysterics.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: June Martel, Larry Crabbe—A good western for the Saturday trade.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

NIGHT CLUB SCANDAL: John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Campbell—Very good murder story. Cast all fine. Played on Bargain Night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THREE SHOWMEN ADD COMMENT

Three showmen adding their reports to the exhibitor comments on pictures in this week's columns of "What the Picture Did for Me" are the following:

Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kansas.

C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Drew E. Kolb, Municipal Theatre, Millheim, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Biberstein reports this week for the first time. Exhibitors Fismer and Kolb were reporters to the department more than a year ago.

SCANDAL STREET: Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell—Entertaining programmer for small spots. Lower half of bill for big spots.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Betty Grable—Here is another one that you can get them in with star value, but will go ready to shoot you. Very poor program picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 17.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Johnny Downs, Eleanor Whitney—These young people are good, and the specialties offered by Ben Blue, The Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, etc., were okay, but some of our patrons thought the story holding them together was too slender, giving too much the effect of a vaudeville short.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—Fine picture. Business not as good as expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Leo Carrillo, Ann Dvorak, Phil Regan—Average business only. Patrons' reactions were split wide open, some finding it good entertainment, others saying it was just fair. All agreed Carrillo was just about the whole show. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 11-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN: Wynne Gibson, Warren Hull—Played this to a good house on a midweek night and it had a lot of favorable comments.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—How the patrons ate this one up and comments indicated they thought it the best Autry to date. Business big and every one happy. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 4-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Except for Gene's fine singing, this is a very ordinary western. Played this to better than average weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY, NO. 1: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—The title fits him like a glove. Hurry back to work, Autry; we are only three pictures behind release of your next and will need a couple for July and August. Played February 27.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

TRUSTED OUTLAW, THE: Bob Steele, Lois January—Pretty well liked by all. Story a little different for a western, but not too much. Played March 6.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

RKO Radio

BEHIND THE HEADLINES: Lee Tracy, Diana Gibson—Lively action comedy which pleased.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BORDER CAFE: John Beal, Armida—This is a different type of western which pleased a good midweek crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MEET THE MISSUS: Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—Very amusing comedy drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker—Classy production. A bit tedious in spots, but why hold that against this picture which presents such a varied assortment of screen and radio stars. It's entertainment and that is what the public wants. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 20.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller—Here's entertainment to give the fans the time of their lives, and the exhibitor the show of the year. Advertise it big. In my opinion the best Bob Burns and musical made so far. A great show for best playing time. Thanks, RKO; after this picture I will forget "Hitting a New High." Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Miss Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—Very good comedy, but it seemed to lack the punch that Joe E. Brown pictures used to have.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou, Lucille Ball—Boy, what a swell show. Our hats off to RKO. The lines were so fast and furious that the audience did not get all of them due to the laughter of the previous remarks. A well pleased audience certainly left our house. Hepburn comes to the front in this, but Rogers can quit her dancing and go to acting and still be a draw. She stole the show. The little girl, we did not catch her name [Lucille Ball—Ed.], who read the letter from home and also greeted Butch in the last reel, will go places. Watch her smoke. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY GIRL: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Entertaining comedy drama. Pleased a fair midweek audience.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—Betty Philson, Marianna Strelby—No one ever made a more clever little comedy than this one. The cast was well selected, directed and was very talented. The two little girls were exceptionally good. Don't be afraid of this one, as every one should enjoy it. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers—Played this with an indoor circus. It pleased the Withers fans.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason City, Mich. Small town patronage.

BIG BUSINESS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This pleased the Saturday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason City, Mich. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—Good program fare. Business only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—Well done. Where Jane Withers clicks, extended time for all. Running time, 78 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CITY GIRL: Ricardo Cortez, Phyllis Brooks—A pleasing surprise in a program picture. Nothing big, but on a double bill, with a comedy feature for contrast, this will hold up nicely. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN, THE (Reissue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—Typical Rogers homely humor, but not the draw at the box office of the previous pictures. My guess is that they are being released too long after his death, and this we noted, that we got very few of our regular patrons, mostly the older generation and not many of the younger. I would say that from now on it would be well to cease the releases of this star.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—Good in any spot. This little girl is going places. Will draw fine in any spot that cares at all for little Jane. We need more of this type of pictures. Played midweek to capacity house. Outdrew a so-called special played on a Sunday date. Played March 2-3.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kan. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—All I have to say is, play it and watch the box office click as in the old days. It is pictures of this type that brings them out evenings and make them movie minded. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Drew E. Kolb, Municipal Theatre, Millheim, Pa. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—Say, what a peach this one was. Swell show, good singing and skating picture. Raymond Scott Quintet was well liked here. Many came back the second night. Good old Fox, who really knows how to make a high allocation picture. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—Just about the best musical to hit the screen this season. And how Miss Henie has improved her acting. Patrons raved; the cashier was kept busy. It was a "Happy Landing" all around. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 13-16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp—Okay western type picture with action set in Hawaiian Islands. Plot typical horse opera, action plenty hammy in spots and scenery true Californian, but all in all got by on a double bill in midweek to fair business. Running time, March 2-3.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—It filled my theatre and they all left moist-eyed, friendly, some deeply stirred, human beings with faces showing that deeper, worthier emotions had been stirred. All seemed shorn of artificialities, at least, pro tem. What this film did for me it will do for any theatre, any community, any audience, high brow or low. It sounds most all the depths, and scales many of the heights of human life and emotion. And (sub rosa), if Alice Brady doesn't get the Academy Award for her character portrayal of the widow O'Leary, it will be because this rural and urban scribe is not on the committee. Alice Faye and Don Ameche were fine, and even Tyrone Power's impersonation of an unlovable political scamp; all were vitally convincing. As to the theme it is epic in scope. All the hackneyed Hollywood three and four syllable words, colossal, stupendous, magnificent, can be used truly in an attempt to re-create, to resurrect a chapter in America's history when the midwest was a frontier. If producers would stop making so many cheap little studio program pictures which we small exhibitors lose money on, and give us more like "In Old Chicago," most everybody from hillbilly to savant would become movie conscious. Then the theatre would take its place definitely as one of the four fundamentals of civilization, viz., churches, schools, newspapers, theatres.—Mary Hayes Davis, La Belle Theatre, La Belle, Fla. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (Re-issue): Will Rogers, Anita Louise, Henry B. Walthall—Honors in this reissue are about evenly divided between America's best loved star and Henry B. Walthall. A good story, excellent cast and plenty of humor furnished by the old Confederate soldiers in the jury box, makes excellent entertainment, even though it is a reissue. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—Not so hot. Wouldn't have missed it if never played. Who said Simone can sing? Thanks to National Screen Service for not giving us a sample of her singing in the trailer. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 17-18.—Miss Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

OFF TO THE RACES: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Slim Summerville—Slim Summerville is always welcome here. We will always remember him in "The Road Back."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Jack Haley, Gloria Stuart—Boys, here's a picture you want to be sure to push 100 per cent and you'll be right out front when the show is over ready to receive the roses. This is the best Temple since "Bright Eyes," and, if advertised right, you'll pack them in. We are going to run a return showing on this one in the near future. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Drew E. Kolb, Municipal Theatre, Millheim, Pa. Small town patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Fred Allen, Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Joan Davis—Something slipped some place in the making of this one. Somehow, you keep waiting for something to happen and it never does. Has plenty of pleasing spots scattered throughout and all in all proves fair entertainment, but with the cast of big names and Zanuck's reputation for turning out musicals, this could certainly have been a far better piece of entertainment. Business better than average. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 6-8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor

PAGING JAYSEE FOR NEW EXHIBITOR FRIEND

"This is our first report on pictures, so hope you see fit to print them.

"We certainly get a lot of good from the Herald; in fact, cannot get along without it.

"Have old J. C. Jenkins call on us."

—FRANK J. BIBERSTEIN,
Attica Theatre, Attica Kan.

Holm—Entertaining all the way.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glen Morris, Eleanor Holm—More careful work by the director might have made this a real winner. It did draw fairly well and seemed to please, but could be taken apart too easily. Somewhere, too, they lost the revenge idea, that was played up in the title.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen, June Lang—Very fine picture. Although it may not be classed as a suitable picture for Shirley Temple, I still think it one of her best as far as I am personally concerned, because I do not care for her ordinarily, but really liked this. Victor McLaglen perfect in his role.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan, Frank Melton, Robert Wilcox—Fine picture. Stars all fine. Wilcox liked. Glad to see Frank Melton; he was good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Joel McCrea, Frances Farmer—This is truly a wonderful picture. We did not do a big business on it, but the reason for that is it is the wrong time of the year to do much good in the show business in this locality. Edward Arnold was tops, the best we have ever had. Better than "Diamond Jim." Frances Farmer made a hit with our patrons in this picture. The supporting cast was so good they are worth mentioning. Go after this picture with all you have to advertise a picture. Sell the stars, not the title. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 11-13.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Edgar Bergen and

"Charley McCarthy," Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Brothers, Andrea Leeds—You can get them in on this one because of the star value, but try and help half of them by the time half of it is over. Had the "Audioscopsiks" these two days and so did well after all. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 13-14.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

LOVE FROM A STRANGER: Ann Harding, Basil Rathbone—Shy clear of all English. Don't even talk about them and then you won't get beaten. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAND-IN: Joan Blondell, Leslie Howard—Pleased a few. I don't believe these takeoffs of Hollywood have any interest for the general public who come to a show to be entertained. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones, Louise Brooks—Played on Saturday night and it pleased our patrons on that night. Box office was okay and that is what counts. Played March 19.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

LET THEM LIVE: John Howard, Nan Grey—Very pleasantly surprised with this little picture. Picked it up quite old and it did very well for us. Played March 14-15.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

LOVE IN A BUNGALOW: Kent Taylor, Nan Grey—Pleasing little comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Richard Cromwell, John King—This picture drew fairly well on Sunday and seemed to create quite an impression.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SOME BLONDES ARE DANGEROUS: Noah Beery, Jr., Dorothea Kent—Pretty poor stuff and played double feature with Buck Jones in "Sudden Bill Dorn," which is a lot worse than this, so what chance do you think Universal will have in selling me more of this kind next year?—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis—This is a good picture, but did not draw well on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Doris Weston, Lee Dixon—They don't seem to care for singing, or marines or Dick Powell here any more. At any rate, this was a big disappointment at the box office on Sunday. It's a good picture, but does not rate the classification that Warners gave it.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Nat Pendleton, Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda—Don't fail to play this and play it two or three days, as it's a picture everyone will enjoy advertising for you. It pleased about everyone. Nat Pendleton was pretty swell in this. He should be in line for some sort of award or other for his portrayal of a slap happy wrestler. I could use plenty like this. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BURY THE HATCHET: Monte Collins—Pretty good. Quite a few laughs.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

CASH AND CARRY: 3 Stooges—Our audience like these maniacs. Good for a barrel of laughs. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

INDIAN SERENADE: Color Rhapsodies—Good color cartoon.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LET'S GO: Color Rhapsodies—This is as good as any Disney that I have played, although I haven't played many, and won't as long as I can get one this good at a much lower rental. I find Columbia cartoons (colored) all fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PLAYING THE PONIES: 3 Stooges—This slapstick farce knocked the audience for a loop.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

UNTRAINED SEAL: Color Rhapsodies—Good colored cartoon. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Educational

POT LUCK: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—Miss Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOSKO AND THE CANNIBALS: Harman-Ising—Good cartoon. In color.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

BOSKO IN BAGDAD: Happy Harmonies—Very poor cartoon. Too much color. Too much useless animation and sound effect. Not a laugh in the whole reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

COPENHAGEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These MGM travel talks are the tops. Hats off to FitzPatrick. Better than any in the business. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EVERY SUNDAY: Deanna Durbin, Judy Garland—This is a pleasing little subject which gives these two young girls plenty of opportunity for self-expression, but it did not do any extra business. Running time, 1 reel.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FISHY TALES: Our Gang—Up to Gang standard.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PARTY: Elissa Landi, Charley Chase and a Galaxy of Stars—Metro certainly has what it takes with these musicals in color. This one is no exception. It has everything that makes a box office smash. Beautiful girls, music, dancing, comedy and a color perfection that is hard to equal. Book it and feature it. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAIL AND FEMALE: Our Gang—Another laugh riot from Our Gang. These kiddies are go-getters when it comes to entertainment. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF THE WEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—The wonders of the West shown in natural colors. It was especially interesting to me, as I have visited the Grand Canyon, and would rather see one of these Travel Talks than a feature. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERFECT SETUP: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This is one of the Crime Doesn't Pay Series and is a very entertaining and satisfactory short. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—Fine talent made up for lack of color. Boswell extra good with organ accompaniment.—C. E. Fismer, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK: M-G-M Miniatures—A splendid single that hits a new idea in short subjects and carries it through convincingly well. Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

FOOTBALL TOUCHER DOWNER: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon. Will please about everyone as all Popeyes do. Running time, seven minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FOWL PLAY: Popeye the Sailor—Nothing more can be said about these Popeyes. They are the tops of all the black and white cartoons, and this one is better than usual. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—Very good subject dealing with daredevils.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RIVER, THE: U. S. Government Documentary Film—A very fine three-reel subject produced by the Government and distributed gratis by Paramount. This subject is well worth playing and I believe it will help your box office. I advertised it at the schools and let all the teachers in free. They spoke many good words for "The River." If you play it, contact the schools and it will help. This subject is very, very good, or at least that's my opinion. Advertising matter furnished on gratis rental. Running time, 3 reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Ted Husing is, in my estimation, the tops of all sport reels. Mr. Eaton and Mr. Rice have chosen all their subjects with great care and Mr. Husing certainly puts them over. Tops. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—My patrons go nuts over these water sport reels. This one is exceptionally good and very interesting. Play it. I could use many reels like this one. Let's have more of them. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WHISPERS IN THE DARK: Screen Songs—Have played only two or three of these. This one seemed to be O. K. Music very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

HARRIS IN THE SPRING: Phil Harris—One of the best musical comedies we have ever presented. Patrons commented which is unusual on a short subject. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LONESOME GHOSTS: Mickey Mouse—Another Disney click that brought forth many good chuckles. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Shorts—Up-roarious fun. Worth a preferred spot on any program that needs laughs. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedy—Very good comedy with Kennedy reaching a new height in trials and tribulations. It had our audience in an uproar from start to finish, and believe me, that's a good test for any comedy. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PATHE PARADE, NO. 4: These single reels are consistently good and this one holds to that reputation. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RAMPAGE: Ted Fiorito and Orchestra—Good musical featuring Ted Fiorito and orchestra. It has a small plot with some good comedy by the piccolo player and some grand singing by the "Debutantes." Worthwhile addition to any program. Running time, 18½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set—Exceptionally good western music and songs. Our people went for it in a big way. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set—A very clever musical western that will hold up a weak feature. Why doesn't some producer grab up this Ray Whitley? We need a few new western stars. The old boys are getting the "rheumatiz" and if the cowboys must sing, this one can. Running time, 18 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set—Again RKO scores with this little short. Just another good musical that we are going to rebook later in the season. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHITE MAGIC: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Interesting even if it is on a commercial advertising basis for Sun Valley. Wonder why the exhibitor has to pay for shorts advertising for tourist business. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

FOX MOVIE TONE NEWS: Just a little better than the rest, in our opinion.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

United Artists

SELF CONTROL: Mickey Mouse—Donald Duck this time, and excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

ALL AMERICAN DRAWBACK: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—This one gets the laughs. Well worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ALPINE GRANDEUR: Colortour Adventure—Beautiful and interesting. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BOLTED DOOR, THE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Again Mr. Gibbons gives us a swell short. This one especially appeals to the women due to the subject matter. It was trifle scary for the children but has a very good lesson. Well acted and good subject matter. The best of the newer shorts. Running time, 13 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAFFY DUCK AND EGGHEAD: Merrie Melodies—The craziest cartoon I've played for some time. Don't pass this one up. It's good for plenty of laughs. They'll all enjoy this. Running time, seven minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DAFFY DUCK AND EGGHEAD: Merrie Melodies—Well liked, plenty of laughs for adults or children. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

DANGER—HIGH VOLTAGE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—These Floyd Gibbons series are becoming more popular with each showing. Worth your best playing time. Running time, 13 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

"GIVE ME LIBERTY": John Litel—I was afraid the audience would find this tiresome, but most of them must have learned Patrick Henry's oration in school because this Broadway Brevity aroused a great deal of interest. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOTEL A LA SWING: Broadway Brevities—Very ordinary musical short. Some clever dance routines.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

JAN RUBINI AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good music but music of this sort hasn't any appeal to the majority of my patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MALAYAN JUNGLES: Colortour Adventure—These travel tours are not put across like MGM's. Vitaphone's subjects are just as good but the color spoils them. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NECKIN' PARTY, A: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Fine. Am bringing it back later.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PORKY'S POPPA: Looney Tunes—A better black and white cartoon with plenty of music so that all enjoyed it. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. A. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serials

Mascot

FIGHTING MARINES, THE: Grant Withers, George Lewis—I picked up this old serial from Monogram in New Orleans at a very reasonable rental and it is pretty good. Print in pretty fair condition. It's as good as some I have played that cost much more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HURRICANE EXPRESS: John Wayne, Shirley Grey—A very good serial. No regrets as yet. Pleased with extra weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

PAINTED STALLION, THE: Ray Corrigan, Hoot Gibson—Good serial that held up throughout the 12 weeks.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

S.O.S. COAST GUARD: Ralph Bellamy, Maxine Doyle—Off to a bad start, though no fault of the serial. Should build up if it holds to standards of Episode One.—C. E. Fisser, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Universal

RADIO PATROL: Grant Withers—On the fifth episode. This is proving a consistent attraction.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

At Last—Sponsored Shorts You're Proud to Show and Paid to Play

A LOW BOW OF THANKS FOR THE TIDAL WAVE OF CRITICAL APPROVAL LAUNCHING Boy Meets Dog AND CARAVEL'S Sponsored FILM PLAN

One of the cleverest sponsored shorts ever produced. "Ad" element injected deftly and only a flash. Will set a standard for all future productions of sponsored films.

Jack Harrower — Film Daily

Picture is an ambitious effort, being 90% entertainment, with only about 30 seconds outright advertising.

Weir — Variety

Should be a welcome part of any program. Animation perfect. Songs catchy. Kids will love it. Grown-ups will get a great kick out of it, too.

Hank Linet — Showmen's Trade Review

Contains an entertainment emphasis and a minimum of advertising unique among sponsored reels.

Finest example of sponsored film. Few cartoons contain production values inherent here. Packs a wallop throughout every inch. Grand cartoon in Technicolor.

Leonard Weisberg — Box Office

The actual presentation of the name of the sponsor doesn't last more than a few seconds. Without this, the film could probably be sold on the same basis as the best of the color animations.

J. M. Jerauld, Managing Editor — Motion Picture Daily

★

Pure entertainment. Fine musical background by Nathaniel Shilkret and Frank Churchill, composer of "Snow White." Has high appeal.

Paul Denis — Billboard

Clever animation and color effects. Should find ready audience acceptance.

Harry Blair — Film Curb

Very entertaining. Ranks in front division of color cartoons. Commercial angle brief ten second flash.

Philadelphia Exhibitor

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

THE AWARDS

Following is a letter addressed to Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief of Quigley Publications, from Rick Ricketson, president of the Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres, Denver, in reply to a wire advising him that Ted Kirkmeyer, manager of the Rio Theatre, Helena, Montana, had been voted the Quigley Silver Grand Award for 1937. Says Mr. Ricketson:

Dear Mr. Quigley:

"We were delighted to hear that Mr. Ted Kirkmeyer, manager of our theatres in Helena, Montana, had won the Quigley Grand Award for Showmanship for 1937.

"Mr. Kirkmeyer is a splendid young man, deserving of the honor, and represents the finest traditions in our business. I am certain, also, that the fact a Montana theatre won the Award this year will be a stimulus to Quigley Showmanship participation throughout the Rocky Mountain west during the coming year.

"I want to congratulate you upon the splendid success of the Quigley Awards and the great purpose it is serving in our industry. Today, more than ever, showmanship is needed in theatres, and the Quigley Awards inspire it in its truest sense."

The mail bag also produced a letter from Mr. Kirkmeyer, who thus expresses his appreciation for the honors bestowed:

"Your wire informing us that we won your 1937 motion picture Grand Award thrilled us beyond words.

"We have always felt deeply indebted to your publication for the way you so clearly presented the news of the motion picture industry and its most outstanding exploitation.

"You are well aware that a full campaign is made possible only through the warm cooperation of a community, its newspapers and the theatre employees. In behalf of the people of Helena and our theatre employees, we thank you most sincerely."

* * *

Also heard from is Julius Seltzer, winner of the Quigley Bronze Plaque for his campaign put on at the Warner Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia. Mr. Seltzer speaks:

"I want to take this opportunity of thanking you for the distinction accorded me by Motion Picture Herald in the Quigley Award. I assure you that the plaque will be one of my most prized possessions and an honor that I will always point to with pride."

The essence of the idea behind these annual awards is that the whole show does not come in the can.

Through the presentations of the Round Table and its recordings and recognitions of what showmen do out on that frontier where the product meets the public, it is made evident that the creative work of this industry is not all done until the take is counted on Saturday night.

So while we are glorifying the award winners, let's remember that they are but the representatives of that great array of the workers entrusted with the final, conclusive process of getting the gross.

SELLING SHORTS

In a recent issue of the "Ohio Mouthpiece", Warner Cleveland zone house organ, edited by Manny Pearlstein, publicity director Sid Dannenberg advocates planning complete campaigns on the excellent short subjects now available. Program construction, a highly specialized art in itself, would fail miserably if the manager, in presenting his show to the reading public, overlooked the merchandising of his timely short productions. Often theatres have hung up new highs by seeing to it that subjects strong enough to offset a comparatively weak feature were booked and then selling the entire program for all it was worth.

The wise manager never sells his shorts short.

YOU'RE WELCOME

Vacation time approaches, and with many of our Round Tablers trekking New Yorkwards an invitation is extended to one and all to come in and get personally acquainted. We've polished up the handle on the big brass door, and await with keen anticipation the visits of our old and new friends. Remember, the welcome mat is but freshly scrubbed. How about using it?

GERTRUDE MERRIAM
Associate Editor

Described in detail elsewhere in the Round Table section will be found camera night gag inaugurated by Joe Goetz, RKO Paramount Theatre, Cincinnati. Shown at left is lobby setpiece constructed by the theatremen as part of the lighting equipment made available for use of the amateurs who entered the contest for awarded prizes.

Two days ahead of opening of "Penitentiary" at the Suffolk Theatre, Holyoke, Mass., Manager Paul Kessler sent a guard and two "convicts" out on streets with their copy on chests and backs. Heralds were distributed by newsboys who shouted "Extra, all about the Penitentiary break at the Suffolk Theatre."

Round Table In Pictures

Put on by Manager Harry Bodie, Warner's Sixth Street Theatre Coshocton, Ohio, was street ballyhoo for "Swing Your Lady." Two hillbillies carted small wagon through main thoroughfares on which was planted phonograph. Stopping at crowded sections, boys would play hit tunes from the picture before the assembled crowds.

Twelve boys with caps and gowns were utilized by Manager Sam Gilman, Loew's Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., to publicize his date of "A Yank at Oxford." Riding on promoted bicycles, each lad had a letter fastened to his back, which when arranged in proper formation spelled out the picture title. At intervals boys would scatter and then return to correct places.

Art Morton, Scollay Square Theatre, Boston, Mass., promoted use of a Ford, vintage 1912, for street ballyhoo on "Sez O'Reilly to Mac-Nab". Car was properly bannered and entered in local St. Patrick's Day parade. Lizzy broke down "accidentally" in the middle of the parade, causing a halt in the procession, thus getting plenty of attention and laughs from the crowd.

Tying in with Don Dickerman's Pirate Ship stationed in Biscaye Bay, Austin Moon, Colony Theatre, Miami Beach, for "Buccaneer" bannered the boat with title. Ballyhoo on picture was broadcast from loudspeaker, message being heard from some distance.

Second hand piece of lumber reminiscent of an old hitching post was used by Joe Stribling, Kiowa, Hobart, Okla., to publicize his McCarthy short "At the Races." Planted at curb, "post" had sign attached reading, "I'm McCarthy's brother, waiting to see, etc., etc."

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Garland Stop-Over

When Judy Garland recently stopped in Houston for 30 minutes en route, Francis Deering together with some newspapermen boarded the train about 40 miles outside the city and interviewed the star, bringing back some swell stories for the Post and Chronicle. Arriving at the station, Judy was met by a delegation of Houstonians, headed by Mayor R. H. Fonville.

The brief stop-over was fine excuse for a 15 minute broadcast from the Southern Pacific station over KPRC with announcer introducing the Mayor and extending greetings of the city. Guard of honor, composed of 25 girls from the Black Battalion, protected Judy from the onrush of autograph seekers and big surprise came when six youngsters, dressed in costumes identical to the one Judy wore in "Everybody Sing," presented her with a small cotton bale packed with Mexican pralines.

Radio interview continued with questions about her trip, her new picture, her work on the "Good News" radio program, her next assignment, etc., etc.

Spelling Bee

An innovation at the Fox Carmel Theatre, Hollywood, Cal. was started by Dick Moss with the presentation of an old fashioned spelling bee on the stage Saturday matinee. Children registered in the lobby for the contest and five boys and girls were brought on stage to contest for the prizes, theatre passes going to runners-up.

Moss reports that the contest went over big, with the audience rooting for its favorite and adults receiving as much enjoyment out of the proceedings as the children. Age limit was for children from eight to ten and Dick plans repeating the gag with kids from 10 to 12.

Premiere

Fireworks, an American Legion parade and a reception preceded the opening of "Rawhide" at the Capitol Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla. Entire personnel of the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals attended with sports writers from all newspapers covering the event. The Cardinals, rivals of the Yankees in an intra-city training camp series then in progress, helped honor Lou Gehrig by furnishing the preliminary parade with music, with the Mayor lending an official note to the proceedings.

BOTWICK INAUGURATES "HOME OF STARS" SERIES

Running on the amusement page, four columns wide, Harry Botwick, M. & P. State Theatre, Portland, Maine, has started a series of photographic layouts of the homes of various screen stars. This week, the theatreman is using cut of the exterior of Margaret Lindsay's home with descriptive caption and picture plug.

Harry plans to run this series weekly, furnishing the stills to the co-operating newspaper and concentrating on those tying in with his then current picture.

Nautical Lobby

Concentrating on the nautical angle of "Submarine D-1," George D. Irwin, Lyceum Theatre, Duluth, Minn., promoted ship's wheel, miniature lighthouse with flasher light, various types of life preservers, ship's light and other boat accessories, for lobby display. Also exhibited was complete deep-sea diver's outfit ahead of date, and during engagement man donned it, parading streets.

Novelty sailor hats were worn by entire staff, doorman in sailor's garb stood behind ship's wheel and at the time of reporting, Irwin was checking with government engineers with regard to the safety of sending someone out on the ice of Bay of Lake Superior to stencil title letters in large black letters on the snow.

Employees Contest

Highlight of the advertising campaign put on by Manager J. J. Cahill and assistant Alec Hurwitz, Brockton Theatre, Brockton, Mass., for "Wells Fargo," which started four weeks ahead was printing of 16-page booklets, 11 pages of which were devoted to photostatic copies of reaction cards filled out by patrons at a preview and four pages devoted to plugging the picture. Last sheet provided room for names and addresses.

Employees were given these booklets and told to have people whom they contact, read the book and then sign their names and addresses. To the employee obtaining the most signatures $5 was awarded, $2.50 going to runnerup. As an incentive to the people to read and sign, it was stated that one week prior to opening 30 names would be drawn and each would be mailed a guest ticket.

Submarine Tie-up

To publicize "Submarine D-1" from the stage of the Symphony Theatre, Chicago, A. Blasko contacted local deep sea diver to make a personal appearance. The theatreman acted as master of ceremonies and questioned the diver regarding his various accessories. During the interview, points regarding the underwater picture were discussed.

For the remainder of the week, the equipment was made into a neat display and placed in lobby against red plush background on which were mounted stills and cards designating what each item was and what it was used for.

Rosalie Visits Shops

Christening an attractive girl as "Rosalie," Manager H. Mintz, Parthenon Theatre, Hammond, Ind., had the girl visit all shops three days ahead of opening of that picture. Wearing a different colored rose each day, girl gave passes to those who properly identified her. The tour of Rosalie through the stores was publicized in the Hammond Times.

With several sequences in the picture set in a naval academy, Mintz dressed seven ushers as West Point cadets carrying regulation rifles and sent them out as a street ballyhoo, going through drill formations at all prominent corners.

Selling McCarthy

Sammy Cohen, United Artists foreign publicity manager, under the supervision of Arthur W. Kelly, has just released a 14-page booklet on the "Goldwyn Follies." Since the Charlie McCarthy character is not well known in Europe, unique angles are presented on how to "sell" the dummy through a series of teaser ads to be planted in newspapers three weeks ahead. Campaign winds up with a questionnaire on Charlie in contest form, for which guest tickets are awarded winners, in addition to tinted fan photos of the wooden-head.

Amateur Slant

Scouting around for a kid angle to sell "You're a Sweetheart," Marlowe Conner, Rhodes Theatre, Chicago distributed pluggers to schools announcing a contest on stage with promoted prizes going to those best imitating Oswald, who appears in the opus. Audience applause decided the winners.

EASTER PROMOTION PLANNED BY AL COX

Theatreman Cooperates in Citywide Observation; Prepares Own Film

Reported by W. E. Schmidt, district manager Comerford Theatres, Wilkes-Barre, is Easter parade conceived by Manager Al Cox, Capitol Theatre. Realizing that any commercial angle would have to be submerged in putting across his promotional plan, Al proposed that the slogan "Go to your church on Easter Sunday" be incorporated in all newspaper ads of merchants and run on all Comerford screens in a carefully prepared trailer of not more than two frames.

The Mayor will issue a proclamation for this day. All parking lots will extend free parking during the hours of Masses. All street cars and buses will extend a special fare of not more than five cents to general public during the hours of Masses.

Cox will take five hundred feet of film of prominent people entering the churches in their Easter regalia, strolling on the avenues, etc. Each newspaper will have a man with a still camera accompany his cameraman taking stills of the movies shot; these pictures to be run in their newspapers the following week. The movie he takes will be shown on the screen at the Capitol for one week.

At seven o'clock on Saturday night preceding Easter the shades will be drawn on every merchant's window, and will not be raised again until Easter Sunday at 1:00 P. M., with a complete new spring display.

Monster Choir Recital

Arrangements are being made for an activity to take place in Public Square in the form of several of the Churches' most popular choirs. This will take place at 1:30 in the afternoon, and will last forty minutes, which will tie in with Wilkes-Barre's Fashion Parade.

All newspapers will extend every cooperation in the promotion of this activity, giving the plan every consideration, and rather than try to make it their own activity, Cox will put it over from a community standpoint. With that in view he has contacted the head of the Merchant's Association, and after securing his approval contacted the town's leading merchant. He, too, it is reported, heartily approved of the plan suggesting that it be made an annual event.

Cox feels the "Go to Your Church" angle on Comerford screens will create a lot of good will towards his company, as well as towards the Sunday Movies in that town. The thought behind all the activity, however, is that with the Merchants' Association backing the plan, there should be, conservatively speaking, about 20,000 people on the streets of Wilkes-Barre Easter Sunday afternoon; and the services on the Square as set up at the present time will not last over an hour, so the theatres should certainly benefit considerably, from the box office standpoint as well as future good will.

SWEENEY STAGES "MANNEQUIN" HUNT

Identification contest was held recently to publicize Wayne Sweeney's "Mannequin" opening at the LaPorte Theatre, LaPorte, Ind. Stories were run in papers that girl representing "Miss Mannequin" would walk masked to the city court house, at which point she would remove her domino, enabling passersby to get a good look at her.

Announcements were then made that the following day, the same girl in a complete change of outfit and unmasked would cover the same territory and to the first person identifying her a $25 cash prize was awarded. Tickets went to runnersup.

Man-On-Street Broadcast Helps Sell "Paradise"

Through tieup with well-known jeweler who sponsors a man-on-the street broadcast, Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn., for "Paradise for Three" had man pick passersby at random and question them on the picture. In each case, person called to the microphone was asked names of cast, who wrote the film, etc., etc., guest tickets going to each whether or not they could answer correctly.

Concentrating on the skating sequences in the picture, Cohen dug up a flock of old skates which he proceeded to "lose" throughout the city opening day. Attached to each was tag offering reward if turned into the theatre. Theatreman also wired Frank Morgan, who consented to ship skis worn by him in the film. The arrival of these was covered by reporter and photographer from paper, who took pictures of the hostess on the airplane handing the skis to the manager. Further publicity was netted by insuring these with leading company, papers again covering the event and using photo of agent handing the policy to Cohen.

"Let's Hear From You!"

Charninsky Again Makes Good-Will Trip in Field

Two years ago, Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Circuit, Dallas, Texas, appointed Louis Charninsky, Capitol Theatre manager, as emissary for his company on the "Good-Will" trips sponsored by local organization. Men are chosen to represent various lines of endeavors and cover the surrounding suburban towns. Trips have a two-fold purpose; to help small towns better themselves which in turn results in the betterment of Dallas. Louie has just completed his second trip in the field which netted his theatres newspaper breaks in Dallas and in the towns covered.

Goetz Features "Camera Nights" In Cincinnati

Cashing in on the current camera craze that has swept the country, another alert showman to take advantage of this box-office slant is Joe Goetz, RKO Paramount Theatre, a deluxe suburban in Cincinnati.

In a tieup with leading camera and photo supply house, Goetz "Camera Night," to which only amateurs are eligible, is promoted every Tuesday night. No type of camera is barred, not even the most inexpensive small "Brownie." There is no limit to the size of the finished photograph to be submitted, as long as it is within reasonable size limits. Finished prints may be mounted or unmounted, at the option of the contestant. The theatre, through the cooperating merchants, furnishes all backgrounds and lighting equipments, such as spotlights, floodlights, etc. Pictures must be taken on the theatre premises by a patron on the night of the contest. Any subject may be photographed, including candid shots of subjects on the screen, although flash bulbs are not permitted to be used in the auditorium.

First, second and third prizes are awarded weekly. These consist of cameras, camera equipment and photo supplies. A varied assortment of prizes of equal value in the three awards are constantly on display in the lobby throughout each week, as is credit card and spotlights (see photo in Round Table picture section) and the winners of each prize may select his own prize in the group which applies to the value of his award.

To stimulate added interest, a special prize of $10 is offered to anyone who photographs an all-mirrored vanity in the lobby without including himself in the reflection. This has given rise to shots being made from all sorts of angles, behind furniture and other objects, with the cameraman lying on the floor, perched on a stepladder and similar ludicrous positions. So far, no one has qualified for the special prize. The lobby is a veritable beehive of amateur photographers on "camera Night." They are there in droves—male, female, old and young, and interest is growing by leaps and bounds.

"Let's Hear From You!"

"Fargo" Invite Delivered To Mayor by Pony Express

To receive additional publicity on "Wells Fargo" in the Baltimore papers, Rodney Collier, Stanley Theatre, aided by Norris Nelson, used the pony express gag, whereby rider dressed in special costume rode to the Mayor's office and presented him with special invitation to attend the opening. Picture and story ran in papers following day.

Through cooperation of B. & O. railroad, a special display was placed in the lobby showing development of transportation. Invitations were sent to all railroad and express officials inviting them to attend preview. Tieup was effected with railway express agencies whereby all truck drivers distributed heralds with all parcels delivered week ahead. All trucks were bannered and a special railway express night was held at theatre with all employees turning out en masse to attend.

Conner Inaugurates "Movie-ng" Guide

Tying in with the usual apartment hunting and moving that goes on during the month of April, Marlowe Conner, Rhodes Theatre, Chicago, has gotten out a novel circular which he calls a "Movie-ng Guide." Leaflet lists available apartments and pictures to be seen at the Rhodes during the month, and offers tickets to any family renting an apartment listed in the circular, immediately on occupancy.

Second page which contains the calendar setup of the month's bookings, carries a heading "move in on this swell entertainment," etc., etc. Remainder is devoted to apartment listings and ads which cover entire cost of printing and distribution.

"Let's Hear From You!"

Arkin Distributes "Swing" Glossary

Eli Arkin, manager of the Paramount in Hammond, Ind., for "Hollywood Hotel" as a medium of reaching the youth of his city, publicized the picture at high schools and large dance palaces by distributing throw-aways capitalizing on "swing."

Five thousand of these were used containing cut of Benny Goodman, the "swing king," with copy as follows: "Brush up on your glossary of swing, Benny Goodman is coming to town in," etc., etc. Bottom of card contained terms and their definitions.

Murphy Presents "Sawyer" Broadcast

The cast and three understudies were selected by Manager Frank Murphy, Loew's Theatre, Wilmington, Del., at an audition at his house for the "Tom Sawyer" presentation to be broadcast over WDEL. The selections were made from a total of 55 aspirants from five to 25 years of age.

Another rehearsal was scheduled before the presentation was broadcast and a "Tom Sawyer" dinner held for the cast and representatives of the newspapers and radio station. Prize tickets for the picture were awarded for the best impersonations of the characters of the film.

"Let's Hear From You!"

"Prevaricators' Preview" Launched by Aydelotte

Unique indeed was the gag used by Frank Aydelotte, Tower Theatre, Drumright, Okla., for "The Awful Truth" in the form of a "prevaricators' preview." Contestants were invited to compete by seeing who could tell the biggest lie. Each contestant was limited to two minutes, lies were submitted in written form in advance. First ten persons whose lies were selected appeared on stage prevue night and told them to the audience. Winners received cash and ticket prizes, with ducats going to all contestants. Top winner also was presented with large badge making him an honorary member in good standing of the Ananias Club.

Through the efforts of Manager Jack Neary, Orpheum Theatre, Dubuque, Iowa, owner of leading department store received wire of authorization from Walt Disney to establish a "Snow White" post office in his store. Replica of the dwarf's home with cutout of the fairy princess standing in the door and dwarf dolls looking out of the windows was built. Card to one side invited all children to drop their letters or cards addressed to one of the dwarfs or Snow White, care of the Walt Disney Studios, in slot for mailing purposes at side of house.

Cooperating merchant and theatre advertised the opening of the post office, three "Snow White" departments were established to sell the merchandise, using photographs and a 40 by 60 as a background in each window. Cards with theatre and playdates were also planted. Merchant further purchased replica of Snow White coach used in the picture which he featured in center window, surrounded by seven three-foot rubber dwarfs, and one of the princess.

Through tieup effected by the manager, local baker featured small cakes, seven to a box, with molded dwarfs, each with their respective names iced on. Baker ran 33 inch ad in Telegraph Herald on these cakes with copy selling the idea of dinner parties or children's parties. Two front windows were devoted to the cakes with playdates and picture copy, in addition to placing a herald in every cake box leaving the establishment. As a further buildup, colored souvenir photos of all the characters were presented with each purchase.

Five and tens featured Snow White counters, plugging all the accessories with one-sheets over counters throughout stores carrying dates. Front main windows also contained cards plugging the engagement and blowups of the New York critics' reviews were spotted inside.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

When we get a green watermelon we discard it because it isn't ripe. We believe the theatregoing public should have the privilege of judging the condition of the melon for themselves.

A fellow told us once that we should never eat huckleberry pie, and we asked why not, and he said because he didn't like it. But nevertheless, we are still strong for huckleberry pie.

Censoring pictures is a whole lot like Hitler taking Austria; the world may not like it but Hitler took it anyway. It seems to be another case of "the survival of the fittest," and you will recall that that was like Maloney's argument when he knocked his grandmother down with a fork handle.

As soon as the P.W.A. boys get the out-houses all built and the jackrabbits killed off, they can go to work on the shelterbelt, provided the government furnishes plenty of dogs during the dry season. There have been so many trees cut off out here that there isn't a decent place left for a crow to roost.

We trust that we will be pardoned for digressing right here from theatrical matters, but our mind wanders back to our boyhood days when we used to hunt and fish along the bayous of the Kankakee river in northern Indiana, and there comes to us this little poetic reminder by Will Pfrimmer:

Here, through the long, bright summer days,

The wood duck rears her downy brood;

Here, where the slender cat tail sways,
The hermit bittern seeks his food;

So still, so quiet all their ways,
Scarce broken is the solitude.

It occurred to us that this might be of some interest to you boys who love to go afield with rod and gun as we once did, and still do.

Over in Iowa is a town called Aurelia, and Aurelia has the Community theatre, and Community is operated by one J. C. Eding, and J. C. sends us a check with the request that we have the HERALD sent to him, and this proves that there is another "J. C." running at large. It also proves what this J. C. has often said, that The Herald Covers the Field Like an April Shower.

Everybody out here in the "bread basket" of the world is beginning to feel pretty good. Old Man Winter is on his return ticket to Valley City, North Dakota; the snow banks are all gone; the warm sun is shining; the trees are budding; the robins are yanking angleworms out of the ground; the lawns are getting green; our old Angora is out of nights arguing politics with the neighbor's tom, and—

"The lark is up to meet the sun,
The bees are on the wing,"

And we'd like to shoot the son-of-a-gun
Who says this isn't spring.

Legion of Decency Calls 'Birth' Film Unfit for Theatre

The Legion of Decency on Wednesday released the following statement on the picture, "Birth of a Baby":

"The film—'Birth of a Baby'—has recently been discussed in the editorials and columns of the press and has been presented for an appeal review to the Board of Regents.

"Some time ago, the Legion of Decency placed itself on record as commending the action of the Commissioner of the New York State Department of Education—Honorable Frank P. Craven—who upheld the rejection of the picture as entertainment by the Motion Picture Division of the Education Department. In taking this action, the Legion felt that the picture was not suitable for general exhibition in the theatre.

"This production has considerable merit from the medical, educational, social and technical points of view; however, the film is not suited to general exhibition in the theatre, where audiences are composed of both sexes and various ages, backgrounds, mentalities and temperaments. Adequate and satisfactory audience control is very difficult to obtain in theatrical exhibitions. An attempt to procure such control may, despite precautions, insinuate sensationalism to many minds.

"Intrinsically, the film is moral in theme. The Legion does not criticize the sincere ultimate purposes of the organizations which are listed as sponsoring this picture. The Legion is also aware of the exploitation safeguards which the distributors promise to use in contractual agreements and publicity.

"Nevertheless, in forming an integral evaluation of the film, external factors must be taken into consideration. The theatre, at the present time, is not popularly accepted as a clinic, consultation office or classroom. The theatre hardly provides the kind of environment necessary for a proper, dignified and reverential attitude toward this subject which is so sacred, private and personal.

"The Legion of Decency deems this picture unsuited for entertainment and inappropriate for general theatrical exhibition."

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, six were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Cattle Raiders," "Judge Hardy's Children," "Merlusse" (French), "State Police," "This Marriage Business," "Wide Open Faces." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Charm of La Boheme" (German), "Husaren Heraus" (German), "Island in the Sky," "Joy of Living," Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

HOUSE appeal in theatre seating is a matter of both seat construction and harmony of design. In the American Seating installation for the new Paramount Theatre in Jackson, Mississippi, you have an example of maximum house appeal.

Greatest possible patron comfort is achieved with American's full spring edge seats and spring backs—the best spring construction ever used in a theatre chair. Architectural beauty is enhanced by the design of the new Lo-Glo standards which harmonize perfectly with the general interior decorations.

You will find that American Seating Company installations always combine seat comfort and long life with harmonious design. Look to American for correct solution to your seating problems.

Jackson, Mississippi, may well be proud of this new Paramount Theatre. One of the Kennington-Saenger Theatres, it is managed by Henry Seel. R. W. Naef was the architect. 1200 American Seating Company chairs were installed on the first floor and 500 in the balcony.

The unique design of the louvers on the new Lo-Glo standard throws all light rays downward giving a large area of soft illumination in the aisle but in no way disturbs occupants of chairs across the aisle.

MAKE THEIR DREAMS COME TRUE

From the beginning, motion pictures have been striving to attain perfect illusion. Color is the latest step in the constant progress toward screen realism.

But snow-white, high intensity projection light is needed to bring out the true beauty of color. It also adds depth and realism to black and white projection. It satisfies today's critical audience.

More than 5000 theaters, one out of every three, are now using high intensity projection. Of these, over 4000 have adopted Simplified High Intensity projection which gives two to three times as much light on the screen at so little more cost (as compared with low intensity) that one extra admission per show will cover the added cost. Give your patrons the light they will enjoy.

Write for free, illustrated booklet explaining this new, economical but up-to-the minute projection.

Day and Night THIS THEATRE FRONT SELLS ENTERTAINMENT

Today's smart theatre men demand showmanship outside the building as well as inside.

This requirement is easily met by the coloring and lighting of the new L-O-F Fronts of metal and glass.

These complete L-O-F Fronts are as modern as a World's Fair—a brilliant ensemble of Vitrolite structural glass, Vitrolux, the exclusive L-O-F color-fused, tempered plate glass (the only material having all the elements necessary for a practical, luminous front) and Extrudalite, the new, patented storefront metal with pressure-controlled, shock-absorbing sash.

L-O-F Fronts are easy to clean, require a minimum of maintenance and retain their beauty indefinitely. Mail the coupon for further information on our complete storefront materials, before you approve any specifications. Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, 1310 Nicholas Building, Toledo, Ohio.

Make certain your Vitrolite installation is made by an authorized L-O-F dealer.

■ In remodeling the Congress theatre in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., the first use in a theatre was made of Vitrolux, a colored glass architectural material recently developed (its characteristics are discussed on page 46). The Congress is owned and operated by William E. Benton, who has been proprietor of this house for eighteen years. The Vitrolux glass is used in a yellow tone for the central panel above the marquee. The panes are mounted with aluminum mouldings, and the panel is framed by corrugated chromium-finished panels bearing a row of 6-watt lamps in Climax roundel-capped reflectors, the corrugations having the effect of seemingly multiplying the lamps in reflecting them. Below the marquee, which is finished in black with red and green neon trim, the front is faced partly in Formica and partly in Micaloid. The marquee soffit is lamped, with reflectors; attraction board letters are Adler silhouette. The remodeling of the Congress, which seats 970, included extensive interior changes, with complete redecoration. William H. Vaughan of Saratoga Springs was the architect.

Exhibitors Show Varied Interest In Facilities for Showing Local Films

MOTION PICTURES taken locally, in which the theatre's patrons see themselves and their neighbors on the screen, prove almost unbelievably profitable to some exhibitors and no benefit at all to others, according to a nation-wide survey by BETTER THEATRES. This wide difference in results appears to be partly geographical, and partly due to differences in the methods used.

Smaller towns and suburban communities present the most favorable field. The large theatres in metropolitan centers report an emphatic no.

No is also the answer of small-town showmen, who have involved themselves to an extent that no increase in grosses could justify, and of those others whose choice of subject matter fails to arouse local interest.

For example, Texas has tried local reels of crowds entering and leaving football games, midnight shows and so on. Denver has done the same; Alabama reports the results of newsreels of local floods, fires and football games. The best these exhibitors can say for their attempt is, "The local touch will grow," "We look with favor on anything that will give our shows a local touch," or, "Do not look with special disfavor on locally made film, but have not given them much thought."

Emphasize Local Talent Films

On the other hand the M. A. Lightman (Malco) interests in the central South, use scripts employing musical and other items that give good spots to a large number of young local performers, and comment that the success of their plan is self-evident. Still more striking reports come from Nebraska, where I. N. Kuhl, owner of the Rivoli and Lyric theatres at Seward, increased his Friday, Saturday and Sunday grosses by 50% through showing movies of commonplace local events. Oscar Johnson of Falls City, Nebr., owning the Electric, Rivoli and Sun in that town, showed local movies two nights a week and increased his grosses enough to pay for all the equipment necessary in the first two weeks. His profit on the equipment investment is 2,600% per year. Omaha reports a stampede of interest in local movies among other Nebraska exhibitors.

By contrast Kansas and Western Missouri report complete indifference: "Some of the exhibitors think it is a good idea, but give no indication of doing anything about it."

Cost a Big Factor in Opinion

Opinion of showmen in many parts of the country, including especially those who have tried local movies and abandoned them as unsatisfactory, is largely biased by the factor of cost. Some believe costs to be so large that only commercialization of their screens will cover them, and they do not intend to welcome commercialization of any kind. But the equipment that Oscar Johnson paid for in two weeks cost him only $600. Ted J. Kempkes' Bonham theatre, at Fairbury, Nebr., a 900-seat house, has doubled grosses on Thursday and Friday nights at an increase in operating cost of only $15 a week. The Bonham does not use sound film for local work. Jimmie Redmond, assistant manager, does the narrative over a microphone and the theatre's sound system.

Better Theatres is published by the Quigley Publishing Company, Inc., Rockefeller Center, New York, every fourth week as Section Two of Motion Picture Herald. Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief. George Schutz, editor. Colvin Brown, general manager. Ray Gallo, advertising manager. C. B. O'Neill, Western advertising manager, 624 S. for sound, or used as the Bonham and others prefer, with a microphone, apparently meets the objection of expense very satisfactorily. Some exhibitors, however, dislike 16-mm screen quality. The J. H. Cooper theatres in Colorado pay for film by giving the local camera shop a short trailer shot, and they complain of poor photography.

The West Coast has done little with locals. Boston reports that local sports reels draw juvenile patronage which, however, becomes so enthusiastic that it keeps away adults. Off-stage voice through a microphone has been used in Boston with indifferent results which are attributed to poor quality 16-mm photography.

Ross Baldwin, operating the Tosa in Wausatosa, suburb of Milwaukee, has received, on the other hand, highly favorable patron reaction and commendation of the press for reels of such commonplace local activities as bridge games and graduation exercises.

What Seems to Be the Formula

Summarizing the results as drawn from the entire country, it would appear that "what they want" is not parades or football games, but what the small town or suburban newspaper gives them—"Mrs. Smith had a bridge, and Mesdames Black, Brown and White were her guests; cake was served." Or the scripts with local talent, as used by the Malco group. In return for that they will pay handsome profit, not only on 16-mm. film with sound or microphone accompaniment, but even on the cost of 35-mm films if shared among a sufficiently large group of houses. And they won't mind too much if the photography isn't up to Hollywood standards.

Some exhibitors reported "too much grief," perhaps having the experience reported from Hamilton, Ohio, where the women objected to their likenesses on the screen because they knew they had a natural screen personality and the local cameraman failed to bring it out!

Engineers Draw Up Code on Air-Conditioning

PURCHASES of air-conditioning apparatus can now judge the value of equipments offered them by their conformity to simple engineering standards, with the help of a code of minimum requirements set up for just that purpose by leading technicians of the industry.

The American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, and the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers, have drafted minimum requirements of an air-conditioning system.

For an outdoor temperature of 30°, for example, these requirements are set at 70° indoor temperatures with 35% relative humidity. Ten cubic feet of outdoor air per occupant per hour is to be provided unless smoking is permitted, in which case the requirement per occupant-hour rises to 15 cubic feet. Drafts should be controlled under a limiting air velocity of not more than 50 linear feet per minute. Dust removal must be at least 95% effective, according to this code of standards.

Projection Regulations Analyzed in U.S. Bulletin

MOTION PICTURES safety standards as variously required and enforced in all parts of the United States, are analyzed in a bulletin issued by the U. S. Department of Labor, which classifies the regulations from to exist in 186 cities of more than 50,000 population.

Minimum projection room requirements for floor area, height, door opening specifications and so are tabulated, as are projection room ventilation, film handling and storage regulations, rewind provisions, specifications of equipment and projectionist licensing. The hazards of motion picture projection are outlined.

Trade Drawing Value of Theatre Cited in Book on Business Areas

HIGH TRIBUTE is paid to the motion picture industry's contribution to civic architecture by S. R. De Boer in his book "Shopping Districts," published by the American Planning and Civic Association.

"The moving picture white way had no tradition, so it became the most modern group in the district," he says. "No business type illustrates so well the character of natural zoning, and no type of business has understood so well the value of an individual treatment of buildings. In other words, it uses a type of architecture which indicates clearly that the building is used for moving picture purposes. All this may be due to the fact that this is a new business which could not rely on tradition but must do some original thinking."

However, he declares, "in the matter of unity of building design, the moving picture houses could go one step farther and work out something more harmonious. The future will undoubtedly see this done."

Local merchants can benefit by co-operating with motion picture exhibitors for provision of adequate parking space, according to Mr. De Boer. He points out that the picture theatre "needs its maximum amount of parking facilities in the evening hours. . . . If the district has created extra parking space for daytime use, it can turn this to the use of the theatres at night. . . . The window display stores are benefitted by the evening crowd as much as the theatres are, and the theatres benefit in a similar way from the day time crowd attracted by the window displays."

The mere business value which a picture theatre contributes to its street or district is of the greatest significance, the author adds. "Next to the window display store, the moving picture theatre is probably the most important single item in the business district. That is, taking it from the viewpoint that without some incentive to bring people to the district, all other uses would disappear."

The motion picture theatre, he declares, brings to the shopping district "large numbers of people who are not bent on business, but who are going mostly to see the crowd and to seek entertainment. This class may not be immediate purchasers of goods, but they are potential buyers. Regardless of whether they buy or not, they add to the crowd in the shopping section and thus are instrumental in making the business district possible."

An occupational hazard that is especially stressed in connection with ventilation is the occurrence of chronic projectionist disability through inhaling nitric acid fumes released by film under the heat of the arc lamp.

State regulation is described as being more satisfactory and more economical than municipal codes.

Group Theatres for Film Revivals Planned

B. S. MOSS, New York City operator, has plans for a theatre to be called the Playhouse, at Cedarhurst, L. I., to specialize in the screening of foreign films and revivals of past screen successes. The house will seat 436 and will be under the management of Charles Moss. Though no opening date has been set for the new theatre, Mr. Moss intends to open more houses of the art class if his initial venture is a success.

Seek Artificial Light With Sunlight Quality

A NEW LIGHT source capable of producing light of the quality of pure sunlight, is under experimentation at the Westinghouse laboratories in Bloomfield, N. J. Similar in its principle of operation to the conventional neon lamp, the new device takes advantage of the peculiar properties of tellurium vapor.

Unlike most gasses, as in the case of neon or sodium, each of which emits a single color, glowing tellurium vapor can be made to cover almost all the visible spectrum. Objects illuminated with tellurium retain their natural, out-door colors.

Quartz is used for the new lamp, since glass would yield both to the pressures involved and to chemical action. A quantity of neon gas, the color of which is masked when the tellurium comes into action, is used as a "starter." Efficiencies vary with the wattage used, rising to 15 lumens per watt at high energy input.

Spring SMPE Meeting To Exhibit Equipment

UNLIKE LAST fall's convention in New York, the Spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, to be held at the Wardman Park Hotel in Washington, will have exhibits of theatre apparatus. The equipment shown will be restricted to newly developed products or to items possessing technical features of special interest.

The date of the convention is April 25 to 28, inclusive. On the afternoon of the 25th, Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the women of the convention at the White House.

New Sound Sales Plan Includes Installation

STATING THAT "carefully planned and engineered modernizations are of definite value to the exhibitor with a sound system capable of giving added years of good service," Motiograph Inc., has devised four plans of modernization for later type theatre systems of Western Electric manufacture. The project contemplates sale of modernization apparatus through the Motiograph national dealer organization, and its installation by Altec Service engineers.

Air-Conditioning Seen Increasing Power Needs

A VERY welcome "head-ache" for the utilities is provided by air-conditioning, according to Dr. Willis H. Carrier of the Carrier Corporation, who recently declared that the growing use of atmospheric control apparatus will require revision of estimates of electric power that will be needed in the United States in the near future.

In 1932 Dr. Carrier estimated the air-conditioning equipments in 1948 would need 1,432,000,000 kilowatt hours. The growing popularity of air-conditioning has compelled him to raise his estimate for 1948 almost six to one, to a total of 8,350,000,000 kwh.

The Motion Picture In an Old American Setting

PHOTOGRAPHS BY GEORGE VAN ANDA

■ Specific architectural adaptation of the motion picture theatre to the local American scene has assumed some prominence in cinema during the past year or so. In most instances, of course, the very function of the building has advised full use of modern forms and materials, imposing the taste of adaptation largely upon the exterior. This is the case with the new Princeton Playhouse, which is part of a $6,000,000 commercial and residential development in Princeton, N. J., entirely in Early American architecture, constructed by the Princeton Improvement Company. Thomas Stapleton of New York is the architect. The theatre, in keeping with surrounding buildings, is constructed of local stone in the Pennsylvania Colonial style of architecture. This style is varried into the lobby (right), which has beams, wainscot, display frames and box office of pine, and tole chandeliers of metal painted red with gold stencil. The Princeton Playhouse is one of the group of motion picture theatres operated by the Casey & Wheeler Circuit of New York.

■ The foyer, a spacious promenade at the immediate rear of the auditorium, introduces the patron into a definitely modern atmosphere, which is carried out throughout the interior beyond the lobby. Doors are finished in red lacquer with bronze trim, walls are of Tekko paper in a buff and tan pattern, carpeting (Bigelow-Sanford Velvet) is in brown and red shades, and furniture is of modern style in walnut with divans and chairs covered in red leather. Staircase rails are of bronze and nickel-bronze, with outer fascias in red Formica. The ceiling, which is of hard plaster painted dark brown, is vaulted in planes and pierced by a row of reflector lights with diffusing prismatic plates. These foyer light sources are operated through dimmers because performances are not continuous, and the foyer lighting is lowered during each show. A decorative group of Degas prints are illuminated by a downlight projector. Stairways at either side of the entrance doors from the lobby lead to a mezzanine level—one set to a men's toilet room, the other to women's lounge and toilet room, and projection room.

■ The auditorium, which is of stadium type and has walls diverging in splay fashion from the screen platform (the exterior walls also follow this form), has been given a warm neutral-color treatment. The walls are done in horizontal bands of acoustic plaster, which has been dry-brushed and painted dark brown to simulate suede leather. These bands are separated by metallized plaster mouldings. A lower area of the walls, rising to a height of 6 feet, 8 inches, is in hard plaster painted brown. The ceiling is vaulted and arranged in three steppings, each 1 foot, 6 inches higher than the other proceeding toward the rear, and each is transversely scalloped. The ceiling is of hard plaster sand-finished and painted and metallized in a dark neutral tone. Illumination is by projector sources set in the fascias of the steppings, which conceal from two to four Century downlighting lamp units. These sources, on dimmers, are used for running light, and in addition there are tiers of reflector sources directed downward and augmenting the other illumination for house lighting. The proscenium frames are of fluted plaster painted light brown; the stage curtain is jade green velour. The total seating capacity is 1226.

▲▲ ALONG ABOUT the time that the motion picture business was beginning to emerge from its nickelodeon status, Herman R. Maier was in the steel business. Just out of college with a degree in civil engineering, it was of course some such industry that logically called for his training. Changes in position followed, of course, but the cinema still had a lot of only in methods, but in attitudes. We are more conscious today of such things as the efficient operation of equipment and the maintenance of both the equipment and the building. The public expects more, and of course there aren't the margins to work on that there used to be."

He sat at his desk in the Warner home office building during the interview, a period much longer than ten years. At least, we should be prepared for changes in that time."

Despite the fact that the trend during the last several years has been toward theatres of between 600 and 1,000 seats, Herman Maier believes a capacity of from 1,200 to 1,500 to be the most efficient. He prefers an interior treatment that is definitely luxurious.

"All of our remodeling, as well as our new houses, has been done along these lines. Incidentally, we have found that remodeling to give a theatre an atmosphere in keeping with new comfort standards and styles has brought an immediate response at the box office."

One of the most unusual adventures in levity has grown up around Herman Maier's conductance of theatre openings. Always hectic and strenuous are those hours in which Mr. Maier and his helpers assure themselves that all is in readiness for the first performance in a new theatre. When the opening has been successfully carried out, the urge to relax completely is accordingly irresistible, and out of this urge has come the "Theatre Openers Guild," which began casually enough among Herman Maier's friends and aides, but by now has acquired its headquarters (in New York) and even letterheads. Its chief function, of course, is to hold a dinner following each opening of a new Warner theatre, with whatever tomfoolery the committee can think up, and they're all experts.

Each member has a title. Mr. Maier, being the boss, is Chief General Nuisance. F. E. Cahill, Jr., head of the Warner projection department, is Chief Soundsawful. There's a Chief Foyer Finudeler, a Chief Shouter-Outer, a Chief Marquee Muzzler, and about 25 other similarly exalted members. Many of them work under Herman Maier—and as the "Theatre Openers Guild" attests, have a lot of fun with him after the job is done.—George Schutz.

A Civil Engineer Who Found His Career in Showbusiness

growing to do before it could offer a career to a civil engineer, if he was to continue in his line.

Mr. Maier was engaged for the staff of engineers preparing plans for a Chilean expedition of the Guggenheim copper interests—then the United States joined the Allies in the World war, and young Maier got himself a job in an engineers' division, which took him to France. Mustered out of the army, a captain, he got a job, logically enough, with a construction company—the Fred T. Early Company—in New York. And, as absurd as he would have thought it then, he was on his way into show business.

Mr. Warner Recollects, and so—

Through the years that followed, the motion picture business was getting ready for many kinds of specialists. Not merely in its studios, but in the direction of the physical affairs of its theatres. This development was to continue all through the 1920's, until by the end of the decade, theatre engineering had become a regular organizational function of the larger operators, meriting a department of its own. Several had established such a department earlier. In 1929, Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, who were then consolidating the position they had won by their sponsorship of sound, recalled the engineer who had supervised construction of the company's office building in New York, for the Fred T. Early Company.

"And so I finally got into showbusiness," smiled Herman Maier, "as head of the construction and maintenance department that Warner Brothers were organizing."

In 1935, he was made general purchasing agent as well.

Since 1929, Mr. Maier has been in charge of the construction of 25 new theatres, and of the remodeling of 40 others—these projects in addition to the erection of eight exchange buildings, and the reconstruction of the company's short subjects studio in Brooklyn. And of course he is directly concerned with the maintenance of approximately 400 Warner theatres. His nine years in showbusiness have been critical ones, and years of many changes, too.

"Many changes," he concurred, "not thick-set man of medium height who can put a good deal of insistence into his voice without disturbing an habitual pleasantness of manner.

Prefers Luxurious Interior Style

"Another thing that we have learned is that the appearance of a theatre must be fresh and up-to-date. Maybe once the style of a theatre was thought to last a long time, but while the structure may be good for 25 or 30 years, we know that the general treatment may not be suitable for a

Small Town Theatres That Oil Built

Oil derricks (above) southwest of Russell, Kan., and (below) E. B. Danielson's new Mecca theatre (adjoining Danielson Building), and the remodeled Dream theatre on Main Street.

SETTLED IN the early '70's by a colony of German people who had migrated from Germany by way of Russia, Russell has long been the principal town of the Kansas county bearing the same name. The northern branch of transcontinental Highway 40 passes through this bustling little community, which is surrounded by prairie lands rich in wheat and dairy stock. Milling is one of the oldest and most important industries of the locality.

Up to 1934, the population of Russell remained fairly stationary at 2,500, then the oil drills began their work southwest of Russell. When the first gusher was brought in, the population began to climb by leaps and bounds. The black gold of the oil derricks quickly attracted an inflow of workers that crowded to capacity all available hotels and living quarters. A census of the little city today would list some 4,000 persons.

Back in 1928, E. B. Danielson (who is now well-known throughout the Middle West—he is vice-president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association) was sent into Russell as district manager of the American Telephone Company. He had then spent seventeen years in this type of work.

For some time he had been considering different locations with the idea of becoming a motion picture exhibitor, and in March, 1929, he commenced his career as a full-fledged theatre operator by purchasing the Main Street, a 600-seat house only five years old, on Russell's principal business street.

During the new proprietor's first five years of theatre operation, "E. B.," as he soon became known in Russell and vicinity, learned much of the technique of motion picture exhibition, and within this period he evolved a number of ideas which have influenced the subsequent management of his showhouses.

For instance, Danielson believes that keeping the motion picture theatre structure thoroughly up-to-date in every respect puts money into the exhibitor's pocket and good will into the community. When the oil boom struck the town in 1934, he put this idea into effect by remodeling his Main Street house and renaming it the Dream. L. R. Pinaire, of Hayesville, Kans., took charge of the alteration work, which was carried on by day work. A general renovation program and new decorative scheme gave the theatre an entirely new and colorful atmosphere with a modern "feeling," but quite the opposite of severe.

Riding High on a Thousand Derricks

OIL DERRICKS sprang up by dozens and hundreds within a few miles of Russell, until one thousand wells had been brought into production. The Dream Theatre was crowded nightly by workers from the oil fields, promoters and the usual followers of an oil boom. And while this surge of prosperity was getting underway, the farmers were benefiting from the New Deal measures in behalf of Agriculture.

To forestall possible outside competition and to protect his original investment, Danielson decided to erect a second theatre, to seat 450. The new building was accordingly started late in 1935, and was completed in April, 1936. It was named the Mecca.

To meet the increased demand for living quarters, in the winter of 1936-7 the Danielson Building, containing five modern and completely air-conditioned apartments, two stores, and a bowling alley and billiard room in the basement, was erected next door to the Mecca theatre. All three buildings are on the main street of Russell, and each enjoys a successful and thriving business. A fourth building of a commercial nature is now being planned by the Danielson interests. The nearest competition to the Russell theatres is at Hays, Kans., 27 miles distant.

Up-to-Dateness: The Danielson Policy

In addition to a firm belief in well-kept buildings, Mr. Danielson also believes that the best and most efficient operating equipment is a paying investment even in the smaller communities. He was one of the first exhibitors in his section of the state to install up-to-date sound equipment. At a time when other motion picture theatres were closing for the hot summer months, he installed air-conditioning, thereby holding not only his own patrons, but pulling others from surrounding towns to his shows. "E. B." believes that as the average home increases its comfort and artistic surroundings, the motion picture theatre must keep step. For, he insists, the potential customer will refuse to leave his easy chair in a restful, well-furnished home to attend a drab presentation of pictures in a showhouse with hard, narrow seats, poor ventilation, and a general run-down atmosphere, no matter how excellent the screen offering may happen to be.

His devotion to this theory, and his endeavor to maintain his two theatres in modern and up-to-date condition, has reaped a well-justified reward in steady patronage. Russell is proud of her two air-conditioned theatres, and exhibits that pride in a very conclusive manner at the box office.

holdings is gradually being relinquished by Mr. Danielson to his son, Dale, who is assisted by his wife, Frieda, in the office management and booking.

Q THE DREAM THEATRE

THE DREAM theatre, seating 600, is the larger of the two Danielson theatres. It was originally constructed in 1924. When remodeling was begun, in 1934, the exterior was left practically unaltered, with the exception of the installation of a new marquee containing changeable letter attraction boards and animated neon trim. The box office was also redesigned and various minor changes made to bring the original red brick structure and the altered portions of the front into harmony.

Overall dimensions of the building are 52x116 feet. Two small shops take up space in the front section of the building, the remainder of this area being devoted to the theatre lobby and vestibule.

The Lobby

The lobby, measuring 17x19½ feet, is a colorful room, painted in gay moderne designs in varying shades of green. The floor is covered with heavy linoleum laid in a marbled creamy yellow with a central inset pattern of deep green.

The most striking detail of the lobby is a fountain between the entrance doors to the foyer, the ledge of which is ornamented with wrought iron scrolls and life-like frogs, from whose mouths sprays of water fall into the pool below. Tropical fish of ■ Seating only 550, the Louvee theatre in Wellston, Ohio, represents today's new effort to bring the atmosphere and facilities of large city theatres to the small town. Wellston has a population of 6,000. The Louvee was designed and constructed by the F. & Y. Construction Company of Columbus, Ohio, for Mr. and Mrs. Louis Guilfoile, who also own and operate the Virginia theatre in Wellston. The Louvee has a one-floor seating plan and mezzanine lounge provisions. All-year air-conditioning facilities include cooling by well water, available at a temperature of 54°.

Luxury Styled in a Modern Pattern for a Small Town

The front of the Louvee is of black architectural glass up to the marquee, and buff brick to the top. A central panel is also of black structural glass. The marquee is of modern design with rounded corners and finished in porcelain enamel. Marquee trim is in gold and blue neon, while the vertical sign is outlined in a triple line of blue neon. The marquee name sign is outlined in red neon. Attraction boards carry Adler silhouette letters. Entrance doors have carved glass panels and aluminum push bars (by the Cast Aluminum Push Bar Company, which has similarly equipped other areas of the theatre). Entrance is through a lobby into a shallow foyer (right), where stairs lead to a mezzanine.

Floor Plans, Louvee Theatre, Wellston, Ohio. F. & Y. Construction Company, Designers.

The auditorium is colorfully treated, with a curvilinear wall pattern pointed by circular lamp shields, which are associated in the design with circular air diffusers in the ceiling. The curved strippings at the side walls are executed in shades of magenta and sienna. Auditorium lighting is controlled through rheostats from the projection room, providing a number of possible color combinations. There are ten air outlets in the auditorium. The building itself is insulated at walls and roof with rock wool. The auditorium is 120 feet from rear wall to stage. The projection room is located directly over the foyer. It measures 9 x 17 feet and has walls and ceiling of acoustic plaster. Projection equipment includes Gardiner projectors, Ashcraft Superex lamps, Century motor-generator and changeovers, and RCA Photophone sound.

The women's lounge (right) is off a mezzanine landing, which also gives access to the projection room. The lounge has walls divided into horizontal bands painted in tea-rose. Furniture is of metal construction with leather coverings. Carpeting is Velvet in shades of brown, tan, and deep blue.

It will soon be time to start the cooling systems in theatres throughout the country. Will your patrons enjoy the benefit of air conditioning free from the harmful and unpleasant sensation of drafts? If you have a draft problem let Anemostats solve it for you as it has solved it in many theatres throughout the country.

The Anemostat is an accepted scientific achievement. It has solved major problems of the Air Conditioning Industry by reducing the speed of air flow to such an extent that it is no longer perceptible as a draft and by mixing room air with conditioned air within the device. Its use, therefore, permits greater temperature differentials, smaller ducts, smaller plants, lower installation and operating costs. The Anemostat can be applied to existing systems as well as to new installations.

Refunds Saved by Inspector's Quick Arrival

NEW YORK CITY—"Something went wrong with the sound at the beginning of the last feature," said L. Derene, manager of the Terrace Theatre, of the Harry Brandt Circuit, recently. "I put in an emergency call for the Altec service man at 10:14 P.M., and in exactly thirteen minutes Inspector Olan W. Hancock was in the lobby.

"The sound had gone entirely dead, and the patrons had begun demanding passes and refunds.

"Seeing Hancock, I announced to the audience, 'The sound engineer is here, everything will be all right in a moment.' He found trouble in the main amplifier, and cleared it instantly. Then Hancock informed our usher, 'The show will be ready to start as soon as the audience is seated.'

"Due to Altec's prompt action, the picture hit the screen at 10:30, exactly 16 minutes after I first called; we saved from 250 to 300 refunds."

Equipping Film Theatres Today For the Occasional Stage Show

● The first of a group of articles on lighting, mechanical and scenic facilities for home talent, "amateur" and similar additions to the program

By O. T. TAYLOR

SINCE THE advent of sound, the stage in motion picture theatres has from time to time been a subject of argument among showmen, one faction predicting a return to public favor of stage attraction, another declaring that the stage is obsolete and, in the case of theatres equipped with a stage, a "white elephant." Certain it is that an unused stage is a liability, since it occupies area, whether large or small, that could be used for seating. Moreover, it occupies more or less valuable ground space and is an improvement upon which taxes must be paid.

Fortunately, there are many ways in which a stage can be made to pay its way, and with some planning and effort, even to show a profit on the investment.

It is interesting to note that recently there has been an increase in the use of the stage, particularly for occasional special attractions. This may be due to the fact that increased admission prices in many situations are making better talent available; or it may represent a natural tendency toward employment of a long established form of popular entertainment. In this connection may be observed the fact that many young people today know little of vaudeville, musical comedy or revues; such entertainment is therefore a novelty to them.

Business-Building Values

The theatre manager who keeps his finger on the public pulse will, for his own protection, look for indications of any interests of this kind in his community. He will prepare to exploit it. The theatre stage should be made available to road attractions, whether it is a revue built by a recognized producer, a travelling unit such as the so-called amateur programs, or a series of concerts sponsored by local music lovers. Theatre competition is one thing. To combat a sponsored attraction in the town auditorium is another. This is a situation that must be handled with the utmost diplomacy, yet a condition that could, in nine cases out of ten, be averted if the theatre stage was made available for such attractions.

Indiscriminate booking of attractions of doubtful merit must, of course, be avoided as being fully as great a mistake as refusal to cooperate with attractions of known worth. That the average motion picture theatre must be more than just a business enterprise, that it must take its place as a center of civic activities, is being recognized more and more by circuit as well as independent operators.

Of equal importance to showing road attractions of merit, if not more so, is the readiness to co-operate with service clubs and other organizations in local activities requiring auditorium and stage. Dance recitals in which large groups of children participate bring to the theatre the children's parents and friends, and often make many new boosters for the theatre. An afternoon cooking school of two or more days' duration (if the theatre is not a profitable matinee house) will bring in additional revenue and promote good-will. The "kiddie club," perhaps one of the greatest, if not the greatest and most far-reaching and lasting of theatre good-will builders, means not only considerable added revenue, but the moulding of future adult patronage. Activities such as these point to the stage as a producer of added revenue; and also of that very necessary element in successful theatre operation, good-will.

Obviously the stage must be equipped to be useful. A bare stage like an unfurnished flat, is of no practical use until it is furnished and equipped. Even the equipped stage that has seen only intermittent use has, in a majority of cases, been sadly neglected. Especially is this true of scenery, cycloramas, and other paraphernalia that deteriorate and become dilapidated and outmoded. Lines, too, should be thoroughly examined and tested for tensile strength.

Modern Lighting for The Average Stage

ALTHOUGH THE GENERAL PLAN of stage lighting has seen little change, noteworthy improvements have been made in lighting equipment to make for greater efficiency in handling, economy in operation, and more effective illumina-with smaller inside-frosted lamps, the result is a dim stage that lacks the snap and brilliancy so necessary to successful presentation.

BORDERLIGHTS

Consider now the modern borderlight of the enclosed reflector type, affording maximum illumination combined with excellent color-lighting features. This consists of individual aluminum reflectors assembled into a borderlight of the required length, each reflector equipped with slide grooves for color mediums in forms of interchangeable holders for metal frames containing flat heat-resisting colored glass, colored glass roundels, or gelatine mediums. These units are furnished for lamps of from 200 to 1000 watts. For the average stage, from 300 to 500 watts will be found ample illumination, especially if the lighting scheme includes floodlights and spotlights. The increasingly intense heat when larger lamps are used in enclosed units still remains more or less a problem.

tion. A comparison of equipment listed in manufacturers' catalogs of late types of stage lighting equipment with that of a few years ago emphasizes improvements made along this line. Especially is this true of spot and effect lamps. Whether considering a complete installation on a new stage or the replacement of more or less obsolete equipment on a present stage, it would be well to carefully consider the importance of improved and adequate lighting equipment.

Standard fixed equipment for general lighting of the stage consist, in order of importance, in borderlights, footlights and proscenium lights. Almost all other lighting may be classed as localized lighting in that its mission is to pick out and emphasize certain parts of the stage, or the performers themselves. The general lighting scheme by which not only the stage, but the performers also, are illuminated to the degree that the audience can clearly see them, is therefore of first importance. The open borderlights and footlights of years ago, built to take tungsten lamps, are inefficient and inadequate on today's stage. The majority of this type of footlights and borderlights are too shallow to take a clear gas-filled lamp. When re-lamped will be found to light the average-sized stage more evenly, more brightly, efficiently and economically than three of the common open-trough types. It is customary, and desirable, to have the borderlights wired in three circuits each independent of, and separate from, the others, for the use of two colors and white. Of these, the white circuit is, of course, the more important and is therefore allotted 50 percent of the total outlets—every other lamp unit in the entire borderlight.

The remaining outlets are evenly divided between blue and red so that when the borderlight is completed the reflector units show white, red, white, blue, and repeat. Obviously all lamps are clear in this type of borderlight, the colors being produced by means of the color mediums. It is therefore a simple matter to change to other colors than red and blue should the occasion arise.

FOOTLIGHTS

Borderlights approach natural illumination to a greater extent than any other source of stage lighting because they give evenly diffused light from a natural direction—overhead.

portance to borderlights for general illumination is problematical. Sometimes footlights are advocated not as a means of general illumination, but as necessary for the proper lighting of performers whose faces otherwise might be in shadow when they occupy certain unfavorable positions under, and slightly down-stage from, the first borderlight. On the other hand, it is held that footlights intensify facial expression with light from an unnatural direction—below—with a tendency to distort facial features. To minimize this, the stage may be floodlighted from the projection room, or by means of banks of floodlights installed at an advantageous point in the auditorium, such as the front of the balcony.

Footlights have a tendency to act as an effective and objectionable barrier between the performers and the audience. Where the pit is not in use, and perhaps covered with steps leading from the stage to the auditorium, footlights do not permit the close intimacy between performers and audience that is commonly desirable in a motion picture theatre. Especially is this true of the presentation act and concert, in which a performer, by literally stepping from the stage into the auditorium, gets into almost personal touch with his audience.

For some attractions footlights may be desirable or even necessary and should therefore be available when needed. The modern disappearing type of footlights solves this problem. Requiring no more space when in use than the ordinary footlights, closing down flush with the stage floor and leaving unobstructed floor surface when not in use, efficient and practical, the new type of disappearing footlights takes its place with stage lighting equipment worthy of serious consideration. Footlights are also customarily wired in three circuits for white and two colors.

Proscenium lights provide additional illumination at the first entrance, and compensate to a great extent for the loss of footlights where these are eliminated.

Meeting Air-Conditioning Problems of Old Theatres

• Some examples of system designing and equipment modification to suit peculiarities of existing buildings poorly adapted to apparatus and air distribution

SUGGESTIVE examples of air-conditioning equipment modifications to meet a variety of existing conditions are presented in a group of installations in theatres of the Saenger circuit in the South. The problem in each case was to fit the equipment into theatres, already built, which never had had provisions for air-of the walls were used. Unit-built condensers were shipped in sections and bolted together in the course of installation.

These installations were devised by J. T. Knight, Jr., in collaboration with the manufacturers, the Trane Company of La Crosse, Wis.

Flexible units were used in every case to fit the geography of the theatre as found, so as to avoid remodeling to accommodate the apparatus. In some cases flexibility was increased by using a number of small evaporative condensers, instead of a single large one. This arrangement offered the further advantage of permitting one or two condensers to be shut off, according to weather conditions.

Every installation was also equipped with two or more compressors, which cut conditioning ducts, and in some cases no space for apparatus, without undertaking elaborate reconstruction.

In several of these installations it was found necessary to reduce the over-all length of the expansion coils to fit them into the space available. The necessary surface dimensions were restored by means of a special header arrangement.

Some theatres offered so little available space that the evaporative condensers were mounted on the roof, with special storm bracing to protect them against the occasional hurricanes of the Gulf region. In others, as at the Saenger in Biloxi, even roof space was not available, and parapets off and on automatically as required, minimizing the cost of operation.

Interior decoration presented a special problem at the Capitol theatre in Shreveport, La. All concrete construction combined with vertical risers along the walls and beams across the ceiling presented at first glance a seemingly unconquerable obstacle to any form of neat duct installation. Fortunately, a basement was available with ample room for ducts, and these were brought up through the floor along the walls, between the wall columns, with which they blend inconspicuously. The tops of these ducts, which of course do not extend all the way to the ceiling, are cut

DIRECTIONS FOR SERVING Conditioned Air TO YOUR CUSTOMERS

FIRST: You condition it!
THEN: You distribute it!

THIS is a story about a book that every theatre operator in America will want to get his eyes on, because it tells how every seat in the house can have a comfort-zone all its own — how every seat can earn more profits.

This book tells about "The Earning Power of Controlled Air Conditioning". It shows how you can make the proper kind of conditioned air — and control its distribution so that every patron has a comfort-zone all his own.

There are 2 sides to modern theatre air conditioning, probably the toughest job in the whole field of air conditioning. First you condition the air — then you distribute it to the people in their seats. One side isn't enough. Both must be present in a modern system — and to earn money for you, both must be under control.

GET THIS book today. It explains, simply and graphically, the two sides of air conditioning . . . it illustrates the details of the U. S. AIRCO control devices, for the control of temperature, humidity, volume, velocity and proper distribution — lists the basic requirements of profitable air conditioning — illustrates systems for every house and budget. BE POSTED on 1938 values — get the new and complete picture of Modern Air Conditioning. Your request for this book entails no obligation. Theatre business is our business. We're happy to contribute this much to the industry.

New Pedestal of Heavy Type with Concealed Wiring

A PROJECTOR pedestal in which it is sought to reduce vibration not only through its weight, but also by bringing the pivot nearly under the projector, has been developed by the Sam Kaplan Manufacturing & Supply Company of New York. The lamphouse carriage arm has been designed to provide rigid alignment for the heaviest of modern lamps.

The tilting device, except for an accessible handwheel that controls it, is entirely concealed in the pedestal. Angles from 3° up, to 15° down, are normally available and can be increased by means of taper spacers of different angles, which are furnished as required. The lateral adjusting device provides an easy and rapid sweep through 3½°.

A large base compartment with a wide door for access and a removable plate for conduit connections, permits concealed shielded wiring. At the back of this pedestal, wired through the base compartment, is a 100-ampere knife switch for control of the arc; at the sides are two 30-ampere motor switches. Two-pole and three-pole twist lock receptacles afford connections for the motor and the changeover device.

Air Washer Models For Small Theatres

AIR WASHERS of medium-duty types, augmenting the company's heavy-duty series, and being somewhat lighter in construction, have been brought out by the Ballantyne Company of Omaha. The new group includes eleven fan models and air washers in sixteen sizes.

The heavy-duty apparatus has also been added to by the development of a "twin spray" washer, designed to give greater efficiency than could be obtained with the single bank model.

Sound Trouble-Shooting Charts

1. SOUND SUPPLY RECTIFIERS

• The first group of a series of convenient guides in the location of the causes of sound system defects, and their possible correction

By AARON NADELL

IN THIS, the first group of a series of charts detailing the more usual sound troubles and efficient procedure in tracing and curing them, troubles originating in the source of sound power supply are dealt with. Since many difficulties that manifest themselves in other parts of the equipment, or in reproduction, have their true source in a power supply rectifier unit, future charts will upon occasion refer back to these and to the remedies suggested in them.

The order of procedure followed is planned for the quickest possible results; hence the tests first prescribed are either those that are most likely to turn up the fault, or those that involve the least delay in application; "logical" order has been accordingly sacrificed.

The chart is used by beginning at the upper left hand corner and reading from left to right in the usual way. Many of the test procedures indicated may yield any one of several symptoms. The middle column lists all the more usual possibilities likely to result from each test, and the right hand column shows the subsequent procedure to be applied in every case.

under that heading calls for inspection of tubes. They may be either lit or out. The right hand column indicates that if they are lit the projectionist proceeds to Test No. 2—if out, to Test No. 12. Test No. 12 calls for replacing the tubes, after which the trouble may be cured, the new tubes may fail to light, or the new tubes may burn out. The right hand column for Test No. 12 indicates which test should follow next, unless the fault has been remedied. Where the middle column reads Trouble Found, the remedy is one that is obvious.

It is not expected that any chart of this kind can apply infallibly to all varieties of sound equipment, or to every possible form of sound trouble; it must of course be used intelligently, be taken as a guide rather than as a set of rules. Each user can modify it to meet individual conditions or exceptional types of sound difficulty.

and answers to inquiries . . .

By F. H. RICHARDSON

NOTING SOME UNUSUAL SAFETY MEASURES IN SOUTH AFRICA

E. E. PRESS, general secretary of the South African Cinematograph Operators Union, Johannesburg, South Africa, writes interestingly of affairs down in his bailiwick 'way down yonder, and shows interest in the requirements of projectionists up here.

"The South African Union government," he informs us, "is contemplating licensing cinema projectionists. At present we have five municipalities insisting upon projectionists being licensed, and our union is asking the Central government to create a national license. Then, too, our union would like to get into touch with one of your unions catering to cinema projectionists."

I requested the Province of Alberta to send copies of their laws governing theatres, projectionist licensing, etc., together with copies of license cards and apprentice application blanks, which request I am advised by G. P. Barber, chief inspector of theatres of Alberta, has been fully complied with.

Mr. Press enclosed a copy of the Johannesburg by-laws regulating the use of projectors and the licensing of Johannesburg projectionists, some portions of which will, I am quite certain, interest my readers.

In that country the projection room is, in the laws at least, termed the "projection chamber," which we may agree is at least better than the rather absurd "booth" so many of our own theatre people tack on to the commodious projection rooms many of our theatres now have. From the Johannesburg by-laws I quote as follows:

"No cinematograph apparatus shall be fixed (located.—F.H.R.), or any display given in any building unless such building is constructed of fireproof materials," which, it will be observed, bars any combustible materials in any portion of the construction, regardless of what other purposes the structure may be used for. Two kinds of projection chamber are permitted, permanent and temporary, the latter being permitted only where projection forms a part of the entertainment during a maximum of 30 days in any one year. I quote:

"In event of a projection chamber, including permanent ones, being inside the auditorium, a suitable barrier shall be firmly fixed round the enclosure at a distance of not less than 2 feet from any part thereof." Apparently Johannesburg authorities have an idea the whole chamber may get so hot that any one touching it will be scorched.

Again I quote: "In cases where the door of the operating chamber is left open, there shall be no inflammable material of any description within 5 feet horizontally, or 10 feet vertically, of the door opening," which two restrictions may surprise theatre people up here, to say nothing of our law makers whose rules do not permit of a projection room door being left open at any time when an audience is present. But here are two by-laws that will make you bat your eyes. With respect to motion picture projectors, examine this:

"The film gate shall be of massive construction and provided with ample heat radiating surface, and the passage for film shall be sufficiently narrow to prevent flame traveling upward or downward from the light opening [aperture]. The film spools [reels] shall be fixed [located] in combustible smoke-proof boxes."

Smoke-proof boxes means the projector magazines, but just in what manner they can be 'smoke-proof' and at the same time explosion-proof is left to the imagination, unless it be by connecting each magazine to the open air by a duct of ample size. To go on:

"Adequate small fire appliances, including a chemical fire extinguisher of 3-gallon capacity, a bucket of sand, two buckets of water and a wet blanket shall be kept within the projection chamber ready for immediate use" from which it would seem that Johannesburg authorities have had little experience with film fires.

No Work Allowed Except Projection!

But here is one our United States and Canadian authorities might well consider for adoption: "No work of any description other than operation of, and any essential repairs to, the machinery and the rewinding and repairing of film shall be done inside the chamber during the time any audience is in the building." That is most excellent, though I would re-word it thus: No work of any description other than operation of the equipment used for projection, and the making of such repairs thereon as may be immediately required to

THE MAGNET THAT PULLS THEM IN

Todays critical audiences' demand for quality projection can best be met with Peerless Magnarc High Intensity Lamps.

In no other lamp is it possible to obtain so much value for first cost expenditure and such a great degree of purchase satisfaction after installation. The proof of this lies in the fact that Peerless Magnarc outsell all others two to one.

High intensity projection has been found an absolute necessity by one-third of all theatres in the United States — and these theatres have 75 per cent of the total seating capacity of the country.

This modernizing of projection has been brought about mainly by Peerless Magnarc's ability to produce 200 to 300 per cent more light on the screen for the same current cost of low intensity lamps. Think what this means in better picture quality, audience satisfaction, competitive advantage. Then write for the new folder, "Get A Seat On The Bandwagon."

keep the show going, shall be done by the projectionist on duty while projection is in progress. No newspaper or book, other than books or printed matter instructive in projection, shall be permitted inside the projection chamber at any time while an audience is present in the theatre auditorium.

I have entered many projection rooms while projection was in progress and found men engaged in reading a novel or newspaper, building radio sets or what-not, while the projector ground out the show with nothing more than what we might perhaps describe as subconscious attention.

A PROJECTIONIST ASKS ABOUT HIS FUTURE

FROM KIRKLAND, Ontario, comes this letter from a projectionist asking a question that is continually turning up. This chap writes:

"I am 23 years old and hold a Grade-A projectionists' license, having been in the profession for four years. My license was secured by passing three examinations. Started as an apprentice and, after having passed the required tests and legal requirement of six months of apprenticeship, I tried for a Grade-C license. Three months later one may try for a Grade-B license, three months after passing which it is possible to try for a Grade-A.

"To secure a Grade-C license one must get a rating of at least 60; Grade-B, 70; and Grade-A, 80. The examination includes five subjects; namely, electricity, mechanics, acoustics, etc. [The "etc" presumably being optics and magnetism.—F. H. R.] One may only project alone when holding either a Grade-B or Grade-A license.

"What I wish to have advice on is this: I am ambitious, want to advance myself. What course should I follow? Something in line with my present work? Please advise as to what opportunities are available in the thing you consider most promising. Your advice will have much weight."

I would be most happy to help this young man and the many very like him who bombard me with a similar requests. However, to supply advice of this kind to a young man of whose potential capacities I know nothing at all, and of whose preferences I am wholly ignorant, would be extremely ill advised.

The best advice possible is that one should examine the whole field as carefully as possible, and the particular kind of work selected that seems most agreeable. If the opportunities still seem to be there, then get into that field and work—and study.

ON ENDING THE OIL-ON-FILM EVIL

VISITING THE projection room of one of the finest motion picture theatres in the world recently, and noticing a reel of film on the rewinder, I paused to examine the condition of the print. The performances of this theatre are looked upon as the "last word." To my amazement the film at the point exposed was literally smeared with oil. The chief projectionist was absent, so I directed the attention of the other projectionists on duty to the absurdity of such a condition, especially in such a theatre.

This is a snapshot sent in by F. Perras, owner of the Arcade theatre in Baie-Comeau, Quebec, showing part of his projection room. The Arcade is a new theatre on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The projectors are Motiograph, the lamps Strong, and the sound RCA.

Later, the chief projectionist and also the house manager examined the film with me. Rewinding a considerable portion of the 2,000-foot reel, oil was found varying from a narrow strip to almost half the width of the film on the side that would be next the intermittent oil well. There were a few spots where there was no oil. The chief projectionist assured us it was impossible to keep oil off the film, which statement I disputed, stating that either a worn intermittent sprocket shaft bearing or over-oiling was to blame.

Aside from the oil-well, there is no projector mechanism bearing that can possibly have use for anything in excess of two drops of oil. In fact, one drop will serve very well. Anything in excess will work out of the bearing and make a smear. One or two drops of good oil per bearing is ample for three hours of constant operation. But many projectionists do not limit lubrication to that amount, or anything even faintly approaching it. Instead of using a small can having a small opening, and of being very careful to eject but one or two drops of oil per bearing, the average man has a can of goodly size, with a spout opening of generous dimensions. He inserts the opening into the oil tube or hole of each bearing and just gives 'er a squirt—or maybe, to be certain, two or three squirts, with the result that instead of a drop or two, the bearing or space surrounding the tube or hole receives a bath. I have watched the process hundreds of times.

To oil properly requires enough illumination right at the oil hole to be able to see exactly what you are doing. It requires care and a well selected oil can. It is nonsense to say oil cannot be kept off the film. Also it is nonsense to say it can be kept off without some effort.

Projector manufacturers have experimented widely. They have spent time and money liberally in an endeavor to prevent oil seeping out through the intermittent sprocket bearing. Progress has been made. However, why not face the truth? Even with the best, most oil-proof bearing we can make, leakage occurs as soon as the bearing becomes somewhat worn, especially if the level of oil in the oil well be too high, as is not infrequently the case. The manufacturer is of course not in any degree to blame for the bearing wearing, or for the high oil level, but that fact does not lessen the heavy damage done to screen images in thousands of theatres by oil-coated films.

What can be done about it, you ask? Frankly, I am not certain. I have just contacted two leading manufacturers who have agreed to examine into the practicability of designing a swab or other arrangement that will collect all seepage and carry it away. Some of the present projectors permit no seepage when new, provided the oil well level be not too high. I am advised at least one new design will permit no such seepage under any circumstances. We shall see about that. However, here are a few basic rules that if followed faithfully will at least serve largely to reduce the evil of oil-smeared film.

First, use none but high-grade oil.

Second, as soon as oil seepage appears use a heavier grade of oil in the intermittent oil well.

Third, under no circumstances fill the oil well above the level recommended by the manufacturer.

Fourth, use a small oil can with an opening no larger than 1-16-inch in diameter. Such a can can be heated in a minute or two by the arc so that the oil will run from its small opening even on a cold morning.

Fifth, use a light, preferably a flash so that the light will not blind you, and use care in oiling. Under no conditions or circumstances put in excess of two drops of good oil in any oil hole or oil tube. Don't be uneasy! That is all any projector bearing can possibly use, and if it goes into even a long oil tube, it all will reach the bearing. Two-thirds of the great damage done by oil smeared film is caused by over-oiling. Once a bearing is oiled as described, it will have enough oil for at least three hours of actual operation.

If you have oil seepage, why not see what you can do about installing some sort of swab of absorbent material to contact the lower rim edge of the intermittent sprocket, collect the oil and carry it down out of the way? If you do so, please report on the results.

A YOUNG PROJECTIONIST WITH THE RIGHT SPIRIT

MALGER H. GRAY, projectionist of the Center theatre, in Mount Airy, N. C., sends his check for the latest edition of the Bluebook and says, "Am chief projectionist here—so far as I know, the youngest employed by North Carolina Theatres, Inc. I take real pride in my position and in my work. I was assistant projectionist at the State theatre in Hendersonville, N. C., until my transfer to this city when this house opened in 1937.

"In Hendersonville we had Simplex and RCA sound. Here we have model K Motiographs and Western Electric sound. Will you help me in this? On the right side of the screen occasionally appears a thin, black strip which I am unable to get rid of. It extends from top to bottom and occurs mostly in trailers; only once in a while in feature scenes. Projection distance 85 feet; screen image 16 feet wide. May I thank you, your columns and the Bluebook for the greater part of my knowledge of projection, such as it is."

I especially like that "such as it is." It is the man who imagines he knows all there is to know who is headed for mediocrity or failure. It is that one who realizes that, regardless of how wise he may be, there always is very much more to learn, who has an excellent chance of rising above the ordinary level.

Not being certain as to what might be done to overcome Friend Gray's difficulty, I referred the matter to Motograph, Inc., Chicago, and am informed that Friend Gray was advised as follows:

"Possibly the spring for guide roller C2-669, on top of film tension plate, has insufficient tension, due perhaps to dirt or some other obstruction. We recommend cleaning the parts thoroughly, and if after careful examination the spring seems a bit slack, stretch it slightly before reassembling the parts."

ANSWERING QUESTIONS ABOUT THE FUTURE!

able to secure any reliable data concerning ultimate changes that will replace present-day projection procedure. The items I have in mind are continuous projectors, third-dimension pictures, and rear projection."

Many able men have worked for years, and have expended large sums of money, in seeking the will-o-the-wisp three-dimensional pictures, but as yet there has been no success that can be translated into a practical form for theatres. True three-dimensional pictures can be produced, but the spectator must use "spectacle" filters of some kinds. What the future holds in this matter no man can say. However, I regard real success rather improbable.

Acceptable results have been attained in projection with a constantly running film. A German non-intermittent projector was installed in the Capitol theatre in New York while the late S. L. Rothafel was there, and used to project film before audiences for several months. The screen image was acceptable, but the projectors were not finally adopted. There seemed no considerable advantage in their use.

Rear projection is wholly practicable. It is now being extensively employed in the Trans-Lux newsreel theatres. In these small theatres, a special optical system makes an extremely short projection distance possible, with screen results sufficient good to serve under the conditions. However, were programs from two to three hours long attempted, the results might be different, for these optical systems, while they perform wonders under the extremely difficult conditions they must meet do not produce critically sharp definition all over even the relatively small screens employed, and with a long show, eye strain might prove to be an adverse factor.

FINDING CAUSE OF FLUCTUATING ARC

FROM R. W. Kiser, projectionist of the Van Wert theatre in Van Wert, Ohio, comes the following:

"We pull 44 amperes, using 12-mm. positive, 9-mm. negative 'suprex' carbon combination in Brenkert Enarc equipment. Things will be running smoothly when suddenly the arc will sputter and the light brighten fully 50%. The copper coating of both carbons will burn back fully one inch. I have checked everything that, so far as known, could possibly cause such a trouble, but I have not been able to find anything wrong."

There seems not the slightest doubt that something is causing the arc current flow to jump occasionally to levels much above normal. This will be disclosed by your ammeter. If you have none, your employer should remedy the lack at once. Every projection room should have one, so located that it may be conveniently observed by the projectionist at all times. Such an instrument is needed to check up on current waste, which is always possible where the projectionist must guess at current consumption.

Very many times I have scolded projectionists, warning them that if advice of value is expected, they must supply complete information of all elements of the case. In this instance I must guess whether current is taken through a motor-generator set, a rheostat, or a bulb rectifier. And I am not good at that sort of thing.

From information at hand I would only be able to say this: By means of an ammeter, test the current flow. If, as seems certain, it rises sharply when the trouble appears, carefully examine every item of equipment through which it flows and locate the point at which resistance to current flow is intermittently decreased; first, however, making sure the arc length does not alter. A sudden shortening of the arc, due to some fault in its feeding mechanism, would produce somewhat the effect you have described.

COOL-HEADEDNESS AND KNOWLEDGE IN CRISIS

RECENTLY the following question was submitted in the "Bluebook School" in MOTION PICTURE HERALD: What part does cool-headedness and expert knowledge play when trouble bobs up while a show is being projected? How would you compare the probability of its rapid clearing up as between men who had studied their profession, said study based upon text books, projection literature and manufacturers' instruction books, and men who do not believe in that sort of thing, preferring to depend wholly upon knowledge gained through practical experience in projection? One of the replies I have saved for these columns.

It is by J. A. Zachritz, projectionist of Cushing, Okla., who says:

"I need not go far back in my own ex-

Projection room of the University theatre in Cambridge, Mass., showing recent installation of Ashcraft Suprex lamps, which were put in, along with Ashcraft rectifiers, by the Theatre Service & Supply Company of Boston. Projectors are Simplex, the sound Western Electric. Stanley Sumner is manager of the University, and Charles Parshley is chief projectionist.

perience to find the answer to the first half of this question. Three years ago I visited a theatre projection room and, having a yen for machinery, asked questions concerning the equipments. A few days thereafter I became a student of projection in that room and shortly thereafter was employed as relief man.

"You may imagine about what I knew about things then. Estimating what I did not know would be a job of very great dimensions. I knew when the projector mechanism and soundhead were properly threaded and the carbon tips sufficiently long. I was also able to make a change-over in good form. In fact, I was a machine operator of very limited ability and nothing more.

"I did relief work for three months. Then the projectionist left and I fell heir to his position, plus a weary load of grief. When one has only a smattering of knowledge, it is astonishing how many little things can go wrong, as well as an occasional big one. I was in 'water' varying from very warm to exceedingly hot much of the time. Every time something went hay-wire I would 'blow up' and lose time, whereas had I kept cool and used such knowledge as I had I often might have cleaned up the trouble in almost no time. Just how I managed to hold my job through those first few months I don't quite know."

SCREEN MAINTENANCE AND REPLACEMENT

NAT JACOBSON of Montreal, writes most helpfully concerning screen resurfacing. He says:

"My work in resurfacing screens required much study and brought about many difficult experiences before I was able to perform the task with certainty of thoroughly satisfactory results. It is only after much study and consulting every possible available authority that I feel able to contribute something of value.

"It is impossible to set any definite period of time a screen should be used without resurfacing. This for many reasons. Considering resurfacing only, without reference to cleaning possibilities, there is the fact that the surface of a screen is subject to constant discoloration and reduction of reflection power caused by chemical reaction, the speed and character of which is dependent upon, first, the purity of surrounding atmosphere; and second, upon the composition of the surface coating. I believe this action is inevitable in every case, though given very pure air and a surface, in the elements of which there is but slight tendency to chemical action, it may be very slow. It may, however, be stated with perfect safety that even under the best possible conditions, any screen surface will lose an appreciable percentage of its reflection power in one year. Nor will any method of cleaning wholly replace it.

"In a location where the atmosphere is loaded with gaseous elements that are more or less chemical in their nature, as for example in the vicinity of smelters; or is impregnated with carbon dust or other substances, the economical term of service will be shortened in accordance with the nature of the elements with which the screen is surfaced. The action would be relatively slow with some materials and quite rapid with others. Under some conditions the use of a screen without cleaning after 90 days, and resurfacing at six months, might very well be considered poor practice from the viewpoint of economy. Many theatre managers will not believe this, but it is true nevertheless. It is a factor that is far too little understood.

"In very many cases I have been astounded (and I mean just that) at the almost total lack of appreciation some theatre managers have of the loss incurred through gradual decrease of reflection power of their screens. I have found screens that in the interests of true economy should have been cleaned at the end of 90 days' use, and resurfaced after six months totally neglected, save for an occasional brushing off, or more or less inefficient cleaning over a period of from two to three years. In some cases, as the screen image became less bright, they have installed expensive, more powerful light sources. In other cases, they have tried various makes and combinations of carbons, higher amperage, and have even changed their lenses. In fact they have monkeyed and experimented with just about every possible thing except the dirty, discolored screen that was at fault.

"And there is another point seldom touched upon. As reflection power decreases the screen image loses depth and looks increasingly flat. This is because of lessened lack of contrast between the highlights and shadows of the picture. If this be not believed, it may be proved by projecting a print and its duplicate, side by side, one upon a screen surface in perfect condition; the other upon the same surface make-up, but one that is dirty and discolored. The observer may be astonished at the result.

"Nor is that all, for no amount of cleaning can possibly remove the inevitable chemical discoloration, though resurfacing of course does since it is a wholly new surface. Still another important point is that repeated cleanings may, and repeated resurfacings certainly do reduce perforation diameters, and thus more or less obstruct the passage of sound waves. This is inevitable, though the amount of reduction may vary widely. But the most damaging effect of such perforation reduction is not so much the lowered volume, which probably may be compensated for by the fader, as it is the cutting out of certain frequencies, usually the higher ones, the loss of which is very damaging."

I thank Mr. Jacobson most heartily for his contribution. In general, I can endorse what he has said, thoroughly agreeing with him that far, far too little attention is paid to the condition of the screen surface. And doubtless in most instances of screen deterioration as usually found, the screen itself should be replaced.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

THE QUESTION:

A SMALL TOWN chamber of commerce wants to build a reasonably priced small motion picture theatre of about 300 or 400 seats. I will lease the theatre if they build it, and they have asked me to get for them a general plan of a theatre of this size. Their lot is 40' frontage and 150' deep. Do you have any general plans of a theatre of this size that you would sell, or a book that shows small theatres and the layout plans?—S. A.

THE ANSWER:

WE REGRET that this department is not permitted to supply plans or other working drawings for the construction of a specific theatre.

For a theatre on a lot with a 40-foot frontage and 150 feet deep, I suggest the following scheme as a practical one. Place the entrance of the theatre in the center of the front elevation. Set entrance doors 4 feet back from front with ticket booth between them.

The lobby should be about 16 feet wide and 20 feet deep. The space on each side of the lobby could be used for men's and women's toilet rooms, these rooms to be entered from a foyer. On the men's side, ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer queries pertaining to preliminary consideration in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification of the person inquiring.

provide for stairway to the projection room and a manager's office located on a second level above the lobby. If small store rooms are desired, the toilet rooms could be located in a basement or on a mezzanine floor.

Provide a foyer not less than 10 feet deep. Arrange the seating with a center bank of twelve seats, with an aisle on each side, and two wall banks of three seats across. Space the seats at least 2 feet, 8 inches back to back. Allow for 20 feet between the first row of seats and the screen. A stage 15 or 18 feet deep may be provided for. Place an exit at each side of the stage.

With such an arrangement, the depth of the entire building would not require more than 120 feet. The cost of such a building would be around $25,000, exclusive of equipment.

THE QUESTION:

WE WISH to know which is the best arrangement for a capacity of 750 people, preferably on one floor, pitched. We will adapt the building to this seating plan.—V. A. G.

THE ANSWER:

FOR AN auditorium seating 750 the following seating plan is suggested:

Provide for a center bank of thirteen seats with aisle on each side, and two wall banks of seven seats each. Figuring the width of the seats 20 inches, the minimum width of auditorium between side walls will be 55 feet. This will require 28 rows, spacing these at least 32 inches from back to back, and preferably 33 inches. The distance from rear auditorium walls to stage curtain will be 72 feet, minimum. This does not allow for cross-aisles.

Views of the front of the Alvarado theatre in Los Angeles, as it originally was, and as recently remodeled at a cost of $6,500. The columns were removed and reinforced concrete girders substituted. The old-fashioned pediments were also removed, and the front was refinished in Vitrolite and mica-finish plaster, which sparkles under the illumination. The box office was moved back to the property line, the marquee was rebuilt, and new entrance doors and display frames were installed. The original tile floor of the vestibule was replaced with terrazzo. The architect was S. Charles Lee.

Remodeling to Make Better Use of Severely Restricted Space

REMODELING of the 68th Street Playhouse in New York was undertaken not merely to modernize the architectural style, but fundamentally to make better use of a limited plot. While the seating capacity of this theatre was not increased, the seating conditions were improved so that the number of desirable seats was increased. This theatre, located at 68th Street and Third Avenue, in a district being generally improved for residences, is operated by Walter Brecher. Ben Schlanger was the remodeling architect.

The balcony in this theatre, which holds a little over a hundred seats, was previously undesirable for two reasons. First, the sightlines afforded only an obstructed view of the screen; and second, the former position of the screen did not allow the patron in the balcony to sit back against the support of the chair—it was necessary to lean forward to see the screen in its original low position.

The previous orchestra seating in the rear half farthest from the screen was faulty because sightlines were poor here also. The principle of the "reversed floor," as originated by the architect, was utilized here to advantage; the rear portion of the main floor was left in its original condition, but the seats in this portion of the floor now have clear sightlines which originally they did not have, while the balcony changed from a position of secondary choice to a valuable seating area (see longitudinal section). The higher position of the screen and the regrading of the orchestra floor has corrected the poor sightline conditions of the original design, besides reducing the sharp projection angle which existed.

Some seats lost on the orchestra floor plan allowed for placing a women's rest room in a more desirable location than the previous one. This loss of main floor seats was more than compensated for by the increase in the balcony seating.

A shift to a corner entrance scheme was made to attract patronage from the side street, which had developed into greater importance since the theatre was built.

MODERN ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS FOR THEATRES

Continuing a regular feature appearing in the Planning the Theatre department, presenting brief discussions of the newer building and decorative materials particularly suited to theatres—at least one type in each issue facing, wainscoting and all types of paneling. The face wood, which is available in various shades and grains, is 1/60-inch thick and is bonded to fibre board by means of a waterproof synthetic resin under 250 pounds pressure at a temperature of about 300°. The base is grainless, non-warping and non-splitting, and it may be bent, under suitable treatment, to form curved surfaces for corners.

CARSTENITE

CARSTENITE is a wood veneer (manufactured by the Algoma Plywood & Veneer Company of Chicago) adapted to decorative interior wall sur-

This material can be nailed or glued to old walls without special preparation of the walls, or it may be nailed to studding or furring strips. It is available in 4-foot widths, and in lengths of 4, 6, 8 and 12 feet, allowing broad panel effects when desired.

Carstenite can be sawed and mitred readily, nailed close to its edges, and finished in the same treatments applicable to regular wood surfaces.

VITROLUX

VITROLUX is a color-fused glass available in most any color, appearing opaque by day and translucent at night. It is a new heat-strengthened glass three to five times stronger than ordinary plate. Backed by illumination it is particularly indicated for theatre fronts.

Vitrolux, which is manufactured by the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company of Toledo, Ohio, is obtained by fusing color upon one surface of Tuf-Flex or heat-strengthened plate glass, thus making it an integral part of glass and providing a translucent material. By controlling the amount of color to be fused, Vitrolux can be made either opaque or translucent, and the latter type appears opaque by day.

Vitrolux is different from ordinary colored plate glass, since the heat treatment prior to the coloring process gives the glass distinguishing characteristics. Vitrolux, for instance, can be bent or twisted, and it has a high degree of resistance to impact and thermol shock (a pane of Vitrolux resting on a cake of ice, remains unharmed when its top side is deluged with molten lead, a test that instantly shatters regular plate glass). When fractured by a blow sufficiently hard, Vitrolux crumbles throughout its entire surface into small, harmless particles, instead of breaking into long, jagged pieces.

Panes of Vitrolux for theatre fronts and large signs are held in place by Extrudalite, a new type of metal sash, which provides a firm, spring-cushioned grip.

vivid hue form the motif of an unusual wall panel above the fountain. Mirrors, display frames and moderne benches contribute decorative notes to the lobby. N. E. Palmquist, of Kansas City, Mo., decorated both the Dream and Mecca theatres.

The Foyer

Two pairs of entrance doors give access to the foyer, which is 10x28 feet. Moderne floor lamps and wall fixtures, thick carpets, and comfortable leather and chrome furniture create an air of luxury not always found in motion picture theatres in the smaller communities.

A stairway at one end of the foyer leads to the second floor level, which contains a balcony seating 150, and the projection booth. Seating in the balcony is arranged in three banks, with two aisles. All seat rows throughout the house are 32 inches, back to back. With the exception of 150 seats re-used from the original theatre, all chairs in the Dream are new (by the American Seating Company).

Lounges for men and women, a janitor's room, and manager's office open into the foyer at the first floor level.

The Auditorium

The auditorium, which seats 450 on the first floor level, is 49½ feet wide by 60 feet long from foyer wall to stage, including a 3½-foot cross-aisle at the rear of first floor seating.

Celotex tiles have been used as acoustical treatment over the entire auditorium ceiling, from which four large fin-shaped chrome and glass chandeliers are suspended. Side walls and balcony front are treated with Celotex board and decorated with moderne floral and vine designs in pastel shades on a rose background.

Three-color lighting is controlled by a series of twelve dimmers. (Electrical fixtures in the Dream were manufactured by the Benson Brass & Chandelier Company of Kansas City, Mo.).

The stage, 31 feet wide by 24 feet deep, has a loft, and is supplied with stage rigging, footlights, two borders, dressing rooms, and all necessary equipment for accommodating occasional road-show or local talent performances.

Stage and proscenium spandrils are draped with deep rose overdrapes with harmonizing peach color underdrapes and title curtain.

The proscenium opening is 31 feet wide by 17 feet high, and can accommodate a maximum screen width of 24 feet. The screen in use is 18 feet wide.

Air Supply

A forced air system of ventilation entering through grilles in the main ceiling, and in the soffit of the balcony, supplies conditioned air in summer, with cooling by a 40-ton compressor. The theatre is heated by an indirect steam system, using gas-fired boiler.

Store window bulkheads are of pink granite finish cast stone.

The Lobby

A simple moderne design is used in the lobby, which measures 15x16 feet. The floor is of yellow terrazzo with brown border and insets. Side walls are of smooth-finished plaster, painted in blue and rose shades, while the ceiling is yellow. Doors are finished with blue metallic lacquer.

All electrical fixtures in the Mecca lobby, and throughout the entire theatre, were designed by N. E. Palmquist, and were built of hardboard, mirrors and Lumiline lamps on the job.

The Foyer

The Mecca foyer measures 9x24 feet and is used as a general lounge. Walls are deep coral, the ceiling is off-white. Furniture and carpet in moderne designs, a large mirror, and an unusual ceiling fixture are features of this section. A drinking fountain with self-contained cooling unit, is located at one end of the foyer.

At the opposite end of the foyer a stairway ascends to the second floor level, which contains a smoking room on one side, and a "cry room" for small children at the other side, of the projection booth. A large plate glass window in each of these lounges permits a view of the screen.

A corridor at the rear of the projection room gives access to other lounges for men and women, a manager's office, a generator room, and the projection room.

The Auditorium

The auditorium is 39 feet wide by 70 feet long, and contains 450 Heywood-Wakefield chairs arranged in three banks, with two aisles.

Walls are of natural-color Celotex, stripped with wood mouldings containing mirror insets. The ceiling is of natural-finish Celotex tiles, in a shade lighter than the side walls.

Ceiling and side wall lighting fixtures are of hardboard finished in silver-blue metallic lacquer.

Full-length spandril drapes of dark blue and old gold add notes of richness to the simple lines of the auditorium. Stage draperies are of the same colors and materials.

The stage in the Mecca is designed for pictures only and an act-in-one. It is 12 feet deep by 34 feet wide. The screen used is 18 feet wide, while the maximum screen width possible is 24 feet.

Projection

The projection room, which measures 10x17 feet, is built of double rows of metal studs and metal lath, and covered with cement plaster to form the side walls. A fireproof door opens onto the second floor corridor. The floor is of 2½-inch concrete, the ceiling of 2-inch cement plaster. Walls are painted in shades of green and cream. Toilet and washroom facilities are provided in the projection room.

A motor-generator for projection arc current rectification is located in a 5x7-foot room. Two Simplex projectors are installed. Projection light sources are low-intensity.

Air Supply

Conditioned air is forced through grilles at the front of the projection booth wall. The system employed in cooling the Mecca uses two 15 h.p. Carrier compressors, and a Carrier evaporative condenser. The heating plant is located under the lobby, and is an indirect steam system, using gas-fired boiler.—Robert O. Boller.

Q THE MECCA THEATRE

WHEN MR. DANIELSON decided that the situation justified the erection of a second theatre, he chose for his Mecca a site about two blocks from the site of the Dream, on Main Street. The Mecca is an entirely new structure, 41x116 feet overall, with two 12x18-foot shops in front. The work was carried on under the supervision of Hugh S. Mossman of Kansas City, Mo., by day work.

Side walls of the building are of brick. For the front, a buff tapestry brick was used, ornamented with insets of buff cast stone. A central cement panel contains a colorful wing-like design in a painted design of reds, rusts, and browns.

A square marquee (by the Claude Neon Federal Company of Wichita, Kans.) carries the name Mecca in silhouette against a background of animated neon.

A shallow vestibule, 15x2½ feet, contains a box office attached at either side to a pair of entrance doors. The box office is of decorated cement construction, topped by a chrome and glass structure featuring metal mouldings in a moderne design.

Auditorium Light Control Through Surface Treatment

• Describing the illumination and decorative scheme of a small screening room which offers suggestions for a regular theatre

PREVIEW ROOMS do not characteristically have enough points of comparison with a commercial theatre to warrant consideration of their designs for the suggestions they may offer in theatre planning. The new screening room recently completed by United Artists in New York, however, has characteristics that represent a definite attempt to deal with a number of persistent problems in auditorium form. In this tiny auditorium, screen light and room lighting form the basis of the entire design, and all surface treatment has been selected for its adaptation to the requirements of maximum effectiveness in projection.

This preview room was designed by Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect, who has applied here a method of wall and ceiling treatment devised for the control of reflection from the screen, and has also sought to effect a closer relationship between the light in the room before and after performances, and that during performances.

An even bath of illumination for the entire room is achieved by two lighting sources which are used before and after screenings. Both lighting sources are of the direct diffusing type, which Mr. Schlanger regards as more efficient with respect to current costs than indirect lighting, which depends largely on reflection of light from cove surfaces; moreover, this type of lighting does not create dark areas or bright spots.

One light source is seen in Figure 1, towards the rear near the ceiling, in the form of translucent panels which are not seen by the audience when seated. The other source consists of continuous panels of light (seen in Figures 2 and 3). These panels are made of a new translucent plastic material which is unbreakable. The sections are curved for added strength and made to lap, thereby avoiding dark opaque supporting and dividing strips. When both light sources are used, an even, soft illumination is achieved. These lights are on dimmer control.

Gradual Dimming at Picture Opening

Complete and even illumination on all surfaces presented to the seated audience before the screening makes the screen light appear more natural when it is projected. When the screening starts, all of the lighting is gradually dimmed out, with the exception of built-in base lighting, which throws a soft glow of light on to the aisle carpeting only, to assist in finding seats.

This base lighting can be seen in Figure 1, coming from the bottom of the side wall aisles. This light does not come within the spectator's range of vision while viewing the screen.

The wall and ceiling surface lighting values during the screening are entirely controlled by the screen lighting itself, since there is no secondary source of light visible during this period. Full advantage is taken of the light energy which is reflected from the screen. Most of this light is reflected so that it hits the sides and top of the spectator's head, but little of it is reflected into the eyes of the spectator. The light rays which travel transversely and directly downward from the ceiling lights the room and the seated audience, making for ease of traffic and avoidance of a feeling of blackness for those coming in after the screening starts. The controlled small portion of light which is reflected into the spectators' eyes from the surfaces surrounding the screen is gauged to illuminate screen surroundings to a degree making for a more natural setting than would completely black or too highly illuminated screen surroundings.

Figures 2 and 3 show the specially shaped ceiling and wall surfaces which are designed to control screen light reflections. The surfaces are broken up into planes which generally direct the screen light reflections away from the seated viewer's eyes. The small amount of light which is reflected to the viewer's eyes is controlled by the extent of the diffusing quality of the surfaces. For example, absolutely smooth surfaces would prevent all screen light from reflecting into the seated spectator's eyes.

Figure 4 shows the light projected on the screen in this preview theatre. Secondary source lighting is also shown, but only to indicate how the ordinary door and adjoining fabric surfaces on the left side reflect light. The surfaces surrounding the screen (which, incidentally, is very brightly illuminated) do not reflect the screen light, although it should be pointed out that the exposure in taking this picture was not sufficient to record a certain amount of light that is diffused by the surfaces surrounding the screen.

The Buyers' Index is divided into two sections, one listing territorial dealers of the United States by States, and of Canada by Provinces; the other section listing manufacturers alphabetically by classes of product.

Territorial dealers, which are commonly the immediate source of supply, are designated as dealers either in general theatre equipment and furnishings, or in some specific kind of theatre supplies. Manufacturers listed are those catering to, and active in servicing, the theatre.

In referring to the various classes of product for the purpose of ascertaining names of manufacturers, it should be noted that a manufacturer listed in bold-face type has an advertisement in this issue which may give information desired concerning the classes of product being referred to. The page on which the advertisement appears is indicated in the listing.

For the further convenience of readers referring to The Buyers' Index, a cross-reference index of advertisers in this issue appears on page 73.

BAKER COMFORT COOLING "Featured" at News-Reel Theatres

• BAKER System Air Conditioning has made news in the Trans-Lux news-reel theatres of New York City because of its ability to handle unusual variations in the cooling load at minimum operating cost. Shorter programs mean far greater "turnover" in attendance than is the case in theatres showing full-length features or double features. BAKER equipment, however, proved itself capable of handling every change in cooling requirements with exceptional efficiency and economy.

• Doing the tough jobs better is an old BAKER custom. Every installation is built to meet the specific requirements of that particular theatre. The result is dependable, trouble-free performance at all times with lowest possible operating cost. In planning air conditioning for your theatre, be sure to check up on BAKER equipment before you buy.

Classes of Product and Their Manufacturers

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

ACOUSTICAL treatment for the motion picture theatre auditorium is often necessary, in some degree, and is properly to be taken into consideration in determining the decorative forms and materials. It is also possible to design the auditorium so as to provide suitable acoustical conditions without use of sound-absorption materials; however, to do this, acoustical engineering must participate in the planning of the auditorium both structurally and decoratively.

Acoustic materials are available not only to suit every acoustic defect, but to fit into most any decorative scheme, and to meet requirements as to labor costs under varying circumstances. Materials most frequently used are sound absorbent tiles, acoustic plaster, rock wool and similar products, while some wood and synthetic veneers possess certain sound-absorptive characteristics. Which to use partly depends on the natural acoustic characteristics of the auditorium (size, relative dimensions, and forms) and the decorative scheme desired.

Most manufacturers of acoustic materials can supply an acoustical analysis of an auditorium.

AIR-CONDITIONING and VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

METHODS of supplying air to the theatre may be divided into two general classifications—simple ventilation and air-conditioning.

Ventilation, as commonly referred to in the theatre, involves merely the supplying and exhausting of air. A ventilating system may therefore consist only in provisions for drawing fresh air into the building and, by means of fans, propelling it into the auditorium, and expelling it from the theatre by means of fans, with other parts of the theatre receiving air from the auditorium or directly from outdoors. To such a system, however, may be added a humidifier for winter use, or cooling apparatus such as a cold-water spray chamber for extra cooling in warm weather. In no case does a ventilation system mean air-conditioning.

Air-conditioning requires a positive method of distribution, usually ducts, and mechanical apparatus providing complete, automatic control of fresh air and return air mixtures with respect to temperature, motion and relative humidity. At least some measure of mechanical refrigeration is necessary, and for cold season air-conditioning, heating facilities are an integral part of the system.

Cooling of air in simple ventilation may be achieved in several ways. There are a few theatres in which a slight cooling effect has been attained by fans capable of introducing fresh air (with proper distribution arrangements) at extremely high velocity. Any kind of controlled positive cooling demands that air come in contact directly with a cooling agent, which may be either chemically refrigerated coils or water. Mechanical refrigeration is frequently used for cooling water and then the air brought in contact with the cold water. Where well water is available at a temperature not higher than 55°, this water may be used without mechanical refrigeration. How mechanical refrigeration may be applied depends upon local and State regulations, and its effectiveness depends upon the ability of the designing or application engineer.

Air Filters, consisting in a dust-collecting material such as paper, steel wool, or glass wool, or other type of fabric or mesh on rollers or fixed in a metal frame, are designed to filter dirt out of the air before the air is introduced into the theatre through the ventilating system. They are not only advised for the complete air-conditioning system, but are effective in connection with a simple ventilating system, except that the quantity of air handled in a simple ventilating system is usually so much greater than in an air-conditioning system that, because of space or cost limitations, the filtering of air becomes expensive.
 Dirty air of course represents a maintenance problem. Air filters, properly installed, minimize this problem.

Ventilating grilles, which are located at the wall openings of air ducts through which the air is introduced into or removed from the interior of the theatre, are to varying degrees ornamental and thus prevent these openings from being unsightly. A scientifically designed grille gives direction to the air flow, diffuses the air stream and regulates the quantity of air passing through. There is a type of air distributor designed for downward distribution which is particularly well adapted to incorporation with light sources.

AMPLIFIERS

AN AMPLIFIER, as part of a sound reproducing system, is the arrangement in an electrical unit (panel or cabinet) of electronic relays (see Amplifying Tubes) with suitable controls.

Amplifiers today contain their own power supplies, needing only connection with an a.c. or d.c. power line, and dispensing with all auxiliary batteries, generators or rectifiers; and in addition commonly supply polarizing voltage to photocells, and sometimes current to exciter lamps and loud-speaker fields.

Very small, low-power amplifiers may be mounted on the projector or on the wall of the projection room, deriving their operating power from the main amplifier. They provide preliminary amplification of the weak photocell current before it reaches the main amplifier.

ANCHORS FOR CHAIRS

EXPANSION BOLTS suited to anchoring chairs in concrete flooring are available with metal or special rubber jackets, but the metal-jacket type is the one generally used. A leading make of metal anchor consists of an especially long tapered fin head bolt, conical cup, lead sleeve, washer and hexagon nut.

Another type, of later development, combines lead and steel jackets and employs lead, a dead metal, for anchorage.

AIR PURIFICATION: OZONE

OZONE is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which rapidly breaks down into the ordinary form, but in so doing produces oxidation (cold burning) of impurities in the air, especially those which are characterized by unpleasant odors, which for the most part are readily dispelled with oxidation. Ozone is also deadly to many forms of microbe life, and its use as a purifier therefore does not cover a disagreeable smell with a (theoretically) agreeable one, but chemically removes the impurities and causes of odor by converting them into different and innocuous chemical substances.

Ozone is produced by chemical action, ultra-violet rays, electric discharge, and a number of other means. Generators are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms or an entire theatre. Small units are inexpensive. Larger and more costly ones have blower and filter apparatus, while still others are designed for use in connection with central air-conditioning systems.

A minute percentage of ozone in the air produces a sense of physical exhilaration and well-being, since it is oxygen in a form very readily utilized.

AMPLIFYING TUBES

THESE ARE electronic relays in the amplifier of a sound reproducing system by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers.

ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS, DECORATIVE

PROGRESS in chemistry and in manufacturing technique have made available a wide variety of decorative materials to supplement or supplant the familiar marble, stone and terra cotta. Glass, and the plastics known as phenolics, are now obtainable in almost infinite variety of colors and patterns. New manufacturing methods provide marble in thin slabs that are translucent. Porcelain-enamelled metal is applicable to fronts, particularly in refinishing old buildings at low cost. Masonry blocks are also obtainable in porcelain enamel finish. Veneers and fireproof materials having the appearance of wood are offered in large number of grains and colors. Glass tiles are available in a wide range of colors and a number of patterns, while glass has been further applied to architectural purposes in the form of structural blocks. The latter particularly lend themselves to architectural illumination schemes, with color if desired.

BATTERIES, STORAGE

IN THEATRES these are now used almost exclusively to supply emergency power for lighting, in case of breakdown in the line power supply. Through suitable converters storage batteries can also be made to operate sound and projection equipment. Cost depends on the nature and size of the installation.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using incandescent projection lamps). The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in 'The Buyers' Index on projection lamps.

THESE DEVICES, which permit use of carbons down to a very short stub, consist in a metal rod that is clamped into the carbon jaws of the lamp house, one end of the rod being provided with means for holding a stub of carbon that is too short for use in the normal way. There are several methods of attaching the stub to the carbon saver, some of them permitting use of the carbon down to one inch.

CARPETS

CARPETS for theatres are according to these qualifications:

1. Appearance, which should be in harmony with the general decorative scheme.
2. Durability. It has been found that because of the extreme wear to which theatre carpets are subjected, real economy is seldom effected by buying the cheaper grades.
3. Acoustic considerations—installation of carpet (or of heavier carpet) may aid in overcoming certain acoustical defects in an auditorium.

The standard weaves, in order of cost from the most to the least expensive are Chenille, Saxony, American Oriental, Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry.

Velvet is the weave most widely used in motion picture theatres, since it combines good wearing qualities and attractiveness with relatively low initial cost. Wilton, which in its good grades is more definite in pattern and more durable than Velvet, is next in extent of usage, but it is somewhat higher-priced.

Padding under the carpet provides a softer and more comfortable footing; increases carpet life very materially by reducing friction and keeping the carpet out of direct contact with the floor; and improves sound absorbing properties, providing increased sound absorption per unit area.

CHAIR FASTENING CEMENT

THE METAL pieces to which theatre chairs are bolted are firmly fastened to the floor by special cement made for that purpose, which hardens in approximately ten minutes. In reseating a theatre, the old chair bolts are removed from the floor, and new ones inserted and recemented. (See Anchors for Chairs.)

CHAIR REFINISHING MATERIALS

AUDITORIUM chair seats and backs may be refinished without removing them from the chair frame. Materials may of course be any of those used for upholstery coverings.

Chair pads for veneer seats are obtainable, as are special chair materials which may help to correct poor acoustics in the atres having veneer chairs.

CHAIRS, THEATRE

CHAIRS AND general seating arrangements are chosen to provide the optimum compromise between six requirements; maximum seating, maximum comfort, facility of entrance and exit, proper sightlines, local building regulations, and acoustics.

Upon the last point, the ideal chair is one that has precisely the same sound absorption as the human body; in a theatre thus seated it is not necessary to adjust sound volume continually to variations in the size of the audience. Veneer chairs should never be used.

The importance of well designed chairs to the comfort of the theatre patron—and all possible comfort must be provided—advises careful selection of chairs in the first place, expertly supervised installation, constant maintenance and periodical reseating. Much scientific research with respect to posture and materials has gone into the designing and production of modern theatre chairs, and a similar, painstaking attitude toward seating is indicated on the part of the theatre owner. It is to be noted that the average width of chair being used is greater than formerly. A width of 20 inches may be regarded as a minimum consistent with the present standards of comfort.

Chairs may be procured with full spring construction, or spring-edge seats, and with padded backs. Row end standards may be obtained in special designs to suit a particular decorative scheme. Coverings, of course, are always selected according to the interior treatment of the auditorium (see also articles in The Buyers' Index on Chair Refinishing Materials and Upholstering Materials).

CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING little space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. The correct change is automatically determined upon manipulation of the proper keys, and is delivered into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons make change-makers more or less a box office requisite.

CLEANING EQUIPMENT, MECHANICAL

VACUUM-CLEANING equipment is necessary for the proper maintenance of carpeting (proper maintenance of carpeting in theatres calls for vacuum-cleaning daily), while the vacuum method is also the most convenient as well as the most effective one for cleaning upholstery, drapes and other fabrics.

When carpeting loses its luster and resilience, shampooing will do much to restore these qualities. It is not necessary to remove the carpeting, for there are services which shampoo the carpet on the floor, employing special machines.

For vacuum-cleaning, heavy-duty machines are those most generally employed in theatres. Central vacuum systems, with pipes leading to various locations, are indicated only for very large theatres. Both types are frequently supplemented by small vacuum cleaners of the domestic type for use where other equipment cannot be conveniently applied.

CLOCKS, SHOW-TIME

A DEVICE greatly appreciated by patrons, particularly in shopping districts, consists in two clocks mounted for placement where they can be seen prior to purchase of tickets, with one clock giving the correct time, the other indicating what the time will be when the patron will have seen an entire performance.

For placement at the front of the box office, the clocks are mounted in a metal panel of attractive finish (a variety of colors are obtainable) that is weather-proof. The panel is also equipped with a placard for indication of the admission prices.

Such dual clock arrangements are also available for mounting on a portable rack for the display of stills or other advertising matter.

CONDENSERS (LENSES)

THE PROJECTION condenser is located between the lamp house and the projector, and serves to focus the light on the aperture. It serves a similar purpose in spotlight projection. The condenser is a single glass lens, unmounted, made in various shapes—moon shape, plano-convex, bi-convex and meniscus. The diameters of projection condensers range from 2¼ to 7¼ inches; of spotlight condensers, from 5 to 8 inches. Focal lengths for theatre work runs from 6½ to 9½ inches.

(These lenses should not be confused with electrical condensers, which are used in amplifiers and other portions of the sound equipment, and are not lenses, but

REFLECTORS AND CONDENSERS

FS Condensers are ground and highly polished to precision accuracy in curvature and focus. They will not discolor.

Available in extra-heat-resisting Pyrex Brand glass and also in regular glass.

FS Reflectors are accurately made for correct focus, individually tested before shipment, and protected by a heat-resisting refractory backing that is non-peeling. All FS quality optical goods are, of course, guaranteed to give satisfactory performance.

CURTAIN CONTROL MACHINES

SMOOTH AND silent opening and closing of curtains are effected, either from backstage or from the projection room, by automatic machines that operate at the touch of a button. The curtain may be stopped at any point along the stage, or its motion reversed as desired.

The equipment consists of a motor, a track and a cable, as well as snaps to which the curtain is fastened. The motor may be placed in the grids, which makes it possible to fly the entire mechanism, curtain and all. Special models for small theatres are available at relatively low cost.

CUTOUT MACHINES

EXPLOITATION cutouts for lobby and marquee displays are easily made by tracing the desired pattern on wall board and then guiding a cutout machine along the pattern. A small electric motor driven by power from a lamp socket does the work, and by substitution of cutting edges the machine may be used as an ordinary saw to build the frame and supports for cutouts or any other display.

DIMMERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for controlling stage and auditorium illumination permit fading out of any desired set of lights and fading in of others. They are necessary to the gradual changing of color tones in auditorium lighting, and to the production of stage lighting effects comonly desired; in addition, they are highly desirable for raising or lowering house lighting before and after performances.

Dimmers are available in a wide range of capacities and types, from small portable spotlight dimmers to multiple banks controlling a large number of circuits, interlocking and fitted with master controls.

DISPLAY FRAMES, POSTER

FRAMES for posters and stills, either for mounting on or recessing in the wall, are available in stock models and also may be (and commonly are today) obtained in special designs. They are most frequently of wood ornamentally tooled and painted, but chromium-plated and porcelain-enameled metal, certain synthetic materials available in colors, and stainless steel are also effectively used.

You Need the New AERIAL TYPE UNIT-COMBINATION if Stage Space and Head Room Is Limited

Like most pace setting advancements, this new Unit-Combination is simplicity and convenience itself. Once installed it is completely out of sight—out of the way to make for easier stage setting and clearing—and always ready for dependable action without the fuss and annoyance of disconnecting machine and wiring.

It consists of the widely used SILENT STEEL Curtain Track and AUTODRAPE Curtain Machine modified for "flying" operation. The curtain control is mounted on the track and can be operated as a unit from any part of the house.

Limited space is best utilized with this New AERIAL TYPE UNIT-COMBINATION.

DRAIN PIPE CLEANERS

ONE OF THE problems of proper toilet room maintenance is readily solved by the use of conveniently applied drain pipe cleaners equal to the extreme conditions which may be met with in toilets and lavatories used by the public. Air pressure equipment is available especially designed for the cleaning of stopped-up drain pipes, the air being pumped into the cylinder of the device to a pressure of from 25 to 125 pounds, then released into the pipe through a nozzle, upon manipulation of a trigger.

EFFECT MACHINES

PATTERNS AND scenic effects with or without animation (such as moving clouds, flames, etc.) are ingeniously obtainable with these special light projection machines, essentially stereopticons, employing various types of effect slides and gelatines.

Backgrounds for stage shows, in color, can be projected and changed at pleasure, or the opening of a feature picture be framed in color or given a superimposed, changing pattern.

ELECTRICAL MEASURING INSTRUMENTS

THE DEPENDENCE of the modern theatre upon electricity, and the immensely varied and intricate apparatus used in the projection room, backstage and throughout the house, frequently advise having in the theatre measuring and testing equipment to assist the projectionist, stage electrician and maintenance engineer.

Voltmeters and ohmmeters are essential to finding most electrical troubles if the work is to be done with any reasonable speed. Ammeters, wattmeters, illuminometers, decibel meters and oscilloscopes are valuable adjuncts that pay for themselves in reducing current consumption, avoiding equipment breakdown, making possible faster repairs, and minimizing maintenance costs.

Combinations of most of these instruments are available; thus, a single instrument with suitable auxiliaries mounted on the same panel may serve as voltmeter, ammeter, ohmmeter and decibel meter. Such combinations may, in the latest equipment, be further combined with an oscilloscope.

EXPLOITATION MECHANISMS

VARIOUS DEVICES are available for the presentation of scenes from a current attraction or special advertising stills or motion pictures in the vestibule or lobby of the theatre, or in stores and other locations for which suitable arrangements can be made. The simplest type provides for the automatic display of a series of stills or advertising cards.

More impressive is the showing of motion pictures by means of an automatic projector mounted for the rear projection of 35-mm. trailers or other advertising films on a small screen. Such equipment may be obtained either with or without sound reproduction facilities.

FILM CABINETS

METAL FILM storage equipment is available in models ranging from cabinets on pedestals with fusible-link sprinkler protection and vent pipes, to single-reel holders which may be attached to each other as new holders are added, forming a unit. Available types also include cases of holders, making up units of from five to twelve single-reel compartments, each with its own door and variously designed to give convenient access to the reel wanted, and a high degree of protection from fire.

Separate stands are obtainable for film storage cabinets, designed to hold from one to several cabinets.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres—the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

types), mercury contact type (which was found to be especially effective for marquee and sign travelling borders), and the induction disc type, which is regarded as readily adaptable to any type of display.

FOUNTAINS

ORNAMENTAL fountains are sold as units for installation in lobby, foyer or lounge, alone or in conjunction with statuary. Drinking fountains are offered in plain and decorative types, recessed or pedestal.

Two types of automatic drinking fountains are available; one operating by means of a photocell (the head of the person stooping to drink interrupts a beam of light, which interruption actuates the water valve); the other operates upon the principle of electrical capacitance, the approach of a human head upsetting the balance of a critical electrical circuit, and thus actuating the water valve.

FURNITURE, LOBBY AND LOUNGE

CHAIRS, SOFAS and tables of durable materials, suitable to the hard use of the theatre lounge, lobby and foyer, can be had to match any decorative background.

Metal furniture that is entirely comfortable, yet easily and inexpensively maintained, is especially indicated where a modern interior design suggests its use. Coverings may be obtained in many fabrics, designs and colors, and in imitation leather.

Chairs and sofas of wood construction and the simple lines of modern styles are regarded as sufficiently durable for most theatres when fully upholstered with tough coverings, such as ribbed and herringbone fabrics, mohair pile, friezé and (chiefly in men's lounges and lobbies) imitation leather of good grades.

HEARING AIDS

THESE RECEIVING instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired, may be regarded as standard equipment for motion picture theatres today, with from five to ten outlets (two seats served by one outlet) usually considered sufficient. The receivers are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system. Because of the relatively large number of people who do not hear well, and their varied influence on theatre attendance, group hearing aids are to be regarded as regular equipment for the motion picture theatre.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam radiators and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The latter may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system, and must be so operated for cold season air-conditioning (See Air-Conditioning).

Oil and gas are preferable as the fuel where automatic control is provided in the system. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel.

HORN LIFTS AND HORN TOWERS

SOUND HORNS or speaker combinations may be struck to make room for stage performances by a number of means, of which one is the horn lift. When the stage is in use, the horns are concealed beneath it. When the screen is in use, an elevator working on hydraulic, drum and cable, or screw principle, lifts a portion of the stage with whatever setup may be on it toward the grid; the horns or speakers follow, rising until they are in correct position behind the screen.

Horn towers are steel structures on which the speaker equipment is mounted at the proper height above the stage; they are often mounted on rubber-tired, ball-bearing casters by means of which they can be moved silently into the wings when the stage is needed.

INTERIOR DECORATION

THEATRE DECORATION has evolved into a specialized branch of interior decoration. For at least the finer work, designers and artisans should have had considerable understanding of the functional peculiarities of all divisions of the theatre, and be experienced in the decorating methods advised by illumination factors, acoustics, advertising, projection optics, etc.

low-voltage high-intensity arc. The Hi-lo type may be regarded technologically today as having been superseded (except for existing installations) by the low-voltage high-intensity arc, which employs a relatively new type of copper-coated carbon of small diameter and with a core of rare-earth elements, and is further distinguished by the horizontal position of both carbons and non-rotation of the positive.

Development of the low-voltage high-intensity projection arc has brought to the small as well as the medium-sized theatre, as a result of its moderate operating cost, screen illumination of a quality equal to that of the larger theatre using condenser type high-intensity equipment operated at 120-130 amperes and 65-70 volts.

Low-voltage high-intensity arc are operated at currents ranging from 35 to 65 amperes, and 31 to 40 volts at the arc. Carbon combinations are 6 mm. positive, 5 mm. negative for from 35 to 40 amperes; 7 mm. positive, 6 mm. negative for from 42 to 50 amperes; and 8 mm. positive, 6.5 or 7 mm. negative for from 56 to 65 amperes.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

INCANDESCENT lamps for theatre motion picture projection are characterized by a high degree of source concentration and relatively high wattage. The most effective lamp for this purpose—namely, the 2,100-watt, 60-volt T-24 bulb lamp—is designed for lower voltage to secure additional source concentration. Hence a transformer with voltage-regulating characteristics is required. This lamp provides relatively acceptable illumination on screens up to 16 feet wide and throws not to exceed 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt pre-focus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane filament construction. This construction makes possible relatively high source concentration for lamps operating at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus.

The 1,000- and 1,500-watt lamps are frequently employed in projectors of the semi-portable type. The screen illumination obtained from these lamps, while not so great as that from the 2,100-watt lamp, is adequate for the services for which these projectors are usually employed. Both the 2,100-watt and the 1,500-watt lamps require a moderate degree of forced ventilation.

For portable 35-mm. motion picture projectors there are the 500-watt monoplanefilament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in T-20 bulbs with medium-prefocus bases. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

For stereopticon projectors there are the 500-watt short T-20, medium-prefocus base projection lamp, and the 1,000-watt long T-20 bulb, mogul-prefocus base lamp. Both are of the 100-120-volt type and employ monoplane filaments.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR THEATRE LIGHTING

GENERAL SERVICE lamps—available in sizes from 15 to 1,500 watts—serve the majority of lighting applications in and around theatres. Except for the tubular bulb bipost lamps, all are designed for burning in any position; all are available with inside-frosted finish to diffuse the light, to eliminate filament striations, and to produce a smoother lighting effect. The frosting absorbs little light—in fact, inside-frosted and clear lamps (clear lamps are regularly available in sizes above 100 watts) have the same rating in light output.

Inside-colored lamps for sign and decorative service: The general service lamps mentioned above are suitable for enclosed lamp signs and luminous displays where protected from rain and snow. For outdoor exposed applications, a line of vacuum lamps from 6 to 50 watts is available in frosted and inside-colored types, which are intended principally for use where the lamps themselves are visible and form the pattern of the display. Natural-colored lamps, available in four sizes and four standard colors, are more expensive than coated lamps, but produce colored light at a higher efficiency.

Outside-colored lamps: Several sizes of outside-colored lamps are also listed in round and flame-shaped bulbs adapted to many decorative and ornamental fixtures. They are not recommended for outdoor use.

Lumiline lamps: Available in colors and in 30 and 60 watts (length 17¾ inches) and 40 watts (length 11¾ inches), these tubular lamps have, by their physical shape, introduced new concepts of decorative lighting design. They may be used exposed or in narrow reflecting and shielding equipment. The outside-coated lamps are not recommended for exposed outdoor use. The standard colors are delicate pastel shades in white, straw, orange, moonlight blue, emerald and surprise pink.

LAMPS, LOW-INTENSITY

LOW-INTENSITY projection lamps are reflector type projection light sources operated at from 15 to 42 amperes. The low-intensity arc is relatively inexpensive in both carbon and operating cost and produces illumination which has been regarded as sufficient in intensity for small theatres, but crater burning characteristics are such that the light has a yellow tint, instead of being the snow-white light produced by high-intensity type arcs. In fact, a high-intensity arc may be regarded as necessary to the satisfactory projection of color films in theatres.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (See Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen image desired, and its distance from the projector.

Knowing these factors, the supply dealer or the lens manufacturer readily determines the focal length required. In ordering projection lenses, one should also name the type of light source, projection angle and the make and model of the projector.

Stock focal lengths are usually in quarter sizes from 3 to 7 inches, 7½ and 8 inches.

and the way to do it is with Simplified High Intensity Projection

When the finest costs no more WHY NOT HAVE IT?

The tremendously increased volume of light necessary to de luxe projection is now within the reach of even the smallest theatre.

Simplified High Intensity Projection affords real economy, giving two to three times as much light as your low intensity at a greatly reduced cost per unit of light.

Snow-white, high intensity projection light is needed to bring out the true beauty of the new color pictures. It also adds depth and realism to black and white projection.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

CHANGEABLE sign letters permit rapid change of marquee advertising. Such letters have been made of various metals and compositions as well as glass. Usually, however, they are either of cast metal or glass. Glass letters are commonly in panel form, with the letter translucent (opal glass) and the surrounding panel area opaque.

The so-called silhouette marquee letter has generally supplanted other types in attraction boards. It reverses the visual character of the glass translucent letter, being itself opaque, while the surrounding area is illuminated. The silhouette letter is of cast metal and is attached readily to rods or wires in front of translucent glass panels, which latter cover a metal lamp box. The lamp box fits into the structure of the marquee so as to be integral with it.

LIGHTING FIXTURES AND DECORATIVE LIGHTING

SPECIAL departments devoted to the subject of decorative theatre lighting have been established by leading manufacturers of lighting equipment, while similar service may be obtained from many theatre supply dealers. Designs can be readily developed to meet any specific decorative style, while many stock designs well suited to theatres, particularly those of modern architecture and interior treatment, are available in great variety.

LIGHTING SYSTEMS, EMERGENCY

EMERGENCY lighting plants to care for power line failure are of the storage battery, gasoline engine, diesel engine and water turbine types. Where more than one power line is available in the theatre, motor-generator emergency equipment may be used to supply the lights in event of failure in the normal lighting power.

LIGHTS, SPOT AND FLOOD

ARC AND incandescent lamps are available for use on the stage, in the projection room, in coves, and in banks of incandescents that flood the stage from the wings. Arc lamps will burn from 25 to 140 amperes, and incandescents up to 2,000 watts. Most spotlights can be used for full flood as well. Spot and floodlights of incandescent type are designed for wattages of from about 75 to 2,000.

MACHINES, TICKET

AUTOMATICALLY registering ticket dispensers facilitate the handling of box office peaks, and impart the impression of efficiency, cleanliness and business-like methods; they eliminate all excuses for errors on the part of the cashier (some type of dispensers make the usual errors impossible); and they may be regarded as necessary to any real assurance that box office losses are not occurring through cashier-doorman collusion. They are obtainable in motor-driven and manually operated types.

Also available is a ticket dispenser which automatically prints the ticket as it is issued. This mechanism is loaded only with blank rolls of paper tape, and the printed ticket bears both the number of the ticket and the date.

Automatic ticket dispensers are obtainable with from two to five ticket channels, each issuing mechanism being a unit so that a case for five channels will accommodate added mechanisms, up to five, as the business and price policy of the theatre call for at a time following the original installation. The cases are designed with counter tops to set flush with the counter of the box office.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertises the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its lighting, by announcing the features of the performance.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marquee itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit most any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment, and also with theatre name sign (vertical or otherwise), if desired.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal

WHEN COMPETITION gets TOUGHER & TOUGHER

As long as you do SRO business you are little concerned about your competitor. It's when the box office gets weak knees that you start speculating as to what the other fellow is doing.

You can't change the pictures you are getting and you probably are not planning a new house. BUT you can do something to make your theatre more attractive. And if you stop to think about it the theatres that are getting the business are the ones that have done that very thing.

Artkraft modernization is one sure way of attracting theatregoers to your box office. There's the modern marquee, a porcelain enamel front, Artkraft-Climax Reflector Flush Border Construction, Extruded Aluminum Poster Frames. An entire new face—a shining showcase for your product—a new incentive to buy what's on your screen.

And it can actually be done economically, and terms can be arranged, so that you can cash in now while you really need it.

Successful theatremen know that it costs them more NOT to modernize than it does to keep a theatre ever up to the minute.

You may not need all the elements mentioned. You can get as many of them as you require. The Artkraft plan offers you the most for your modernization dollar. Standardization of basic parts and mass production methods of "The World's Largest Manufacturers of All Types of Signs" permit quality heretofore impossible at such low prices.

is the most popular marquee today. Choice of a variety of effects, color schemes, ornamental trims and uses of neon are combined to create fronts of real individuality. No two need be alike. Elimination of the old style marquee front permits 100% efficiency of abundant attraction copy as against 20%-60%. One feature alone that is in a class by itself is

In Artkraft Extruded Aluminum Poster Frames you have a worthy mounting for the finest lobby display available.

Outstanding features included heavy die cast aluminum construction, continuous piano hinge, built-in barrel locks, heavy plate glass window, and 3-ply wood back (felt finished). Furnished any size, illuminated or non-illuminated.

Artkraft - Climax Reflector Flush Border Construction is economical, beautiful, easy to keep clean, eliminates lamp breakage and saves 80% in current.

MICROPHONES

THE THEATRE has many uses for microphones, from ballyhoo work on a sound truck, or in connection with the front display, to reinforcement of stage performances, announcements of election returns and sporting events, or emergency talks to pacify an audience in time of trouble. Microphones can be used with separate amplifying and loudspeaker equipment, or can in most cases be operated through the existing sound installation.

The early type of carbon granule microphone has been almost completely replaced by later and superior instruments, the crystal and magnetic microphones. The condenser microphone used in early sound recording, while less favored today, is still decidedly advantageous to meet certain conditions of stage pickup. The crystal microphone, and the various types of magnetic microphone (velocity dynamic) have come into general application to theatre uses.

PORTABLE MOTION picture projectors are obtainable in two general types—the fully portable, which are designed for transport in carrying cases, and semi-portable, which are much larger, sturdier and suited to permanent installation.

Except in small "home-movie" models, portable projectors have soundheads as an integral element of the mechanism. They are available for either 35-mm. or 16-mm. film.

manent installation in theatres. In addition to the regular large types, smaller, more compact and somewhat simplified projectors are also adapted to permanent installation in some classes of small theatres not requiring heavy-duty service, are also available (See Portable Projectors).

Pedestals, which are sold separately from the projector mechanism, are adapted to installation of any standard type of lamp-house.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS

PUBLIC ADDRESS and sound-re-enforcement systems may provide any one or all of various services. They can be designed for amplifying stage sound, for managers' announcements, for ballyhoo.

In the theatre the public address system may consist of microphones suitably connected to the standard sound installation, or an entirely separate system, with its own amplification, wiring and also speakers, may be employed. Hearing aids may be used in association with any type of theatre public address reproduction.

RECTIFIER TUBES

GAS-FILLED tubes used to convert alternating current to direct current are made in many ratings. The smaller sizes are commonly thought of as being in the category of radio or amplifier tubes. But while there is no distinction in principle of operation, the larger sizes, having current capacities of from 2½ to 30 amperes, are by custom classified separately.

They are often described by their best-known trade name as "Tungar" tubes. In the theatre such tubes are used to provide rectified direct current to arc lamps and to sound exciter lamps. Where storage batteries are used, they function in the battery charger.

RECTIFIER AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS are devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields, tube filaments and other parts of the sound system.

REELS

REELS NECESSARY for takeup magazines of projectors and also otherwise constantly utilized in the projection room, are available in a number of sizes and types of construction. The standard reel in the United States (since September 1, 1936) has a diameter of $14\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and a $4\frac{1}{2}$ -inch hub for the accommodation of the film lengths up to 2,000 feet. Reels are also available in the former American standard size (diameter 10 inches, hub 2 inches) while another available size adapted to the standard American film length of 2,000 feet has a diameter of 15 inches. (See Takeup, Film.)

Some reels have embossed sides, some wire welded or die cast sides, and while a particularly flexible reel (resisting so-called "dishing") has tempered band spokes and rims and is available for both 35-mm. and 16-mm. film in the 15-inch size.

REFLECTORS FOR INCANDESCENT LAMPS

METAL RECEPTACLES for incandescent lamps, having a reflecting inside finish and with a curvature calculated to make most efficient use of available light, are obtainable in several types adapted particularly to marquee trim and soffit lighting, to sign letter lamping, sign borders and similar uses.

One reflector, designed for low-wattage lamps, is equipped with a glass roundel, or cover, which not only protects the lamp and reflector, but provides color if desired without use of colored lamps.

Other types of reflectors have swivel mounting, readily permitting reflection of the light in any direction.

REFLECTORS, PROJECTION ARC

THESE ARE made in numerous sizes, and with different curvatures, spherical and parabolic, for mazda projectors, reflecting arc projectors and spotlight projectors.

In addition to reflectors made of optical glass, a metal type of reflector is now available.

REFLECTOR SHIELDS

GLASS SHIELDS, or guards, are obtainable for the protection of reflector arc mirrors against pitting (which is produced to a relatively pronounced degree by the low-voltage high-intensity arc). The shields themselves are pitted in the course of operation, but since they are much less expensive than reflectors, their use reduces maintenance costs.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the work bench, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either 1,000- or 2,000-foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

RHEOSTATS

THESE ARE devices that introduce an electrical resistance into any circuit, the value of the resistance being variable at will. There are several methods of varying resistance, one being to move a contact lever over a series of switch points, one being to move a slider over the coil of the resistance wire itself, and one being to compress carbon or graphite discs or powder.

Rheostats may be very large in size, suited to operation in the projection arc circuit, or extremely small for use in certain sound circuits. They are rated according to the range of resistances available, and the current or wattage with which they can safely be used.

SCREENS

THEATRE SCREENS of the types generally regarded as suitable for theatres are classified according to construction, surface and reflective characteristics. Four general types are available—solid, porous, perforated (consistently perforated to all edges), variably perforated (perforated only at speaker area), and translucent (the latter for rear projection).

Surfaces (except for the translucent screen) may be diffusive or specular. The latter is specified for narrow, relatively deep auditoriums since the light is concentrated upon seats directly in front of the screen. Wider theatres must use a semi-diffusive or highly diffusive type. In surface treatment screens are white, silver ("metallic") or beaded (glass). Specular screens have either of the latter two types of surface.

SCREEN RESURFACING

PAINT FOR resurfacing motion picture screens is available in flat white and metallic types, adapted to fabric screens of diffusive type. Although no resurfacing material can restore the original reflective capacity of a screen, paint of proper mix and pigmentation can effect some improvement if applied with sufficient expertness to insure uniformity of surface.

In resurfacing perforated screens, care must be taken to prevent reduction of the diameter of sound transmission perforations, and also appreciable increase in the thickness of the screen.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. While they are commonly especially designed by the architect or sign construction company, there are also stock designs adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination has been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit. It is to be noted that a prefabricated type of marquee is available complete with theatre name signs either vertical or horizontal and all electrical facilities.

SIGNS, DIRECTIONAL

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS, including exit signs, those designating men's and women's rooms, lounges, balcony stairs, etc., are now available in a wide range of stock designs, while they may be made up in special designs at relatively low cost. Instead of being more or less confined to plain metal lamp boxes, such as were particularly employed at one time for exit signs, stock types now are obtainable with decorative shapes, fluted chromium finish, etched glass, etc., in colors and also with appropriate figures.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a typewriter, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SOUND EQUIPMENT, COMPLETE

SOUND SYSTEMS have followed a steady evolution toward simplicity and compactness since their first introduction. Only the larger theatres now use sound power supplies dissociated from the sound amplifier; in smaller equipment the two commonly constitute a single unit, or at most two units in a single compact cabinet. The majority of modern systems consist of a single amplifier-power supply unit, two sound heads, and suitable loudspeaker assembly.

More elaborate apparatus may include an amplifier rack mounting decibel meter and other accessories, and an emergency amplifier.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The practice now is to use several types of speakers to reproduce selected bands of sound frequencies.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in the new permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, proper distribution of sound cannot be secured without directional baffles, or trumpets, to point the sound toward locations otherwise "dead" and away from locations where it is not desired, particularly reflecting surfaces likely to cause echo or excessive reverberation. Directional trumpets or baffles are now also used for high-frequency speakers or tweeters, clusters of small trumpets operated by a single tweeter being favored. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the tweeters correct this tendency.

coverings in a great variety of materials, patterns and colors, but the hard usage such furnishings normally get in the theatre makes durability a prime consideration.

Among the better fabrics suited to auditorium chairs are mohair (which is obtainable in the low-pile type used in automobiles, as well as in luxurious deep piles) and velour. Imitation leather (which, as produced today, is indistinguishable from real leather to most people) is also well adapted to auditorium chairs. It is also suited to other theatre furniture, particularly that in men's lounges, although in white or gay colors it has been effectively employed for women's lounges as well.

Wool weaves in colorful patterns, rayon and damask are among upholstery coverings well suited to lobby, foyer and lounge furniture.

WALLS OF EMPIRE

IN Britain's new Cinematograph Films Act the motion picture industry of America faces a new and higher wall of empire—and a new world map.

As nearly as it may be said in a word, Britain has doubled the price of access to her screens for Hollywood.

Importantly, too, this British enactment will be example and precedent and inspiration to the rest of the world. The international map of the screen is never to look the same again.

Effects upon American production are likely to be considerable and to be of importance to the American exhibitor.

Just now in internal conferences the American industry is being led to hope that it may get further and effective consideration for amelioration of the new quotas in the new general trade treaty now in the conversational stage between Washington and London.

About the treaty we are yet to see.

It is true that Mr. Cordell Hull and others in Washington have given evidences of a most friendly attitude toward the American film industry. There is in some appreciative quarters recognition of the fact that the films have achieved a broad, even if incidental, service of promotion abroad of American merchandise. Britain, however, has noticed that, in Parliament.

Also when it comes to treaties and foreign trade agreements, one must remember that over a year ago an advantageous deal made with Italy was repudiated in Rome while the story was being told in Hollywood.

And speaking of Washington, the government's broad record of the last several years does not promise much of motion picture friendship. Indicative attitudes appeared, just when the Blue Eagle was hatching, in testy remarks from the White House about the salaries paid to juvenile stars in Hollywood. Since then the most of what the motion picture has heard from Washington has been concerned with projects for restrictive and "regulative" legislation.

Certainly we have from Washington no semblance of the sort of aggressive interest in this great and basically American industry that is observable in the governmental appreciations of the screen in other lands, and so conspicuously in Great Britain, making its picture interests the subject of such special protective and promotional legislation.

WITHIN the industry it would seem that there might have been now and then some constructive advice from those entrusted with the outposts with respect to several considerations of foreign trade. For instance, there has been and continues yet, for a brief spell probably, a "situation" in Spain. Italy and Germany, with film plans of their own, have been doing things which might be called in a certain sense very "practical" in the Spanish situation. When the peace comes it will be those nations that share in the trade arrangement, and the United States will be about where it stood in Spanish trade esteem for the decade after the Spanish-American war. Through the current struggle all that the American screen has had bearing on the situation has been from militants of the leftist fringe offering their propaganda. A slight recognition of the fact that there is a General Franco and an insurgent side would probably prove no handicap, but such material will not be available.

THE motion picture is trade merchandise. It must share the fate of other American industries and their products in international relations, but it does have, if it but might use it, self-contained power of expression. The motion picture can do something about itself. Before it does, however, it must intensify its institutional consciousness, and conscience.

The game is on a big board.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, speaking before the Council on Foreign Relations last week, made some highly relevant remarks, under the heading of trade barriers.

"... the old-fashioned tariff plays but a minor part. The infinitely more potent system of quotas, exchange restrictions, and internal control of the buyer, erect a solid wall against imports. . . . When we examine these barriers we find they have developed both offensive and defensive characteristics. Their main purpose is to force self-sufficiency in internal production . . . when governments undertake planned economy by managed currency, production, wages and prices they must also control both imports and exports. . . ."

Plainly enough if there is a job to be done for the American motion picture industry, it must look to Washington for it, from this point onward.

THE British quota and attendant regulations are specifically addressed at transferring Hollywood expenditures to England, to the employment of British labour, and, less directly, to the British coloration of more of the screen expression to the screen world. Conditions being just what they are today in employment and production activity in Hollywood, there is a deal to think about, and a very great deal to be done on the subject of international relations.

And while the broad problem is overseas, by reason of the influences at home the Cinematograph Films Act becomes a subject of most immediate concern to the American motion picture exhibitor.

The preponderance of the screen merchandise offered in American theatres is the product of a system of operation and a set of standards supported by an international market.

While it is not a strictly accurate generalization it may be

This Week

Neely Arguments

Arguments over the practicability of the Neely anti-block booking and anti-blind buying bill reached new heights this week when Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States Association, exchanged letters. Each elaborated on previous statements, Mr. Kent holding his ground on the contention that the bill should not be enacted and Mr. Myers taking the opposite stand. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, also entered the controversy by issuing an announcement that, under provisions of the bill, exhibitors, in addition to distributors, could be penalized for violations.

All angles of the controversy are discussed in a story starting on page 12.

Concedes Film Seizure

Henry Pearlman, attorney for Jewel Productions, this week announced that he has agreed to issuance of a warrant under which the United States collector of customs will take possession of the positive print of "Science of Mankind," imported from Austria two years ago.

The print was admitted through customs, but when the negative arrived in February, 1937, under the title of "Mysteries of Sex," it was seized by customs officials.

If the Government is sustained in federal court, Lamar Hardy, United States district attorney, will sue to have the print destroyed on the ground that it is obscene. A separate action, Mr. Pearlman said, would be required for destruction of the negative.

Code for Advertising

The United States Chamber of Commerce's national headquarters at Washington issued a report Tuesday for stimulating self-regulation of advertising by business groups and industries.

The Chamber's report is in two parts, one dealing with methods used by trade associations in reviewing advertising, the other pertaining to plans for governing advertising by merchants in individual communities.

The Chamber's plan for control of advertising by self-regulation follows by eight years the adoption of self-regulation of advertising by the motion picture industry, with the establishment of the Advertising Advisory Council by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in June, 1930.

Fight on Rentals

The rentals committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitions' Association which has been negotiating with a similar committee of the Kinematograph Renters' Society toward a solution of the grading and rentals dispute on Wednesday voted to recommend the CEA general council take immediate and drastic action in retaliation for what it claimed was the distributors' insistence on continuing their system of grading films. Plans for the retaliation campaign were left secret, but the exhibitors were confident of weakening the distributor resistance and were hopeful of splitting the KR's ranks. The division followed weeks of discussion of the "A" and "B" film system.

said that Hollywood has been paying its costs at home in America and making its profits in the export markets.

This has long been an inevitably important influence on many aspects of production, its personnel, its material and its technique. The art, by reason of pursuit of world markets, has grown up as an international art, with broad opportunities, but also restricted by a maze of nationalistic, racial and sectional restrictions.

In general it is probable that the motion picture is a better product by reason of its nurture by a world market. However, it is entirely possible that production addressed solely at the home market might enjoy opportunity more acutely to address itself to that market, to do a better intensive job.

Intensive may be a new word in Hollywood—which has been so grandiosely extensive these many years.

Clearly enough, product made without the nourishment of a substantial world market must either cost the American studio less or the American exhibitor more.

20th CENTURY-FOX PUTS CODE IN CONTRACT

SHOWMEN of intelligence and good intent must view with special approval the provision of the new season exhibition contracts of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation prohibiting the showing of its pictures on double bills with films not approved by the Production Code Administration.

This declaration of policy is an important emphasis on the continuing, and growing, necessity for the safeguarding of the screen against destructive invaders and their quick-and-dirty money wares.

The procedure is also an effective example of consistency of an order that one might wish could be so general and usual in the show world that it would occasion no comment.

The large gains that have been made for the industry of the motion picture by the application of the Production Code and its standards can only be maintained, and built upon, by carrying its works through to the consumer in the theatre, for it was there that the conditions leading up to the crisis which empowered the code arose.

Primarily the Twentieth Century-Fox action is enterprise—it is also important example.

Radio Regulations

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, denounced the Federal Communication Commission's system of renewing radio licenses each six months when he submitted his annual report to stockholders this week. He termed the practice unfair and unwise. Mr. Paley also contended that Federal regulation or censorship of broadcasting was unnecessary. The week also brought out the fact that leaders of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are considering an expansion move to include the servicing of the radio industry.

Both developments are discussed in detail on page 30.

Further Delay

Federal Judge William Bondy Monday granted a further adjournment of three weeks of hearings on the RKO reorganization plan when he was advised by H. C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, that negotiations with RKO creditors on amendments had not been completed.

Mr. Rickaby informed the court that a substantial number of unsecured creditors had indicated at a creditors' meeting late last week that they would not approve the proposed amendments affecting their claims and that, as a result, it had been found necessary to begin a modification of the plan from a new approach.

Telephone Report

One of the important features of the Federal Communications Commission's preliminary report on its investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was its insistence that the company should divest itself of all interest in non-communication activities. The document, which Walter S. Gifford, A. T. & T. president, said was "unfair and one-sided," proposed close Government supervision of the system's policies and management as well as drastic reduction of rates.

Dallas Appeal

Arguments began in the United States supreme court on an appeal filed by distributors and the Texas Interstate circuit from a circuit court decision which held they had violated anti-trust laws by incorporating restrictions in license contracts on admissions and double features. The distributors and the circuit held the restrictions were allowable under the terms of the copyright law.

London Conferences

London became the scene of conferences on the future plans and policy of United Artists this week as four of the five owner-directors met there. Charles Chaplin, although not present, was represented by Edward Raftery, a member of the legal firm of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, counsel for United Artists. In Hollywood, the stockholders and directors of Selznick International convened for their annual meeting and were informed by John Hay Whitney, chairman, that the company will continue in the field of independent production. No plans are under consideration at present, he said, for any change in distribution. Mr. Whitney was reelected chairman and David O. Selznick president.

Mary Pickford, on her arrival in London, said she was considering production of "The Bat" in conjunction with Alexander Norda.

The Klan Loses

The Ku Klux Klan has lost its fight against Warner Brothers for infringement of U. S. Copyright laws, in an Atlanta federal court case based on the Klan's contention of violation by Warners because the producer used the Klan's "Black Cross" on hooded robes appearing in "Black Legion."

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood's decision is explained on page 24.

Dropping Stage Shows

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Stage shows, which for years have been an important part of the amusement offered patrons of the two largest Balaban & Katz theatres in the Loop, the Chicago and Oriental, may be discontinued very soon.

The current slump in business has affected these two deluxe theatres along with other local houses. The cost of the stage shows has been a big item in the weekly operating expenditures.

Among the several plans under consideration is abandonment of stage shows at the Oriental and adoption of a "name" band policy for a stage attraction at the Chicago, similar to the stage band policy in the Paramount theatre in New York.

The Oriental theatre during the past few months has had the problem presented by giving the Chicago theatre the choice of the "A" pictures and the outstanding stage names.

B. & K. also has been pruning its staffs in the various theatres as have other circuits and independents, though no salary cuts are planned.

Asks Buying Wait

In a pre-convention statement issued this week, M. A. Rosenberg, chairman of the National Allied meeting, which will be held in Pittsburgh May 17-19 at the William Penn hotel, urged exhibitors to sign no contracts for next year's product until after the convention.

"Notwithstanding a decrease in theatre grosses from 20 to 35 per cent," he said, "and the fact that most of the producing companies are cutting down on their studio expenses, all of the film distributing companies are demanding as much or more money for their new product."

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will hold a summer convention at Ocean Forest hotel, Myrtle Beach, S. C., June 26-28.

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin temporarily has shelved its convention plans tentatively dated April 5-6.

Product Plans

Seven new producing or distributing companies appeared in the field ready for operations in the 1938-39 season as Twentieth Century-Fox concluded its sales convention at Kansas City and Paramount announced its annual product review for April 15th and 16th in Washington, D. C. Grand National added 50 salesmen to its staff to carry on merchandising for the new season.

News attendant on the opening of the announcement season is on page 26.

This Week In Pictures

Miss Adriana Coselotti, the voice of Snow White in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," presents her seven mascots to the camera in Chicago where she will play a personal appearance engagement at the College Inn.

POPEYE the Sailorman, on a world tour to greet his fans, Paramount providing the spinach, visits the Guildhall in Plymouth, England, where he is welcomed by the Lord Mayor. The invincible tar will make personal appearances in large cities throughout the British Isles and Europe where his cartoon short subjects have made him popular.

MYERS, KENT, KUYKENDALL, EXHIBITORS, PRESS, NEELY ARGUE BLOCK SALES BILL

Allied Leader, Answering Kent's Third Statement, Says Twentieth Century-Fox President Is Giving New Interpretation

Heated arguments over the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking and anti-blind buying bill, now before Congress, extended this week from the trade, into Congress and out into the public prints, where it was sharply attacked.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film, reiterated his stand, and that of his company, in a reply to a "personal attack" on him by Allied States Association, prime sponsors of the measure. The Allied "attack," as so described by Mr. Kent, came after two previous statements by the Fox president, in which he declared the Neely bill would force the sale of completed pictures only, and at greatly increased rentals, thereby working such a hardship on producers and exhibitors alike that many would be compelled to abandon operations.

In supplementary remarks, Mr. Kent said he favored an industrywide conference of all factions to adjust trade practice problems and set up machinery for adjudicating future differences.

Allied States, in turn, replied to Mr. Kent with the assertion that "Allied leaders have not been greatly concerned by the claims that the Neely bill would disturb or destroy the price structure of the industry because it would entail pricing on the basis of groups less than the total block." Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied, issued the statement in its behalf, adding the hope that Mr. Kent would lead a "harmony" movement to bring major companies together with exhibitors on trade practices.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, competitive with Allied in national exhibitor organization activities, entered the argument again this week with a statement, signed by Ed. L. Kuykendall, president, disclosing a "startling new joker on exhibitors" in the Neely bill, in the nature of a clause holding exhibitors themselves liable under the "drastic penalties" of the bill, and not distributors alone, as is generally understood.

Neely Demands Action

Senator Matthew M. Neely (Democrat, of West Virginia), let it be known in Congress that he was irked by the Senate's refusal to take up his bill when it was reached on the calendar last March 25th, and again on March 31st. He said he would seek to have it made the order of business, although he admitted that consideration by unanimous consent is impossible of achievement.

The Senator's bill last week was introduced in the House by Congressman Andrew Edmiston (Democrat, West Virginia), and was referred to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, which already has several measures before it and which so far has given no indication of its interest in the subject.

From Washington came word Tuesday that considerable opposition is expected to be offered the bill if it is brought up for considera-

NEWSPAPERS OPPOSE ADOPTION OF BILL

Criticism of the Neely anti-block booking bill was voiced this week in the Pittsburgh Press and in the Lincoln Journal-Star.

Editorially, the Lincoln paper commented: "Better we leave block booking alone. . . . Anyone with an ounce of familiarity with motion picture production knows how silly and impractical this (the bill) is—just like asking as nebulous a thing as Broadway to tell in August the play names, dialogues and stars to be presented from that time until August comes again."

Florence Fisher Parry, writing in the Pittsburgh paper, declared that the is "preposterous" and that it "means closing down the industry. . . ." "The bill," she charged, "simply doesn't hold water. It leaks like a sieve."

tion in the Senate. In addition to members who are against the legislation as such, others believe that the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee acted unwisely in reporting the measure for Senate consideration solely on the basis of hearings held two years ago.

Attacked by State Units

State exhibitor organizations which this week attacked the Neely measure included the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut and the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

"Although the Kansas City independent owners are in desperate need of relief, the Neely-Pettengill bill would not give the desired results; we exhibitors must be assured of a continuous supply of product . . ." said the organization in a wire to Congressmen.

Connecticut's MPTO wired Congressmen that they are convinced the bill "will not accomplish any benefits which the proponents assert" in its behalf.

Virginia telegraphed its disapproval on the grounds that the bill will increase the cost of pictures to exhibitors.

Sees "Personal" Attack

Mr. Kent's reply to the "personal attack" contained in the Allied bulletin was directed to Mr. Myers personally. "I feel that the article implies a personal attack upon me and upon my good faith which ought not to go unchallenged," Mr. Kent wrote.

He asserted that his carrying of the fight against the Neely Bill for other distributing companies was incidental, the main factor being, he said, that he was acting in what he considered the best interests of his company.

Mr. Kent denied that his recent letter to exhibitors contained statements contradictory to those he made before a subcommittee of the House in hearings held on the Pettengill Bill in March, 1936. Mr. Kent said:

"It is apparent from a mere reading that what I said then is not in the least opposed to what I recently wrote in my communication."

Those portions of Mr. Kent's statements before the house committee which were included in the Allied bulletin could also have been used, Mr. Kent contended, in appealing to exhibitors for fairness.

"Hundreds of the replies I have received," Mr. Kent added, "indicate quite clearly that they recognize the hypocrisy of the 'moral arguments' advanced in support of the block booking provisions of the Neely Bill by those who profess to speak for them."

"I well recall that when you were on the Federal Trade Commission and holding the hearing in New York, you tried to get that trade meeting to adopt a principle of a 35 per cent differential between what could be paid for a picture sold in a group and what could be asked for that same picture individually; this in spite of the fact that evidence has been repeatedly introduced which shows that individual pictures like 'The Covered Wagon' have on occasions brought in more film rental for the distributor and more profit for the exhibitor than several other motion pictures, and in some cases almost an entire group."

"It is my firm belief that you, yourself, are not anxious to kill block booking because you have always tried to preserve the principle of the wholesale price attached to the individual picture. In other words, you want to strangle block booking on one hand but have the benefit of a wholesale price on the other."

"Catch Phrase," Says Kent

Mr. Kent took exception to the "very cute characterization" of "Kent v. Kent," which was contained in the bulletin and declared that there was nothing in his statements at the House committee hearings or in his letter to exhibitors that justified use of the "catch phrase."

Referring to his opposition to legislative measures sponsored in the past by Allied, Mr. Kent said he opposed them on the ground that they were presented to "ham string" producers and distributors while giving nothing to independent exhibitors along the line indicated by the sponsors.

"If you are honestly concerned with community selection of motion picture entertainment as a reason for supporting this bill on basis of public morals, why doesn't your law under the same criminal penalties require the exhibitor to publish this synopsis in the local newspaper so that the community can know just what the picture is before they pay admission to the theatre to see it?" Mr. Kent asked.

He added he has repeatedly pointed out that good product is the one most important factor.

In his supplementary remarks on an industry conference, Mr. Kent reiterated that he, because of ill health, is not prepared to take the leadership. "But I am willing to help behind the scenes and give such a move as much time as I can. I would like to see such a move started. It's something everyone in the business should support. If someone will step out in front and have everyone sit around the table to talk things over, I think something could be accomplished."

Myers Answers Kent

Mr. Myers answered Mr. Kent's contention that his letter and his statements before the committee were not contradictory by pointing out that exact words were quoted from the record.

"You now place a different interpretation on your words," Mr. Myers continued, "but we did not ask anyone merely to accept our version; we reproduced your statement from the record."

Mr. Myers conceded that he was not against buying and selling in wholesale lots, but added that he was opposed to "compulsory" block booking.

"My associates and I have not been greatly concerned by the claims that the Neely Bill would disturb or destroy the price structure of the industry because it would entail pricing on the basis of groups less than the total block," Mr. Myers said. "It seems to us that most of the transformation has been already accomplished by the distributors in their own interest in comparatively recent years, because the contracts today provide for separate price groups less than the entire block. The main difference would be that the distributors would have to identify in a binding fashion the pictures offered and this, it now develops, is the main bone of contention.

"Restoration," He Says

"In this connection the practice under the Neely Bill would be more of a restoration than an innovation, although the distributors never supplied the detailed information required by the bill."

It is only natural, Mr. Myers continued, that he and Mr. Kent should differ on the interpretation of the section calling for a synopsis of pictures. "I say," Mr. Myers declared, "that if the distributor supplied a bona fide synopsis which contains no statements that are knowingly false, he is immune from prosecution. . . .

"You are not unmindful of the fact that, under the bill, the producers will have a whole year in which to accustom themselves to the new order."

Doubts Undue Advantage

Distributors, Mr. Myers said, are in no fear of being fined or going to jail for violations, but "you may be concerned about the provision which says that if the picture delivered is 'substantially different' from the synopsis the exhibitor may cancel the lease as to such film."

"In no other business in the world," he continued, "can the seller deliver an article other than the one bargained for and require the buyer to accept it. But in the motion picture business the contracts and practices have been skillfully devised to permit of every kind of substitution imaginable. . . ."

However, the Allied counsel pointed out, exhibitors cannot take undue advantage of this privilege of cancellation because the running time in theatres is not going to be curtailed.

"You express doubt whether the bill will promote community freedom in the selection of motion picture entertainment," the letter continued. "Possibly I might be warranted in saying that one on the distribution end does not have the same opportunity as one on the exhibition end to know about the clubs formed and being formed in all communities to take an interest in the motion picture entertainment offered.

"Organized by MPPDA"

"On second thought, you should know about this because many were organized, at least encouraged, by the MPPDA (Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America). Of course, the MPPDA merely intended that they should be docile groups which would give free advertising and exploitation to the big pictures when they came along. But it was a short cut from this to active boycott of the bad pictures and the exhibitor, under compulsory block booking and blind selling, bore the full brunt of this. The Neely Bill is supported by educational, welfare, religious and civic groups with combined membership running into the millions and these actual and potential

Allied Theatres of Connecticut held a special meeting in New Haven this week to draft a demand upon United Artists for the delivery "according to contract" of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." The action was taken after it was reported that the company was asking for new contracts at higher rentals than originally agreed upon.

In Milwaukee, zoning and clearance again has become a subject of discussion among exhibitors in view of availability being granted downtown subsequent houses by rival circuits.

moviegoers are not supporting the bill blindly. I will tell you very frankly that so far as I have been able to do so I have tried to point out to these groups that it is unfair to hold the exhibitors responsible for what they show and what they do not show when they in fact have no choice, and this has met with a sympathetic response from those groups.

Kuykendall Sees New Factor

Mr. Kuykendall's entrance into the Neely arguments brought up a new question. The MPTOA leader pointed out that the common practice concerning the delivery of prints is for the transportation to be done by an employee or authorized agent of the exhibitor. This is provided for, Mr. Kuykendall said, in all exhibition contracts.

He then turned to the Neely Bill, pointing out that sub-section 2 of section 3 reads:

"It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported in commerce any motion picture film which is leased or intended to be leased in violation of Sub-division 1 of this section."

"Under the act, Mr. Kuykendall said, "if an exhibitor is imposed upon and required to buy more than one picture by the distributor, the exhibitor obviously knows better than anyone else just what has happened to him. He certainly knows the films have been leased to him in violation of the act.

Trade Commission Acts Against Two

For the first time in a number of years, since the old Famous Players case, the Federal Trade Commission at Washington this week took formal action against the motion picture business, announcing the issuance of a complaint charging unfair methods of competition against Grand National Films, Inc., and against Sales-on-Sound Corporation, a theatre equipment company, both of New York. Denial of any intent to defraud was made by both principals.

The Grand National complaint revolves around the company's picture, "In His Steps," the commission charging the respondent with improper use of the title and with making certain false representations in advertising matter "which tend to mislead theatre owners, film exhibitors and the public into the erroneous belief that the motion picture 'In His Steps' is a film version of a best-selling novel of the same name written by Dr. Charles M. Sheldon in 1896."

The commission explained that the novel is a story of religious concept dealing with a minister who converted his community into conducting its business and social life according to the teachings of Christianity, while the film is a love story of two young people who elope and, it is alleged, purports to teach the lesson of the inadvisability of parental attempts to impose their will on their children.

The complaint charges that the company advertised the film as "a modern romance suggested by the world's record-breaking best seller by Dr. Charles M. Sheldon."

Such representations, the commission contended, imply that the filmed story is the same in all material respects as that of the novel. As a result of the false and misleading representations, it is charged, "numerous theatre owners and exhibitors have been induced to lease the film to their detriment and financial injury, and trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors who truthfully advertise their film productions."

Grand National Denies Charges

Grand National, through Ann Rosenthal, attorney for the company, denied the allegations and said that the charges would be defended. The picture was made on the coast by B. F. Zeidman. At no time, Miss Rosenthal said, was there any attempt to have exhibitors or the public believe that the film was based on the book by Dr. Sheldon.

Shortly after the picture was released, the title was changed to "Sins of Children," the sales department believing that this was better box office, but the advertising saying that the film was "suggested" by the novel was retained.

Miss Rosenthal said the company had a right to make use of the book and the title since they are in the public domain. Notwithstanding that fact, Mr. Zeidman felt a moral obligation and offered Dr. Sheldon a "nominal sum" in payment, which the author refused, the attorney said.

Denies Fraudulent Intent

In issuing a complaint against Sales-on-Sound Corporation the commission said that in "advertising in circulars and catalogs, the respondent corporation allegedly represents that the sound screens it sells for use in motion picture theatres are flame-proof and of top quality." The complaint charges that the screens according to reliable scientific authority, are not flame-proof and are not of top quality, and that there are sound screens used for the same purpose which are of better quality than those sold by the respondent corporation.

J. A. Tanney, president of the company, said that the matter has been pending about two years and that the company filed a stipulation agreeing to discontinue the "flame-proof" description more than a year ago. He said further that SOS is merely a distributor of the screens and relies on manufacturers' statements as to their qualities.

There was no intent to defraud, he said, and while the company is willing to file another stipulation concerning the advertising, it will contest the allegation of fraudulent intent. The complaint resulted from a controversy in the trade over the meaning and origin of the descriptions complained of, which are considered to be ambiguous, he said, and he expressed the opinion that the Federal Trade Commission ruling will apply to similar advertising by other companies.

"ONE-MAN" FCC REPORT SAYS PHONE COMPANY HAS NO BUSINESS IN FILMS

Commission Proposes Government Control but Gifford Calls Report "One-Sided" and Craven Scores Inquiry

Laying down the principle that a telephone company has no legitimate business in the motion picture or radio industry, the Federal Communications Commission last Friday send to Congress a report on the results of its two-year $1,500,000 investigation of the American Telephone Company and Bell System.

The Commission would virtually place the telephone business in the hands of the Government, on a commitment of maintaining strict divorcement of communication activities from non-communications, including the motion picture.

Walter S. Gifford, A. T. & T. president, called the report "one-sided" and asserted the company had been denied the right to be heard during the investigation, to interrogate witnesses and to place in the record "written material which we had prepared and considered necessary to point out serious and important errors affecting most of the investigator's reports."

Frequently mentioning the Telephone system's film activities, the report's principal recommendations appear to be:

1. That a governmental agency assume supervision which would amount to control of A. T. and T. management, setting its operating policies and financing, and the purchase, regulation and costs of equipment.

2. That Communications should be divorced from non-communications, including films.

3. That telephone rates should be reduced 25 per cent, without loss to the company.

Apparently irritated by "leaks," the Commission suspended its study of the five-volume, 1,150-page document prepared by Commissioner Paul A. Walker and sent the whole report to the Capitol with an explanation that it was merely a "proposed report" and that a formal one would be submitted later.

Craven Criticizes Commission

That the Commission's final report may differ from the draft was indicated by a statement by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, who was not an FCC member during the investigation period, in which he criticized the Commission for denying to the telephone company the right of cross-examination and rebuttal, and made it clear that he did not agree with some of the recommendations.

Devoted chiefly to recommendations for stronger control of telephone operations, the report nevertheless also recommended that the Commission be vested with authority to limit the scope of Bell System activities to the communications field, particularly with respect to prohibiting the company from devoting assets and energies to commercial exploitation of non-communications fields, and specifically including films, and that the Communications Act of 1934 be amended so as to prohibit discrimination not only of services and charges in connection with the use of wires in chain broadcasting or radio communication, but also of practices, classifications, regulations and facilities.

To very great extent, the report reviews the

PHONE LEGISLATION IS NOT EXPECTED

Legislation is not expected in Congress this session requiring the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to divest its holdings in fields other than communications, this because of the legislative "jam" in both House and Senate.

The FCC report issued this week on telephone activities was originally intended to serve as a possible Administration lead for legislation on control of monopolies, but new monopoly legislation was abandoned for this session.

Meanwhile, the FCC report caused the New York Times to observe: "The capital stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has enjoyed a sensational rise" since publication of the Commission's findings.

The company got into motion pictures largely because much of its work in telephony headed into motion pictures, and in 1926 Electrical Research Products, Inc. (ERPI) was organized as a subsidiary of Western Electric Company for exploitation of commercial fields of the film outside the telephone business.

"Insofar as the contract between Western Electric and ERPI is concerned, the original intent in organizing ERPI appears to have been the creation of a separate subsidiary to act as the licensing agency of Western," the FCC report commented. "It was not long after the execution of this agreement, however, that ERPI committed itself to a policy of direct exploitation of the sound motion picture field."

Emphasized by Committee

Tracing the activities of ERPI, the report found significant:

1. Onerous contracts for use of sound equipment;

2. Royalties demanded in producer contracts, causing the payment of double royalties;

3. Compulsory servicing agreements under exhibitor contracts;

4. Profits made by ERPI, which were said by FCC to have reached their peak in 1930 when 4,122 theatres were serviced, on the average, and the gross revenue of $5,526,000 developed a net profit of $1,103,000. Thereafter gross revenues declined steadily, as did the number of theatres under contract after 1932.

5. ERPI's promotional activities, including the creation of Exhibitors Reliance Corporation for financing leases of equipment, supplying working capital to recording licensees, financing film productions, loaning money to trade publications; organization of Eastern Service Studios, Inc., and General Service Studios, Inc., with which it was later merged; and the formation of ERPI Picture Consultants, Inc., to render consulting services in connection with distribution, and engaging in the promotion and production of educational pictures.

"ERPI's purpose in undertaking the various steps which eventually led to its acquisition of studios may be summarized," the report commented, "as (1) development of non-theatrical business; (2) protection of its creditor relationship with producer-licensees; (3) provision of adequate studio facilities for use of independent producers of theatrical motion pictures as a part of a program to encourage the use of Bell System sound recording apparatus to the exclusion of competing equipment; (4) protection of its position against competitors in the sound motion field; and (5) increase of its revenues through the lease of equipment and royalties";

6. The company's financial activities, involving the setting up of a fund of $500,000, later increased to $800,000, to finance production through Exhibitors Reliance Corporation, with total advances up to the end of 1935 amounting to $3,571,918, of which $850,401 was then outstanding; and the loan of $15,000,000 to William Fox in 1929 for the acquisition of the Loew chain.

Litigation and Effects

ERPI's practices and the provisions of its licenses brought about the institution of many suits under the anti-trust laws, the report pointed out, and as of Nov. 17, 1936, there were 22 suits pending against the company in which relief was sought to the amount of $175,281,675; some of these suits later were settled in favor of ERPI.

The litigation and the constant threat of Federal anti-trust prosecutions apparently influenced ERPI to consider restriction of its motion picture activities, and in September, 1937, it granted non-exclusive licenses to manufacture, lease and sell sound motion picture reproduction apparatus to General Theatres Equipment Company and Motiograph, Inc., and in December transferred its service agreements with theatres to Altec Service Corporation, a company organized by former ERPI employees.

Research Activities

The report said that "the research activities of the Bell System, together with its patent license agreements with others, have resulted in the development of patents and technique applicable to many non-communications uses in the commercial, industrial, entertainment, scientific and religious fields, including sound motion pictures.

The telephone company has a practical monopoly in the furnishing of wires for broadcasting and for years has been engaged in research in the field of radio, the commission found.

The company's activities in motion pictures and radio naturally led into the television field, in which it began research as early as 1926, and while as yet it has had no practical application in the Bell System, the commission feels that "its future influence in television, as that industry eventually develops, may be considerable and will rest in no small degree upon its present research activities.

Asher in New York To Negotiate Deal

Irving Asher, who recently resigned as head of production at Warner Brothers Teddington studio in England, arrived Monday on the Queen Mary to negotiate a new connection. He said that while his plans are now indefinite he expects to make an announcement before returning to England, April 27th.

Mr. Asher said his six year contract with Warners ran to 1940 and provided for yearly options and that an option extending his services to April, 1939, was taken up shortly before he left the studio.

JUNGLE EARTHQUAKE!

One of the thrilling scenes in Paramount's Technicolor drama, "HER JUNGLE LOVE," starring DOROTHY LAMOUR, RAY MILLAND with Lynne Overman.

The wounded aviator saw her . . .
sun-bronzed, beautiful kneeling before him.

Here you see Tura (glamorous Dorothy Lamour), untamed daughter of the jungle wilds, and the daring young aviator (Ray Milland) who invades her jungle realm, in one of the startlingly beautiful romantic sequences of this greatest of all jungle-adventure, love dramas, Paramount's Technicolor triumph "HER JUNGLE LOVE."

Here for the first time in color, you see the flaming beauty, the primitive, startlingly wonderful pageant of jungle life in all its intensity of action, of romantic splendor, of primitive heart appeal.

The romance of this woman of the wilderness would be a triumph in black and white . . . in Technicolor it packs a wallop which, added to the thousand thrills, including the mighty earthquake sequence, makes this another Paramount box-office smash.

No Doodads in Rockefeller's Paying Williamsburg Theatre

Simple Colonial Exterior, But Inside All Is Modern Down to Last Detail

America does have a motion picture theatre which has no double bills, chance games, cut-rate admissions or two-for-ones; no newspaper advertising, screeching ballyhoos, highway billboards; no passes; no labor or product troubles, no "clearance and zoning" problems—and it has been running on the profit side in its five years of operation. John D. Rockefeller is the owner.

Mr. Rockefeller's place as a motion picture exhibitor is not circumscribed by the Music Hall theatre in Rockefeller Center, New York. In the small Virginia town of Williamsburg is located what is perhaps the most unusual motion picture house in the country, known simply as The Williamsburg. Facaded by a flat and severe front that melts into the 18th century atmosphere of the Colonial-restored city, a restoration for which Mr. Rockefeller spent $14,000,000, one has to look twice to realize that it is a theatre. There is no marquee, no lighted or eye-catching display. Over its doors, painted on its bricks in neat old Caslon letters, is its name, and beneath, supported by two out-swung doors, is a simple, homemade frame holding a processed poster of the day's attraction. That is the extent of its outfront advertising.

The Theatre Plays Its Part

"The restoration of colonial Williamsburg enlisted my interest and support because to see beautiful and historic places and buildings disintegrating had long caused me very real distress," Mr. Rockefeller said of his participation at Williamsburg, as at Versailles, Fontainebleau and Reims.

And the motion picture, in the town's one theatre, is a part of the Rockefeller Williamsburg undertaking in bringing back the complacent Colonial days of the late 1700's. But behind all its architectural plainness operates a practically perfect, scientifically modern house. In equipment, from booth to engine room, it is the last word in present-day operation. Authorities have called it one of the finest small theatres in the country. No detail has been overlooked by the Rockefellers in making elegant yet plain, comfortable and luxurious, this refined offspring of the rough candle-lit playhouse, called the very first playhouse in America, which opened on this Williamsburg site in 1716.

All Modern Interior

Inside, all is modern—including a 40-ton Carrier cooling and ventilating system, two Hertzner generators, a complete auxiliary emergency lighting system fed by 60 giant storage batteries, the newest Simplex projection machinery, RCA "High Fidelity" sound, a complete auxiliary emergency sound system—of which few theatres in the country can boast—Magnarc high intensity lamps, acoustical perfection, fireproof construction of all brick and steel, chairs of tapestry and leather.

The operating policy of the Williamsburg theatre is in keeping with the easy pace of the Colonial community itself. Doors open at 3:45 and the lone matinee stars at four. Out at six, there is a one-hour recess for the theatre manager of the Williamsburg theatre, has exploitation and operation problems unique in exhibition, in fitting the modern motion picture into the restoration of the colonial city under the Rockefeller project.

workers while the village sups. Then two evening performances are given, starting at seven and nine, closing at eleven.

In a single week five pictures are shown. The "ace show" of the week runs two days, Monday and Tuesday. And it really takes an "ace" picture to hold two days in Williamsburg, consisting of less than 1,000 white persons. The College of William and Mary, however, with another 1,000, and a small rural drawing population swell business to workable proportions. Adult prices for the matinees are 30 cents, for evening 40 cents, children 10 cents, always.

Eyssell Picks the Pictures

To get the pick of the pictures from the eight large distributors is the job of G. S. Eyssell, secretary of the Rockefeller Center Music Hall, who supervises the operations of this small counter-part.

A staff of 12 operates the Williamsburg. The local operation is under Thomas G. McCaskey, of the Williamsburg (Rockefeller) Restoration Corporation. He has one operator and one assistant, two doormen, four ushers, two cashiers, one porter, one house manager. The service staff and cashiers, working on alternate days, are all college students.

Double bills, lotteries, "sponsored reels" are as strenuously prohibited as the "no pass" policy. Mr. Rockefeller, himself, has always paid his 40 cents. Herbert Lehman, Governor of New York, has been a paying customer, likewise Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States.

Mrs. Roosevelt is the subject of an anecdote in connection with her first visit to the restored Williamsburg and its theatre. The house manager set out to find the town photographer. A lengthy search finally discovered him in a rowboat on nearby waters, fishing. They rowed out and only with difficulty induced him to take on the assignment. Arriving at the theatre, he peered over his spectacles to observe: "Why I took that woman's picture six years ago. Do I have to shoot her again?"

No Ballyhoo

The usual ballyhoo with spangled marquee and brightly lighted front, street hawkers and sound trucks and street displays is taboo. The Colonial store windows, made up of small eight-inch square panes of glass divided with heavy mullions, discouraged the use of window cards and displays. All advertising must be approved by the officials of the Restoration as appropriate to the 18th century surroundings. For example, no merchant may have a sign in front that rests on the ground.

Small Lobbies

The town newspaper is a weekly with limited circulation. Hence, house-to-house and direct mail advertising is the avenue left to exploit a modern business in a Colonial town, and with restrictions. There are no billboards.

Due to the Colonial architecture the Williamsburg theatre's lobbies are small. The theatre screen itself is the most efficient medium of advertising in the community. So with each performance two trailers are worked into the program as unobtrusively as possible, announcing the next two shows—never more than two. A pocket-sized card has been used effectively. It appears to have become a habit of the residents to carry one of these film time-tables.

Short Subjects Play Part

Hundreds of short subjects are carefully chosen to supplement the 260 features used annually. The short subjects are "promoted as lucrative box office fodder," according to the management.

With its 560 seats the Williamsburg theatre could not seat all the 658 employees of the Music Hall.

Theatre in Public Square

William Archer Rutherford Goodwin, head of the department of religious education of the College of William and Mary and a director of the Williamsburg project, says that "the compelling reasons for the restoration lie in the historic background of the city, and in the intrinsic simplicity and alluring beauty of its architectural form." It was into this atmosphere that Mr. Rockefeller placed the motion picture in a theatre that stands beside resurrected pillories in the public square.

"If this be treason, make the most of it!" cried Patrick Henry on the site of the restored building which stands in the shadow of Williamsburg's motion picture theatre, and nearby is Raleigh Tavern, where Thomas Jefferson danced with his "Fair Belinda."

Sarnoff Says RCA Showing Profit

Although affected by the "steep decline" in the nation's volume of business and profits, all divisions of the Radio Corporation of America are operating at a profit, David Sarnoff, president, declared Tuesday at the annual meeting of stockholders in New York.

Since the first of the year, Mr. Sarnoff said, the company has reduced its notes payable to banks from $10,400,000 to $8,000,000, saving the corporation $58,000 a year in interest charges.

Mr. Sarnoff also reported that RCA had received $500,000 cash for one-twelfth of its remaining holdings in Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and that a similar amount was received for application on the purchase of RCA's stock interest in the Victor Talking Machine Company of Japan, Ltd.

The sale of the Japanese stock holdings and the holdings in the Canadian Marconi Company "is in accordance with the company's policy of concentrating investments within the United States," Mr. Sarnoff pointed out. The Canadian stock was sold for $1,750,000 cash. It represented an original investment of $1,156,000.

In answer to a stockholder's query, Mr. Sarnoff disclosed that the National Broadcasting Company's profit for 1937 was approximately $3,700,000. It was the first time that NBC's net profit was publicly revealed. RCA Manufacturing Company showed a profit for 1937 of more than $3,000,000, Mr. Sarnoff said.

Declaring that RCA has nothing to conceal, Mr. Sarnoff said the company would cooperate fully in the Federal Communications Commission's investigation of radio.

He reported that the corporation paid the Government $4,297,500 in taxes in 1937.

Arthur Braun, John Hays Hammond, Jr., Edward W. Harden and Mr. Sarnoff, all directors, were reelected for three years.

International Cinema Liquidation Ordered

Paul McCormick, federal judge in Los Angeles, has ordered liquidation of the assets of International Cinema, Inc., upon recommendation of the unsecured creditors' committee. Sam Wolf, attorney for the committee, told the court that the current slump in independent production precludes the possibility of reorganization under 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. A. C. Snyder, secretary of the corporation, was named trustee. Mr. Wolf said reorganization would be effected if Grand National Films, Inc., was in a position to pay an $81,000 debt to the laboratory, but that the company was not in a position to do that.

Cinema Club Reelects Repec

Charles Repec has been elected president of the Cinema Club of Boston, Inc., for a second consecutive term. Harry Martin of Universal is first vice-president; W. J. Cuddy of RKO is second vice-president; David Grover of RKO is treasurer, and Harry Smith of RKO is secretary. Except for the resignation of Herbert Higgins of Warner Brothers, the personnel of the executive committee remains the same. It is composed of Sam Berg, Twentieth Century-Fox and Thomas Fermoye and George Govan of M. and P. Theatres.

Supreme Court Considers Appeal From Dallas Anti-Trust Ruling

Robert H. Jackson, solicitor general of the United States, and a predecessor in the office, Thomas D. Thacher, were pitted against each other Tuesday when the United States supreme court heard arguments on an appeal from a Dallas district court ruling that distributors and two Texas theatre circuits violated the anti-trust statutes.

The suit originally was filed by the department of justice while Mr. Jackson was head of the anti-trust division. The defendants are Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, Warner Brothers, Interstate Circuit, Inc., Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., and Karl Hobbeltzelle and R. J. O'Donnell.

The lower court upheld the government's contention that the distributors had conspired with the theatre circuits to regulate admission prices in subsequent run houses and to prevent certain features from being shown as part of double bill programs.

Mr. Jackson urged the higher court to affirm the decision while Mr. Thacher and George S. Wright, representing the defendants, contended that the distributors had acted within the rights provided for in the copyright laws.

Arguing on the basis of the briefs previously submitted to the court—regulations prohibit any divergence from the points raised therein—counsel for both sides urged the high tribunal to accept their respective explanations of the contract provisions.

The provisions, requiring that subsequent run exhibitors should charge a minimum admission price of 25 cents and prohibiting double features, were incorporated in the distributors' contracts on the demand of the theatre circuits and constituted an onerous burden upon exhibitors to whom they applied, Mr. Jackson told the court.

Mr. Thacher and Mr. Wright, on the other hand, contended that the copyright statutes vested in the holder of a copyright the privilege of specifying the conditions under which his work might be publicly performed. They also argued that the restrictions in the contracts, rather than being onerous, were, in fact, helpful to the subsequent run exhibitors.

Dignitaries to Speak at SMPE Convention Luncheon

Speakers at the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' luncheon to be held at the Wardman Park Hotel, Washington, April 25th, include Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; William G. McAdoo, senator from California, and Colonel Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner for the District of Columbia.

The arrangements for the luncheon were handled by Nate Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce.

Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees, vice-president in charge of research for the Eastman Kodak Company, will be one of the speakers at the semi-annual banquet, April 28th.

Production Note

A bill designed to compel film companies whose pictures are to be exhibited in New York City to produce 10 per cent of their output within the city was introduced by Hugh Quinn, city councilman for Queens, on Tuesday. The bill was referred to the codes committee of the city council Wednesday.

M. A. Schlesinger, president of General Talking Pictures, sailed this week for conferences at the London office of the Schlesinger enterprises, which includes film distribution and theatre holdings in South Africa. He plans to remain abroad about two weeks.

Motion Picture Associates, New York film salesmen's club, will meet on April 16th for a luncheon and business discussion.

Arthur Byron Nominated For Equity Presidency

Arthur Byron was nominated this week to succeed Burgess Meredith as president of Actors Equity Association. The annual election will be held May 27th and, it is expected, opposition slates to the "regular" ticket will be offered.

On the ticket with Mr. Byron are, for vice-president, Bert Lytell; for councilors, five-year terms, Lee Baker, Alfred Kappeler, Hugh Cameron, Hugh Rennie, Joseph Vitale, Eric Dressler, Katharine Warren, Earle Larimore, Winifred Lenihan and Broderick Crawford, for a two-year term, Ruth Hammond, and for one year, John Lorenz.

Newsreels Helping Levine Search

The five newsreel companies this week started preparation of a sequence designed to aid in the search for Peter Levine, 12-year-old New Rochelle, New York boy who was kidnaped February 24th. Murray Levine, the boy's father, made a short statement before the cameras. Action pictures of the youth taken with a home camera before his disappearance were submitted to the newsreel companies.

True Name Bill Passed

Although previously reported unfavorably by committee, a bill stipulating that all film stars must be advertised by their legal rather than their stage names, was passed Tuesday by the Massachusetts house of representatives. The vote was 78 to 54.

Only a few precious inches between the spot where Tura lies and the ravening jaws of the oncoming crocodile hordes. A terrific situation. Right! Yet, like the mighty earthquake sequence, it's only one of the thousand thrills in Paramount's glorious adventure-romance of the Malayan wilds, "HER JUNGLE LOVE," starring Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland. Thrills which in black and white would have any audience cheering, thrills which in the living, moving, glorious beauty of natural color, will bowl over the most hard-boiled critic.

Dorothy Lamour as Tura, mysterious white goddess of the jungle, tops even her record-breaking success in "The Jungle Princess." Never has she looked more beautiful—never has her voice been more golden than when she sings those new radio-hit songs, "Lovelight in the Starlight" and "Coffee and Kisses."

14 OF 25 STORIES BOUGHT IN MONTH BY 14 PRODUCERS ARE ORIGINALS

MGM Leads with Five Purchases and Is Negotiating for "The Women," Broadway Stage Play; Six Novels Acquired

Conference on product lineups for the 1938-39 season were going "full speed ahead" last month as 14 producers entered the literary mart and acquired the film rights to a total of 25 story properties.

Although the buying was not extensive it was varied. As in former months, however, the purchase of original material was heaviest. Of the total properties bought, 14, or 56 per cent, were original screenplays, turned out, for the most part, by staff or contract writers.

Other sources included novels, six; magazines, three, and plays, two.

Negotiations for purchase of the current Broadway success, "The Women," were under way between Max Gordon Plays and Pictures and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at the close of the month. Mr. Harry Goetz, of the Max Gordon company, refused to comment on the report that the purchase price would be in the neighborhood of $200,000.

The Two Plays Acquired

The two plays that were acquired for production as motion pictures were "Golden Boy," purchased by Columbia, and "Roosty," bought by MGM. "Golden Boy," by Clifford Odets, is playing in New York City. "Roosty," by Martin Berkley, recently completed a Broadway run.

Among the novels acquired were Louis Bromfield's "The Rains Came," which Twentieth Century-Fox purchased for the announced price of $52,000. The studio announced it had set a budget of $2,000,000 for the picture.

MGM was the month's heaviest buyer, taking five properties—two originals, one magazine story, one novel and one play. The other buyers and the types of stories they acquired included: Twentieth Century-Fox, one magazine, one novel and one original; RKO, two originals; Warner Brothers, three originals; Columbia, one play; David O. Selznick, one original and one novel; Universal, one original and one novel; Progressive pictures, one original; Republic, one magazine; John G. Blystone, one original; Elizabeth Bergner, one novel; Paramount, one original; Leo McCarey, one original, and Gaumont-British, one novel.

Titles and Credits

The purchases made during the month with all available production credits follow:

AROUND THE WORLD WITH ARTISTS AND MODELS, original screenplay by Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, purchased by Paramount as a starring vehicle for Jack Benny. Arthur Hornblow, Jr., will produce and Raoul Walsh will direct.

BITTER LOTUS, serial story in Cosmopolitan Magazine by Louis Bromfield, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

BORDER G-MEN, original by Bernard McConville, purchased by RKO Radio as a starring vehicle for George O'Brien. Bert Gilroy will produce.

Besides contributing to magazines and newspaper syndicates she also was a scenario writer in Hollywood for three years.

Miss Kuhn was guest of honor Thursday at the weekly New York luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

WARNERS DEFEAT KLAN IN BLACK CROSS FIGHT

Federal Judge Holds Insignia in "Black Legion" Did Not Violate the Copyright Laws

The Ku Klux Klan lost a bitterly contested court battle to the motion picture industry last week in Atlanta, the Klan's own bailiwick, when E. Marvin Underwood, judge in the federal court for that district, ruled that motion pictures of copyrighted costumes, insignia or other articles are not a violation of the United States copyright laws, and, accordingly dismissed the Klan's suit against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Vitaphone, Inc.

The suit grew out of use of insignia in the Warner picture, "Black Legion." The Klansmen claimed the black cross used on certain characters in the production were replicas of the Klan insignia, copyrighted in 1925.

In handing down his ruling, Judge Underwood declared it was no infringement to "merely take pictures of costumes or other articles on which may be a patented design, and exhibiting them as the films in question were distributed and exhibited."

In the suit, believed to be the first of its kind ever to come into the courts, Judge Underwood acted without legal precedence. Had the ruling been in favor of the Klan, it would have been of almost incalculable harm to the industry as it would have involved the necessity of negotiating for the rights to photograph any copyrighted article used in films.

Under copyright laws, the holder of the copyright is entitled to $500 for every violation. Each showing of the picture constituting a violation, damages for showing of "The Black Legion" in Georgia alone would have amounted to more than $13,000.

While Judge Underwood's action is not final, it will serve as legal precedent until the question is ruled upon by the Supreme Court. It is believed the Klan will appeal the ruling.

In addition to the infringement suit, Klansmen also have pending in court a $100,000 damage suit against Warners for alleged damaging remarks in the dialogue of the picture.

Games Outlawed In Three States

Three more states—Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Delaware, have declared chance games at theatres illegal. Elsewhere, the practice continued to be the subject of local legal controversy.

Attorney General Warren Green of Delaware informed police authorities in Wilmington and Middletown that Bank Night is illegal. The statement was not a legal opinion but a personal opinion from the attorney general's office, as requested by municipal authorities of Middletown. Just what action will be taken against theatres holding Bank Night was not disclosed.

All theatre games, whether or not admission is charged, have been declared to be illegal by Attorney General O. S. Loomis of Wisconsin. The ruling is expected to light the way for legal action against 21 Milwaukee theatres for which warrants were sought last January by the Chief of Police.

The Oklahoma ruling declaring Bank Night illegal was made by Attorney General McQ. Williamson.

With the passing of Screeno and Bank Night in Detroit theatres, because of a city ban, other games and giveaways are being used by Detroit exhibitors. Chief among the new stunts are Movie Stamps, which are being handled there by Ralph Raskin and which are being used by more than 25 theatres in the city. Another stunt is ventriloquists' contests.

Frank J. Miller, vice-president of Augusta Amusements, Inc., was acquitted by an Augusta, Ga., jury of charges of operating a lottery in connection with Cash Nights conducted at his theatre.

Because purchase of a ticket or other exchange of money was not required of participants in a theatre Bank Night Common Pleas Judge Grady Cornett dismissed a lottery charge against V. L. Chandler, white operator of a negro theatre in Tulsa, Okla.

The suit brought by Mrs. M. C. Tonkin against the Wilby-Kinney Service Corporation, operators of four Chattanooga Tenn., houses, for collection of a $320 "Jackpot" which she claimed to have won at the Bijou there, was dismissed by Judge Oscar Yarnell.

Aylesworth Heads World-Telegram

Merlin H. Aylesworth, former head of the National Broadcasting Company and RKO Radio, this week was appointed publisher of the New York World-Telegram, by Roy W. Howard, president and editor.

Mr. Aylesworth became associated with the Scripps-Howard Newspapers a little over a year ago as a member of the general management, and devoted himself particularly to development of national advertising for the newspaper organization.

He succeeds Ray A. Huber, who came to the World-Telegram during its organizational period from the general management of the parent Scripps-Howard company and returns to his former post. Mr. Howard continues as editor of the World-Telegram and Lee B. Wood as executive editor.

Mr. Aylesworth founded NBC twelve years ago and became its first president. During his tenure of office he was credited with contributing much for commercial broadcasting through development of networks and by interesting national advertisers in the sponsorship of programs.

In 1931, when he was serving as chairman of the board of NBC, he was elected to the same post in RKO and occupied the dual positions until 1935. In that year he resigned from NBC to give his entire time to RKO, continuing there until he withdrew last year to join the Scripps-Howard organization.

Sam Dembow, Jr. Joins F&M as Vice-President

Sam Dembow, Jr., has resigned as general manager of National Screen Service Corporation to join Fanchon and Marco as vice-president in executive charge of contact with film companies and the industry generally. He also has acquired an interest in F. and M.

Harry Koplar, for many years prominent in St. Louis theatre operations, has severed his connection with the company and his stock interest in the St. Louis group of theatres, operated by F. and M., has been acquired by the company. Jack Schultz, with the Hollywood branch of F. and M., also has resigned.

Mr. Dembow was with National Screen about three years. Previous to this connection he was executive vice-president of Publix Theatres and a director of the parent Paramount company. John F. Bannan, associated with him the last 10 years, will accompany Mr. Dembow to F. and M. as assistant.

Jack Partington, president of F. and M., said that no immediate expansion in the east is planned as a result of Mr. Dembow joining the company. The company is, however, adding more theatres and now operates about 60 houses, 32 of which are in St. Louis.

Mr. Dembow will also be a member of the board. He has been in the industry 25 years, starting as a salesman for Fox in 1913. He later became assistant general sales manager for that company. His affiliations thereafter were with Goldwyn Pictures as west coast district manager, R. L. Rothschild Theatres, in San Francisco, in which Paramount had a minority interest, and buyer and booker for the Paramount circuit, eventually heading all Publix operations.

Meeting of National Supply Managers Held in New York

The last of a series of four district meetings of the National Theatre Supply Company was held in New York last Thursday and Friday. The purpose of the meeting, which was attended by eastern district managers and sound sales representatives of these territories, was to acquaint the eastern sales division with complete details regarding the new Simplex E-7 Projector and Simplex 4-Star Sound System.

On Friday at the India House, E. G. Hines, president of International Projector Corporation, entertained the following representatives at luncheon: W. E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply Company; E. M. Hartley and J. W. Servies of the general office of National Theatre Supply; Herb Griffin, A. E. Meyer and George Friedl, Jr., of International Projector, and the following branch managers of National Theatre Supply: N. C. Haefele, Baltimore; H. J. McKinney, Boston; V. G. Sandford, Buffalo; Wm. J. Hutchins, New Haven; C. H. Secor, New York; H. Blumberg, Philadelphia; O. E. Williams and C. Fred Boyd, Albany.

SEVEN NEW UNITS START; 20th-FOX BARS DUALS WITH NON-CODE FILMS

Paramount Sets Convention April 15-16 at Washington; GN Adds to Staff; 'Our Gang' Shorts to Be Made at MGM

Seven new producing or distributing companies were launched this week for participation in the new season. They include:

Pictures Corporation of America, formed by Ira Greene and Victor Halperin, for feature production in the east.

Malcolm-Brown Picture Company, by Joseph R. Malcolm and John E. Brown, for feature production in the west.

Progressive Pictures Corporation, organized in Hollywood by Ben N. Judell, to supplement his state rights distribution business.

Frank Kassler, Inc., headed by Frank Kassler, to handle foreign language talkers.

American Pictures Corporation, formed by Edward A. Blatt, formerly test director at Paramount.

Post Pictures Corporation, headed by Harry A. Post, to distribute both 35mm. and 16mm. films, with headquarters at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York.

Cosmorama Productions, organized in Hollywood by a group.

Pre-seasonal activities this week, pointing toward completion of feature and short subject programs for 1938-39, also included:

1. Determination by Twentieth Century-Fox Film, in annual sales convention at Kansas City, to prohibit contractually the exhibition of any of its features on the same program with a film that does not have the industry's Production Code Seal of Approval.

2. Paramount's scheduling of April 15th and 16th for its annual convention, at the Shoreham hotel, Washington. Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, will preside.

3. Resumption of selling by Grand National Pictures, with the addition of 50 salesmen.

4. Acquisition by MGM of Hal Roach's "Our Gang" unit.

The Twentieth Century-Fox convention was held last Friday and Saturday, at the Hotel Muehlbach, Kansas City, where John D. Clark, general sales manager, outlined 52 features and 58 one-reelers for 1938-39. Titles and the names of 160 producers, directors, stars and writers appeared on pages 16 and 17 of the April 2d issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Six features were subsequently added from the British unit of Robert T. Kane.

Mr. Clark told the delegates that although more than 10,000 contracts were sold in the United States for 1937-38, a record sales year, 600 more contracts for 1938-39 already have been sold over the same last year.

Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, board chairman and production chief, respectively, wired messages to the 105 at the convention.

Lew Lehr was introduced as the new short subject director, under Truman Talley. He will have charge of 26 one-reelers the company will produce to replace the Educational subjects which Fox no longer will distribute. The new shorts will include six "Magic Carpets," with Lowell Thomas narrating, several to be done in color; four "Adventures of a Cameraman"; six "Sport Reviews," featuring Ed Thorgerson; four "Fashion Features," in color; six comedies, titled "Lew Lehr's Kindergarten." In addition, there will be 26 Terrytoon one-reel cartoons, six in color.

Reduction from 100 shorts this year to 58 next year is attributable to the double billing situation, the delegates were told. There will be no two-reelers in the new season, as against 42 this year.

STUDENTS HEAR ZANUCK LECTURE

Theatre operation is the biggest and most wide open field for the youth of today who is seeking a career, Darryl F. Zanuck told a group of students March 29th in a lecture, "Showmanship in Theatre Operation," before the cinematography classes of the University of Southern California.

Mr. Zanuck told the students that theatre operation at its highest is simply the task of carrying the studio's problem to completion.

The largest advertising and publicity budget in the company's history was announced by Charles E. McCarthy, advertising director, who said emphasis will be placed on special handling of "big" pictures.

Fox will not change its policy of permitting its stars to appear on the air to publicize company pictures.

Edward Lomba, of New York, was named manager of the "Kent Sales Drive" for foreign business.

Felix A. Jenkins, general counsel, explained that all company contracts in 1938-39 will have a clause prohibiting exhibition of a picture made by Fox on a double bill with a film not bearing the Production Code approval.

Indications are that 20th Century-Fox will continue to handle physical distribution of GB pictures in the U. S. next season.

Arthur Lee, GB managing director, said Saturday on his return from a visit to western branches that the company's sales and collections in those areas were showing definite improvement. He anticipates the release of 24 features, 8 more than this season.

Grand National's Plans

Grand National started its selling season April 1, as last year.

Release of four films started the new season, Edward Peskay, vice-president, said in New York Tuesday. They are: "Renfrew Rides North," "International Crime," "He Loved An Actress," and "Zamboanga."

In addition to the present staff, there are 29 exchanges. Grand National is augmenting its sales force with 50 to 60 salesmen.

Grand National plans to release 36 features and 16 Westerns.

New Companies

Organization of Pictures Corporation of America was announced by Ira Greene, president. Victor Halperin, who has made 30 productions variously for United Artists, Paramount and RKO, is vice-president in charge of production, and J. Burgi Contner, president of Motion Picture Supply Company, is secretary-treasurer. Budd Getschal, formerly of Universal and The Film Daily, is director of publicity and advertising. Mr. Greene, who heads Continental Film Industries, Inc., film investment bankers, said production will be at Film Art Studios, New York. A home office has been set up at 723 Seventh Avenue.

Joseph R. Malcolm, of Malcolm Laboratories, and John E. Brown have formed Malcolm-

Brown Picture Company to make 20 independent films on the Coast. Territorial distribution agents, 16 already engaged, will operate on a 50 per cent basis.

Mr. Brown is president, Mr. Malcolm secretary-treasurer. A budget of $400,000 has been set.

The lineup calls for eight westerns, eight action features and four "specials."

Al Selig will handle publicity and exploitation.

Ben N. Judell, state rights film distributor, has formed Progressive Pictures Corporation to produce four features in Hollywood.

First is "Delinquent Parents," with Doris Weston, Maurice Murphy. Next will be "Wayward Daughters," "Scandal House" and "Step-mother."

Jerome E. Olenick is publicity director.

Frank Kassler has formed his own distribution company at 1600 Broadway, New York, to finance French productions in Paris and Jewish productions in Poland and will distribute the product here.

With headquarters at 1033 N. Cahuenga Boulevard, Hollywood, Cosmorama Productions has been formed to film current happenings not covered by news reel cameramen. The first, in 1500 feet, is "The Fishing Fleet."

Members of the organization include Gene Hagberg, Lennie South, Thor Loovos, J. Henry Kruse, and Hank Levy.

Wanger's Talent Contracts

Although Walter Wanger's 1938-39 program has not been determined, the company has under contract for next season ten players, three directors and three writers, as follows: Players, Sylvia Sidney, Charles Boyer, Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Pat Paterson, Alan Baxter, Tim Holt, Maria Shelton and Louise Platt; directors, Irving Cummings, John Cromwell and John Ford; writers, Gene Towne, Graham Baker and John Howard Lawson.

Under a plan evolved by Hal Roach Studios for the making of features such as "Topper" and "Merrily We Live," production of Our Gang comedies will hereafter proceed at the M-G-M plant under the direction of Fred Quimby, general manager of short subjects.

At Warners, pre-seasonal studio conferences were ending this week and the eastern executives were returning to New York.

Paul Muni will continue with Warners next season under a new contract, reversing his original decision to act on a picture-to-picture free lance basis.

The first picture for Jimmie Fidler under a new four-film arrangement with Warners will be "Garden of the Moon," musical.

National Theatres Heads Confer with Skouras

Policies for the coming season and new product buying were discussed last Thursday and Friday when division managers of National Theatres conferred in New York with Spyros Skouras, operating head. The circuit starts 1938-39 buying April 15.

Among those present at the meeting were Charles Skouras, head of West Coast Theatres at Los Angeles; Arch M. Bowles of San Francisco, west coast division manager for northern California; Rick Ricketson, head of Fox Intermountain Theatres; Elmer C. Rhoden, Fox Midwest division manager, and Frank L. Newman, Sr., president of the Evergreen State Amusement Corporation.

QUOTA IN ACCEPTED FORM INCLUDES MAJOR PROPOSALS OF GOVERNMENT

Basic Principles of White Paper Incorporated in New Law; Triple Credit and Reciprocity Important Concessions

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Buffeted by the shifting winds of politics in Parliament for the last seven months and the object of vociferous debate ever since it first emerged in nebulous form from the deliberations of the Moyne Commission early last year, a new Cinematograph Films Act went into effect April 1st. In it are detailed quota schedules under which distributors and exhibitors will operate until 1948.

Incorporating all the principles submitted by the Board of Trade to the House of Commons last August in a White Paper and changed only in detail from that document the new Bill represents a victory for the Government whose representatives steered it through the shoals of legislative debate and the storms of industry controversy. To facilitate its course the only concessions necessary were minor ones to the labor opposition and diplomatic ones to distributors.

The Act, in its most important phases, provides:

A quota for distributors starting at 15 per cent and increasing in ten years to 30 and for exhibitors starting at 12½ per cent and increasing to 25;

A separate short subjects quota ranging from 15 to 25 per cent for distributors and from 12½ to 22½ per cent for exhibitors;

A minimum cost clause based on expenditure for labor rather than on the total budget of a picture;

Concessions to distributors permitting films made at a cost exceeding the minimum to count double and triple for quota purposes according to a fixed scale;

A similar clause allowing quota credit for British films acquired at certain fixed costs for distribution in other countries;

Prohibition of blind and advance booking;

Establishment of a Films Council, and Guarantee of fair wages and hours to studio employees.

The quota percentages represent a considerable increase from those fixed in the old Bill passed in 1927 which expired last week, and were approved in their final form only after long controversy. Even in the ultimate Parliamentary stages of the Bill the House of Lords approved an amendment introduced by Lord Moyne which would have provided that the distributors' quota start at 20 per cent and the exhibitors' at 15. The amendment was protested bitterly when the Bill was returned to the Commons and was struck out before the measure received the royal assent on March 30th.

Under the expired Bill the percentages started at 7½ per cent for distributors and increased

QUOTA PERCENTAGES INCREASE BIENNIALY

Following is the schedule under which the quota percentages will increase for distributors and exhibitors, under the terms of the new Cinematograph Films Act. For example, this year 15% of all features and 15% of all short subjects handled by the distributor must be British product; 12½% of all features and 12½% of all short subjects shown by the exhibitor must be British.

DISTRIBUTORS

Year	Features	Shorts
1938	15	15
1939	20	15
1940-41	22½	17½
1942-43	25	20
1946-47	30	25

EXHIBITORS

1939	15	12½
1940-41	17½	15
1942-43	20	17½
1944-45	22½	20
1946-47	25	22½

The new distributor quota went into effect April 1st but the exhibitor quota requirements will not become effective until October 1st.

to 20 per cent in the tenth year and ranged from five per cent to 20 per cent for exhibitors. The separation of the short subjects quota from the features is an entirely new provision.

The minimum cost provision specifies that to be entitled to registration for distributors' quota a British feature film must have cost £1 a foot and a minimum of £7,500 "expended in labor costs." An entirely new basis of computing film costs is here added to the principle, itself new in legislation, that cost shall be the deciding factor in conferring the right of registration to a British film.

In addition 75 per cent of this labor cost must be paid to British labor but the salaries of one star and of one artist may be excluded from this computation of costs. The labor cost is computed as roughly one half of the total negative cost so that each quota film of British origin must represent a total minimum cost of approximately $75,000.

The institution of a minimum cost clause and the rejection of a viewing test which had been advanced pressingly as the alternative, was the feature of the Bill about which one of the earliest and fiercest controversies concerning the legislation raged.

The Government itself, expressing its views in the White Paper, favored the quality test as the ideal method of qualifying films for registration and as an antidote for the low quality quota quickies but realistically it was admitted that such a test was impractical and that a minimum cost provision would insure a financial incentive for keeping the calibre of production at an acceptable level. A residue of the quality test, however, remains in the Bill as written and approved in the addition of a proviso that films failing to reach the labor cost minimum may be submitted for registration subject to the approval of the Board of Trade as being of special entertainment value.

To "further encourage the production of long films of higher quality" and to provide entry into the foreign market the Government further provided the "Double Quota" principle under which distributors could claim extra quota credit for films costing a stated amount over the minimum. This provision of the Bill as passed allows distributors credit for two films when labor costs reach £22,500.

On this point debate raged until the final moment of passage. It was attacked by distributors on the ground that it did not go far enough and by exhibitors on the ground that it represented a reduction of effective exhibition footage. When the Bill reached the floor of the House of Commons Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, who guided the measure through the legislative processes, proposed an amendment extending the principle so that distributors could claim triple credit for films costing £37,500 ($187,500) for labor. Opposition in the commons defeated the proposal but it was reintroduced when the Bill reached the House of Lords and remained a part of it during the subsequent reconsideration and final approval by the lower House.

To pacify British studio interests who opposed not only this increase but the original principle a rider was attached to the amendment limiting the multiple quota concessions to 50 per cent of the distributor's total footage.

Under the heading also of "further encouragement" the Government introduced a reciprocity clause which subsequently became a major center of controversy. As originally proposed with the "hope that it would lead to cooperation between British producers and those renters who are in a position to arrange adequate channels of distribution overseas" it was provided that acquisition of a film for foreign distribution would merit credit for one feature under the quota requirements. The feature acquired for such distribution, however, would have to cost at least £3 a foot and involve a labor cost of not less than £22,500. In addition at least £20,000 would have to be paid for the foreign rights.

After industry argument and legislative debate this clause in the final Bill provides that triple labor cost films (£22,500) acquired for foreign distribution at a price of £20,000 shall count one for the distributor's quota and that films costing at least £30,000 in labor and acquired for £30,000 shall count double.

Exhibitor Quota Films Unlimited

The exhibitors' quota under the Bill is to be calculated on screenings only and all British films are available for registration whether they qualify for distributors' quota or not. To further protect the exhibitor the Government included a clause continuing the provision that when an exhibitor has not shown the required proportion of British films he shall be protected from prosecution if he can satisfy the Board of Trade that the reasons for his default were reasons beyond his control and in such cases he is to be given a certificate of exemption.

Although pictures made in the Dominions are not creditable for distributors' quota they are for the exhibitors.

Under the new Bill, as in the old, blind and advance booking are prohibited under heavy penalties. The signing of booking agreements before a picture is trade shown is specifically banned and bookings are limited to six months in advance under heavy penalties applicable to distributors only.

Newsreels, advertising films and educational subjects are exempted from all provisions of the Bill.

A proposal for a Films Council with wide discretionary powers was included in the report of Moyne Commission last year but met with such opposition that the Government eliminated the plan from the White Paper. Mr. Stanley, however, introduced an amendment providing for such a council while the Bill was in the House of Commons.

It will consist of 21 members to be appointed by the Board of Trade. Eleven will have no financial interest in the industry and there will be two producers, four exhibitors, two labor representatives, a chairman and one woman representative. Its functions will be to review the progress of the industry with particular reference to production and report to the Board of Trade when advisable. It will also be available to the Board of Trade when its advice is sought whether at the request of persons interested in the industry or others. It will make an annual report to the Board which in turn will be presented to Parliament.

Ten members will continue a quorum and the council will be empowered to regulate its own procedure. Members will hold office in accordance with the terms of their appointment, will be eligible for reappointment, but will not be eligible to serve more than three years.

In the closing moments of the debate in Parliament there prevailed a general atmosphere of contentment and gratification that the battle was over. Most jubilant of all would seem to be the American distributors, who, on the face of it, and without the remotest public campaigning or open controversy, won an asset in the triple quota and reciprocity schemes and the possibility of reducing their footage obligations by 50 per cent. The net value of this gain, however, is questioned by their exhibitor critics, who, as a result of Mr. Stanley's unequivocal and unqualified denunciation of the quickie process, and of the manner generally in which quota obligations have been met, foresee an emphatic and uncompromising Board of Trade attitude to the theory and practice of evasion.

Least happy of all are the producers whose case, thanks to its variegation and shifting ground has been, if not ignored, at least set in the background. Last minute effort at lobbying found them sending twenty line telegrams to every member of the House of Commons on the day of the debate, so many in fact that the bulk of them were not sorted out and distributed till the debate was over!

Star, Author, Director of "Lenin" Receive Awards

The Order of Lenin, highest of all Soviet Russia decorations, has been awarded to Boris V. Shchukin, Mikhail Romm, and A. Kapler, star, director and author of "Lenin in October," according to Amkino Corporation, American distributors of the film. The picture had its American premiere last week at the Cameo and Continental theatres in New York.

Howard Strickling, publicity director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Gail Greenstreet of the J. Walter Thompson publicity bureau, were married Saturday. They are honeymooning at the Flying V Ranch, Tucson, Ariz.

NEW THEATRE BUILDING CONTRACTS INCREASE

Government Interested in Brandt Proposal for Loans Available for Reconstruction

Theatre building contracts awarded in February showed an increase over January. The valuation of new and major alterations projects reported for the month for the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains totaled $2,369,000.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Washington this week received "with interest" a proposal by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, for making loans up to $25,000 available to exhibitors for theatre reconstruction and rehabilitation.

Sixty-seven projects, calling for 255,000 square feet of floor space, were listed for February by the Dodge Reports division of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, in a grouping of all theatre construction for which actual contracts were awarded in the month.

43 January Projects

A similar survey by the company for January showed 43 projects, with 153,000 square feet, valued at a total of $1,187,000.

The February figures are approximately at the same average level of theatre construction as in 1937, when Dodge reported, for 12 months, 885 projects valued at $27,255,000.

The January and February reports showed fewer theatre projects, for new and major alteration work, with a smaller total area, but a higher total contract valuation than was recorded for the same period in 1937.

For January and February of 1937 the report listed 118 projects compared to 110 for the first two months of this year; 412,000 square feet for the two month period in 1937 compared to 408,000 in 1938, and $3,393,000 valuation in the 1937 period as compared to $3,556,000 for the same period in 1938.

Confers with RFC Chairman

Mr. Brandt conferred with Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, on the possibility of extending long-term credit at low interest to theatre owners through the local banks for all types of remodeling and renovating projects and the purchase of equipment. The ITOA head said that Mr. Jones liked the proposal as outlined, but raised the question whether it could be worked out with the banks.

Exhibitors can now obtain loans up to $10,000 from the Federal Housing Administration for permanent improvements to theatres and purchase of immovable equipment. Mr. Brandt's idea is that the exhibitors should be able to borrow for all types of equipment, including movable equipment and booth installations, which are not covered by FHA credits. The loans are not intended for new theatre construction. Officials of the RFC indicated that such a sum, negligible in comparison with the $1,000,000 advances that have been made in other directions, would not be considered impossible to grant provided the borrower had adequate collateral and could satisfy the government's requirements. The new legislation providing for loans to small industries will necessitate no material change in RFC lending policies.

ASCAP Scores Initial Victory

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week scored a temporary victory over the Florida statute designed to prevent the society from collecting royalties in the state, and prepared to attack a similar measure in Tennessee.

At Ocala, Fla., a federal court issued an order temporarily setting aside the 1937 law.

An interlocutory injunction was filed in the United States district court for the northern district of Florida against Cary D. Landis, attorney general, and the 15 state attorneys of Florida. The order was signed by the three judges who, sitting as a federal statutory court in New Orleans, heard arguments March 3rd.

Mr. Landis was granted 30 days to file an answer and ASCAP was granted a similar period to post a $5,000 bond to compensate for damages which might be incurred before a final hearing.

The trial of ASCAP's suit to have the law declared unconstitutional is expected to be set for some time next fall.

Tennessee Action Next

E. C. Mills, chairman of ASCAP's administrative committee, was in Knoxville this week, conferring with resident attorneys for the society on plans for filing an action attacking the Tennessee law.

The Rhode Island bill designed to prevent the collection of royalties on musical compositions from second run film theatres was reported out by the corporation's committee of the Rhode Island Senate and then recommitted to committee. The bill is sponsored by Senator Clarence H. Horton.

The Senate Banking and Commerce committee, Ottawa, has amended the bill of W. K. Esling, conservative member for Kootenay West, to curb the activities of the Canadian Performing Rights Society (similar to ASCAP in the United States). The committee deleted from the measure the provision that the society must publish a list of all dramatic-musical works which it claims to control by copyright. Two other amendments were substituted. One provides that no charge shall be made for public performances of such works by means of radio receiving sets or gramophone, except in the case of a theatre to which admission is charged, or a ship. The second stipulates that vocal or instrumental musical performances shall not be considered public performances for which a fee must be paid, except where they occur in a theatre or a ship.

ASCAP's annual membership meeting, which was postponed from March 24th because of the illness in the family of Gene Buck, president, will be held about April 21st.

Royalties, estimated at $100,000 due ASCAP from cafes, orchestras and radio stations in Germany and Austria would be used to assist Jewish and other oppressed composers and musicians in those countries, under a resolution voted by the Song Writers Protective Association at their annual meeting last week. Irving Caesar, president of the group and also a member of the ASCAP board, was directed by the resolution to present the plan to the society.

PALEY HITS FEDERAL AIR REGULATION; ACADEMY MAY INCLUDE RADIO SERVICE

President of CBS Urges Long Term Licenses; Declares Relations of Stations to Networks Are Not Monopolistic

Federal regulation or censorship of radio, beyond seeing that freedom, fairness and nonpartisanship of the air are maintained, is as unnecessary as the imposition of special regulations for "newspapers and hardware stores," William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, declared Tuesday in his annual report to stockholders of the company.

In his address, which was broadcast over the Columbia network Mr. Paley advocated greater public interest in all proposals tending toward censorship of broadcasting. He also:

Denounced the present six-month licensing system, terming it "as unfair and unwise as it would be to give men short-term licenses to publish newspapers, to write books or plays, or to make motion pictures."

Proposed licenses be granted for a long term of years and be revocable only when, after a full and open trial, it is proved that broadcasters failed to operate in the public convenience, interest and necessity.

Warned that broadcasting would suffer very quickly if network operations were hampered.

Asserted that the relationship of stations to networks is anything but monopolistic.

Declared that Federal Communications Commission regulation of prices at which radio stations could be bought or sold, or regulation as to the number of stations a network might own or lease, would be detrimental to radio.

Mr. Paley urged that the industry unite on a program of progress, public service and protection, advancing the thought that the recently organized National Association of Broadcasters might be made the instrument for such a program.

A few days before Mr. Paley's report was submitted, the Broadcasters appointed Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal, as president.

The new leader, who accepted on the condition that the position be non-salaried, will have authority to bring about self-regulation in the radio industry similar to that in the film industry.

He also will serve as the industry's spokesman before the public, the federal administration and Congress.

In accepting the post, Mr. Ethridge said he would serve until a "permanent head of the industry" was named.

The Association decided last February to appoint a paid president with broad powers over the industry after a series of incidents which led to public criticism. Among these was the radio skit, "Garden of Eden," in which Mae West took part. The FCC condemned the broadcast and later accepted an apology from National Broadcasting Company.

The Broadcasters' program will include appointment of a staff of experts for public and

In discussing federal regulation, Mr. Paley traced its origin to the fact that stations had to be policed in order that their broadcasts would not interfere with each other. This policing, he said, resulted in limitation of the number of stations. He urged that regulation, therefore, be limited to "the bare necessities of the case," which he listed as freedom, fairness and non partisanship of the air.

Mr. Paley defended the competitive system of broadcasting, claiming that under this system broadcasting had been used more effectively for "the entertainment, the information and the education" of a whole people than under any other plan of operation in the world.

In urging that the system of licensing be changed, Mr. Paley commented: "I feel quite sure that nobody really wants to keep broadcasting in a position where it might some day be faced with the necessity of pleasing those in power in order to continue to exist. I do not think it is wise for the American people to allow the whole broadcasting structure too continue to rest on such a weak foundation."

Mr. Paley referred to the FCC's recent decision to make a full investigation of network broadcasting, declaring that the "miracle of radio lies in networks" and, therefore, networks should not be limited.

Sales prices of radio stations should be governed by ordinary rules of business, he said.

Commissioners Paul A. Walker, Eugene O. Sykes and Thad H. Brown were named by the FCC on Wednesday to make the study of chain broadcasting and of monopoly. Commissioners Craven, Sykes and Norman S. Case will handle the superpower investigation.

Gledhill Proposes Study of Project to Provide Air Achievement Records; CBS To Celebrate April 30th

Leaders of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are undertaking a survey to determine the possibility of expanding the organization's activities to include the servicing of the radio industry in the same manner as the film industry.

Under the plan, formulated by Donald Gledhill, executive secretary, the Academy is seeking to discover if there is a need for radio achievement records, such as those made by the Academy for motion picture producers, writers and directors, and the Academy's casting directory, which contains photographs of players, their telephone numbers and their agents.

Consideration also is being given to a plan to establish a library of electrical transcriptions of voices of radio actors and actresses. The transcriptions would be played over special telephone wires to executives of advertising agencies, networks and stations seeking to cast radio programs.

The chief obstacle, it was explained, is the possible cost of the enterprise and how it should be apportioned. Mr. Gledhill plans to submit the plan to the executive board for early consideration.

The Academy, since dropping its activities as a representative, collectively, of actors and writers, has broadened its service projects. A quarterly casting directory, financed for the most part by studios, is issued, and the players whose photographs are included are charged a small fee.

In addition, the Academy is establishing a large library of publications, such as text books, non-fiction, and trade publications, both American and foreign.

CBS Plans 18 Hour Hollywood Broadcast

An 18 hour, 45 minute broadcast, to emanate from Hollywood, will be given April 30th by Station KNX over the entire chain to mark the opening of the new CBS building at Columbia Square. The programs will start at 6 a. m., PST, and will last until 12:45 a. m. the next day.

Several features will be picked up by the Canadian network, while a short wave hookup with Europe will make available the entire program to the Continent, according to Charles Vanda, program director.

The broadcast will be climaxed by a two-hour program from the new Columbia Square Theatre where stars of radio, stage and screen will appear, Mr. Vanda said. The varied periods will have college presidents, scientists, philosophers and other men of letters broadcasting from classrooms, laboratories and offices.

A special program of symphonic music will be offered by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra from the Hollywood Bowl, where 20,000 school children will be present.

Spot broadcasts from the city's busiest intersections, a "parade" of Southern California sports figures, a round-the-town dance music excursion to Hollywood's night clubs, and novelty programs are planned. City, county and state officials are to speak.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Two by Two

Ten pictures were started and twelve finished in the closing week of March. The trend was to start production in groups of two.

Both features which went into work at MGM appear to be upper bracket pictures. "Hold That Kiss" will feature Fay Bainter, Maureen O'Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe and Ruth Hussey. Leading players in "Shopworn Angel" are James Stewart, Margaret O'Sullivan and Walter Pidgeon.

With Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith in the leading roles, Columbia started "Swingtime in the Saddle." Robert Paige and Jacqueline Wells head the cast to be seen in "State Police."

Republic started "Gangs of New York" in which Charles Bickford, Wynne Gibson, Alan Baxter and Harold Huber will be featured, and "Whirlwind Cowboy."

At 20th Century-Fox "I'll Give a Million" and "Hello Hollywood" were started. Warnex Baxter, Peter Lorre, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg and Sig Rumann head the cast in the first. The second will star Jane Withers with Henry Wilcoxon and Gloria Stuart.

"In Every Woman's Life" started at Warners. Kay Francis, Anita Louise, John Littel and Bonita Granville are the principals.

For United Artists distribution, Walter Wanger started "Algiers." Charles Boyer, Heddy Lamarr, Alan Hale and Joseph Calleia are the most important players assigned thus far.

Republic completed three pictures. "Romance on the Run" will present Grace Bradley, Edward Brophy, Patricia Ellis, Donald Woods and William Demarest. Ray Rogers, Smiley Burnette and Carol Hughes head the cast in "Under Western Stars." Lee Powell and Eleanor Stewart are the principals in "Fighting Devil Dogs," a serial.

Monogram finished two productions. Tim McCoy, Suzanne Kaaren, Carl Hackett and John St. Polis are featured in "Ridin' Gent." John Merton, Louise Stanley and Al St. John are the important characters in "Gun-smoke Trail."

Two pictures were finished at 20th Century-Fox. The Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville and John Carradine are featured in "Kentucky Moonshine." "Kidnapped" has Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew, Arleen Whelan, C. Aubrey Smith and Reginald Owen among the players in its cast.

"Cocoanut Grove" was completed at Paramount. Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Yacht Club Boys and Rufe Davis are the principals.

Progressive Pictures finished "Wayward Daughters." The cast includes Verna Hillie, Marjorie Reynolds, Dennis Moore, Sheila Bromley and Monte Blue.

Warner Brothers completed "Four's a "Sinners in Paradise" finished up at Universal. Cast is headed by John Boles, Madge Evans, Bruce Cabot and Marian Martin.

MGM finished "Three Comrades." It will present Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Margaret Sullavan, Henry Hull, Guy Kibbee, Lionel Atwill and Sarah Padden.

Sophistication Is Out

Sophistication is as dead in Hollywood as the dodo-bird.

The box office killed it.

A survey of recently made pictures and a glance at what is scheduled reveals a division between simple human stories and outdoor melodramas, with provision made for a few musicals. In the main, however, outdoor stuff predominates.

Three pictures, "The Girl of the Golden West," "In Old Chicago" and "Jezebel" are advance sketches of what the big picture output will look like.

MGM's successors to "The Girl" will be "Test Pilot," an aviation story; "Marie Antoinette," described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 26th; "Three Comrades," an Eric Remarque post war melodrama; "Yellow Jack," the struggle of science against yellow fever, similar to the "Arrow-smith" theme, and "Northwest Passage."

Twentieth Century-Fox has "Four Men and a Prayer," built around world melodrama, romance and adventure; "Kidnapped," a Robert Louis Stevenson yarn, and "Suez," to follow "In Old Chicago."

Warners will continue with "The Adventures of Robin Hood," "Cowboy from Brooklyn," "Valley of the Giants" all outdoor stories, and the down to earth romance "Boy Meets Girl" from the point at which it left off with "Jezebel."

As production is getting back to first principles, putting on the screen emotions that everybody knows and understands, utter belief in the romance, comedy or drama in the story is compelling, and smartness that may be laughed at or otherwise understood momentarily, only to be quickly forgotten, is being dropped as a theme.

Paramount has a trio of big musicals coming up, "Dr. Rhythm," "Cocoanut Grove" and "College Swing," but after that, although because of Bing Crosby and Fred MacMurray musicals will continue, production plans move outdoors with "The Texans" and "Union Pacific" as successors of "Wells Fargo."

Rejected Roles

Representatives for Dick Powell and the Warner studios were to confer this week on the actor's refusal to appear in "Garden of the Moon." The dispute was the newest of three current controversies in the general category of star trouble.

Bette Davis, suspended by the same studio for balking at "Comet Over Broadway," issued the explanation that she was ill when the script was received but that had she felt the story was worthy of her talents she would have arisen from her sickbed rather than delay production. Warners filed a complaint with the Screen Actors' Guild.

Joel McCrea figured in the third argument, which was settled when he appeared for work in "Three Blind Mice" at Twentieth Century-Fox after the lending studio, Samuel Goldwyn, refused to support his belief that the part was not suitable.

ADMISSION PRICE LEVEL UNCHANGED IN 5 YEARS

MPPDA Sees No Countrywide Shifts, Despite Some Reductions in Scattered Areas

Despite scattered reports of reductions, theatre admission prices, considered on a countrywide basis, still are approximating the level they have had for the last five years, according to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Reduction of prices by some theatres, notably those in the northwest, marks a direct reversal of a general movement early last fall for higher admissions. MOTION PICTURE HERALD said on September 18, 1937: "The general tendency to increase admission prices continued to gain favor this week, raises being put into effect in Connecticut, Kansas, Ohio, Colorado and Minnesota."

"Price War" in Northwest

In Minnesota today the Berger Amusement Company and the Baehr Brothers are waging a "price war." At Brainerd, prices are down to 10 cents for a double feature program, while at Bemidji tickets cost 15 cents each for a dual bill.

At Spokane, Wash., the Post Street theatre followed the citywide trend toward lower prices by eliminating vaudeville after a six-month try and adopting a double feature policy with admissions being dropped 10 cents to 15 and 25 cents. Previously, the Granada dropped its prices from 20 to 30 cents to 25 and 25 cents; the Empress went from 15 to 20 cents to 10 and 15 cents, and the Liberty inaugurated a policy of 15 cents until 2 P. M.

Price changes in Nebraska were both upward and downward. Five cent drops were adopted at the Fremont, Fremont; the Majestic, Grand Island, and the Sun, Holdrege. In Lincoln the Stuart eliminated a 25-cent evening balcony price, making the entire house 40 cents; the Lincoln increased from 20 and 25 cents to 25 and 35 cents, and the Orpheum went from 10, 15 and 20 to 10, 20 and 25 cents. The increases in Lincoln did not affect the five-cent admission charged by the Varsity where double features, a serial and short subjects are shown.

Montreal Increases Planned

Immediately after Easter, Montreal theatres plan to raise admission prices to the pre-depression level. First-run houses now charging 50 cents will increase the price to 60 cents while second-run and neighborhood houses will change the 25 and 35-cent price to 30 and 40 cents. The move is expected to be made by the majority of Montreal's 63 theatres. About 20 per cent of the second-run shows and the entire first-run group will make the change.

An immediate investigation into the admission prices charged by theatres in Ontario has been ordered by M. F. Hepburn, premier, because, it is charged, exhibitors failed to fulfill their promise to pass on to the public the benefit of the cancellation of the amusements tax last July.

"The revenue from the amusements tax during the past year amounted to only $227,000, whereas during the previous year it was nearly $2,000,000," Mr. Hepburn declared in his budget speech before the Ontario legislature.

Griffis Reports $12,000,000 in Paramount Cash

Paramount stands today in a strong cash position, with $12,000,000 in hand, after effecting last week's dividend payments, according to Stanton Griffis, chairman of the corporation's executive committee.

Other financial news of the week included Securities and Exchange Commission reports on stock exchanges in Paramount and Columbia Broadcasting, and issuance of earnings reports by Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Hamilton United Theatres, Strand Hamilton Theatres and Consolidated Theatres, all of Canada, and by Carrier Corporation, Bausch and Lomb Optical Company and Claude Neon General Advertising, the three of which do considerable equipment selling in the motion picture business, and other fields.

Cash Position Improved

An improvement in Paramount's current cash position amounting to approximately $3,500,000 has been recorded since last September, Mr. Griffis said. The current improved cash position is after the payment this week of the first quarter dividends on the company's 6 per cent first and second preferred stocks, amounting to $300,000. The results noted are credited to fiscal planning and the revision of general operations to contend with lower theatre receipts which have prevailed for some months past.

Indications are that all or most of the present directorate will be reelected June 21st at the annual meeting.

Disposition by John D. Hertz, Paramount board director, of 1,700 shares of Paramount second preferred stock held through Lehman Brothers was reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mr. Hertz still holds 1,000 shares of Paramount second preferred through Lehman Brothers.

Famous Players Canadian

The financial position of Famous Players Canadian Corporation has been improved by a net reduction of over $300,000 in capital liabilities including bonds and mortgages, the debt now standing at a new low of $7,938,408.

Serial bonds have been reduced through redemption at maturity of $350,000, while new bonds have been issued and sold to the amount of $300,000, a net decrease of $50,000. Notes payable have been reduced from $434,059 to $153,000 while mortgages on theatre properties have been reduced from $781,149 to $755,408.

President N. L. Nathanson has purchased a block of common shares in the company available at $13 per share under the option granted him for each of five years, the statement revealing that 11,000 shares had been sold in this manner. The current market value of Famous Players common is $23. The option agreement has four more years to run with 44,000 additional shares availing at prices scaling from $14 to $17 per share in successive years.

Famous Players Canadian for the year ending December 31 last showed net profits of $869,197, equal to $2.13 a share on the 408,524 shares outstanding. This compares with a profit of $563,096 for the previous year, a gain of $306,101. Profit from theatre operations was $2,184,524, compared with $1,845,186 a year ago. Other income raised the total to $2,336,425 and surplus carried forward is $2,185,434 for the previous year.

Other Canadian Reports

Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., Montreal, in the year ended January 1st earned a gross profit of $80,687, including interest of $3,393. This compares with gross profit of $77,392 in the 53 weeks ended Jan. 2, 1937. After depreciation of $16,740, and income tax provision of $5,592, net profit was $54,355, compared with $53,496 in the preceding 53 weeks.

Strand Hamilton Theatres, Ltd., Montreal, reported for the year ended January 1st a net profit of $8,262 compared to $2,790 for 53 weeks ended January 2, 1937. Allen Kingston Theatres, Ontario, for the same period netted $12,387 compared with $11,254, and for the same period Paramount Oshawa Theatre, Ltd., reported net of $24,458 compared with $24,651.

Consolidated Theatres, Ltd., Montreal, reported a net profit of $16,093, equal to 20 cents a share for the year ended December 31, as compared with a net of $2,663 for the previous year, net working capital of $42,259 at the end of 1937 compared with $3,032 in excess of current liabilities on December 31, 1936.

Equipment Companies

Carrier Corporation and subsidiary companies selling air conditioning equipment reported net income for the year ended December 31 of $250,794 after deducting (1) $51,939 provision for federal income taxes; (2) $537,456 expenses of the move to Syracuse, N. Y.; (3) unabsorbed manufacturing overhead of $306,105.

Bausch and Lomb Optical Company reported a net profit for itself and subsidiaries of $1,087,992 after depreciation, interest, federal and Canadian income taxes and $88,858 surtax on undistributed profits, equal after annual dividend requirements on the 50,000 shares of new five per cent cumulative preferred stock, to $2.04 a share on 410,000 shares of the new common issued under the recent reclassification of capital stock. This compared with net profit of $1,030,845 in 1936, equal on above share basis to $1.90 a common share.

Claude Neon General Advertising, Ltd., reported net loss for 1937 of $36,036 after provision for depreciation of $45,877 and bond interest of $47,970, compared to net loss a year ago of $92,327. The 1937 loss does not take into consideration the company's share of profits earned by partly owned subsidiary companies, amounting to $13,000.

U. A. Cash Receipts Up

United Artists' U. S. cash rental receipts for the year ending April 1, 1938, were $6,017,000 more than in 1936-37, according to George J. Schaefer, vice-president. He said that the company's January-February-March, 1938, sales drive increased receipts by 72 per cent over the same drive period in 1937, resulting in the biggest three-month business in the company's history.

Miss Tazelaar at MGM

Marguerite Tazelaar, for several years film critic for the New York Herald-Tribune, has resigned. Howard Barnes, Herbert Drake and Robert Dana, a new critic, complete the reviewing staff. Miss Tazelaar joins Howard Dietz's publicity staff at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, writing features.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Four Men and a Prayer

(20th Century-Fox)

Romantic Adventure

Many films, notably "Beau Geste," "Under Two Flags" and "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," have blazed the path which "Four Men and a Prayer" is following. The subject matter is adventure, intrigue and romance. A strange vengeance is undertaken by four brothers who set out to clear the name of their dead father. England, the United States, South America and Egypt provide the backgrounds.

David Garth's story, which appeared as a serial in Cosmopolitan Magazine, was adapted by Sonya Levien, a collaborator on "In Old Chicago" and "Cavalcade"; Richard Sherman, associated with the preparation of "Stowaway" and "To Mary, With Love," and Walter Ferris, a helper on "Lloyds of London" and "Under Two Flags." John Forde, maker of "Hurricane," is the director.

Favorite stars, established feature players and a highly regarded newcomer will appear. Loretta Young is the only woman in the practically all-male company. The newcomer is Richard Greene, from the English stage. George Sanders, C. Aubrey Smith and David Niven are principals. The featured group includes J. Edward Bromberg, William Henry, John Cardine, Alan Hale, Reginald Denny, Berton Churchill and Barry Fitzgerald. The support lists, besides many others, Cecil Cunningham, Lina Basquette, William Stack and Brandon Hurst.

Darryl F. Zanuck is giving the film his personal attention. His record speaks for itself. Release date: April 29, 1938.

Hell's Kitchen

(Universal)

Melodrama

The fierce childhood loyalties of New York's "Hell's Kitchen" endure as the gangsters grow up to men and women. Followers of screen personalities know of "Hell's Kitchen" as the place from which James Cagney and George Raft came. Producer James Grainger believes that there is a great public curiosity in a story of "Hell's Kitchen."

Five of the children of "Hell's Kitchen" grow up. Two brothers who hated the cops become policemen. A fourth is the proprietor of a night club gambling resort where the girl becomes an entertainer. Its owner and one of the officers are in love with her. Despite murder, explosions, arsons and spectacular robberies the loyalties of "Hell's Kitchen" live to foil a diabolical plot.

The children are Mickey Rentschler, Tommy Bupp, Scotty Beckett, Dickie Jones and Juanita Quigley. Grown up they are, respectively, Victor McLaglen, Paul Kelly, William Gargan, John Gallaudet and Beatrice Roberts. Those becoming part of the melodrama of their mature lives are Joe Downing, Frank Jenks and Ed Gargan.

Borden Chase wrote the original story which Roy Chanslor adapted and Ray McCarey is directing.

Release date: To be determined.

The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

What happens in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" is that brand of unique melodramatic entertainment which causes folks to label such pictures "screen thrillers."

It's about a doctor, a scientific criminal who delves into the criminal field much as ethical savants experiment with guinea pigs and rats.

The production is adapted from a stage play which was a hit both in this country and Europe. The screen version will feature Edward G. Robinson in the title role, and pit him against Humphrey Bogart, who in "The Petrified Forest" and "Dead End," especially, established himself as one of shadowland's most sinister characters. Robinson moves in on Bogart's mob, and his robberies confound the police. Bogart's jealousy, when he senses Robinson is taking his gang moll, played by Claire Trevor, results in Bogart's death. Robinson, arrested, substantiates evidence but a jury refuses to believe his amazing confession and frees him.

The supporting company includes Allen Jenkins, Gale Page, Donald Crisp, Maxie Rosenbloom, Curt Bois, Bert Hanlon, Ward Bond, Vladimir Sokoloff and Robert Homans.

Transcription of the stage play was completed by John Houston, a collaborator on "Jezebel," and John Wexley. The director, Anatole Litvak, made "Tovarich," "The Woman I Love" and "Be Mine Tonight."

Release date, tentative: In June.

Mr. Chump

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy

Romance, humor, music, a couple of heart throbs and surprise are the principal constituents. The principals are small town folk, the hero is a happy-go-lucky dreamer, who plays a hot trumpet in the town swing band and the stock market on paper. Misunderstandings land the dreamer and his two leading hecklers in jail for "borrowing" bank funds, but prior to that the story runs a range of romantic and melodramatic incidents.

Aimed at the young adults particularly, but not without values for more mature persons, "Mr. Chump" will feature Johnny (Scat) Davis in the title role, with Lola Lane, Penny Singleton, Chester Clute, Donald Briggs, Vera Lewis, Sidney Bracy, John Harron and Jack Mower in support.

H. W. Hannerman, who contributed to "Thunder Trail," "When's Your Birthday" and "Trouble For Two," and George Bricker, who did "Accidents Will Happen" and "Sh! The Octopus," prepared the original screen play. Direction is in the hands of William Clemens, who made "Accidents Will Happen," "Missing Witnesses" and "Footloose Heiress." The swing arrangements were made by Frank Perkins, formerly arranger for Fred Waring, featured in "Varsity Show."

Release date: May 13 (tentative).

Blind Alibi

(RKO-Radio)

Melodrama

This production is out of "The Seeing Eye," an unpublished story written by William J. Cowan. The "seeing eyes," as will be demonstrated by "Lightning," grandson of "Strongheart," are dogs trained to be the eyes of blind folk. But "Blind Alibi" is not a dog story. A man's determination to save his sister's honor, at the price of his reputation and freedom, is the thematic premise.

The story was adapted by Lionel Houser, whose credits include "Condemned Women," Cliff Reid is producing, and Lew Landers, maker of "Condemned Women," "Double Danger" and "Flight From Glory," is the director.

Richard Dix, who won fame in Radio's "Cimarron," returns to the studio for the starring role. Strong dramatic parts have been his specialty.

The supporting cast is taken mainly from the studio's stock company. With one exception, Frances Mercer (Dix's sister), all have been seen in several pictures. The company includes Whitney Bourne, earlier in "Double Danger," "Living On Love" and "Flight from Glory." Eduardo Ciannelli, noted for his menace characterization, Paul Guilfoyle, Richard Lane, Jack Arnold, Frank M. Thomas, Walter Miller, young Tommy Bupp, Solly Ward and George Davis. "Lightning" has been seen in "White Fang," "A Dog of Flanders" and "Renfrew of the Royal Mounted."

Release date: May 20, 1938 (tentative).

Secrets of an Actress

(Warner Bros.)

Complicated Romance

Despite the title and the fact that the central feminine character is an actress, "Secrets of an Actress" is not a stage show.

Sophisticated romance is the theme. A producer decides to feature the actress, a hit in tank towns but a failure on Broadway, but his motives are suspected. Another man, married to a gold digger, falls in love with her. The wife, sensing profit, reneges on divorcing him, and the actress consents to marry the producer, but he sets about making things right. The wife's avarice finally gets the best of her.

The stars are Kay Francis, George Brent and Ian Hunter. In support are Gloria Dickson, who has made considerable progress since her featured debut in "They Won't Forget," Isabel Jeans, seen in "Tovarich," Penny Singleton, Dennie Moore, Rosella Towne, Janet Shaw and Gloria Blondell. Less important players include Larry Williams, Selmer Jackson, Herbert Rawlinson, Emmet Vogan and James B. Carson.

Rowland Leigh, Milton Krims and Julius Epstein prepared the original screen play. Leigh's credits include contributions to "Men are Such Fools" and "The Great Garrick." Krims' are not recorded, but Epstein did "Confession" and "The King and the Chorus Girl." The director, William Keighley, has "Varsity Show," "The Prince and the Pauper," and "God's Country and the Woman" among his many credits.

Release date: To be determined.

OBITUARIES

E. D. Sullivan Dies on Coast

Edward Dean Sullivan, 49, author and newspaper writer, died in Hollywood Monday.

Mr. Sullivan left the editorial staff of the New York Herald Tribune in 1931 to go to Hollywood to become an advisor on the cycle of crime pictures then rising in popularity. A newspaper man in Chicago before he went to New York, he had established himself as an authority in this field of books on the Chicago underworld, including "Rattling the Cup," "Chicago Surrenders" and "Look at Chicago."

Mr. Sullivan had been in newspaper work for 26 years before going to Hollywood. He was a reporter and rewrite man on the Herald Tribune from 1929 to 1930 and before that had been with the Chicago Herald Examiner, New York Herald, New Haven Register and New Haven Union. In 1933 he returned to newspaper work for a year as feature editor of the Boston Evening American. He was a columnist for the New York Post in 1935.

Reine Davies Rites

Funeral services for Reine Davies who died Saturday in Hollywood were held Wednesday in St. Augustine's Church, Culver City. Miss Davies, a sister of Marion Davies, conducted a column in the Los Angeles Examiner. She was a stage player and appeared in "The Girl Rangler" and "Canary Cottage."

Herman Whiting

Herman Whiting, for many years in exhibition in the east, died Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn. He variously managed theatres for Keith-Albee-Orpheum, B. S. Moss and for Warner Brothers in Philadelphia. Funeral services were held Wednesday at Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn.

Raymond C. Murney

Raymond C. Murney, 71, executive head of the Bond theatre, Cincinnati, died of pneumonia at his home there Monday. He was previously manager of the Hiland, Ft. Thomas, Ky., and the Gifts Theatre, Cincinnati.

Alfred W. Abrams

Dr. Alfred W. Abrams, 69, active for many years in the visual instruction field, died in Albany, N. Y., this week. He formerly was director of visual education in the State Educational Department and was the author of a book on the subject.

George Curtiss

George Curtiss, connected with the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., since 1922, died this week.

George Callahan

George T. Callahan, 70, stage director, died March 30th at his home in Lowell, Mass. He had been associated with Keith's theatre since it opened in 1911.

Charles E. Dudley

Edward A. Gartner

Edward A. Gartner, 69, in show business since he was 14, and formerly associated with the Park theatre, Brooklyn, died last week.

WALEWSKA FAMILY DROPS LIBEL SUIT

A libel suit was averted in Paris this week when Count d'Ornano, Count Jean Baptiste d'Ornano and Count Guillaume d'Ornano, and all direct and legitimate descendants of Marie Walewska, withdrew their case against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the portrayal of their ancestor in "Conquest."

The case was due for a hearing before the president of the Civil Tribunal of the Seine at the Palais de Justice. The president appointed an Expert to attend the first showing of the film there. He found the historical facts accurate and suggested that the d'Ornano family relinquish their claim. d'Ornano attended the screening and agreed with the Expert that a withdrawal of claim was the proper course.

Bureau of Mines Films Shown 102,462 Times

Motion pictures released by the Bureau of Mines of the United States Department of the Interior, showing activities of and developments in the mineral industries of this country, were given a total of 102,462 showings last year, to an attendance of 9,476,813.

The Bureau's films, unlike those produced and released by other government agencies, are not financed by Congressional appropriation, but are paid for by American industries, both in production and the provision of prints for circulation. The actual supervision of the production of the films is carried on under the auspices of the Bureau, headed by M. F. Leopold, Washington, but all traveling expenses of the bureau officials who may supervise production are paid for by the sponsoring company.

American industries to date have appropriated some $1,000,000 in the sponsorship of these films. They are shown principally in educational institutions and elsewhere in the non-theatrical field.

Most popular of the 1937 subjects was "The Evolution of the Oil Industry," in three reels, which was shown 4,938 times before audiences totaling 537,741. Other subjects deal with automobiles, safety, mining, water power, oxy-acetylene welding, explosives, excavating machinery.

UA Assigns 29 Men To Easter Bookings

United Artists has sent 29 exploitation men into the field to handle the campaigns for Easter week bookings on four of its releases. They will cover 23 dates on Samuel Goldwyn's "The Adventures of Marco Polo," four on David O. Selznick's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and one each on Alexander Korda's "The Divorce of Lady X" and "The Gaiety Girls."

Colin C. Taylor

Colin Campbell, Taylor, actor, director and playwright, who retired 20 years ago, died in Santa Monica, Cal., last week. He appeared in silent films and was the author of many stage plays.

IN COURTS

Western Electric Wins Writ in Lansing Action

In a suit brought by Western Electric Company, Inc., in the federal court of the Southern District of California, an order has been handed down by Judge Yankwich directing that a preliminary injunction be issued restraining Lansing Manufacturing Company from making two types of loud speakers. These speakers were held to infringe WE's Wente patent, covering the reproducing unit in dynamic loud speakers now widely used in talking picture theatres.

The injunction will apply specifically to the manufacture, sale and use of the Lansing Company's No. 284 and No. 285 type loud speakers and also will enjoin the company from infringement in any other way on the patent. The Wente patent has been upheld twice before in the federal district courts.

Paine Suit Trial Set

Federal Judge John C. Knox has set April 25th as the date of trial of the suit of John G. Paine as assignee and trustee of approximately 100 music publishing houses against Electrical Research Products, Inc. The suit is for $149,949 for alleged failure to pay royalties on a contract whereby the music publishers had licensed ERPI to reproduce various songs in pictures.

Cartoon Suit Dismissed

Federal Judge John C. Knox has dismissed with costs to the defendants the suit of Paramount Productions, Inc., and Exclusive Movie Studios, Inc., against Benjamin and Nathan Leder, doing business as the Leader Motion Picture Film Company. The complaint in the suit had charged infringement by the defendants of the eight and 16 mm. rights to approximately 20 Betty Boop and Popeye cartoons.

Bradleys Claim Libel

Three libel actions seeking $300,000 in damages have been filed in United States district court in Brattleboro, Vt., against United Artists and Walter Wanger Productions by Irwin C. Bradley, Franklin R. Bradley and Irwin Bradley, Jr., who allege a libelous reference was made against their family name in "I Met My Love Again." The plaintiffs allege that their family for many years has been known as "The Bradleys of Brattleboro."

Select Files Suit

Select Theatres Corporation has filed a $20,000 suit against Oscar Strauss in New York supreme court charging that Mr. Strauss breached a contract in which he granted exclusive rights to Jacob J. Shubert to present "Marietta" for five years in the United States and Canada.

Plaques Are Awarded At ITOA "Movie Ball"

Six plaques for the "best pictures" shown in the current season, to date, were awarded producing companies last Saturday at the fifth annual "movie ball" of the Independent Theatre Owners Association at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The films, selected in a poll conducted by the Daily Mirror in cooperation with theatres in Greater New York, were "Life of Emile Zola," "Hurricane," "The Good Earth," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "In Old Chicago" and "Captains Courageous."

Cups were presented to representatives acting for Paul Muni, Myrna Loy, Hugh Herbert, Joan Davis and Basil Rathbone.

Eddie Cantor was master of ceremonies.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

He will never be happy 'til they call it The Goldwyn West.

▽

In California, Hollywood means glamour and life. In Atlanta, Hollywood means a cemetery, where, every night, a minister stations himself with a megaphone, to scare away petting parties. Just as the boy friend says to the girl, "Let's have another little drinke, honey," comes the strident admonition from the darkness: "The eyes of the Lord are in every place." And honey corks the bottle and runs. The minister's name is Mr. Jolley.

RKO's foreign department is in a dither. Ralph Hanbury, managing director for the company in London, cables that "cat-burglars," prowling over rooftops, stole the receipts on "Snow White," while from Calcutta, Norman M. Durant, Indian manager, sends word that a birth in the audience upset the normal day at the nearby Broadway theatre. In this case the management rushed into print with a double-column advertisement announcing the event as "A Wonder of Wonders—Never Before Has This Happened in the Cinema World."

"It takes more than a good picture to accomplish these results," observed Mr. Durant.

Film Daily calls him "Deke" Aylesworth. It's "Deac," from "Deacon," a nickname appended presumably because his father, Barton Orville Aylesworth, was a minister.

Haverstraw, New York, chess experts chuckled when S. M. Perry, manager of the Broadway theatre, announced that free admission to see "Checkers" would be given to any person defeating him at checkers in the theatre lobby. One hundred and eight of the town's best players came to conquer Perry. He conquered the 108.

Universities, film museums, film libraries and certain historians cite Germany's "Last Laugh," 13-year-old silent film, with Emil Jannings, as the most outstanding expression of cinema art. Universal lost $85,000 on the picture when they handled its theatrical distribution over here.

Luther Wiley, 70-year-old porter on the New York Central's Twentieth Century, Limited, is retiring, after doing 20 years on the Chicago-to-New York run, and during which he portered for many a motion picture personality. William Fox once tipped him $600. Luther isn't waiting for it to happen again.

Probably being somewhat touchy these days because of the delicate political situation in Europe, the Ontario government has complained to Famous Players Canadian Corp. against the double-billing advertisement on the marquee of the circuit's Capitol theatre at Smiths Falls: VICTORIA THE GREAT—UNDER SUSPICION.

Our line of the other issue asking Charley (MPPDA) Pettijohn about the status these days of all those Kentucky Colonels, of which he was Kentucky Colonel General-in-Chief, brings a first-hand answer from the Bluegrass country of Frankfort.

When Governor A. B. Chandler took office he abolished the thousands of Kentucky Colonelcies that had been created by his predecessor, Governor Ruby Laffoon. The new Governor, "Happy" Chandler, as he is called, by ordering the abolition, literally reduced thousands of film folk to the status of ordinary citizens. Even the barbers and elevator men in the Broadway film buildings had commissions from Laffoon.

Anyway, Governor Chandler is now relenting a wee bit—he is going to name ten Kentucky Colonels, no more, no less, making 12 in all in the state. The other two were appointed one day when Governor Chandler turned his back and went a-fishin' and Senator James Wise was Acting Governor. Chandler has never forgiven the Senator for that.

The old Kentucky Colonels Association still exists, however, and many of its members will again go down to the Kentucky Derby in Louisville for their annual funfest. In better days, before the recession in Kentucky Colonelcies, the film business was practically empty on Kentucky Derby day. Trainload after trainload pulled out of New York carrying motion picture Kentucky Colonels, following Charley Pettijohn, who rode ahead, chest out, atop a big, bay brewery hoss.

Song-writer Mack Gordon's appetite is well known. He is also a self-admitted connoisseur of food and will go a long way to find some new palatable dish, as he did when he invited his melodic partner, Harry Revel, to journey with him to the Mexican village in Los Angeles. Looking for a presentable eating place, the two came to a halt in front of a spot that had an outfront sign reading: "Portos—Chili—Enchilladas."

"I think we have something here," said Mack to Harry. "That portos sounds good to me."

"What is it?" inquired Revel, who doesn't share his partner's reputed knowledge of what's good to eat.

"Don't be a chump, act wise and follow me," said Mack, and in they went.

"We'll have some portos," Gordon announced to the pretty waitress. The girl stared at him blankly for a moment and Mack, both irked and hungry, repeated his order.

"I am sorry," finally stammered the girl "I cannot give you Portos."

"And why not?" asked the puzzled Mack.

"Becoz," replied the waitress, "Portos, he eez my father."

It is a city of puritans, a nest of cliques and plots. One becomes choked there. The most impossible of love affairs are built upon the casual going out together of two players. Hollywood has astonished me; it is not only a city of lovers, it is—as Maurice Chevalier said—a boxing-ring. It is the land of work and money." Instead of the land of milk and honey?

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Rascals

(20th Century-Fox)
Comedy

Showmen whose box office experiences with her pictures were so prosperous as to entitle her to sixth position in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD exhibitor poll of Money Marking Stars of 1397 know very well what to do with this or any Jane Withers picture: bill the young lady's name in box-car letters and make sure that the chairs in the juvenile section are nailed down tight.

This time the gentlemen who plan Miss Withers' pictures have done a bit of experimenting, although the public needn't be let in on that. They've made the young lady a Gypsy and surrounded her with Borrah Minevitch and his harmonica orchestra as members of a nomadic band doing the things children are supposed to think Gypsies do, in a cross-country pilgrimage that doesn't take them too far from the scene of the interpolated romantic interest. They've stopped the story a number of times to turn on the music and they've given Mr. Minevitch the center of the screen for characteristic monkeyshines of some duration. They've incorporated a knockabout battle between two women and a knife-throwing episode in which one just misses killing the other, after disappearing promptly from the film.

All this makes for variety in the sequence of Withers vehicles. Just whether her fond public was tired of seeing her as a slightly rowdy American girl is a question to which the studio presumably knew the answer. In any case, she is less Gypsy than Withers in the part and the Minevitch ensemble pushes out some pretty listenable music, including three songs by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst.

Robert Ellis and Helen Logan ground out the story, which is about a society girl with amnesia who stumbles into a Gypsy camp and winds up by marrying an American down-and-outer previously salvaged by the band. John Stone produced, with H. Bruce Humberstone directing. Rochelle Hudson and Robert Wilcox divide the love interest without steaming it up enough to overshadow the comedy content.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, to a somewhat spotty response.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Little Miss Roughneck

(Columbia)
Comedy

There's a lot of amusement in "Little Miss Roughneck." Some comes from sound application of legitimate picture making mechanics. Some is the result of things coming up on the screen that were not intended as the story was spread on paper. Additionally, as the film runs through comedy, melodrama, romance, burlesque, suspense and excitement, there is a surprise in the person of Edith Fellows, juvenile singer, whose operatic numbers, ballad and Mexican folk song brought applause.

The motivation is hectic. "Foxine," a talented but spoiled brat, makes hash of the plans of her mother, "Gert," to make a prodigy professional entertainer of her. She also makes life miserable for a Hollywood agent, "Partridge," but he finds solace in being in love with her older sister, "Mary." "Foxine" makes a mess of a kidnapping hoax by running away. "Pasquale," endeavoring to return her to Hollywood, is endangered by a lynch-mad mob. But everything ends happily.

Margaret Irving, Scott Colton and Jacqueline Wells are adequate in their roles. Little Miss Fellows, and in the later part Leo Carrillo, carry the real meat of the entertaining but scarcely strong show.

Previewed in the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, to a confused reception. The audience appreciated Miss Fellows' singing and several of the ludicrous situations, but did not seem to understand just what should be laughed at. Sometimes it laughed when the action or dialogue undoubtedly was planned to provoke other emotions.—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Overland Express

(Coronet-Columbia)
Western

The third of this season's six Buck Jones vehicles to be made by Coronet for Columbia release, "The Overland Express," has as its background the creation of the Pony Express and its fight to outwit road agents and hostile Indians. The current offering has more of the "ridin' an' shooting" that western fans want than the other two, as well as a historical base for an exploitation campaign.

In addition to the veteran Buck Jones, the cast includes Marjorie Reynolds, Carlyle Moore, Maston Williams, William Arnold, Lou Kelly, Bud Osborne and Ben Taggart. Drew

Arson Gang Busters

(Republic)
Melodrama

A melodrama with New York locale and concerned with the Fire Department's efforts to uncover an arson gang, comedy and romance are given sufficient emphasis to balance the production. The theme is similar to those of the G-Man stories.

Bob Livingston, who plays the roles of the recalcitrant member of Republic's "Three Mesquiteers," is starred. Rosalind Keith portrays a newspaper reporter; juvenile Jackie Moran has a part; Warren Hymer's comedy is typical and Jack La Rue plays gangster.

"Bill O'Connell" (Bob Livingston), captain in the Fire Department, asks to be transferred to the arson squad. He tracks down a member of the gang but the newspaper stories of "Joan" lead to murder of the suspect. "Bill" fakes a disagreement with the Fire Commissioner, resigns, and gets into the gang because his knowledge of chemistry opens new ways to start fires to trick the insurance companies. "Bill" gets away to warn the Commissioner of a contemplated job.

Produced and distributed by Republic. Associate producer, Herman Schlom. Directed by Joe Kane. Original screenplay by Alex Gottlieb and Norman Burnstine. Production manager, Al Wilson. Photography, Ernest Miller. Supervising editor, Murray Seldeen. Film editor, Edward Mann. P. C. A. Certificate No. 4112. Running time, 64 minutes. Running time, March 28, 1938. Continental Comedy-Drama

This is a story about some people who live along the water front in Marseilles and what they think and do about an incident in which a girl, devoid of marital status, finds that she is to have a baby. Though capably performed by a group of first-rate artists, it is something of a conversational piece. The story is sufficiently different in one respect at least to warrant detailed synopsis:

"Marius," son of "Cesar," bar proprietor, has seduced "Madelon," sidewalk oyster vendor, prior to the opening of the picture, and sails away on a three-year voyage, in the early footage, without saying goodbye and unaware of the girl's condition. "Panisse," elderly, wealthy ship chandler and friend of "Cesar," asks "Madelon's" mother for her hand in marriage, likewise unaware of her condition. "Madelon," who has refused him repeatedly, tells him she is to have a child by "Marius," but will marry him if he still desires her to. "Panisse" confides in return that he and his late wife postponed child-bearing during their youth in behalf of economic security and found themselves incapable of issue when they changed their minds about the matter, wherefore he is not only willing but eager to marry her and pretend paternity of the child to be born.

"Cesar," who previously asked "Madelon's" mother for her hand in marriage to his son, "Marius," objects strenuously to her marrying "Panisse," but relents after learning of her pregnancy on condition that he be godfather and the son be named after "Marius" and himself. The marriage of "Madelon" and "Panisse" follows, and when her child is born the eldest of the "Panisse" clan, and official spokesman, calls to thank the mother on behalf of himself and the other uniformly childless members of the family for bearing a son to carry on the name.

Some months later the sea-faring "Marius" returns, intent upon taking "Madelon" away from "Panisse," learns that a son has been born to him, and readily includes the baby in his plans. "Cesar" objects to this, on the ground that while his family has included pirates and other undesirable it has embraced no sneak thieves, and "Panisse" joins the discussion at this point to report breathlessly that the baby has been exposed to scarletina and insist "Madelon" take its temperature. When it is established that the baby has no fever, the four discuss at length and with emotion the relative merits of the true father's rights as compared to those of the man who has given the child a name, security and respectability, "Cesar" finally announcing that "Marius" has contributed only love, which is cheap, while "Panisse" has given love, which is not, and taking the boy out of the picture while "Madelon" and "Panisse" enjoy the discovery that the baby is cutting its first tooth.

This somewhat extraordinary story is told in about that tone of voice at some length and with Wallace Beery enacting "Cesar," Frank Morgan "Panisse," Maureen O'Sullivan "Madelon," and John Beal "Marius." Considerable effort is made to depict the Continental attitude toward the subject matter dealt with.

The picture is capably and sympathetically performed and several tense emotional moments are attained. The story, which presents a group of finely etched characterizations, is told mostly in dialogue with little action.

Henry Henigson is the producer. James Whale directed. Preston Sturges wrote the screen play. The original play by Marcel Pagnol was entitled "Fanny." The new title was determined upon after a number of changes and is explained in a screen note as a term popularly applied to the city of Marseilles.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, California, where the largely professional audience applauded individual acting bits in the early portion of the picture and sat still and quiet for quite a spell at its conclusion.—W. R. W.

Produced by Henry Henigson. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Directed by James Whale. Screen play by Preston Sturges. From the play, "Fanny," by Marcel Pagnol. Photographed by Karl Freund. Film editor, Frederick Y. Smith. P.C.A. certificate No. 4127. Release date April 1, 1938. Running time, when seen in Westwood, 80 minutes. Adult audience classification.

The Lie of Nina Petrovna

(Lenauer)

Hearts and Flowers Drama

The fabrication concerns the undiplomatic procedure of not telling the new boy friend about the old boy friend or, perhaps, concealing from the first amour the terrible truth that his romantic place had been usurped. If Nina had told the boys the way things stood, a considerable amount of woe and film footage would have been saved, which would not have been a bad idea.

The Gallic version is of interest to American audiences chiefly because of the two leading players: Fernand Gravet, who plays with none of the charm and finish of his recent "The King and the Chorus Girl" and "Fools for Scandal," and Isa Miranda, who is now under contract to Paramount.

"Nina" is the rage of the army and when the aristocrat "Baron Engern" returns to his family and St. Petersburg, he takes the bewitching creature along with him for more than platonic reasons. Complications to this comfortable arrangement arise when "Lieut. Korff," friend of the Baron's household and confidant to the Baron, falls under the soft spell of the femme fatale. So "Nina" shoots herself.

Linguistic groups may find some historic and cultural interest in the creaky, "lavender and old lace" theme. English titles translate the sins and sighs of "Nina" into heavily laden bromides.

Reviewed at an afternoon showing at the Filmarte, one of New York's leading foreign film centers, where a sparse audience looked on the anguished sufferings of the players with stoical apathy.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Produced by J. Konigfest, Solar Films, Paris. Distributed by Lenauer International Films. Directed by V. Tourjansky. Script by Hans Szekeley and T. H. Robert. Dialogue by Henri Jeanson. The Secret of a Treasure Island

(Columbia)

Skill and Crossbones Serial

This serial is not an adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," which is pale stuff in comparison. In its newest edition of pirates' gold and dead men are two opposing camps, one consisting of a representative of the press and his daring lady companion, the other a fiendish collection of cutthroats, demented personages, a salty with a hook for an arm, and a ghost pirate with a hollow laugh arising from his hollow stomach and sure to haunt juvenile dreams for weeks, to say nothing of sliding panels, poison chemicals, underground passages and a volcanic eruption. There are also some of the best fisticuff exhibitions since "The Spoilers." The cast is headed by Don Terry and Gwen Gaze, and as villains are seen Grant Withers, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Miller, George Rosener and Sandra Karina. Elmer Clifton directed the 15 chapters. First episode running time, 28 minutes. Remaining fourteen chapters, 19 minutes each. Released March 17.

Old Towns of Normandy

(Paul P. Devlin)

Travel Short

Excursions into the quaint and lovely French province of Normandy result in some arresting pictorial views of town and country life. Visited are the fishing base of Yport for the ceremony of blessing the fishing fleet; Rouen, the historical setting for the martyrdom of Joan of Arc, and Lisieux, shrine site for young St. Therese. The material has been skillfully composed and presented.—Running time, 10 minutes.

How to Figure Income Tax

(MGM)

Benchley Comedy

The intrepid Robert Benchley, fountain of comic wisdom and exponent of the "How To" in one easy film, rushes in to explain the income tax. Mr. Benchley, with tongue in cheek, rattles off a hodge-podge on the subject and eventually gets around to whispering about how to avoid paying the tax. When last seen, in the picture, of course, Mr. Benchley is on his way to pay a visit to the office of the Internal Revenue Bureau, accompanied by one of the bureau's agents. Running time, 10 minutes.

La Savate

(MGM)

French Sport

This Pete Smith subject deals with the "hand and foot" boxing of the French. Narrated and edited in the individualistic Smith style, treating the subject matter from both an instructive and comedy angle, the sport was filmed at the Academie Charlemont in Paris, purported to be the place of origin of La Savate. Members of the Academie demonstrate the blows and counter blows of hand and foot specialists wearing regulation boxing gloves and canvas slippers. Running time, eight minutes.

The Face Behind the Mask

(MGM)

Historical Mystery

For one thing, the audience is told who did it in the very beginning of the picture. The question posed in the film is: "Who was it?" The identity of a character in French history, the man in the iron mask, who, so far as is known, was imprisoned by Louis XIV about the year 1661, has been the subject of such conjecture by historians and criminologists. As shown here the field has been narrowed to three likely persons: Count Mattioli, Nicholas Fouquet and "a twin brother of the king." The subject does not attempt to solve the mystery but is a dramatic presentation of the characters and the reason why each of them might have been the man behind the mask. The cast includes Leonard Fenn, Mary Howard, Lyons Wickland, Ival Henderson, Thomas Mills and Fred Warren. Running time, 11 minutes.

Life in Sometown, U. S. A.

(MGM)

Very Good

This is a humorous story fashioned out of some of the old outmoded laws still on the statute books of the country. When a so-called social leader of Sometown threatens to have the police chief removed from office for failure to enforce the law, he retaliates by enforcing all the laws on the statute books. One requires that guns must be taken to church for protection. Directed by Buster Keaton. Running time, 10 minutes.

Here's ONE Business that does NOT need Fairbanks-Morse Air Conditioners!

If you run a hostelry or any other kind of business exclusively for Hottentots, then you can safely do without air conditioning. Business will be good anyhow, because Hottentots don't mind the heat. But in America it's different. Here, if you want to attract folks into your hotel (or your restaurant, or office building, or bank, or barber shop, or retail store, or theatre) . . . you have to be able to offer them summer comfort!

Fairbanks-Morse Air Conditioners give you air conditioning at its best. No "refrigerator feeling." No chilling dampness. Just the thorough comfort that means perfect control of both temperature and humidity. For the comfort and health of your customers . . . and for summertime success in your business . . . COMFORTIZE with Fairbanks-Morse Air Conditioners.

From a single room to a skyscraper, F-M Air Conditioners are installed under Fairbanks-Morse supervision . . . and F-M guarantees all equipment! BOOK REVIEW

PHOTOELEMENTS AND THEIR APPLICATION, by Dr. Bruno Lange. Translated from the German by Ancel St. John. New York: Reinhold Publishing Corporation. 6x9. 297 pp., with index and bibliographies. $5.50.

Divided into two sections, one on history and theory, the other on industrial application, this discussion of photoelectronics allows the engineer to go (within, of course, calculated limits) as far as his interest in the photocell may lead him. It has been written for the industrial engineer specifically, to enable him to judge how he could well use this somewhat magical instrument in his schemes, for the automatic control of mechanical devices, for delicate measurements, and so on.

The portion dealing with the general classes of photoelements (the term applied throughout the book to all light sources of electrical energy), is nicely adjusted to the section on application, permitting, for example, the elimination from the latter of some mathematical material that might reduce its effectiveness for the practical engineer.

The first section provides an excellent general text on the theories advanced to explain the relationship between light and electrical energy. They are dealt with comparatively as well as historically and are examined perhaps as intensively as a book of this purpose warrants. The author, now a consulting engineer in Berlin, was formerly research physicist at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute.—GEORGE SCHUTZ.

ICY HELL, a newsreel cameraman's adventures, by Will E. Hudson. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company. 308 pp. Price $2.50.

Several years ago, when newsreels concentrated on pictorial coverage and paid less attention to "spot" news, shots of Alaskan shores, Eskimoes and Arctic floes ranked as annual favorites of news editors.

"Not even ten men" have visited the territory covered in his trip, Will E. Hudson, newsreel cameraman working out of Seattle, writes in this true adventure story, supported by 32 photographs, for the most part, smilingly posed by natives.

Mr. Hudson tells his story bluntly, in the first person, tracing the Arctic expedition in detail for some 200 pages.

The experiences are those of the usual Arctic expedition, repeatedly pictured in newsreels a few years ago, but in the concluding pages the story becomes more interesting, with schooner ice-locked for the winter, the party battling their way over 15 miles of frozen sea, and four members fighting snowstorms and snowdrifts over the Endicott Mountains to Fort Yukon and civilization.—RAY BARNETT.

Milton G. Kronacher, former Pathe salesman and exhibitor, who is rapidly recovering from a recent illness, will celebrate his 31st wedding anniversary next Thursday at Ellenville, N. Y.

Bruce Gallup With New Artists' Bureau

Bruce Gallup, advertising and publicity man, has been named business manager of Screen and Fashion Blue Book, New York. The agency will act as a placement bureau for talent and has a Hollywood office. A number of advertising executives and artists are on the advisory board.

Mr. Gallup has been associated with Cosmopolitan Magazine, W. W. Hodkinson, First National, United Artists, and was associated with Donahue and Coe, Inc., agency handling local and national advertising for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew's, Inc. In 1935 Mr. Gallup joined Columbia, resigning in 1936 to join Universal on the coast. In 1937 he joined General Pictures in Hollywood.

FROM READERS

INDORSES POLICY OF "JOHNNY-ONE-NOTE"

To MARTIN QUIGLEY:

I have just read your editorial "Johnny-One-Note" with much pleasure. In fact, I read all editorials with more pleasure since hearing your fine talk in Pinehurst in December.

I agree 100 per cent in that no theatre should show pictures calculated to stir hates.

Stick to your "Johnny-One-Note" policy. More power to you.—Fuller Sams, Jr., The Playhouse, Statesville, N. C.

Bronxville Club Wins Matinees

Requests by the Bronxville Motion Picture Council of Bronxville, New York, resulted this week in the local theatre, the Bronxville, announcing a new policy of a Saturday matinee with a single feature.

The council, of which William H. Van Dusen is chairman, recently conducted a survey among Bronxville families, the results of which showed the parents favored single feature programs on Saturdays, an intermission between performances.

In a letter to Bronxville parents, Mr. Van Dusen outlined the theatre's new policy and pointed out that while George Skouras, head of Skouras Theatres which runs the Bronxville house, is "thoroughly in accord with our purpose, he cannot be expected to continue for long a program which might be unprofitable."

"It is now very definitely up to you as a parent to make this experiment pay," Mr. Van Dusen wrote.

Under the new plan the matinee will be from 1 to 3 P. M., with admissions of 15 cents for children under 16 and 40 cents for adults. The program will consist of a single feature and short subjects and will be "arranged with special appeal to those 10 to 14 years old, but suitable for others." After the first few Saturdays of the experiment, Mr. Van Dusen announced, the feature will be chosen in conjunction with three council members.

Children unaccompanied by adults will not be admitted to the balcony during the program. At the end of the matinee, the audience will be asked to leave. There will be a half hour intermission.

No trailers will be shown during the matinee, parents having complained that they were too effective among children.

Saskatchewan Censor To Classify Pictures

The Saskatchewan censor, under an amendment to the Theatres and Cinematographs Act, will classify all films under the headings of "General" and "Adults Only." The amendment also provides that all releases shall be advertised as to their category.

The law is similar to one in effect in Manitoba for several years. The Saskatchewan censor sits in with the Manitoba censors at the Provincial screening room in Winnipeg but makes his decisions independently of the Manitoba board.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Business good. Picture very good. Irene Dunne was better in this picture than ever before. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—I will have to add to the numerous other reports, "A swell show." Enjoyed by all and many came to see it who had seen it. Columbia has something here that will please 100 per cent. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

CATTLE RAIDERS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A good Starrett western with good singing. Double featured and held up its end.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HEADIN' EAST: Buck Jones, Ruth Coleman—Leave it to Buck, Western style or Eastern style, he brings in the extras. Played this to above average week end. This picture gave us the first impression of new life around the Plaza. Many rave about Gene Autry, but give us Buck Jones.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HEADIN' EAST: Buck Jones, Ruth Coleman—Not a western but no one will complain, as it is first rate entertainment concerning the produce racket. Lots of comedy and plenty of action. An ideal Friday-Saturday show.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas, Stuart Erwin—A decided flop here. Picture in no way comes up to "When You're in Love," which was a honey. Stuart Erwin helps some but Melvyn Douglas doesn't even try hard. Disappointed nearly all who saw it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Madeleine Carroll, Francis Lederer, Mischa Auer—A fair picture with too much foreign accent. Played to a poor house. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN, THE: Walter Connolly, Irene Hervey—Good mystery picture. They like Nero Wolfe, but it failed at box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett, Donald Grayson—This is the kind of western that everyone enjoys seeing. Play it up big. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 11-12.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

SHE MARRIED AN ARTIST: John Boles, Luli Deste, Frances Drake—Good entertainment. Helen Westley stole the show from the rest of cast. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 9-10.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—This pleased so well that no one bothered to wonder about how new it was. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 12-13.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant, Aline MacMahon—One of those musicals that just does not go over in a small town. Business poor. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

First National

ADVENTUROUS BLONDE, THE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—An acceptable program picture that will give satisfaction on a bargain night. The story has a different twist and is fairly entertaining. Recording fair. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Rather a grim tale, with much of the locale at "The Rock." Patrons seemed interested, however. Picture well made, and the girl who played part of convict's daughter, Mary Maguire, is a comer. Running time, 64 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—An exceptionally good picture that had more drawing power than many bigger pictures. The picture is pleasing entertainment and not at all gruesome. We considered it well directed and acted. It was enthusiastically received and held up three days. The recording is not as good as it should have been. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 17-19.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—Swell imitation of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and should do business but didn't. Most glaring example of Hollywood dumbness in this picture I have seen for months. Order of the California court determining agrarian water rights was read in front of the camera off of ticker tape, and a few moments later characters of the play comment about "a chap by the name of Bell who thinks he can talk over a wire." Talk about nine year old movie age. I'll bet my nine year old knows that printing by telegraphy was not invented ahead of the telephone.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane, Johnnie Davis, Mabel Todd, Ted Healy, Hugh Herbert—With plenty of star value and two good orchestras this was a swell show. Johnnie Davis, Mabel Todd, Ted Healy and Hugh Herbert kept them laughing while Benny Goodman and his swing band and Raymond Paige and his orchestra gave us country folks some of the finest music we've ever heard. Get behind this picture and it'll make you some money. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 20-21.—Milton L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Ted Healy, Lola Lane, Rosemary Lane—One of the best musicals of the year. It has everything, clever story, rapidly paced, catchy tunes, and superb cast. Dick Powell's best for a long time and he has plenty of support. Drew very well and pleased everyone. Recording good. Running time, 109 minutes. Played February 27-29.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton, Hugh Herbert—A knockout. The finest comedy we have played in a long while. Edward Everett Horton and Hugh Herbert are very good. It won't have any trouble clearing the hurdles in any situation. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—Excellent entertainment but hardly average business, due perhaps to the title. Story very similar to "It Happened One Night."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—Give us more roles like this for Errol Flynn. Audience enjoyed it very much. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—A good picture with quite a few laughs.

About the best Joan Blondell has made. She does not draw for us, and neither does Errol Flynn. This picture will please. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—I used this as top half of a double bill. The picture is plenty strong enough to stand alone. Far above the average program picture. Friday business away above average, but on Saturday, due to other activities, the receipts were disappointing.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins—One of the best comedies we have put on our screen in many days. Robinson and Allen Jenkins especially good. Don't be afraid of it for any day in the week. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Richard E. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan—This is a good entertainment. Hard to see how they can make a five man murder case a comedy but it goes over and that is what counts. Is really a well made comedy and the title fits O. K. as those who are murdered are gangsters killed off by another gangster in a fight over stolen loot. It's a good show.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GB Pictures

SEZ O'REILLY TO MACNAB: Will Fyffe, Will Mahoney—Booked this as second picture and received great surprise. This is a real audience picture, and before the week was through had many telephone calls and repeat patrons bringing their friends. One of the outstanding comedies of the year. Played February 17-24.—R. S. Farrell, Jr., Rivoli Amusement Co., Portland, Ore. General patronage.

Grand National

HERE'S FLASH CASEY: Eric Linden, Boots Malory—As a second feature it will do. There are possibilities in this series, but cheapness of production injured this picture. Linden is forceful and convincing in his portrayals, and if backed up properly with good direction, story, etc., should come through for G. N. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 26.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

RENFREW OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: James Newill, Carol Hughes—Good picture of the Royal Mounted police. Will go over very good in small communities. This picture has some good singing, and a little bit of everything. Business fair. Played February 26-27.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

TEX RIDES WITH THE BOY SCOUTS: Tex Ritter—There is something about Tex Ritter that makes him stand out as a western star. His singing of western songs is very acceptable and with the proper material Tex would be sure to go places. This has the things that folks like in westerns. This was doubled with "Make a Wish."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—My patrons came to see Wallace Beery and went away pleased. I don't think it would hurt the "Lion's" reputation to make more than one western a year, starring Wallace Beery. I could use about six of them. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good entertainment of its kind. A little goofy, but pleased the majority. We have had just a little too many of this kind, and the cash patrons are beginning to dislike them. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 18-19.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, Mc-Minnville, Ore. Local patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—With all the publicity about Judy Garland, we still did not do any business. Picture was okay and what few saw it were well satisfied. Fanny Brice clocked a laugh every time she appeared. Played March 24-25.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeannette MacDonald, Allan Jones—Very fine picture with more of a story than we anticipated. Also, it drew better than we thought it would. Running time, 138 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HELL DIVERS (REISSUE): Clark Gable, Wallace Beery—I played this one against strong tent show opposition and did better than average business. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 14-15.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, James Stewart, Rose Stradner—Another smash performance from Edward G. Robinson. I hated to see him get "rubbed out," even if he did deserve it. He is a wonderful actor. Rose Stradner very good and so is James Stewart. Some of the ladies thought it too rough. A man's show, but plenty good. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 18-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, James Stewart, Rose Stradner—One of the best of this type. I hope to see more of Rose Stradner. She is very pretty and a very fine actress. Do not be afraid to boost this one. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—There is nothing wrong with this picture, but it played to one of the lowest grosses in the history of the theatre. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 7-8.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler—A very good show. Mickey Rooney and Virginia Weidler steal show. Played to good biz. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 15.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—The best Crawford in a long time. Spencer Tracy also "tops." About his best, in my opinion. Joan looks so much better in this than "The Bride Wore Red." Do not be afraid to boost it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 17-18.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

MAN PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell—A good picture, but some of our customers were disappointed. The stars are quite popular here, but story weak. Will naturally do a nice business due to cast and good title. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 22-23.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Billie Burke, Brian Aherne—Here is another sleeper on which you can go all out with everything you have. We played it just before "The Awful Truth," which I knew was a good comedy, and our people much preferred the first picture. It is a better picture by far than "Topper" and will do a whale of a business if properly advertised. Played March 25-26.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: James Stewart, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore—Used on a Sunday change and did a little above average business due to better than usual Monday-Tuesday receipts. This and "Double Wedding" have been the best received of the dozen or more Metro pictures we have used this season. Comments on this were especially fine.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Tom Brown, Lionel Barrymore—Three cheers for the Navy, as represented by James Stewart, Robert Young and Tom Brown, with Lionel Barrymore in one of his most sympathetic parts. This pleased 100 per cent. They don't make them any better than this one. With the Naval Academy at Annapolis as the background, the picture is crammed full of action, thrills and romance and is one of the best of the year. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 11-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—Best picture of the past year. A great good will builder.—Star Theatre, Malad, Idaho. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Played this behind competition two miles from here to fair business. Picture very good. Running time, 122 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Mighty fine production from MGM. Nelson Eddy thrills again with his wonderful voice, and Eleanor Powell does some good dancing. Frank Morgan very good in this. Running time, 122 minutes. Played January 27-28.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

SARATOGA: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore—An entertaining and fitting finale for Jean Harlow. We will miss her glamour, her personality and expressiveness. Other stars may rise but she has left her mark on our consciousness. In this picture she gives her usual sterling performance capably assisted by Clark Gable. It is a drama of the racetrack with two of the most thrilling horse races ever filmed. The comedy is handled by Una Merkel and Lionel Barrymore, with Frank Morgan and Cliff Edwards contributing. All in all, it's a swell entertainment for everyone. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 26.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

THIRTEENTH CHAIR, THE: Dame May Whitty, Madge Evans, Lewis Stone—Very good mystery. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 10-11.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Sophie Tucker—This is a fine picture and introduces a new star, Ronald Sinclair. Sophie Tucker is "tops" and so is Rooney. Will satisfy your race horse fans. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 12-13.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Unusually fine entertainment but the least draw I have had from the Metro picture this season. I think the title is somewhat anti-box office.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Here's a natural. Extended run in any spot. Lay on heavy; she's a honey. Running time, 103 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

ROAMING COWBOY, THE: Fred Scott—Here is an up and coming western star. In this he sang songs more suitable for western pictures. Fred Scott is a husky he-man type, an ideal physique for a western star. This pleased the western fans. This was doubled with "Heidi." Those who came to see Shirley Temple stayed to see this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

BLAZING BARRIERS: Edward Arnold, Jr., Florine McKinney—A story of the CCC and a good one. The draw was, however, very poor and would have set a low midweek record except for the 100 or more CCC boys that came more than 20 miles to see this. Lack of stars probably hurt the draw.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIFR, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison, Otto Kruger—Wonderful outdoor picture that drew well and sent everyone home happy. Otto Kruger turns in a fine performance. Many comments on beauty of the outdoor background. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd—Just a poor western for double bill only. Running time, 57 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford—Another double bill feature, too short to justify playing alone, but we did it anyway and business was off because it had no drawing power. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Andy Devine—Did a fair business and pleased. A little bit of everything and not much of anything. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer, Ray Milland—Divided opinions but all agreed that it was beautifully made. The theme of the story and the drunkenness did not please a lot of them. But it was wonderfully acted, and the color was beautiful. Yes, we'll agree it was a better picture than we thought it would be. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 20-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth—If Mae would quit her strutting and her Mae West tone, believe she would go over. But just one of her pictures now and then will go very far with our patrons. This was a good story and she had grand support. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Winninger, Lloyd Nolan, Walter Catlett—The cleanest of the Wests, so clean that it is disappointing. The supporting cast of Winninger, who stole the show, Lowe, Nolan, Butterworth and Catlett took the load from Miss West's shoulders and saved her from oblivion. Do not expect too much from this. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—Paramount was on location near here when we played this picture and panned this picture considerable, but we did good business with it regardless. Randolph Scott was at his best but evidently he can do better. He's the star of "The Texan" to be released in September and we hope he proves to be good. Played February 27-28.—Milton L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

ON SUCH A NIGHT: Grant Richards, Karen Morley—No drawing power. No star value. But it was a good melodrama holding interest throughout. Business off on account of draw. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Bob Burns, Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Easily Paramount's big show of 1938. I would rate it ahead of their "Plainsman." Comments all very fine. Certainly a show that you can be proud to present.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Republic

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Everything is smooth sailing when this boy, Gene Autry, hits town. This "Big Show" is a lot better than most of these so-called "Musical Westerns." Best business since Xmas. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

DOOMED AT SUNDOWN: Bob Steele—Picture is just a western. Running time, 53 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

ESCAPE BY NIGHT: William Hall, Anne Nagel, Dean Jagger—Although the stars in this picture are not known so well around here, the picture in itself was very good. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 12-13.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE ROCKIES: Three Mesquiteres (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune)—Where have I been sleeping by not booking this one before? This is one of the best westerns we have ever played in our house. The story is entirely different than any we have had. With the wild animals in it, the audience was loud in its approval. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Leo Carrillo, Ann Dvorak, Tamara Geva—A very "punk" show. Leo Carrillo almost drove everyone crazy with his same lines all the way through. This picture has a few songs that help a little. We paid about double what it was worth. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak—This was good entertainment and the people liked it. I ran it against "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" and it was the better show of the two and did the best business and I am sure cost less money, so what more can you ask for.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY NO. 1: Gene Autry, Ann Ruth-erford—Everyone enjoyed this very much. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 19.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

ROUND UP TIME IN TEXAS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This one was a terrible disappointment for all the Autry fans. Sound was terrible and print was the worst I have ever received from Republic. Running time, 62 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Polly Rowles—This is a real box office event. Priced low enough so something is left for the baby's shoes. It is a musical western as the title implies, and those come who like such, and they are plentiful enough that the theatre manager can also enjoy the show. I hired a chap to conduct an amateur entertainment contest with this. He built it up for five bucks and I gave six dollars in prizes and we had sixteen acts and fifty dollars extra business on Friday. The picture stood up and we did the best Saturday business we have done for weeks. No charge for this idea, you bought it when you paid for your HERALD. And I want to give Republic credit for selling a desirable product at a reasonable price. I have seven more Autry's coming and I know I will cash in on this successful introduction for seven more showings.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BREAKFAST FOR TWO: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall—This picture is fairly amusing, but just didn't seem to click. The story and dialogue were fairly good, but I think the stars were miscast. The recording was so bad that you had to guess at half that Marshall said. Not much draw. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—This was very well received. Slapstick comedy and plenty of it. Star of the production was the leopard playing the title role.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

CONDEMNED WOMEN: Louis Hayward, Sally Eilers, Anne Shirley—This was a good show, came out OK and had a lot of action in it. They made 75 minutes of heavy trouble, however, and should have dragged in a couple of laughs. There is plenty of happy-go-lucky character stuff in a prison and I feel the boys in Hollywood fumbled a chance to make this a great show by leaving Marie Wilson or Helen Broderick out of this cast. What this industry needs is brains in Hollywood and after twenty years of contact, including a flock of national conventions, I am sure you find a higher average in a group of small town exhibitors than in the production department or official New York family.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Played with Amateur Night so business was good, due to the vaudeville. Had more kicks on this than on anything we have run, although we did have a few say they liked it. Looks like it was made to have a good run in the British Isles.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Can't see why the other exhibitors criticized this picture so severely. Although it wasn't as good, perhaps, as the previous Astaire-Rogers pictures, it was still a very good production and went over well here. Outstanding song "A Foggy Day." Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Richard B. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT: Sally Eilers, Preston Foster—Made for a double bill house, lower bracket, and made a total failure of it. Everything that RKO puts out seems to be touched by a blight. No entertainment in it. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 9-10.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT: Sally Eilers, Preston Foster—When the laughs start, they come thick and fast in this clever story of the puzzle picture craze which gets a new angle at the hands of racketeers. Built essentially for laughs, it really gets them. Reminds one of Keystone comedy days, but, after all, audiences seem to enjoy comedy, so that's that. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 24.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Jack Oakie, Ida Lupino, Margot Grahame—This is one of those pictures that turned out to be a grand piece of entertainment. It seems that when the producers are not so sure of themselves, they do the only thing left. That is, they hide a picture behind a none-too-inviting title and hope for the best. This one will stand alone or can be used to fill a double bill program. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 16-17.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen, Juanita Quigley—Nice entertainment but slow and appeals mostly to children. My nine-year-old puts on a better fight every day than Bobby Breen did for a few thousand dollars. If Hollywood can't portray a real kid fight how can they expect to make anything look real. Ned Sparks pulls this one out of the mud for 75 per cent of the audience.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons—Made for a top feature, but missed by a mile. Why don't they get wise to themselves, and make a few hit pictures, or give up entirely? Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 20-21.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie—This is a picture that every exhibitor should see before booking. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 10-11.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Basil Rathbone, Marion Claire—A very pleasing heart interest drama. Bobby Breen, while he has not the story as good as "Rainbow on the River," does all that is expected of him in the line of singing and acting. It was rather a novelty to see Basil Rathbone in a sympathetic role, and he plays that kind of role with conviction. Marion Claire, who has the role of Bobby's mother, is new to me, but we should like to see more of her as she is very charming and a most pleasing personality. The business on this was a fair average. Lent and the nice weather which is calling people to the great outdoors seems to be having its effect on theatre patronage.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

NIGHT SPOT: Allan Lane, Joan Woodbury—OK for double feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Doubled this with "Ali Baba Goes to Town" and it is the usual material that these stars make a specialty of. Our patrons laughed a good deal while this was on, so they must have enjoyed it. Business on this, considering the times, was a very good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker—A hit in big capital letters. It did good business and everyone went out still laughing. It is an ideal picture for a small town and will do well in the larger spots, too. Music is outstanding. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Ann Sothorn, Gene Raymond—I do not mean to say that this picture is as good as the producers hoped it would be when they started it, but it was ideal for our prevue crowd. I have played all the Sothorn-Raymond vehicles, and would say without qualification that it is the best to date. There is one pleasing song that deserves special mention, "It's Sleepy Time in Hawaii." Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 19-20.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou—A very good picture and enjoyed by the greater majority. Hepburn did a nice job and I hope she is finished with her former roles. Ginger Rogers very good and so was Andrea Leeds. Running time, 92 minutes. Played January 9-10.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou—Good entertainment, although a little heavy on the dialogue. This is probably RKO's outstanding show to date for this season. Nevertheless, I established a new low record for a Sunday opening picture with this. Probably partly because the next town was running "Happy Landing."—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothorn—Pictures like this one are the exhibitors' reason for double bills. Running time, 65 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland, Walter Abel—An agreeable surprise, this picture. It possesses those things which make for audience appeal. Hopkins has a good role and puts everything back of it. Ray Milland looks like a good bet for RKO.

Very amusing in spots. We gave it a Sunday opening and it stood up. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 27.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, June Lang—Seemed to please those who came, but as it had been shown all around here the gross was very low. The digs at the New Deal got a lot of laughs. Some very clever trick photography. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, June Lang—A flop from every angle. Eddie Cantor is washed up in this town. They do not go to see him any more. This picture was very weak; this dream stuff spoils any picture. Parts of the picture will get by. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—This is probably Cantor's last picture. It isn't worth the money it cost. Played March 20-22.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—Eddie Cantor has given us a picture packed with entertainment. It keeps moving in a zippy, peppy manner from start to end. No one could take much offense with the good natured kidding of the New Deal. F. D. R. himself would get a good laugh out of it, and one sequence, that of the Supreme Court Judges, seems in bad taste, but that scene is so short that it can easily be eliminated and it passes in a short time. The magic carpet scene alone is worth the admission price. This was doubled with Wheeler and Woolsey in "On Again—Off Again." Business on this, considering the times, was a very good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: William Powell, Annabella—Fine entertainment. Extra playing time in high class spots. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: Annabella, William Powell—Fair picture in our estimation, but nothing to rave about. Annabella talked better in "Wings of the Morning" than in this one, whereas she should have showed lots of improvement in her English (United States English). Probably the producers made her talk with an accent so we would know she was a foreign star. Anyway, we had lots of complaints about her French accents. Played March 21-22.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—This is a pleasing program picture. The whole cast is good and it is quite entertaining. Claire Trevor is splendid, as usual, and deserves more good breaks than she has ever had. Recording good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand (Continued on following page)

Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTRY CHAIRMAN, THE (Reissue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—Will Rogers still does a good business for us. This picture pleased our patrons just as much as it did the other time that we played it. Hope they reissue four more Rogers pictures next year. Played March 26.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

DAVID HARUM (Reissue): Will Rogers—Ol' Will still packs 'em in. Did swell business on prevue. Wish we had more to run. Played March 19-21.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—A swell comedy. Played to good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 8.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers, Thomas Beck—Played midweek and did almost weekend business. I consider this one of the best from this great little actress. When you can do almost Sunday business on a Wednesday, there is no doubt about Miss Withers' rating among the first 10 stars in box office pull.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HANDY ANDY (Reissue): Will Rogers—Our beloved Will Rogers. These reissues still draw a fair average. "Handy Andy" is one of Will Rogers' best.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—A little long but otherwise fine. Sonja further proves she's good and Ameche is "tops." Will draw plenty. Had opening of skating rink as opposition but did well both nights. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 23-24.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—A swell show from every angle. Played to good business. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—Truly one of Shirley's best. Drew exceptionally well and delighted everyone. The whole production is beautiful. The settings, photography and recording are of the finest. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 6-8.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—This picture drew tops for us and she is number one star for us in drawing power. This picture deserves all the nice things that have been said about it. For general all-round entertainment for the masses this is hard to beat.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOT WATER: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—"Jones Family" series. Pleased generally, but why make a series subject as popular as these are so short? Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders, June Lang—No one complained and no one cheered. Seemed to us that some story inconsistencies could have been avoided. Otherwise, interesting and well made. Shanghai locale.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders—Entertaining all the way.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

LANCER SPY: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders—An exceptionally good program picture, but too heavy. Will not do much business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 7-9.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—Didn't draw up to par. I got a bad print, but Simon's singing would be terrible anyway. Won't draw enough to pay your overhead. Played March 16-17.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Stuart Erwin—The circumstances under which we played this were not advantageous or conducive to good business, but compliments were more numerous than usual. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 17-18.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—Business fair. Picture not as good as other Tarzan pictures. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 21-22.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

WESTERN GOLD: Smith Ballew, Heather Angel—A very poor production from Fox. They should spend more on westerns if they're going to try to produce. Ballew proves he's no cowboy or singer either. I agree with another exhibitor, looks as if someone is doing his singing for him. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 14.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

United Artists

52ND STREET: Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Kenny Baker, Ella Logan—Fair picture with excellent music. Although it is good entertainment all the way, it deserted us at the B. O.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

52ND STREET: Ian Hunter, Leo Carrillo, Pat Patterson, Kenny Baker—A pretty good picture, but cost us too much money. The stars do not have a box office draw. Leo Carrillo much better in this than "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round." He kept them laughing. Nice work by entire cast. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

52ND STREET: Ian Hunter, Pat Patterson, Kenny Baker—Although I had the first showing on this for a radius of many miles, it did not do average Sunday opening business. In fact, it grossed the least of the ten United Artists pictures I have run from the 1937-38 lineup. Comments were good and nothing wrong with the picture, except, perhaps, the lack of box office names.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—This is entertainment. A real story, real stars, real punch. Everybody happy. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 20-22.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—Didn't hear of a person who didn't enjoy this. We had the tough luck to run into three days of perfect spring weather and the call of the outdoors was greater than that of this good picture. We enjoyed it, though, and am sorry that more didn't see it. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

STAND-IN: Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell—Terrible is the word for it, and so was our business. We paid too much rental and lost money. Out patrons do not like the stars in this one and the story is terrible. Running time, 91 minutes. Played February 24-25.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Fredric March, Janet Gaynor—A lovely show and I brought it back for a second showing which proved more profitable than the first. It did more than average business on a midweek and at less than average rental.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S "VOGUES OF 1938": Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—This is a beautiful production from every angle. The story is light but very amusing, the settings and color are so lovely that they alone are a treat. Women especially will love it, but it should entertain everyone. It drew well and pleased. The recording is the best. Running time, 108 minutes. Played January 1-3.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BLACK DOLL, THE: Nan Gray, Donald Woods—Fairly good Crime Club production. Business ordinary. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—This is a bad one. Don't pay as much money for it as they ask. Played March 12-14.—B. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SMOKE TREE RANGE: Buck Jones—The usual thing from Buck Jones. Business fair. Running time, 59 minutes. Played March 11-12.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

SOME BLONDES ARE DANGEROUS: Noah Beery, Jr., Dorothea Kent—Double featured and just got by. If we do not get better B pictures for double feature we will kill this as a drawing card.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WESTLAND CASE, THE: Preston Foster, Carol Hughes—Fairly good. Nothing to write home about. Biz not so hot. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—Alice Faye "tops" and is really a sweetheart in this one. Some very good songs and dance numbers. George Murphy always good. This is one you will not be ashamed of. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

FIRST LADY: Kay Francis, Preston Foster, Louise Fazenda—Without a doubt the poorest picture we have ever played. Four double reels of chatter, chatter. Nothing ever happens. Louise Fazenda brings a smile occasionally, if anyone is awake. My father used to own a large poultry farm and nothing has ever remind me of it as much as "First Lady." By all means, skip it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MENACE: Boris Karloff, Marie Wilson—Just another picture that should be on the weak end of a double bill. Of course, they can't be all Super Specials, but a few more laughs in this would have made it better entertainment.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis—Played it to a grateful Bank Night crowd. This simple picture with a good plot and a few good characters was much better conceived and constructed than the majority of the musical specials I've played lately. My patrons like a down to earth picture with action that they can believe and not feel contempt for. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis—Not so good but better than the business. Wayne is not a star yet and this picture was just an average attraction. I won't run dual bills, but the producers are sure making me want to. It classes along with Gene Autry's in cost of production at a "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" price to the exhibitor. Any small town exhibitor who buys more than 20 per cent of any major company's product is wrong.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Was afraid of this for my small town situation. Didn't need to be, as I found that even the lower classes enjoyed it. The picture is well deserving of its rating as the best picture of 1937. Business was about an average, although I expected it to be away off. Running pictures like this raises the standard of your house.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins—Excellent home-spun comedy with swell hill-billy music. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Nat Pendleton—A hill-billy comedy drama that is a novelty, and good entertainment every minute. Every member of the cast is excellent, the comedy is really funny and musical numbers good. Recording good. Drew very well and pleased. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 20-22.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Frank McHugh, Louise Fazenda, Weaver Brothers, Elvira Weaver—Of course, this is a natural for my locality, "way down hyar in the Ozarks." A dandy picture, too. Weaver Brothers and Elvira very good. Don't know how this will go over in other localities, but if slapstick comedy is well accepted this will fill the bill to perfection. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Weaver Brothers, Elvira Weaver, Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda—Weaver Brothers and Elvira have always been popular down here. They are the original hill billys and know how to put it over. We asked Warner Brothers to let us have this picture three days, spent some extra money advertising it, and made the old box office ring like bank night. You can't go wrong on this picture. Its got everything. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 22-24.—Milton L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. General patronage.

THEY WON'T FORGET: Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson—An entertaining picture that packs a terrific wallop. Did above average business and heard no complaints, although several people wanted to know who the actual murderer was. Most of them formed their own opinion before the picture was half gone. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 8.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Basil Rathbone—Perfect acting by sterling stars, but such a lot of nothing about nothing. Some of the comedy dragged in and painful, rather than funny. Charles Boyer talking too fast and with an unintelligible accent. Those of our patrons who braved the unpronounceable and, to most, unmeaning title, were not slow to show disappointment. Running time, 98 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—Sophisticated comedy that didn't do so well here. Was very good in spots but was too long. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 7-10.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—Definitely not a small town picture. Everyone complains of the dialect. The picture itself is very good. Better listen to reason, Hollywood, if you want to put these pictures over. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VARISITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring and his Orchestra, Ted Healy—Did very well in my situation and pleased everyone. Fred Waring and band and Ted Healy were outstanding. It will hold up in any spot. Running time, 120 minutes. Played January 2-3.—Richard D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring, Ted Healy, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane—What this guy Powell has got I don't know, but he sure has got it. People went away raving about this picture and came back the second time to see it, but from a personal point of view this picture is dull, draggy, etc. The football formation in last reel pulled the whole show out of nothing to really something. Running time, 121 minutes. Played March 13-15.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Shorts

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A very good color cartoon. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

BON BON PARADE: Color Rhapsodies—Excellent musical colored cartoon. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 5 (2nd Series): One of the best of this series of shorts. All college songs and greatly enjoyed. Personally, I like all of the Community Sing shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

DRUG STORE FOLLIES: Roscoe Ates—Excellent musical with the inimitable stuttering of Roscoe Ates. Good in any spot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DRUG STORE FOLLIES: Broadway Follies—An excellent vaudeville reel featuring Roscoe Ates, Carolyn Marsh and others. Very novel setting adds to its entertainment value. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FIT TO WIN: Special Sport Thrills—Very good and very appropriate for spring. Worthwhile.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FROM BAD TO WORSE: Charlie Chase—Columbia has the answers when it comes to comedies. This is no exception.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KRAZY'S NEWSREEL: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Excellent imitation of the real thing. Let's have more of these. Don't pass it up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ROOFTOP FROLIC: Broadway Follies—Terrible.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 11—Good. Will bring back memories to our older fans. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Educational

ASK UNCLE SOL: Song and Comedy Hits—Excellent single. Some very good talent in this short. Cleverly done. Some good laughs, novelty dancing, etc. Recording good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GETTING AN EYEFUL: Two-Reel Comedies—Just a fair comedy. Will get by on a week night and that is all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HIS OFF DAY: Terry-Toons—An OK black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Louise Massey and Westerners—One of the best singles we have every played. Caused much favorable comment. Something a little different and well done. The recording is excellent. It is a pleasure to show one like this. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—This is a very entertaining short. Some good talent introduced in a rather novel way. Recording very good. Educational shorts are all excellently recorded. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—Fairly good musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—Walter Hollowell, Rex Theatre, Mammoth Spring, Ark. General patronage.

PLAYBOY NUMBER ONE: Willie Howard—Terrible, as is all of the Howard comedies. We have not had a good one. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatre, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

FOUR CONTRIBUTORS ADD NEW REPORTS

From Oregon and Georgia, North Dakota and Idaho, this week come new reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me."

Reporting for the first time are these showmen:

Robert S. Farrell, Rivoli Amusement Co., Portland, Ore.

Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedar-town, Ga.

Returning to the reporting showmen after at least a year of absence are the following:

Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D.

Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho.

Read the reports of these showmen in the Department columns of this issue.

WHO'S WHO?: Niela Goodelle, Lee Sullivan—We have found all the Niela Goodelle two-reel musicals to be very good. She can really put over a song. Recording very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Erik Rhodes, Virginia Grey—This is not only a credit to Metro and Erik Rhodes, but it presents a girl who ought to have real star possibilities. Running time, 21 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Poor with a capital Poor. Running time, too long.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CANNED FISHING: Our Gang—Not as good as other Our Gang's of recent date. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

CARNIVAL IN PARIS: Musical Comedies—Good entertainment. Should please all. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—This Katzenjammer Kids cartoon OK. Different and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNTY HOSPITAL (Reissue): Laurel and Hardy—Laurel and Hardy have lost out in our town. So many walk out when their comedy starts. This one good if people like them. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

DECATHLON CHAMPION: Peter Smith Specialties—The story of Glenn Morris as given on the screen sounds like a Horatio Alger story, but it is interesting nevertheless. It shows his trials and tribulations in mastering the various sports necessary to a Decathlon Champion and his ultimate success. Worthwhile. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—An excellent colored short and very timely.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LIFE IN SOME TOWN, U. S. A.: M-G-M Miniatures—A very clever reel and our audiences got quite a kick out of it and many laughs.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE MAESTRO: Tabloid Musical—A good little short featuring that diminutive comedian, Jerry Bergen. There is a dance team in this that is "tops." Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAIL AND FEMALE: Our Gang—Our Gang always enjoyed by everyone. They have done better than in this one, but it will please okay. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF THE WEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good short of western beauty.

Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1938: Musical Comedies—Very Good. Audience very pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

PACIFIC PARADISE: M-G-M Miniatures—A very good musical short featuring Cliff Edwards, Harry Owens' Royal Hawaiian Hotel orchestra and a bevy of hula-hula girls. Good addition to any program. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PERFECT DAY, THE (Reissue): Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy—A reissue that got the laughs. I thought it unutterably silly and gave a sigh of relief when they disappeared from view under the water, but it seemed to please the customers. They want a laugh these days. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PALOOKA: Our Gang—A fine Gang comedy that was enjoyed by adults and children. Good any day of the week as this series usually is. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PIPE DREAM: Harman-Ising—An excellent colored cartoon. The three monkeys come to life.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STROKE OF GENIUS: Musical Comedies—Another miniature that pleased. Not out of the ordinary but OK.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, NO. 2: M-G-M Miniatures—These reels are different and please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, NO. 3: M-G-M Miniatures—Come down off your high horse, Leo. This series is too highbrow for us in the sticks. It may be good for class audience, but it is the bunk for the masses. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another Crime two-reeler that pleased. Good for any spot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS VS. MANN FIGHT PICTURES: Although this is good, it failed to bring in any extra customers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Paramount

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—Very fine. Hurrah for Paramount for keeping these subjects about like they were in the beginning.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—One of the poorer cartoons put out by Paramount. Color will get it by. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

INSTALLMENT COLLECTOR, THE: Fred Allen—Very poor. Put Allen back on the air and let him stay here. His subtle wit did not register here. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAGIC ON BROADWAY: Screen Songs—Sorry that Paramount is getting away from the original makeup of these subjects. They were grand. Now they are putting a dance band in to fill up the space and cutting down on the cartoons. Let's have some of the old!—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAGIC ON BROADWAY: Screen Songs—One of the poorer shorts by Paramount. We cannot complain because with us the entire group of shorts have shown a decided improvement over the past season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OH KAY, RHYTHM: Herbie Kay—A swell dance band number. This boy sure can produce the music. Let's have some more song and dance soloists and duos with these dance band reels.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OH KAY, RHYTHM: Herbie Kay—Good musical act with Herbie Kay and his orchestra playing some good numbers. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL NO. 4: Again Paramount scores with this pictorial. It is interesting and very diversified. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Finds Obscure Stoppage Cause; Saves Eve. Show

ELKHART, INDIANA—"It would have to be on Bank Night, when the house is packed, that something would have to go wrong," declared Sid Holland, manager of the Elco Theatre here.

"We had to run on one machine, and the audience began to get impatient. I got in touch with our Altec man, D. A. Swanagan, in South Bend, at 6:25 P.M. He arrived in my theatre at 6:55 P.M.

"After examining the machine, Swanagan had the show going on two machines within thirty minutes.

"There were no customers lost."

Altec offers the exhibitor a service supported by the largest group of technically trained men of any organization in the field. Altec services the largest number of theatres, has the largest number of stock points, and the largest inventory of emergency parts. Let the Altec service inspector in your vicinity explain the advantages of an Altec Service Agreement.

ALTEC SERVICE CORPORATION

Series)—One of the finest Grantland Rice subjects we ever used. In fact, we do not remember using any single reel in many months with as much human appeal as this one had.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RIDING THE RAILS: Betty Boop Cartoons—OK but nothing much to it. Pleased. Running time, six minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

DOWN THE RIBBER: Leon Errol—This is a good comedy, quite a novel idea, and Errol is very good. Recording terrible.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FROZEN AFFAIR, A: Condor Musicales—A very good piece of entertainment. The ice skating by these entertainers is really marvelous. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WINDWARD WAY: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Good sailing short. Went over good here by Lake Koronis. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF THE NEWSREEL CAMERA-MAN SERIES: We like this series very much. Nothing that we play holds the attention of the audience more than these. They are liked by old and young. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

DUMB CLUCK: Oswald Cartoons—A good black and white cartoon. Play it with double feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AIN'T WE GOT FUN: Merrie Melodies—These Merrie Melodies cartoons are second to Disney. They should be longer.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MY LITTLE BUCKAROO: Merrie Melodies—Swell. Nice color and tone. Play this. Good cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

NEWSBOY'S NOCTURNE: Broadway Brevities—A very pleasing musical short. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEW, NO. 5: The best pictorial that Vitaphone has delivered this season. Ice cream making was very interesting and also jockey subject. The fashion revue in color appealed to the women. A pictorial that was well chosen and enjoyed by all. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RUSS MORGAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A good band reel featuring "The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SHE WAS AN ACROBAT'S DAUGHTER: Merrie Melodies—This old Merrie Melody got more laughs than anything we have run this season. Running time, 2 reels.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Ken Murray, Oswald—Ken Murray and Oswald are very popular and always get the laughs. This was not up to their standard, but better than most comedies. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Ken Murray, Oswald—Patrons seemed to enjoy this, so evidently pleased. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town rural patronage.

WHAT THE WORLD MAKES: Colortour Adventure—One of the best travel tours Vitaphone has made. Very appealing to all audiences. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—This serial had good story but poor direction. Too much walking around and turning around slows it up. Actors just fair. Flying lessons help get it by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Refunds Saved by Inspector's Quick Arrival

NEW YORK CITY—"Something went wrong with the sound at the beginning of the last feature," said L. Derene, manager of the Terrace Theatre, of the Harry Brandt Circuit, recently. "I put in an emergency call for the Altec service man at 10:14 P.M., and in exactly thirteen minutes Inspector Olan W. Hancock was in the lobby. "The sound had gone entirely dead, and the patrons had begun demanding passes and refunds.

"Seeing Hancock, I announced to the audience, 'The sound engineer is here, everything will be all right in a moment.' He found trouble in the main amplifier, and cleared it instantly. Then Hancock informed our usher, 'The show will be ready to start as soon as the audience is seated.'

"Due to Altec's prompt action, the picture hit the screen at 10:30, exactly 16 minutes after I first called; we saved from 250 to 300 refunds."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

MIDDLESEX VILLAGE AND TOWN

With the deadline for the first quarter of the 1938 Quigley Awards set for April 16th, a review of the material submitted shows a decided increase in the number of campaigns submitted from the smaller spots. This department has always opined that there is no absolute division that establishes an idea as completely small or big time. The wealth of ingenious exploitation angles included in the entries received from the "middlesex villages" confirms our contention that the big guys had better look to their laurels.

Theatre men in the lesser communities report activities that are of necessity practically costless and might well be adopted by their big-time brother showmen. The day when the alert-minded small-towner looks to the larger city campaigns for ideas that he can utilize in his own situation has passed. He has thrown the kiddie car in the discard and is striking out on his own.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

Held in high regard, according to our readers who have expressed themselves, are the Round Table newspaper ad layouts reproduced weekly in this section. Members, we are informed, study these ads with interest and profit, and theatre men ambitious to turn out ads that click at the boxoffice are frequently able to overcome composing room limitations with a high degree of showmanship.

It is the aim and purpose of this department to help men help themselves and toward that end, we extend an invitation to ad men in the field to forward samples of their outstanding displays for reproduction in our pages.

WE GO A-VISITING

A short trek over the bridge to Brooklyn for a visit with the Frisch and Rinzier-Randforce boys found that circuit a beehive of activity. First stop was to call on Supervisor Irving Berman at the new Rainbow Theatre, where we noted with interest the treatment accorded his lobby displays. Each frame shone with personality as it put across his messages on coming attractions. Incidentally, the Rainbow is an atmospheric house and the latest to be acquired by this fast-growing chain.

From there we stopped to visit with Manager Ed Siegal at the Alba, who was in the midst of a Flash Gordon campaign, which included an outstanding tie-in with the Hayden Planetarium. Displayed in his lobby was the mechanical version of the eclipse of the sun, borrowed from the Planetarium with appropriate card tying in with the serial.

Taken in tow by Mr. Siegal and his wife, we continued on over to the Commodore where Louie Fishkin holds forth. There we found the cash customers gazing upon Louie's "Wells Fargo" display in the form of a miniature frontier depicting the Batavia Inn, locale of the picture. Toy Indians, cowboys, horses, guns, saddles and other paraphernalia typical of that era completed the effective atmospheric flash.

Glad of the opportunity to have chatted with you boys and look forward to a return engagement.

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN

'S funny thing, but wherever you find Bill Hendricks, you find trick exploitation. And we have Bill's solemn word that this one was no gag. During the recent engagement of "A Slight Case of Murder" at the Warner Downtown Theatre, Hollywood, a holdup man appeared in the manager's office and proceeded to do a little cleanup job. A policeman summoned by an usher appeared on the scene and during the ensuing scuffle shot the thug. As Bill says, it was in such perfect timing with the shooting going on on the screen, that the entire episode passed unnoticed by the audience watching the picture. And we believe it.

WHERE-EVER

Recently reported here was the promotion of manager Ben Cohen, Loew's College Theatre, New Haven, to Loew's MGM house in Calcutta, India. Before shoving off for foreign lands, the last "duty" of this enterprising theatreman was to pay a visit to Round Table headquarters. With the earnest entreaty that his mailing address for Motion Picture Herald be changed to insure its presence coincident with his arrival, Ben assured us he'd feel at home with an old friend by his side.

Round Table In Pictures

Described elsewhere in the Round Table section are complete details on O. F. Sullivan's "Boy of the Streets" campaign at the Civic Theatre, Wichita, Kansas. Attractive lobby and front with huge cutouts of Jackie Cooper were employed in addition to a smash newspaper and exploitation campaign.

Created by Manager Maurice K. Gable, Warner's Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia, is the lobby display designed for "The Girl of the Golden West." Through the courtesy of the MGM Studios, Gable secured 50 special stills that were taken before and during the actual filming of the picture. Having to do with everything from story presentation down through the editing, these pictures proved interesting to patrons.

Above is night shot of the front of the new Odeon Theatre in Leicester Square, London. The opening production show was Alexander Korda's first technicolor picture, "The Divorce of Lady X," which ran for four weeks. Note tremendous illuminated signs.

To left is four by seven foot cutout standee of Mickey Mouse used by Milan Todorov, assistant to Charlie Bierbauer at the Colonial, Allentown, Pa. Display is used in lobby ahead of engagement and moved out front when attraction is current.

Admitted that it's not every theatre that is named the "Bruin," so the gag is not applicable to all houses, but here's how Dave Martin, assisted by George Bierdemann, exploited the opening of their Fox Bruin in Los Angeles. Bruin pictured is nine feet and sits on an eight foot high-chair, copy on card inviting patrons to call friends.

Novel lobby display was created by M & P Theatres advertising head, Harry Browning, for use at the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, in connection with the opening engagement of "Jezebel." Set up a week in advance, display included full page breaks for the picture from Time, Life and the Redbook magazines.

Theatre Opening

Various were the contests used by Bill G. Serrao in connection with the opening of the Avenue Theatre, Brackenridge, Pa. Weeks ahead, patrons were invited through newspaper stories to submit names for the new house, cash prizes going to winners. When the name was finally chosen, Serrao continued the contest by inviting those who had submitted entries to write essays for tickets on why they chose a particular name.

Stories were run daily, building up interest in the theatre with construction details, bicycle parade was held opening day and merchants came through with congratulatory double truck.

Silver Skates Trophy

Through promotion worked out by Jack Granara, RKO Keith Memorial Theatre, Boston, tieup was effected between the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Skates Derby and Sonja Henie. Star wired sports editor of paper proffering congratulations to the paper for sponsoring the derby and offered a special prize for the best girl intermediate figure skater.

Papers carried stories on the promotion together with art work, trophy was on display in lobby during event and later presented to winner at the carnival.

Radio Slants

Cashing in on the personal appearances of Dick Powell at the Cleveland Auto Show, Manager Ed Miller and Press Agent Manny Pearlstein for that date at Warner's Hippodrome covered the Public Hall, where the show was held, with four huge displays. Ten thousand photographs of Powell with special imprint thereon were distributed in addition to practically all newspaper interviews having some reference to the new picture. Four days ahead of opening special "Hollywood Hotel" radio program was covered with an announcement regarding the opening, plug was given gratis as part of an extensive tieup with WGAR. Another radio hookup was with local drug chain who gave the picture daily announcements on their one hour show over WHK.

Newspapers cooperated with abundant art work, stories on Powell and Benny Goodman and five and tens distributed imprinted star photos.

FIRST QUARTER DEADLINE SOON!

The First Quarter in the 1938 Quigley Awards Competitions ended on March 31st.

Your material, in order to be eligible to enter the Competitions for this First Quarter must be in our offices no later than April 16th. This will give you ample time in which to clean up any odds and ends in your entries before submitting them for judging purposes.

Address your campaigns to Quigley Awards Committee, Managers' Round Table, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York City.

Remember, your entries must be in this office no later than April 16th!

House Staff Aids

James Stiles, Grand Theatre, Perth, Australia, to publicize opening of his "Plainsman" date offered staff cash prizes for the best adopted suggestions, thus insuring complete cooperation of his house members. Entire lobby was dressed with displays calling attention to the opening, special matinee was held for children from local orphanage, tieup arranged to convey the kiddies in bannered busses and opening day parade was held. Stiles also tied in with local movie ball, sending eight girls and boys over dressed in "Plainsman" attire, newspapers covered event and bannered fleet of cabs covered streets.

Playing a "Pop-Eye" short on the same bill, the theatreman offered prizes to kids submitting best "Pop-Eye" rhymes; prize also was awarded to person wearing most novel costume at masquerade party, man dressed as Sinbad taking down top honors. Another contest successfully engineered was for kiddies in which the theatre offered prizes for the best Pop-Eye wool dolls submitted.

Quick Thinking

Loew officials are congratulating William Frank, assistant manager of the Oriental Theatre, Brooklyn, on his presence of mind in averting a fire at the theatre one night recently. With the lobby crowded, Frank noticed the artificial flowers in a vase had caught fire from a pipe emptied by a patron. Quickly extinguishing the blaze, the alert employee restored order while the public merrily continued dropping their shekels at the boxoffice window.

"Apple" Festival

For the thirteenth consecutive year, City Manager Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, has been appointed Director of the Press Relations in connection with the Apple Blossom Festival to be held the latter part of April in Winchester, Va. Tom Baldrige, Capitol, Winchester, will be Director General of this year's festival and William B. Rives acts as assistant to Boucher. For the first time since its inception, theatrical people are at the head of the Festival and real showmanship will be applied.

Magazine Tieup

As part of Frank Shaffer's "True Confessions" campaign at the Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., 30,000 miniature copies of the True Confessions magazine with photo of Lombard on the cover were distributed to patrons three days ahead of opening. Theatre and dates were imprinted on inside cover and entire county was canvassed with these booklets. Co-operating news dealer also placed photos of the star in magazines and planted window cards prominently.

Sample stills were secured from Modern Merchandising Bureau and used for window displays and at theatre, showing Carole Lombard and Una Merkel in hats and gowns worn in the picture.

For "Man in the Barn," Shaffer mailed letters to all college and high school teachers stressing the historical fate of John Wilkes Booth as depicted in the opus.

Personal Appearance

Morris Rosenthal, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. garnered some extra publicity on his "I Met My Love Again" date, when Louise Platt, appearing in the picture, made a personal appearance on his stage. Reception was held for the press at leading hotel and star was interviewed over WICC, papers came through with art work and stories in addition to Morris writing the event up in his "Star Dust" column conducted in local paper.

Times Star ran a two-day contest on "How I Met My Love" with prizes going to those submitting best replies, winners names were published in cooperating paper following week together with their entries. Co-op page was run, "what manner of woman" heralds were distributed and all women's organizations were called day ahead advising them of the New England premiere.

THEATREMAN CONDUCTS COOKING CLASS ON PARAMOUNT STAGE

Well-Known Home Economist Operates School; Patrons Pay Regular Admissions

Reported as proving highly successful for Manager Joe Goetz, RKO Paramount Theatre, Cincinnati, and clicking mightily is promotional slant running currently on Friday afternoons in the form of a cooking school, which Goetz has tied up with the "Pay'n Takit" chain of grocery stores, a subsidiary organization of the Kroger Grocery and Bakery Company, whose headquarters are in Cincinnati.

Unlike other schools of this kind, it is not free. On the contrary, the school is conducted in connection with the regular program at the standard scale of matinee prices. Jean Allen, home economist of the Kroger Co., and a food authority of national reputation, is in charge. She conducts the classes and operates a practical kitchen, with all modern appliances, on the stage, where various menus are prepared in many ways, each accompanied with detailed explanation, pamphlets, etc. Twenty-five baskets of food, each with an estimated value of $4, are given as "door prizes" each week, in addition to distribution of the food that is prepared on the stage. The school is to run six weeks. At the end of that time an electric refrigerator and other electrical household products of comparative value will be given away to holders of tickets distributed with the admissions. Moreover, a series of appetizing menus, specially prepared in printed form by Miss Allen are given each patron for trial at home. These menus contain a coupon, good for a 10-cent reduction on certain articles purchased from any store in the grocery chain during the particular week.

Merchant Plugs School

The "Pay'n Takit" Co. run large newspaper display advertisements on the school, and it also is good for an abundance of white space as publicity by the Cincinnati dailies. Additional plugs are provided by large placards spotted on the outside and inside of all cooperating merchants' stores, while each package that goes out contains a neatly printed invitation.

The schools only have been in operation three weeks. Manager reports attendance was tripled at the first school and since that time it has caused overflow audiences, with several hundred turned away. Shown at right is Manager Goetz surrounded by baskets and one of the cooking school's pupils.

Incidentally, Goetz, who organized the Cincinnati Bookers' Club three years ago, recently was reelected president of that organization for the third time. The club, composed of bookers from all of the Cincinnati exchanges, has for its purpose the promotion of goodwill among the members, the discussion of ways and means to improve booking and the exchange of ideas on the many subjects related to the business. It is purely social in character and designed to eliminate any jealousy, envy or enmity. It is believed to be the only club of its kind in the country.

GOETZ PRESENTS COOKING CLASS MEMBER WITH GIFT BASKET

"Ranger" Gets Complete Coverage in Loew Houses

Perry Spencer and Eddie Dowden of the Loew's Theatres home office publicity department went to town in exploiting "The Lone Ranger" when it played the Loew's theatre greater New York circuit of sixty houses.

Five special announcements were secured over the chain on regular broadcasts of the "Lone Ranger" every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. 150 special six foot lobby displays were promoted from the Gordon Baking Company plugging the serial, and autographed photos were given away to kiddies attending opening episode. 250,000 color contest heralds were used at the schools for the kiddies to color, for which "Lone Ranger" sweaters, and pen and pencil sets were awarded. The fleet of 200 trucks of Silver Cup Bread Company, covering all Greater New York, were bannered with attractive three color selling copy, including theatres and play dates.

Parades Featured

Special parades and contests were held in various theatres with kids dressed in cowboy and Indian costumes. Attractive promoted prizes were offered for the best dressed kiddie. "Lone Ranger" street ballyhoo men and trick rope cowboys were used for the entertainment of the children at several matinees.

RKO Founds Round Table Club in Holland Office

The Dutch branch office of RKO Radio Films has founded a Round Table club. Every exhibitor there having a contract with RKO is joining the membership and each member is expected to send his exploitation campaigns executed for RKO pictures to the managing board of the club of which Mr. Max Westebbe, manager of RKO, is president. Mr. A. de Hoop, director of the Dutch Motion Picture Federation, Mr. Max Tak, well-known publicist and broadcasting official and Mr. Hans Cohen-Barnstign, manager of the City Theatre in Utrecht are also on the board.

Best campaigns receive an award, whereas the best campaign of the year will be awarded with a money prize. Special room in the RKO office has been reserved for members and the Dutch newspaper men will regularly publish results. The club has been founded to promote the winning of the Ned Depinet drive.

Cooking School Tieup Effected by Shannon

A no-cost cooking school tieup has been arranged by Manager Chuck Shannon, Belmar Theatre, Pittsburgh, with local merchant. Conducted from his stage, entirely gratis, the theatreman has promoted valuable prizes for giveaway, all cooperating merchants plugging the school in their ads.

For "Stage Door," Chuck tricked up his outside lobby doors to appear as entrance to star's dressing rooms. Each door bore the name of one of the stars in the picture, designating their respective dressing rooms. While for "Navy Blue and Gold," Shannon used a display board on which was planted a special one-sheet on which the "Join the Navy and See the World" slogan was reversed to read "Join the World and See" followed by picture title.

"Let's Hear From You!"

Bendslev Publishes Own Newspaper

Since the Community Playhouse, Wellesley Hills, Mass., opened its doors, sixteen years ago, managing director Adolph Bendslev reports having used various types of house organs, and during that period has developed a mailing list of better than 3,000, all requested and regularly checked. Six months ago this theatreman started the Community Playhouse News, handling everything except the actual printing and mailing, from the theatre. Maintained as a weekly, running ten pages, the paper carries Hollywood news, brief biographies of stars, reviews on forthcoming pictures.

Charging one dollar per inch for ads, Bendslev has turned over the selling of the advertising to cooperating printer and is now concerned only with the editing.

Cooper Addresses Wichita Audience from Hollywood

O. F. Sullivan, manager of the Civic Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, for "Boy of the Streets," put over a reported first-time gag that created considerable interest. By special arrangement with Monogram and Southwest Bell Telephone Company, hook-up was made enabling Jackie Cooper to address a Sunday matinee audience from Hollywood. Tieup rated a two-column picture of Cooper and story break on front page of the Wichita Eagle.

Newspaper contest was also planted with that paper, with passes offered to readers who could identify roles played by Jackie in other films. Photos, in character, accompanied the announcement. Large four-column ad, several two-column and teaser ads broke in local dailies in advance and during engagement.

"Let's Hear From You!"

There's Gold In Them Thar Hills

Tieup was effected by Dewey Mousson, Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., for "Gold Is Where You Find It" with local jeweler, who, gratis, furnished the theatreman with 1,000 boxes, each containing gold-bronzed pieces of white chalk packed in cotton batting. Each day girl would cover downtown area dropping these boxes as she circulated throughout the various stores. Guest tickets were awarded those presenting the boxes intact to the theatre, pass good only on day when found. Cooperating merchant's name was printed on the box and from all accounts the gag created plenty of word-of-mouth advertising.

Quigley Awards Information At a Glance

Awards will be made quarterly; that is, your material will be judged on a basis of three-month periods. You "start from scratch" every three months. Quarterly competitions run: WINTER: Jan. 1-March 31; SPRING: April 1-June 30; SUMMER: July 1-Sept. 30; FALL: Oct. 1-Dec. 31.

There are five different classifications under which you are eligible: "A", cities of 250,000 or over; "B", cities of 100,000 to 250,000; "C", cities of 25,000 to 100,000; "D", cities under 25,000; "E", suburban or subsequent runs.

Silver Plaques will be awarded to each entry voted best in the above five classifications. An additional citation will be voted for the best entry selected as best from among these five winners, regardless of classification.

Citation of Merit Sheepskin Certificates will be awarded for the runner-up in each classification. First and Honorable Mention Sheepskins will also be voted entries not awarded plaques of Citations of Merit, but deemed worthy of recognition.

Every contribution from the field to Managers' Round Table that has to do with Advertising, Exploitation or Publicity in the theatre during each three-month period will be considered in determining the Quarterly Awards.

Complete campaigns are not necessary, although they are desirable.

Institutional campaigns such as anniversaries, festivals, new theatre openings, new season drives, kiddies' clubs, civic tie-ups, etc., will also be eligible for recognition.

Selections by the Judging Committee will be based upon an entrant's efforts during the three-month competition and not upon any one single picture campaign, as heretofore.

The Quigley Annual Awards will be continued in 1938, the winners to be chosen from among entrants earning the highest ratings in the year's four quarterly Competitions.

It is important and of vital interest to you that you keep sending material from week to week or such time as you have activities ready, since these Awards are based upon the most consistent efforts of entrants over the entire three-month period. In other words, each man may submit as many campaigns and material of any sort as he cares to during each Quarterly Competition.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

manages the Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., for Warner Brothers. Robbins started as usher at the Fox Michigan Theatre, in Detroit, then went to Philadelphia, starting as usher at the Boyd, and after a period at other Warner houses was assigned as chief of service at the Stanley. At that post Roy remained until he was promoted to assistant and then transferred as manager to his present spot.

is at the West End Theatre, New York City, and certainly close enough to Round Table headquarters to be sure to drop in on his next day off and get personally acquainted. Dannenberg started as doorman at the Brooklyn Paramount and went from there to Loew's 175th Street. For a brief time, this theatremen left showbusiness, but the lure was too great, and we find him back again at the Prospect Theatre, Bronx, as chief usher, then assistant and finally manager of that house until he was transferred to the West End.

is located at the Lowe Theatre, Sterling, Kan., doing the advertising for the Lowe-Star Theatre circuit. Gene has worked in Las Vegas, New Mexico, joined the army for three years and on being discharged held a position as displayman for eight years with Montgomery-Ward, but later reentered showbusiness with his present circuit.

now manages the Park Theatre in Cincinnati, Ohio, for Associated Theatres Circuit. Laile for 16 years worked in film exchanges there for both Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount. For the past 12 years Laile has been at the Park, from which spot we expect to hear from him shortly.

joined the Round Table as assistant manager of the Sooner, Varsity and University Theatres, working for our good friend Lew Chatham. However, before we had a chance to welcome him formally on this page he resigned to enter the exhibition business for himself with V. A. Buddy Walker at Cleveland, Okla., operating the new Pix Theatre.

is no stranger to our section having already reported his activities which we have run from time to time. Moon manages the Palace Theatre in Athens, Ga., for Lucas and Jenkins and started at the Tenth Street Theatre, Atlanta, as assistant manager. After a short time, Corker was promoted to manager of that house and was then transferred to Macon to manage the Capitol for three months until the Cascade was completed in 1935. Corker managed that house until June of 1937 when he was transferred to Athens as city manager in charge of the Palace, Georgia, Strand Theatres there and the Strand in Elberton, Ga.

MARDEE, on Monday, March 28, to Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Dinerman. Little girl was born at the Good Samaritan Hospital. Proud daddy is regional director of advertising and publicity of RKO Midwest, in Cincinnati.

is the assistant manager of the University Theatre, Norman, Okla. John started working for Lew Chatham when he left school, in the capacity of relief usher, advancing to relief doorman, doorman and then advertising manager and office manager and treasurer of the three houses there until his recent promotion. Well, Kniseley, all we can say is that we'll be sorely disappointed if between you and Chatham, Norman isn't well represented in our pages.

GALON R. MILLER

is the house manager of the Eagles and Colonial Theatres in Wabash, Ind. He began his career as an operator with road shows but withdrew from showbusiness to study medicine. However, after a year in medical school he decided his operating efforts were better suited in theatrics and so bought his own show. Within a year he sold the show, again left this field but after remaining away from the theatre for two years accepted his present position.

who now manages the Custer Theatre in Charleston, W. Va., was only 12 years old at the time he started to work at the Ohio Theatre in Athens, Ohio, where he remained for seven years. He then went to Fastaria and Bucyrus as assistant manager for Schines. His next post was in Lexington, Ky., at the Ben Ali and he then did a broad jump to Hollywood. After a one year stay on the Coast he retraced his steps to Columbus and we now find him doing a swell job in Charleston.

did double duty back in 1928 when he interspaced his school hours with work at the Midland Theatre in Hutchinson, Kans. Starting at the bottom by ushering, putting up advertising, changing signs on the marquee, working in the art shop as well as acting as doorman, he found himself in 1936 on the managerial rung at the Strand Theatre in the same city. A few months later he became manager of the Fox there and proudly announces it is only six years old, has 1,400 seats and is one of the best equipped houses in Kansas. Well, then, Ray, do your announcing often and loudly.

claims he started show business in 1930 in Raleigh, N. C. Two years later he became manager of the State Theatre, Greensboro, and after a short while was shifted to the new Forsyth house, in the same capacity, in Winston-Salem. It will be mighty nice hearing from Ben and we hope it is not at too infrequent intervals.

who manages the Metropolitan Theatre, Baltimore, Md., states his official contact with theatre work began in 1933 as a relief usher and errand boy but it wasn't long before he was employed as a full-time usher and then promoted to doorman. In 1936 he received a managerial post at the Rialto and a year later was changed to his present theatre, the Met. Let's hear from you soon, Harold.

is in Kansas City, Mo., managing the Gladstone Theatre for the Fox Midwest Theatres. This is Wallace's first managerial job and he out there in K. C. where we have many active Round Tablers. How about starting a little lively competition, Ralph, and keep us posted on how you are putting over your exploitation slants at the Gladstone?

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 106

Question No. 106 was: (A) Explain three ways in which a tube may go bad. (B) What three conditions may cause hum in an amplifier? (C) What three kinds of trouble may be caused by overloading an amplifier? (D) What trouble might be the cause of feed-back in an amplifier?

The following made satisfactory replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; H. Edwards; J. R. Prater; G. E. Doe; C. Oldham; L. Cimi-koski; W. E. Limmroth; C. Champney; R. and K. Wells; L. H. Kelley; W. H. Edmonds; O. H. Schmidt; T. F. Bochart; J. A. Zachritz; L. F. Hayes; M. and J. Devoy; J. J. Petersen; R. Feasel; H. Bunker; E. Sulpezio; W. Schoeneman; G. Busdis; C. Umphry; L. and F. L. Saylor; H. T. Todd and L. E. Dodson; J. Morton; S. Hewitt; R. H. Carter; T. W. Redhouse; C. H. Lowrie; P. and L. Felt; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; H. S. Benjamin; J. B. Braten-burg; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; D. Coates; H. T. Randolph; D. and W. Porter; L. B. Daniels; F. W. Brandenburg; L. G. Simmons; E. Exline; B. L. Kent; L. Johnson; A. C. Greene; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; M. D. McGuire; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; L. M. Richardson; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; C. L. Brant; H. W. Reagan; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; C. A. Whitlock; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; G. L. Goss and Son; K. Erwin; J. W. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson; H. T. Boyd; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; Q. R. Rolton; F. M. Brown and R. Davis; T. and W. Turk; L. D. Tomlinson; R. M. Schnider; L. R. Whitmore; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; S. U. Lamont; S. L. Maxwell; W. V. Henderson and H. M. Jackson; K. L. Brant; A. D. Lonby; L. J. Rubin; T. D. Williams; G. T. Vieller; W. B. Myers and L. G. Dillon; R. L. Sampson; G. & L. B. Brown; E. M. and F. Wentworth; R. W. Groton; T. Miller.

Best answers have been selected as follows: (A) J. R. Prater says: "The burned-out filament is one of the three ways asked for. It seldom happens in actual service because since the filaments are quite heavy, unless subjected to unreasonably high voltage, they ordinarily will last until the tube has become useless from other causes. Another is loss of emitting power. Most tube filaments are especially coated to increase their power of emissions, which coating, as well as the filament itself, gradually deteriorates with use. Emitting power may be measured by measuring the space current in the plate circuit. A tube that shows low space current when grid bias and plate volt-

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 112

(A) What condition is indicated by a commutator "flat"?

(B) Just what is a commutator and what is its function?

(C) What is the effect of compound winding of motor field magnets?

(D) Just what is a compound wound generator or motor?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some social questions can be found in that book.)

age are normal, has passed the peak of its useful life. It should be replaced.

"A third way in which a tube may be 'bad' is loss of vacuum or undesirable gasses in the tube. This usually induces abnormally high plate current; also, it produces a blue glow that tends to flicker at high volume. However, if the glow is on the glass instead of between the two electrodes, and space current be normal, there may not be sufficient gas present to be harmful. Do not replace or discard a tube merely because of blue glow. Many of the large power amplifier tubes glow when operating perfectly. Discard if space current is too high, or if replacement improves sound quality, especially at high volume.

"Besides these three ways a tube may be unfit for further service if its elements be jarred out of place, broken or shorted together. D. C. filaments may sag or stretch, whereupon they will vibrate if or when the tube is subject to any mechanical vibration, which tends to cause what we call 'microphonic' action and introduces foreign noises into the sound."

(B) R. and K. Wells say: "Amplifier hum may be set up by (1) a defective rectifier tube or one that is burned out (any unbalance as between the two sides of a rectifier circuit side causes stronger pulsation in the d. c. than filters can iron out; this sends to the circuits presumed to receive smooth d. c.—some of the grid circuits and the plates of amplifier tubes—a pulsating current instead, which produces that well known hum we all love!); (2) sound circuits that pick up hum by inductive action (amplifier wiring is planned to avoid this; in making repairs it often occurs that the careless or not well informed workman may so misplace some of the wires that hum results because of inductive action); (3) bolts or rivets holding transformer core laminations together which have become loose, permitting vibration of the sheets composing the core sufficient to interfere with proper magnetic action and to cause hum; (4) hum also may be caused by broken-down condensers or filter chokes. Some manufacturers use an electrolytic type of condenser that tends to weaken with age because of chemical action."

Since space is limited I take the liberty of selecting items from three answers to Section C, as follows: Possible causes of amplifier heating are (1) break-down in insulation, (2) short in a condenser, (3) a ground may cause limited rise in temperature.

(D) O. H. Schmidt says, "An open-circuited by-pass condenser may cause feed-back, hence oscillation (motor-boating or howling) in an amplifier. Terminals of by-pass condensers and continuity of wires leading to them should be checked when amplifier action seems in any degree unstable."

M. and J. Devoy say, "Feed-back results from changes in plate voltage caused by changes in grid voltage. The condition is caused by what is known as 'capacitance' existing between the grid and cathode of every tube, which same in fact constitute a form of condenser. Changes in grid voltage may be and usually are fed back to the grid by this capacitance, but without appreciable harm resulting, except if too-high amplification be attempted. If this be done, a three-element tube will distort sound and it will do so by imparting a stronger amplification to some of the frequencies than to others. If the condition be made still worse, howling will result, the same emanating from the frequency amplified to greatest extent. The tube is then oscillating. It is acting as a converter, using its d. c. power plate supply to generate a. c. of audible frequency. It is a condition that will never occur if the amplifier be so planned that maximum volume control cannot cause any of its tubes to oscillate, or even to distort sound to any serious extent."

Colombia Circuit Owner Sails

Giuseppe Di Ruggiero, owner and operator of the Di Ruggiero circuit, in Colombia, which includes the Rex, Colombia's largest and newest motion picture theatre, sailed Thursday night from New York on the Conti Di Savoia for a two-month vacation in Nice, France. On his return Mr. Di Ruggiero plans to visit New York to arrange for personal appearances of Hollywood stars in his theatres.

Wilmer and Vincent circuit has signed an RCA Photophone Service contract.

ASKING FOR FASCISM

THE current uproar about a certain motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," and its publicity in the pages of Life, regardless of the immediate eventuations, represents a considerable damage to the status of the amusement screen.

No matter what the adjudications may prove to be, an importantly large sector of the audience has been given the impression that the public screen is being, or is in peril of being, made a forum of sex education, a place for the promulgation of lore of life entirely outside of the purposes for which people and their families have been attending the motion picture theatre.

That is no help to the makers and vendors of amusement pictures.

More importantly perhaps, in the larger sense, this alleged enterprise partakes of the nature of many current manifestations which are precisely invitations to Fascism.

Freedom of the screen, and freedom of the press, are rights only so long as they are used within the limits of the mores of society.

The arts, like people, are permitted free expression until they get too free with the rights of others. Then they are locked up. For the arts that is censorship.

For the nation that would be Fascism—society in a strait-jacket.

"MACHINERY"

THE motion picture industry while enjoying continuously a tremendous publicity for its wares, also, concomitantly, suffers from far too much exposition of its machinery.

Too many people are always wanting to fool with the machinery and monkey with the way it works.

Just now we have a specimen on the table in an outgiving from the hand of Mr. W. Ward Marsh, who has been these many years the able film editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Says Mr. Marsh:

"It looks to me as if the pendulum of benefits obtained by the screen's self-imposed censorship had started its backward swing. . . . It (the motion picture) stands again at those stupid cross-roads, bogged down by a self-imposed censorship far more effective, more vicious, and more destructive to its future than anything it did in its not sinful but stupid days of adolescent talkies."

M R. MARSH does not list any pictures he has found to his taste ruined by the Production Code Administration. He does list some old pictures he says could not be made today. That is neither proved nor conclusive.

It is plain enough that a good many pictures were made which should not have been made, at least in the manner that they were made, else there would have been no such condition as that which made obvious the need of the Production Code and its administration.

No evidence is adduced that the Code operations are today in any way different in either method or effect from the days of its early service, of which it would appear Mr. Marsh approves.

The motion picture industry and its production community of Hollywood is today more firmly than ever convinced of the fundamental utility and necessity of the Code function. Mr. Marsh would ask the industry to throw away this part of its instrumentation for tending to its own business. One can not but understand that he is opposed to a commitment to decency because he seems to think it is getting in the way of art. That is more becoming of a soap boxer in Greenwich Village than the proper Mr. Marsh of the staid Plain Dealer.

". . . of course," he says, "the films declare that censorship is not practiced, but let a member of the Hays organization try to film a story which has not the approval of the Hays organization and see what happens in penalties and in threats. Or for that matter let a producer, not a member of the Hays organization, attempt to make a picture off the beaten path, and see what happens. It can show you where the 'pressure' has been as insidious as it is absolute and vicious."

M R. MARSH must have a very sensitive pressure gauge, up there in Cleveland. The pressure apparently has not sufficed to keep from the screen a number of pictures currently in circulation devoted to such matters as syphilis, childbirth and lesbianism.

It would be well indeed for the general status of the screen, as the public's amusement, if responsibility for all such product could be surely and immediately placed with the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor thereof, but unhappily no matter who does what on the screen the organized industry gets the benefits of credit and blame alike. To the great public the institution is just "the movies." In protection of that great preponderance of investment, and preponderance of responsibility, the principal makers and purveyors of motion pictures have a device known as the Production Code Administration.

Mr. Marsh objects to it because it still works.

It was probably one of those days when a piece had to be written and this seemed a provocative subject. It is no help.

WHAT PRICE ADVERTISING?

THE previewing this week of a highly pretentious and feature length picture on a great industrial process gives accent to some of the apprehensions of the organized motion picture industry engaged in selling entertainment.

The problem is not entirely new. For many years in various fashions advertisers have been reaching both for the instrumentation of the camera and for access to the ready made, and amusement assembled, audience of the theatre screen. For the last few years there has been some showing of short

Foreign Product

From a small group of less than 50 theatres, the number of houses in the United States that show foreign pictures has increased during the last three years to 182. The increase has taken place while Hollywood producers have been seeking a way of surmounting the numerous barriers, in the form of taxes, quotas, censorship and money export restrictions, raised by foreign countries. The 182 theatres which show foreign product are located in 78 communities.

A list of the theatres is included in an article, starting on page 12, which discusses the foreign picture situation.

Veto

Herbert H. Lehman, New York governor, vetoed the Quinn dog-racing bill this week. Opposition to the measure, which would have legalized greyhound racing in four counties, Erie, Monroe, Nassau and Westchester, was voiced by exhibitors in the northern part of the state and in Long Island who flooded the governor with telegrams. They based their action on the fact that when dog racing was held in Nassau, Rensselaer and Erie counties there was a noticeable slump in theatre admissions. The bill, introduced by Elmer Quinn, senator, was designed to raise approximately $275,000 in taxes by imposition of a $300 tax for each racing day and 10 cents on each admission.

pictures with commercial messages in perhaps as many as five thousand theatres in the United States. There are claims for circulations as high as sixty-five hundred screens, which would be nearly half of all the theatres.

If this grows into feature length products, for which the exhibitor receives a fee, or other valuable consideration, for his screen time, the consequences are likely to be many and ramified in many directions. Neither the costs nor the profits will be directly and immediately calculable.

Just now it would seem a reasonable assumption that the amusement standards of sponsored pictures could hardly be expected to maintain a higher average than the Hollywood entertainment product. That being true, and publicity being what it is, how long would the public be willing to pay current amusement prices for the purpose of examining some screen advertising?

Liberal Credit

Two plans for liberalizing credit to exhibitors and other small business men were advanced this week. The first, proposed by Harry Brandt, head of New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would permit exhibitors to borrow up to $25,000 for theatre modernization and rehabilitation and for the installation of new equipment. The second plan was in the form of a bill introduced in the House in Washington by Henry C. Tiegan, from Minnesota. If adopted, it would permit exhibitors to borrow money on notes and on their "personal character." Under a Federal Housing Administration plan, exhibitors now are eligible to borrow up to $10,000 for permanent improvements and for immovable equipment.

The plans are explained on page 17.

No Tieup

Reports that Monogram would take over the physical distribution of Grand National films until Grand National completes its financial readjustments were denied in Hollywood this week by W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president.

New product plans of both Monogram and Grand National appear on page 26.

Daylight Time

Daylight Saving Time, widely opposed by exhibitors on the ground that the system decreases the "dark" period during which theatre business is at its peak, will be adopted in at least 118 more communities this year than last. Going into effect April 24th at 2 A. M., Daylight Saving Time will be observed, according to law, in New Hampshire and Massachusetts and in other states by local option. The greatest increase in the number of communities planning to employ the advanced time is in New England states. All communities in Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Delaware will observe the time change. New York State shows a decline of three localities as compared to last year when 328 communities used Daylight time. Other state comparisons, giving the number of communities planning to use the changed time this year and the number that used it last year, include: Pennsylvania, 107 and 90; Maine, 145 and 76; Vermont, 31 and 13; Illinois, 98 and 93. The Michigan totals are the same. In Denver, after exhibitors opposed a move to adopt Daylight Time, the City Council voted a referendum for 1939.

Loan Repaid

Repayment of a loan of approximately $2,000,000 was made to the Bank of America on Tuesday by Universal. To move, it was understood, marked the conclusion of negotiations by Universal for new financing. Although payment of the loan was officially announced by the company, officials of Universal would neither deny nor confirm reports that new banking arrangements have been made for new season production financing and for supplying working capital for other purposes. A consolidated statement issued by the company at the end of the fiscal year, November, 1937, showed a balance of $1,954,000 owed to the bank. The loan originally was made in 1936 when a revolving fund was set up and used exclusively for production purposes.

Quota Questions

That representations have been received by the British Government from the Government of the United States on the effect of certain aspects of the new quota regulations on the American film industry was confirmed by Captain Euan Wallace, Parliamentary secretary of the Board of Trade, in answer to a question in the Commons.

The intra-trade dispute over grading and rentals reached a climax Wednesday when CEA members empowered the General Council to act against the distributors through publicity and by publication of its own grading of "A" films.

On and On

Almost to be classed as a perennial, the William Fox bankruptcy is again before the United States supreme court, this time on petition by Hiram Steelman, trustee, for a review of a decision of the third circuit court of appeals holding invalid an order by the referee in bankruptcy, authorizing Mr. Steelman to examine the books of the All-American Corporation.

The petition for review cited that Fox's bankruptcy schedules showed liabilities in excess of $9,500,000, but the assets turned over to the trustee consisted of $100 in cash and certain notes and securities of "little or no value."

"The efforts of this bankrupt and these respondents to obstruct your petitioner and the creditors of the bankrupt have been before this court upon more than one occasion in recent months," he commented in his petition. "From its records, this court knows that the most important issue in said bankruptcy is whether the property or capital stock of All-Continent Corporation belongs to the bankrupt estate."

Concessions

Indications that the major distributors will make an effort to meet the grievances of exhibitors in Australia regarding certain trade practices held to be inequitable are seen by Leon S. Snider, joint director of the Snider and Dean Circuit and accredited spokesman for exhibitors in that country.

Mr. Snider said that since his arrival in New York recently he has conferred with all foreign managers who are in the city.

Mr. Snider said that because of larger attendance and higher percentages charged by the distributors, American companies will take $7,500,000 out of Australia this year, an increase of $1,750,000 over 1937.

The total investment in the Australian industry is $200,000,000, he said. Of the 1,190 theatres in Australia, 45 to 50 per cent are operated by circuits, he estimated, while 85 per cent of the 402 theatres in New Zealand are circuit controlled.

Thumb and Forefinger

The peculiar nature of the radio medium provides a unique censorship safeguard, Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company, told members of the Advertising Club of New York last week in a discussion of problems of radio at a luncheon meeting. His remarks followed those made on substantially the same subject by William S. Paley, Columbia broadcasting president, who, in a report to stockholders said federal regulation or censorship of radio was as unnecessary as the imposition of special regulations for "news-papers and hardware stores."

Mr. Lohr said the "thumb and forefinger of the American listener" constituted the best method of radio regulation.

'Birth of a Baby'

Roy E. Larsen, editor of Life magazine, found himself in the center of a country-wide controversy this week as he defended his picture magazine's presentation of stills taken from the picture "The Birth of a Baby." Mr. Larsen submitted to being arrested in New York to test the order of Samuel J. Foley, district attorney of the Bronx, who banned the magazine from the Bronx on the ground that the pictures were "obscene."

Prospects Dimmed

Prospects for the enactment of any motion picture legislation by Congress this term were dimmed this week when administration leaders began a concerted move for an early adjournment. However, the Neely anti-block booking bill continued as a chief subject of discussions among exhibitors. The National Board of Review joined the ranks of those opposed to the measure by declaring that enactment of the bill would create a form of Federal censorship of films. The attention of exhibitor leaders also turned this week to a proposed trade practice conference with distributor leaders.

Sit-down Fight

United Long Island Amusement Corporation will oppose enforcement of a decision handed down last week by the New York Regional Labor Board directing the reinstatement of six Local 306 members who barricaded themselves in the projection booths of five Long Island theatres last August during a campaign to force recognition of the union.

Martin M. Alpert, attorney for the theatre company, said he would oppose any move by the union to have the Queens County court confirm the board's findings, the procedure required under the state labor laws.

The board's order included a recognition of the strikers' right to barricade themselves in the booth and exhibit a trailer to the audience explaining their reasons for stopping the show. The decision also abrogated a contract subsequently made by United Long Island with the Empire Operators' Union and certified Local 306 as the collective bargaining agent for all five theatres.

Tools and Technique

Featuring in its papers program the latest developments in tools and technique for production, distribution and exhibition, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will hold its 43rd semi-annual convention at the Wardman-Park Hotel, Washington, D. C., April 25th to 28th, paying particular attention to color and sound recording and reproduction. During the four-day convention practically every phase of the industry will be covered in technical papers and discussions.

Three sessions will be devoted to sound and there will also be sessions devoted to developments in photographic and laboratory processes, optics and projection developments, 16 mm. equipment, new apparatus, and educational and industrial motion pictures.

The convention will open Monday, April 25th, with an informal luncheon at which Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, William G. McAdoo, Senator from California, and Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner for the District of Columbia, will speak.

Aiding Defense

Member companies of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will give their "complete cooperation" to Grand National in defending the company against the Federal Trade Commission charge of misrepresentation in using the title "In His Steps" for one of its films, according to Ann Rosenthal, Grand National attorney.

The companies believe that the FTC citation, if permitted to stand, "is dangerous," because the ruling would require motion picture adaptations to be completely true to the novel.

MARKET FOR FOREIGN FILMS IN UNITED STATES TRIPLES IN THREE YEARS

183 Theatres in 84 Communities Show Product from Other Countries Despite Restrictions Abroad Against U. S. Films

While Hollywood producers seek to surmount rising foreign censorship, tax and quota barriers, admittedly aimed at America's supremacy in the world motion picture market, foreign companies are increasingly advancing in the American market.

That the importers of foreign product are succeeding, partly at least, in their attempts to tap the American film market, is revealed by the results of a study which evinces that theatres in this country showing foreign films have increased from less than 50 in 1935 to 182 today. A list of the 182 theatres, by cities, accompanies this article.

The foreign film market in the United States is even larger than the theatre figure indicates, inasmuch as no consideration was given in the study to the British produced pictures nor to the foreign language films which occasionally are shown in the large circuit houses.

Further evidence of the fact that foreign pictures already have acquired a constant audience in this country is contained in the results of a questionnaire distributed by the Filmarte Theatre, New York City, during a three-month run of one of the mostly highly praised French pictures of the year, "Mayerling."

The theatre discovered that 88 per cent of those answering the questionnaire had seen at least one foreign picture before. Another question brought to light the fact that 82¼ per cent of the audience found that the foreign language did not interfere with their enjoyment of the film. Only 8¾ per cent said the foreign language annoyed them. Forty-three per cent called American films superior; 40% answered in the negative. Only 7% said they were not affected by newspaper reviews.

But, while the American audience for imported films is increasing, the same situation does not exist for American films in other countries, according to Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce. In an annual report, Mr. Golden recently disclosed that American films retained their popularity in most foreign countries during 1937, but warned:

"The problem of rising nationalism, of quotas, discrimination, subsidy and tariff barriers will have to be adjusted if American business is to operate on as wide a scale as heretofore."

An example of the State Department's efforts to aid film producers in foreign countries was seen recently when the Government negotiated a reciprocal trade agreement with Czechoslovakia. The United States sought to have motion pictures included in the general agreement, but finally acquiesced to the Czech insistence upon a separate film agreement.

THEATRE SHOWS FILMS OF 8 NATIONALITIES

The Victory Theatre in Trenton, N. J., believes in change. Working under an exclusive foreign product policy the theatre, during a recent four week period, played films of eight different nationalities, an average of two nationalities a week.

The films, all booked by Danubia Pictures, included Hungarian, Irish, Polish, French, Slovak, Italian, Russian and Austrian.

Paul F. Culbertson, assistant chief of the European division of the State Department, left almost immediately for Prague where he now is negotiating the proposed film agreement. The success of the Prague conferences, it was said, will hinge upon two major points—the Czechoslovakian importation fee of 20,000 crowns for each American feature and the so-called "taste censorship." Under the government's censorship plan, a group of 10 men decide on whether a film is of sufficiently high quality to be placed on the Czechoslovakian market.

Protests Importation Fee

The American industry's objections to the 20,000 crown assessment on each feature were explained by Mr. Culbertson in a statement to MOTION PICTURE HERALD's representative in Prague.

"As to the importation fee," Mr. Culbertson declared, "it is nonsense. You can readily see that we are intensely interested in the fact that Czechoslovakia, with our money, is producing pictures that must be on the Czechoslovakian market in competition with our pictures."

In Washington it was pointed out that the concrete results of the State Department's efforts to cover motion pictures in such trade agreements as have been consummated have been protective rather than immediate. It was explained that in the pact with France, entered into in May, 1936, the French government abandoned proposals made previously for more severe control and restriction of the trade in foreign films and the exhibition of them in France.

The situation with respect to motion pictures is regarded as different from that applying to any other commodity entering into international trade. In explanation of this it was pointed out that most foreign countries look upon motion pictures less as a commodity than as a means of nationalistic expression and for the dissemination of propaganda.

H. B. Allin Smith, for the last two years manager for Western Electric Company (Orient), Ltd., handling Electrical Research Products, Inc., sound equipment and recording business, returned to the United States last week and reported that United States film importations into Japan had been cut 75 per cent.

In contrast to this is the comparative ease with which foreign films are imported into the United States. Not counting films produced in England, there was a total of 197 foreign pictures imported into this country in 1937.

Again omitting British productions, the greatest number of importations came from Germany which supplied 65 films for the American market last year. Other countries and the number of films imported from them included: France, 23; Hungary, 18; Spain, 17, Russia, 14; Italy, 17; Poland and Sweden, 10 each; Czechoslovakia, two, and Austria, four.

Among distributors of foreign pictures the consensus was that the market for foreign films is growing rapidly and that the movement gains impetus each time such pictures as "Mayerling" are imported. The theory is based on the fact that outstanding foreign pictures often are shown in circuit theatres, thus reaching persons who previously had no desire to see a foreign picture. Among this group are many, the distributors said, who will like the one production and, consequently, become prospective patrons of theatres showing other foreign pictures.

New York City, with its cosmopolitan population, is the most fertile field for foreign pictures. Thirty theatres show foreign product almost exclusively while numerous other small theatres and neighborhood houses operated by the larger circuits occasionally book a foreign film.

The Modern Playhouse, which shows first-run Hungarian pictures, claims distinction as being the only theatre in the world which exhibits Hungarian pictures exclusively. In the theatres in Hungary, it was explained at the offices of Danubia Pictures, importers of Hungarian product, American films are exhibited along with the domestic product.

Market in Iowa Unchanged For Last Ten Years

The market for foreign made pictures so far as they have been introduced to middle west audiences in Iowa is at exactly the same point it was 10 years ago. Occasional efforts to show pictures to the people who are Swedish born, Italian born or German born receive little more response from the peoples of those nationalities than from other audiences.

In most cases foreign made pictures are shown at pre-holiday times when there is a question as to what business any picture will draw.

Since the days of Pola Negri there have been no German produced pictures shown in Iowa, although the state's largest number of foreign born are of German origin. In Des Moines an Italian picture receives the greatest response.

Buffalo Exhibitor Has Two Names for Theatre

Herman Endres, who operates a 400-seat house in the heart of the German section of Buffalo, has two names for his theatre. When he shows Nazi pictures the theatre is called the Little German Theatre, but when other product is exhibited the house is merely known as the Little Theatre.

The made-in-Germany productions have maintained a steady availability and patronage, Mr. Endres commented. He pointed out that he usually closes his house for two months during the summer.

Stanley Koszanowski, operator of the Rivoli Theatre, Buffalo, estimated that 30 Polish pictures are imported into the United States each year and that out of the group he "can maybe use eight" for his preponderantly Polish trade. As to the quality of the pictures, Mr. Koszanowski said: "They're so poor generally that if I tried to use any more, I couldn't keep people in my house."

Wilmington Residents Visit Philadelphia Foreign Shows

Although Wilmington, Del., has a population of approximately 125,000 persons, exhibitors believe there is not a large enough foreign element to warrant the showing of foreign pictures. However, many of Wilmington's foreign born residents travel 28 miles to Philadelphia to see foreign pictures there.

In Philadelphia there are six theatres showing foreign pictures, the Europa being the only one in the mid-town sector. This house plays Soviet pictures for from two to three weeks.

"Mayerling" recently played at the Europa for 14 weeks and then was booked into 35 Warner Brothers neighborhood houses.

Foreign Films Popular In Rocky Mountain Area

Many theatres in Colorado and New Mexico are having exceptionally good box office receipts as a result of offering foreign films. Most consistently successful in the Rocky Mountain area are Spanish pictures.

"My experience with Spanish pictures has been most pleasing," H. Curtis, manager of the Bide-A-Wee Theatre, Denver, declared. "When shown with an English picture, the patronage has been considerably greater than normal."

D. Russel of the Palace theatre said: "We have found that a good Spanish picture, when shown for not more than two days, brings in numerous customers we do not ordinarily see."

Spanish Films Fail In 1,936-Seat House

As is the case in other localities throughout the United States, foreign pictures are shown in San Antonio only in the small neighborhood houses. However, the Interstate Circuit recently experimented with Spanish films in the State Theatre which has a seating capacity of 1,936.

After a two months' trial the policy was dropped because of lack of interest and inability to obtain sufficient product.

Cincinnati Theatres Ignore Foreign Productions

There is not a single theatre in the Cincinnati trade territory at present playing foreign pictures. The last theatre, the Mayfair, a downtown house, to play foreign pictures, mostly German, failed to open at the beginning of the current season. The reason advanced was inability to obtain suitable product. The house was well patronized while in operation.

The Marvel, a neighborhood house, in Cincinnati, undertook to play foreign pictures of various makes several months ago, but discontinued the policy when it proved unprofitable.

UNIVERSITY TIEUP AIDS HOUSE'S GROSS

An arrangement with the University of Colorado in connection with the showing of foreign pictures has increased the box office receipts of the State Theatre, Boulder, Col., according to C. R. Ashton, manager.

Advertising, ticket sale, and general promotion are all handled by the language students and professors of the college. In return for its cooperation, the university receives 50 per cent of the net profits realized from each foreign picture.

Some of the professors have gone so far as to make certain pictures compulsory for their students.

Two Chicago Loop Houses Have Foreign Policy

Chicago, although having only 10 theatres that show foreign product, ranks second to New York for a variety of foreign language pictures. Among the product shown is French, German, Polish, Swedish, Hungarian, Bohemian and Jewish.

The Julian, which shows Swedish and other Scandinavian films, is considered in Chicago as the outstanding theatre for Swedish pictures in the United States. The World Playhouse, which shows French and German films, and the Sonotone, which shows Russian, French and German pictures, are Loop houses.

New York Success Needed To Draw Washington Crowds

Three houses in Washington show foreign films, one committed to a straight policy of overseas product, the second alternating with revivals of Hollywood hits and the third opened occasionally under straight rental or percentage agreements.

The Schubert Belasco, which has been dedicated to sex pictures, revivals, second-rate stage presentations, and foreign productions has done well in recent weeks with "Mayerling" with the "Life and Loves of Beethoven" scheduled to follow.

The Little, a 350-seat house, has played French, German and Russian films with some success and, although the theatre is located in an otherwise unimpressive downtown neighborhood, it has commanded a so-called class audience.

A. E. Tolkins, co-operator of the Little with Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, explained that: "There is an audience for foreign product in Washington, but we have learned that it can be drawn upon only with films which have established a reputation in New York or boast names of foreign players who are rather well known."

The names of the theatres, dotted throughout the United States, which play foreign pictures are included in the following list: The types of foreign product specified after the theatre name are those usually shown. In cases where foreign languages are not specified, product from several countries is shown.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS SCENARIO CONTEST

The League of Nations is holding a world wide competition for scenarios for two educational sound films on the League. One is to be a general film of 6,000 feet, describing the covenant's fundamental purposes and the League's principal activities. The other is to be a special film of 1,500 feet dealing with some particular branch or aspect of the League work, such as the settlement of some political dispute or the health organization's work against some disease or the control of a dangerous drug.

For the general film, prizes total 2,000 Swiss francs and for the other, 700 Swiss Francs. An international jury of five members will award them. The League may invite the successful author to assist in the production of the film for an added fee. Scenarios must be in English or in French.

TWO NEW CREDIT SOURCES IN SIGHT TO MODERNIZE AND RE-EQUIP THEATRE

RFC Indicates It Favors $25,000 Loans; Congressman's Bill Proposes Borrowing on Exhibitor's Note and Character

More liberal credit is in sight for motion picture exhibitors for theatre modernization, rehabilitation and re-equipment from the Government's spending agencies.

Already acceptable as borrowers of a maximum of $10,000 under the Federal Housing Administration, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now seems favorable to a plan for advancing as much as $25,000 to theatre owners for reconstruction.

And, in the House, Congressman Henry G. Teigan, Minnesota, has presented a bill to permit small merchants, including exhibitors, to borrow on their "personal character."

Whereas the first-mentioned proposal, introduced by Harry Brandt, president of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association, would assist exhibitors in obtaining RFC loans without the aid of legislation, the Teigan plan calls for action by law.

Favorable Reception Indicated

Mr. Brandt has been campaigning in Washington for weeks for small-loan aid for independent owners, who are not in the favorable position of large exhibitor interests and affiliated circuits to get financial aid for needed improvements. In addition, Joseph B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., manufacturers of motion picture theatre projectors, proposed, in February, that the RFC extend its borrowing facilities to include both the independent exhibitor and "little" businessman. Mr. Kleckner was the lone industry representative at the government "little businessmen's" conference at Washington in February.

While refusing to discuss the Brandt proposal officially, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on Tuesday gave indications of a favorable attitude to it.

Mr. Brandt, however, said the RFC had approved his proposal and that he was completing arrangements with New York banks for making loans available to members of his organization. He also said that the financing would be available to theatre owners anywhere in the United States after they have obtained the approval of a local national bank.

Five-Year Loans

Under Mr. Brandt's plan the banks would be empowered to make five-year loans up to $25,000 at a nominal rate of interest. At present, Mr. Brandt said, national banks are permitted, under the National Banking Act, to make only one-year loans. The RFC, according to the plan being worked out, would underwrite the loans beyond the banks' limitations.

Both the bank with which the exhibitor would do business and the government agency would have to be satisfied with the exhibitor's collateral and as to his being a good credit risk.

A large number of the ITOA's members are prepared to file applications for loans immediately, Mr. Brandt said, adding that he expects to complete arrangements with the National

34 Per Cent of Box Office Dollar To Rentals; One-Fourth to Payroll

Thirty-four per cent of the box-office dollar of the typical theatre of 1,500 seats, in a midwestern city of 100,000 population, went to film rentals last year, according to the full text of the report of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., made public on Thursday. An advance article appeared in the HERALD last week. Here are the details:

Film rentals — feature and shorts	34.0%
Extra attractions occasionally used	3.1%
Payroll — theatre staff	25.5%
Real estate: rent, insurance, taxes, interest and depreciation	15.2%
Local advertising and publicity	8.1%
Electric light and power	2.1%
Fuel, janitor supplies, etc.	2.7%
Maintenance and repairs	.5%
Gross profit before corporation and income taxes	8.8%
Total	100.0%

Mr. Hays said the Production Code Administration last year approved 663 features, 55 of them reissues, 339 from major companies, 228 from smaller concerns, and 41 from abroad. The Code Administration rejected 36 features, 27 of them being approved after revision. The Advertising Advisory Council rejected 824 stills, but 98 per cent of all advertising and exploitation material was approved.

City Bank to act as the agency for the New York Metropolitan area.

Adoption of the plan would be an improvement, for exhibitors, over the arrangement under which they can now borrow up to $10,000 through the Federal Housing Administration, Mr. Brandt said. Under the FHA arrangement, the money borrowed can be used only for permanent improvement and immovable equipment.

The RFC loans would not be intended for new theatre construction, but Mr. Brandt said he expected that adoption of the plan would bring a wave of theatre modernization and rehabilitation, and installation of new equipment.

For Bonafide Exhibitors

During his discussions with Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, Mr. Brandt said he emphasized the point that requirements should be included to eliminate "fly-by-night" schemes from the borrowing arrangement. Only bonafide exhibitors and theatre owners who intend to continue in business should be permitted to obtain loans, Mr. Brandt said.

Under the FHA plan the government does not advance any money but insures the loans made to exhibitors, and other business men, by commercial lending institutions. The money is advanced on a five per cent discount basis, which is equal to 9.72 per cent interest.

The major eligibility requirements for borrowers are that they have an assured income which will enable them to repay the loan and that they either own or have an approved lease on the property they occupy. In the case of rented quarters, the lease must run at least six months longer than the term of the loan.

Mr. Tiegan's bill, introduced in the House of Representatives, would permit exhibitors, and other small business men, to obtain loans from the RFC without any collateral other than their notes and their character record.

When Mr. Kleckner proposed his plan at the conference of "small business" in February, he said that with proper credit facilities the 322,000 small businesses could put 75 per cent of unemployed back to work.

Mr. Kleckner proposed that small business men be permitted to borrow from their local banks to finance plant expansion, new equipment or rehabilitation at 5 per cent interest. A borrower would be required to make a cash down payment of 10 per cent at the time he made the loan and to give a first mortgage on the property.

The credit investigation, said Mr. Kleckner would be conducted by the banks, thus eliminating any political "fixing" and any necessity of hiring a lawyer with an "in" in Washington. The government, according to the plan, would advance 80 per cent of the face amount of the loan to the local bank at an interest rate of 2 per cent, and thus the bank would earn 3 per cent on the total amount of the loan.

Repayment of a loan would be made on a monthly basis with a maturity not to exceed 50 per cent of the normal and useful life of the assets to be acquired.

'LIFE' BANNED FOR "BIRTH OF A BABY" PICTURES

Barred in Scores of Cities;
Editor's Test Trial in Bronx
Set for Next Week

Publication in Life magazine of three pages of close-up photographs of a child birth, taken from the so-called "hygiene" motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," this week set a new mark in the stormy controversy which has involved officers of Time, Inc., publishers of the picture magazine and producers of March of Time.

Scores of cities, towns and hamlets, relying upon their police powers to prohibit the circulation of "obscene" matter, banned the controversial April 11th issue of the magazine.

Interest in the numerous test cases which resulted from the police action centered in New York City, where Roy E. Larsen, editor of Life, accepted a challenge made by Samuel J. Foley, district attorney of the Bronx, and arranged to have himself arrested for violation of Section 1141 of the Penal Code, which relates to the distribution of "obscene" literature and pictures.

Trial Next Week

Under the plan worked out by Mr. Foley and Mr. Larsen, the Life editor will go to trial in the court of special sessions next week. The evidence in the case will be a copy of Life which Mr. Larsen sold to a detective in the offices of Mr. Foley.

In ordering the issue banned in the Bronx, Mr. Foley declared the pictures were "an outrageous affront to decency."

However, in New Haven, where police barred the issue before it reached the newsstands, an arrested newsdealer won a dismissal when he appeared before Thomas Sullivan, city court judge. The jurist, in discharging the defendant, declared the pictures were educational.

Despite the New Haven case which ended Friday afternoon, police and district attorneys throughout the country ordered copies of the magazine seized from newsstands. However, Mr. Larsen this week announced that not more than 10,000 copies out of the total issue of 2,000,000 had been confiscated. He also said that the issue was sold out and that there was no intention of publishing any more copies.

The first indication of Life's plan to publish the stills from the motion picture was given to the public in letters forwarded by the magazine to all subscribers.

Misunderstanding, Says Larsen

When the nation-wide controversy first started, Mr. Larsen issued a statement declaring that "there is apparently a misunderstanding of the nature of these pictures. . . ."

But Joseph F. Lamb, New York state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, demanded recall of the issue on "every ground of decency and morality." He declared that 60,000 Knights of Columbus in New York State "believe you have at last succeeded in outraging public decency."

Among the various communities in which the magazine was barred were Chicago, Boston, Atlantic City, Albany, Ocean City, New Jersey, numerous towns and villages through New England, and the entire state of Pennsylvania. In Chicago and in Buffalo the ban was lifted.

Morris Ernst, counsel for Mr. Larsen, said that no action has been taken by any Federal agency and that thousands of copies were sent through the mails unmolested.

Picture Started as Sponsored Film, Financed by Manufacturers of Baby Food

"The Birth of a Baby," from which stills were taken by Life for its three-page pictorial presentation on child birth, originated as a commercially sponsored film, designed to advertise baby foods and to win the goodwill of the medical profession for the manufacturers.

This was disclosed this week as the state board of regents in New York prepared to hand down its decision on whether the controversial film will be permitted to be shown in the state.

The original sponsors of the picture, Mead, Johnson & Company, manufacturers of Mellen's Food and other baby foods, planned to distribute the film among doctors and, if there was no serious objections by the public, to show it in public theatres.

Manufacturers Provided Funds

Christie Productions, Inc., got the contract to produce the picture. Jack Skirball, production manager of Christie Productions and a former resident of Evansville, Ind., home of Mead, Johnson & Company, took charge of production. The film cost approximately $50,000, which was supplied by the baby food manufacturers. Mead, Johnson & Company engaged physicians for supervisory advice on script and production and the copyright on the picture was taken out in the name of the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., which is composed of representatives of more than 16 medical and health welfare organizations.

Five days after part of the negative was destroyed in a fire at the De Luxe Laboratory, Little Ferry, N. J., Sam Citron, film cutter, applied to the New York board of censors for a permit to show the film in New York.

Christie Productions was listed in the application as the manufacturers of the film. That was July 14th, 1937, and later, when the application was denied, Mr. Citron applied to Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education, and his application was dismissed.

Special Pictures Corporation now is listed as the commercial distributor of the film, but beyond this fact and identifying themselves as president and secretary, neither Mr. Skirball nor Aaron Horvitz would reveal any details of distribution plans or revenue.

A "Private Matter"

Shown in Minneapolis, the film was said to have grossed $11,000 in one week but in this connection Mr. Horvitz declared: "I have no comment to make on the money. That is a private matter."

Geraldine Sartain, press agent for Special Pictures, said that of 367 representatives of religious, civic and health groups, including the National Board of Review, 362 had voted in favor of public showing of the film.

Special Pictures, Inc., on Wednesday issued this statement: "The American Committee on Maternal Welfare today issued a denial that 'The Birth of a Baby' is commercially sponsored by a manufacturer of baby foods or that it has any advertising tieups of any nature whatsoever. It is presented solely by the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, to whom funds were donated by the manufacturer."

Cummins Says His 'Birth' Has "More Detail"

Apparently recognizing the widespread newspaper attention received by "The Birth of a Baby," "hygiene" film, as a result of the banning of Life magazine for publishing "Birth of a Baby" photographs, Samuel Cummins "clinical" film specialist in New York has announced that he, too, has a "Birth" picture, which "even goes more into detail than 'Birth of a Baby.'"

Follows Protests

Life magazine appeared with its "Birth" issue last Friday morning, and was in circulation but a few hours when press headlines reported a wave of protests. The very next morning Mr. Cummins' Jewel Productions issued the following statement:

"Jewel Productions, Inc., of New York City, is also releasing a birth-of-a-child picture called 'Birth or the Duties of Motherhood.' This film is now being shown in its eighth week to capacity crowds at the Empire theatre, Newark, N. J., and is still going strong. The film is being advertised as 'Motherhood,' showing the birth of a child, and is of complete feature length, showing a normal birth, the Caesarian birth of a baby, and even goes more into detail than 'Birth of a Baby,' which is released by Special Pictures, a 'clinical' film competitor of Mr. Cummins. So far as is known, Mr. Cummins' film, an old one, has always been called 'Motherhood,' and, apparently, acquired its new title, 'Birth or the Duties of Motherhood,' a few hours after newspaper headlines commenced to report on the 'Birth' stills in Life.

The third "sex film" case of the week in New York reached the court of appeals, when the highest judicial branch in the state, on Monday, took under consideration action on "Tomorrow's Children," which is based on sterilization of humans.

Posters Barred

In Chicago, police ordered Balaban and Katz to remove posters advertising "Dance of the Virgins," formerly called "Lelong," from the lobby of the circuit's Garrick theatre. Police Lieutenant Harry Costello charged that the display was "indecent."

In Albany, Foy Productions and Principal Film brought their appeal from the appellate division on "Tomorrow's Children." Arguments were waived with Charles A. Brind, Jr., law director of the State Education Department, and Jonah J. Goldstein, counsel for petitioners, submitting briefs.

Attorney Goldstein, however, asked the court personally to view "Tomorrow's Children." This motion was taken under consideration by Chief Judge Frederick E. Crane.

"Tomorrow's Children" has run the gauntlet of legal moves. Originally, application for license was submitted November 24, 1934, and on December 12 of that year Irwin Esmond, motion picture censor director, refused a license. Appeal was made to Dr. Frank P. Graves, Commissioner of Education, who viewed the film in the Madison theatre, Albany, and upheld Mr. Esmond's action on August 20, 1937, denying a license on the grounds that the picture was "immoral," "tending to corrupt morals" and "tending to incite crime."

Attorney Brind's brief says that the subject is demoralizing and degrading and that the censor boards of Maryland, Virginia, Kansas and New York have turned down "Tomorrow's Children," while Pennsylvania and Ohio, only other states that have official censorship, passed the film "with eliminations."

BLOCK BOOKING AND TRUST BILLS REPORTED HEADED FOR THE SHELF

Scope of Congressional Calendar Seen Restricted by Present Tentative Plans to Set Adjournment for June 1st

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With Administration leaders bending their efforts toward early adjournment of Congress, prospects have been dimmed for the enactment this year either of new anti-trust legislation or of any motion picture measures, including the Neely-Pettengill anti-block booking bill.

With every member who desires to remain in office after this year facing a campaign for reelection, the House is anxious to quit as early as possible. A similar feeling prevails in the Senate, where the terms of 32 members are about to expire and where two additional seats are open to contest.

Tentative plans call for adjournment of the session about June 1st, a desire that can be consummated only if Congress devotes itself to its present program, with no additions in the way of controversial legislation.

Indications now are that President Roosevelt, who some time ago receded from his demand for enactment of anti-trust modernization legislation this year in favor of a Congressional study on which a bill might be written next session, may recede still further and have the investigation made by a non-Congressional committee, thus releasing members of Congress from the necessity of breaking into their campaigns to serve on a committee.

This possibility is seen strengthened by a very unsatisfactory condition of business and industry, which has made Administration leaders reluctant to initiate anything which might act as a deterrent to recovery.

In the field of film legislation, there is little probability that the Senate will pass the Neely bill and practically no likelihood of the House taking any action this session. The bills on block booking are with the House committee on interstate and foreign commerce, members of which, seeing the criticism which followed the reporting of the senate bill without new hearings, are determined not to act without making a study of the situation as it is today.

At the same time, the committee has before it a great mass of legislation, much of which is considered of more importance nationally than motion picture measures, and there is little desire on the part of members to embark upon another long drawn out committee hearing, such as was held last Congress.

General indications are, in fact, that the remainder of the session will be devoted to legislation for which there is pressing need.

Two Exhibitor Groups Oppose Neely Bill

Opposition to the Neely-Pettengill bill was voted by two exhibitor organizations this week, the Rocky Mountain Theatre Owners and Managers and the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas. Endorsement of the measure was voted by the Independent Theatres Association of Canada after a discussion of the

OHIO ITO SUGGESTS COOPERATIVE BUYING

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio this week suggested in a bulletin that exhibitors investigate the cooperative film buying organization set up a few weeks ago in Cleveland by M. A. Mooney.

The bulletin said the new company operates along the same lines as one which has been in existence in Michigan for several years.

Because of its buying power, the bulletin continued, the Michigan cooperative has been able to obtain the same concessions from distributors as now are accorded certain circuits.

measure as related to Canadian film business. Full approval of the Neely bill was voted at a meeting of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa Tuesday in Des Moines.

At the Rocky Mountain Theatre Owners meeting it was voted to call upon senators and representatives from Colorado, Wyoming and Nebraska to defeat the proposed legislation.

The National Board of Review also joined the ranks of those opposed to the Neely bill. The board attacked the bill as "impractical to a fantastic degree," and declared that in effect it would create a form of Federal censorship of films. The statement opposing the measure was signed by the executive committee.

Louis Nizer, motion picture attorney, this week released an analysis of the provisions of the Neely bill. The digest was presented "without comment or advocacy."

Hearing to Decide Damages In Ruling Against Cummins

Paul J. McCauley, former assistant attorney general in New York, will serve as special master and will conduct hearings soon to determine profits made with the film "The Jungle Killer" and the damages suffered by Frederick Beck Patterson through its exhibition, according to Alfred S. Kröllberg, attorney for Mr. Patterson.

The original infringement action, brought by Mr. Patterson against Samuel Cummins, Empire Laboratories, Inc., Richard Fiedler, Century Productions, Inc., and Bob-Ed Theatres Corporation, was based on a charge that the defendants in making the "Jungle Killer" took more than 1,000 feet of film from Mr. Patterson's copyrighted travelogue, "Shooting Big Game With the Camera." Vincent Leibel, district court judge, ruled that "deliberate purloining" of the film was established beyond a doubt. The decision was upheld by the circuit court of appeals. Recently the United States supreme court enjoined and restrained the defendants from further infringing upon Mr. Patterson's film.

The court also ordered that the defendant deliver for destruction all positive prints and negatives of their film and that an award for damages be made to the plaintiff.

Meeting of Industry Leaders Would Prove That Solution Must Come from Within, Says Lewen Pizor

A meeting of distributor and exhibitor leaders would prove to Congress that solution of the motion picture industry's problems "must come from within the industry," Lewen Pizor, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, declared this week in a letter to Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president.

Mr. Pizor wrote to pledge his support to Mr. Kent "or any other distributor leader" in a move to bring about a meeting of leaders the two parts of the industry.

Coincident with the release of Mr. Pizor's letter was an announcement by the Independent Theatre Owners of New York that it has received 200 letters from exhibitors, urging that the organization continue with its plan to obtain distributor support for conciliation machinery.

Upon his arrival in New York over the weekend, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said his organization would be willing to participate in any meeting which had as its aim the betterment of trade relations between exhibitors and distributors. But, at the same time, he indicated that MPTOA officials believe that a three-cornered trade practice conference might be misinterpreted in quarters unfriendly to the industry and that it would be indecisive or ineffectual in the event the Neely-Pettengill bills were enacted. The 10-point trade practice program advanced by the MPTOA two years ago comprised as equitable and effective a self-regulatory program as could be hoped for at this time, Mr. Kuykendall said.

In his letter pledging his support to a distributor-exhibitor meeting, Mr. Pizor declared: "I think there is no time like the present to have you again lead the way for further benefits for the independent exhibitor."

The majority of the letters received by the ITOA, according to the organization, came from members of the Allied groups. Allied opposed the ITOA proposal for a conference of exhibitor leaders.

"There is no group of theatre owners which suffers so much from unfair trade practices as the ITOA, particularly since 100 per cent of its members operates subsequent run theatres," the ITOA statement said. "We are against the Neely bill, and the ITOA has unanimously decided to use its every asset to fight the bill because it knows it will put its members out of business."

Mr. Kuykendall commented on the situation by saying:

"The 10-point program is the product of much thought and discussion by all classifications of exhibitors operating in all sections of the country. It is not a one-man program, nor the program of a single organization."

"We sincerely believe that it offers the most equitable program which either exhibitors or distributors can hope for at this time. The fact that it was not made operative a year or more ago is the only reason, in our opinion, that the industry is in danger of having its trade relations dictated by legislators today."

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Growing Pains

Whether or not it was a symptom of growing pains, new production suffered a relapse during the first week of April. Despite confidence-inspiring statements that an intensive picture making drive would be embarked upon immediately the tax assessors turned their attention elsewhere, but five productions were sent on their way. Simultaneously eight potential items of screen merchandise were turned over to those employees who get their names into print as film editors and music scorers. Thus the standing assumes the aspect of a negative three.

The new work was not without its incidents which make news notices and as is very often the case the organization administered by the Messrs. Warner found itself in head line and body type twice. Because Bette Davis reportedly did not consider the assigned role adequate to her talents, "Comet Over Broadway" did not start. Miss Davis was suspended as was Mr. Richard Powell who chose to have nothing to do with "The Garden of the Moon." However, the film was started and John Payne, discovered by Emanuel Cohen who is now sojourning in Europe while Paramount is trying to do something about "Dr. Rhythm" towards recouping some part of its investment therein, will be seen in Powell's vacated role in the company of Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, Penny Singleton and sundry others.

Monogram Active

All other plants were put to shame by W. Ray Johnston's Monogram institution which started three pictures. In all cases, the titles identify the character specifically. "The Marines Are Here" will present Gordon Oliver, June Travis, Guinn Williams and Ray Walker. E. B. Derr's "Private Nurse" has Lloyd Hughes, Sally Blane and J. Farrell MacDonald as its headliners. Craig Reynolds, Pert Kelton and Marcia Ralston will be among those present in "Scandal House."

Grand National, which has been dormant for some weeks, was animate again as "The Whirling Horseman" went into work. Ken Maynard is the horseman and Joan Barclay is the girl.

Eight Completed

Shirley Temple finished another picture for 20th Century-Fox, "Little Miss Broadway." George Murphy, Jimmy Durante, Phyllis Brooks, Edna Mae Oliver, George Barbier, Edward Ellis, Jane Darwell, El Brendel, Donald Meek, Patricia Wilder and Claude Gillingwater will also be in the show. Jerry Hoffman, picked out of the newspaper reporter ranks by Darryl F. Zanuck and Sol M. Wurtzel to become a producer is now in a situation somewhat like that of an expectant father as "Sporting Chances" (tentative title) was turned over to that department which so often leaves so much on the cutting room floor. A horse is the star of the picture and Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari, Sidney Blackmer, Henry Armetta, Chick Chandler and Marvin Stephens will be in it, too.

RKO-Radio likewise completed two productions. "Gun Law" will present George O'Brien, Rita Oehnen, Ward Bond and Francis McDonald. The cast of "Blind Alibi" includes Richard Dix, Whitney Bourne, Paul Guilfoyle, Frances

STUDIO YEAR BOOK TO STAR EXHIBITOR

J. Real Neth, Columbus, Ohio, exhibitor chosen by MGM as the typical American theatre operator, arrived in Hollywood during the week to appear as the central figure in a candid camera brochure presenting the studio's production plans.

Mr. Neth, who directs his own circuit, is to remain at the studio for several weeks during the preparation of the year book—"Mr. Exhibitor Visits MGM Studio with His Candid Camera."

The book based on an idea developed by Howard Strickling, studio publicity chief, will include all studio activities and personalities pictured in candid camera style. They will be looked at from the point of view of the exhibitor and will include action color shots illustrating progress of productions being made in color.

Mercer, Solly Ward, several members of the company's stock company and the dog, "Lightning."

Universal, also, came through with two finished pictures. In "Air Devils" Dick Purcell, Larry Blake, Beryl Wallace, Minerva Urecal, Charles Brokaw, Michael Visaroff and a few others will be seen. John Boles heads the cast of "Sinners In Paradise." Included are Madge Evans, Bruce Cabot, Marion Martin, Gene Lockhart, Nana Bryant, Charlotte Wynters, Willie Fung, Milburn Stone, Morgan Conway and Donald Barry.

Save for probably necessary pick up and protection shots, "Tropic Holiday" no longer demands other than editing labor at Paramount. Dorothy Lamour, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Ray Milland, Binnie Barnes and, to some extent, Tito Guizar are the quickly identified names and considerable interest attaches to the debut of a gallery of Latin-American talent.

For United Artists and the only new domestic picture the organization has had in weeks, Walter Wanger finished "The Adventuress" which still is a temporary title. A love story with a revolution background, it will present Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday, Reginald Denny, George Houston, Robert Warwick, William B. Davidson, Vladimir Sokoloff, Katherine DeMille and Fred Kohler, Sr.

Topical, Timely

Seldom in the spot light that shines on his brother producers, Sol M. Wurtzel, maker of practically all the 20th Century-Fox so-called secondary pictures, has evolved a timely idea for Jane Withers' next film, "The Texas Kid."

Seed of the idea was found in the pictorial treatment recently given in an illustrated magazine which details the picturesque life and customs at Jefferson High School, San Antonio, Texas, where cadets in the Reserve Officers Training Corps are "sponsored" by their best girls. The plan, it is said, is to be developed to reveal a stirring treatment of youngsters' problems and thus assure a picture that will have adult as well as adolescent appeal.

Not content with merely filming the idea on the lot, Mr. Wurtzel will send the sixth ranking box office star to San Antonio with Ruth Terry who will also be featured in "The Texas Kid." Both will enroll in Jefferson High and spend at least one month absorbing the customs and habits of the campus.

Titles

With studios changing titles at such a rate that one who strives to follow production schedules cannot help but become confused, two or three words may be worth a fortune in Hollywood. In one case three words, "Of Human Hearts," final title for "Benefits Forgot," was worth $5,000 and a trip around the country to a southern lad.

No activity in Hollywood receives as much attention as the matter of titles. It must be made up of simple words and the shorter the better. It may constitute a slang phrase or a quotation. It must possess box office appeal and to a certain extent suggest the intent of the story. A title concerning foreign words is undesirable. Thus the change of "Madame Walewska" to "Conquest" and "Mlle Frou Frou" to "The Toy Wife."

Pictures go into work under one label. Occasionally it is changed during production and in a great many cases the picture reaches the screen under still another name. The changes are puzzling, but they are made for a definite reason.

Sometimes it is discovered that the title first chosen was that of an obscure book, play or perhaps a silent picture made years ago. Sometimes authors complain that the title selected is not appropriate to their story. Occasionally the Hays office objects.

Yet while adaptability to the average marquee is always a prime consideration and that the label may be catchy and easily remembered, the most important intention is that the title may permit no possibility of misunderstanding or misinterpretation.

Hawks Free

Howard Hawks, whose latest directorial accomplishment is "Bringing Up Baby," has settled his contract with RKO for a reported $40,000. "Gunga Din" which was to be his next assignment has been transferred to Gregory La Cava.

The Marx Brothers on their return to MGM from the RKO studios where they are working in "Room Service" will make "A Day at the Circus" under the supervision of Mervyn LeRoy.

"Algiers," Walter Wanger's starring vehicle for Charles Boyer and Sigrid Gurie whom he will borrow from Samuel Goldwyn, will also be the initial American venture for Hedy LaMarr, lately of "Ecstasy."

Roach Parlays Unit Production Into Six Features in His Stride

Our Gang Comedies Going to MGM Plant But Will Retain Roach Imprint

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Hal Roach says there's nothing remarkable about what's been happening on his trim little lot a fast seven furlongs this side of Leo the Lion's expansive pastorage, and comes erect in his tan Cordovan swivel chair prepared to prove it. Just about everybody else in cinema affairs thinks differently about that, so their volunteer investigator props a straightback against a buff wall, plops into it and starts pitching questions.

Yes, the Our Gang comedies are to be vanned down Washington Boulevard to the big MGM plant, after one or two more, but this is in no sense equivalent to being sold down, or up, the river. The technical talent so long associated with their manufacture on the home lot will go along with the kiddies and the Roach imprint will not be erased. But the Roach lot will be cleared for the production of feature length pictures in the quality range, but not necessarily the format of "Topper" and "Merrily We Live."

No, the Hal Roach feature productions to come will not be invariably comic. That is to say, there is no rule to that effect. One could step outside the president's office and poll a snap vote of the studio hands within shouting distance which would tally a thumping majority opinion that no picture altogether lacking in humor will ever emanate from these acres, but the point is immaterial. The president says there are no Parliamentary rules against straight drama or any other variety of product. The president runs this snug little empire of his—always has.

One at a Time

Hal Roach says there's nothing remarkable, either, about the way these feature pictures are to be made, and then proceeds to contradict himself by telling how. They will be made one-at-a-time. Everybody on the lot will have one picture at a time to think about, talk about, plan for, work on, live with and for and by, from day to day, watching it take form, grow, tossing suggestions into the hopper and adding this idea or that to the sum of production inspiration.

To the extent that it is practicable and reasonably economical to do so, the cameras will pick up the story at the beginning and tell it straight through to the end. Writers will stick with the job from starting gate to finish line, rewriting this role up and that one down, expanding one story element and compressing another, instead of handing the script to a director and shipping off to Honolulu or the next assignment.

This, says Hal Roach, is what is known as the unit system of production and is the oldest system in existence. It is still the best, he thinks, as viewed from an aisle seat in any man's theatre, and he wouldn't be amazed if the big production plants were to come back to it one fine day, not necessarily parceling off the company real estate and breaking up into separate corporate entities, but at least equipping each unit completely and independently with everything from light to carpet tacks. Considerable group departmentalization in the interests of bookkeeping economy has been achieved in the past decade, under persuasion of efficiency experts and visiting financiers, and certain product characteristics highly desirable in the automotive industry but not especially gratifying to the plain people who push hard money through the ticket wicket have been acquired.

How "Topper" Was Made

A good deal of the Roach planning for his future pictures appears, to the naked ear, to derive from his experience with "Topper." This strikingly successful comedy was no pre-fabricated structure. A lot of old-fashioned camera experimentation had to be put by before it was established that the now-you-see-it-now-you-don't effects called for by the story could be accomplished in a manner to satisfy modern audience requirements. There was a good chance that the spectral angle might turn out a little too sharply pointed for general comfort. It was an easy picture to miff.

It was made from first to finish and everybody sat in every day on the rushes. There were plenty of retakes, but none after the last scene was shot, which will be true of the pictures to come, the daily-check-up-with-leave-to-amend scheme making it convenient and practicable to do the retaking today or tomorrow instead of next month when the leading man's in Europe. By the time the company got to the head of the stretch it was pretty evident from clubhouse or infield, that something like a new record for the distance was about to be hung up. It was.

"Topper" brought under the Roach roof and into the din and glare of cinema distinction one Milton H. Bren, overnight a front running producer without benefit of morning workouts, and Mr. Bren brought ideas. They turned out to be completely congenial with Roach ideas, and the singularly indescribable but eminently potent harmony of concept, purpose and execution which set "Merrily We Live" somehow apart from the innumerable contemporary mad-cap comedies may be traced back to this circumstance.

A Family Unit

Some of the things that happened during production of this second Bren success could, but probably wouldn't, happen on a lot where a dozen units were at work. The house used in "Merrily We Live" was complete enough to live in. The production unit practically did. First thing they knew, it was more like home than home and the company was more like a family is supposed to be than most families are. The father's part was barely a bit when the picture started, but when the wife and kids saw it in the rushes as Clarence Kolb played it the writers broke out their Remingtons and built it into the standout it became. Constance Bennett, as showmanly a daughter as a Richard Bennett could ask for and yet a trifle on the act-y side through over-exposure to Back Bay Boston castings, wore her own off-the-set personality around the premises so contentedly that when Hal Roach suggested she give the camera a load of it she did, and everybody liked it so well she wore it right on through the picture. Even a Richard Bennett could relish the notices it got her.

The Roach roster of contract talent is not long, but it's valuable. Laurel and Hardy are, of course, built-in Roach fixtures, recently finished with "Swiss Miss" and scheduled to bring in another characteristic comedy between now and September. Allan Mowbray, Patsy Kelly and Brian Aherne are others on the list, as varied an array of trading stock (if they'll forgive the phrase) as a producer who favors the pick-and-choose system of cast assembly might corral in a protracted round-up of the cinema range.

Hal Roach thinks he can do about six features a year in stride. He counts on Bren to take care of three of these. By the time this gets into print, if there are no scratches it will be okay to say that Leo McCarey will attend to the other three. With "The Awful Truth" under his belt, McCarey looks to this hand-capper like a tiptop stable mate for Bren—what an entry! President Roach remarks that this arrangement will leave him with nothing to do but go fishing. Everybody around the plant knows he won't go—too long in training—and wouldn't want him to—too sure a hand at any chore around the place to get along happily without.

President of This Too

Now an annunciator interrupts and a voice begs leave to ask questions about the corporate structure and present financial condition of the Los Angeles Turf Club—Santa Anita Race Track to you two-dollar sportsmen—a minor Roach interest computable in major numerals. While the president—of this, too—reels off astronomical answers to the persistent voice, his volunteer interrogator, trying not to hear, makes an eye tour of the wall prints, admires a brace of thoroughbreds in crayon, a seven-master in water color, notes that a few mere mortals get their faces framed in the Roach sanctum, browses over that a moment and stumbles upon the realization that this short, stocky, compact and quietly vital man in gray tweeds probably knows more about the double feature problem, having lived on and by both sides of it, than anybody else in Hollywood. When the voice on the telephone hangs up, the president—of this, too—has his attention called to this state of affairs.

"I believe," Hal Roach believes, "the double feature problem will solve itself. It isn't new. It started years ago in Boston when straight picture houses put in a second feature to compete with vaudeville houses that had added pictures, and now the practice is too general to be abolished by mere declaration.

The "B" Picture's Future

"I think the "B" picture will come down gradually in length from 60 minutes to 55, then 50, possibly to 45 or even 30, about the length of a good two or three-reel comedy such as Harold Lloyd, Charlie Chaplin and other name comedians used to turn out. They couldn't stand the strain of doing 12 first grade comedies a year and probably no comedian could do it now, either, but the gradually abbreviated "B's" wouldn't have to be comedies and wouldn't have to be strung along in star series, dependent on a single personality, but could cover the whole range of feature subject material and present studio contract players as the "B's" do now."

Maybe Hal Roach doesn't know what he's talking about when he discusses double bills, but if he doesn't, who does? This investigator, whose reportorial obligations bring him into frequent head-on contact with the so called "B" pictures in its native or preview habitat, thinks most species of them would profit by abbreviation at the rate of about 60 seconds per release until a happy mean average were arrived at. Sales department executives canvassed in quick query don't think so.

Differences of opinion make horse races, and motion pictures. Hal Roach needn't care much. (He could even parlay 'em). He's got the place, the people and the experience required to turn out screen product of whatever length and kind this or the next generation may elect to sing out for. And he says there's nothing remarkable about what's been happening on his trim little lot this side of Leo's. Your investigator reiterates that as the most remarkable remark of the week.

Eight Nations Display Films at Amateur Show

Eight countries were represented at the International Amateur Movie Show, sponsored by the Division of Film Study of Columbia University, held at the university Wednesday evening. The countries are Japan, Australia, Germany, Canada, Scotland, England, Czechoslovakia and the United States.

The films shown were: "To the Ships of Sydney," James A. Sherlock, Australia; "Mount Zao," Khoji Tsukamoto, Japan; "Fourth in Hand," Meteor Film Producing Society, Scotland; "L'Histoire D'Un Soldat," Cenek Zabradnicek, Czechoslovakia; "Gloire A L'Eau," Abbé Albert Tessier, Canada; "A Day's Excursion," William E. Chadwick, England; "Bommerli," Richard Groschopp, Germany, and "Prize Winner," J. Kinney Moore, Kansas City.

Twelve Top 15-Week Drive Quota in Nine Weeks

Twelve men in the field force of RKO Radio's sales staff already have exceeded their individual quota for the Ned Depinet Drive although the drive still has six weeks to run, the company announced this week.

In the over-quota listing of salesmen and branch managers, the leader for the United States and Canada is Fred Horn, salesman of Omaha. The company also announced that 30 men have topped their quota for the first nine-week period.

U.S. Steel Shows Two Pictures in 'Ad' Film Debut

United States Steel Corporation made its entrance into the field of sponsored motion pictures in New York City Wednesday afternoon when two productions telling the story of steel, were shown to a select preview audience of 300 persons gathered in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. Tickets to the press screening were scarcer than seats to a Goldwyn "super-spectacle" Hollywood premiere.

Although one of the two films, a one-reel subject, was produced expressly for theatrical showings, officials of the company said no definite plans for distribution had been evolved as yet. The company's future plans for handling the films will depend chiefly upon reactions of the preview audience, it was explained.

The second picture, a four-reeler, also in color, is intended for theatrical showings in communities where the corporation's plants and principal offices are located, and for exhibition before civic groups in other localities.

Edward S. Stettinius, Jr., newly elected chairman of U. S. Steel, explained in a welcoming address that the films were intended for showings before employees of U. S. Steel and its subsidiaries, for educational purposes and for exhibition before civic groups. Although Mr. Stettinius did not mention the subject, it was admitted the films are intended to supplement the corporation's institutional advertising.

The one-reel subject, entitled "Men Make Steel," is a condensed version of the four-reeler, "Steel—Man's Servant."

They were produced by Roland Reed Productions. The narrations are by Edwin C. Hill and the musical scores by Robert Armbruster. Other credits given were: Vittorio Giannini, musical consultant; Charles Underhill, general supervision; Charles Peter Boyle, photographer, and Bernard Loftus, editor. The one-reel subject runs 10 minutes, the four-reeler 37 minutes.

In both films the story of steel is told from the time it is mined until it is turned out in various forms for its many uses. In a preview program it was explained that the "same equipment direction and technique used in making a Hollywood feature production were employed to make these pictures." The program also said that "filming in technicolor requires about three times as much light as in black and white."

The direct advertising in the pictures is limited to the title announcement that "United States Steel Corporation and subsidiaries present" and to a single mention of the corporation's name in the narrative. Throughout the films the point is emphasized that the steel industry is not one of mass production but an industry that operates on man power. This is carried out by showing how men operate all the machinery. Also emphasized is the absence of "back-breaking" work. In the concluding scenes a smiling worker is shown receiving his pay check. Then an open hearth is pictured. This dissolves into shots of skyscrapers, battleships, bridges and other steel product.

More than $200,000 was expended in making the two pictures.

PARAMOUNT SALES FORCE AT CAPITAL; NEW WARNER, FOX PLANS FOR '38-'39

Total of Features Scheduled to Date Reaches 317 as Warners Plan 60; Twentieth Century-Fox Adds Seven Films

Field and home office executives of Paramount Pictures, third major to marshal sales forces for annual product conferences, are at Washington's Shoreham Hotel conducting sales and program discussions for 1938-39. Individual branch conferences will follow in each territory following conclusion of the convention, Saturday evening, on the return of district managers to their field headquarters.

Last-minute details of the new program were carried direct to the Shoreham from Hollywood by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, who has been on the coast all week conferring with production executives on the lineup. Mr. Agnew is presiding at the sales convention, announcing an elastic feature schedule running between 50 and 60 for next season.

To the 257 features already scheduled for the new year by six large companies, Warner Brothers this week added 60. The total of 317 is represented as follows: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 52 (titles published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 19th); Twentieth Century-Fox, 59 (titles published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 2d); RKO, 48; Grand National, 26; United Artists, 20; Warners, 60, and Paramount, 50 to 60, with GB probably contributing 24; Monogram, 42; Republic, 54, and Universal, 40, for a grand total of 470 from 11 companies. Columbia is still to be heard from.

B. N. Judell's Progressive Pictures Corp. will have 42 features, including 30 on "controversial and problem subjects," 6 "outdoor adventure" films and 6 westerns. Ready are "Delinquent Parents," "Wayward Daughters" and "Scandal House."

Warner to Push "Important" Films

Pre-convention studio product conferences at an end, Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of Warner Brothers distribution, returned to New York this week, accompanied by S. Charles Einfeld, advertising director; Mort Blumenstock, eastern director of advertising; Carl Leserman, assistant to Mr. Sears, and Sam Schneider, executive assistant to Harry M. Warner. Mr. Einfeld will stay in the east four weeks and then return to Burbank.

Bringing back word that the company has plans for 60 features for 1938-39, Mr. Sears reported that decisions had been made to eliminate Class "B" pictures and to concentrate on features with "long run" possibilities.

Next season's short subject program will remain the same as this year's, at 134.

Sales convention dates have not been set, he said, but it is likely that three regional meetings will be held. Regardless, the company is advancing selling dates to July, when 10 features will be available.

Mr. Sears said prospects looked good in Hollywood, which contributed to the decision of giving more attention to pictures having long-run potentialities. "The idea that seven days is long enough to run a picture is not a set rule," he said. "There is no reason why exhibitors

2,300 YEARS SPENT IN THEATRES IN DAY

Professor Arthur J. Todd, Northwestern University, has estimated that Americans spend 2,300 years in film theatres every day.

Other statistics of the professor's showed that Americans played with $1,000,000,000 in poker games in 1937; they bet $2,000,000,000 on the horses in 1935, about as much as they spent for public schools, he said.

should not play pictures until they secure every dollar they possibly can for the engagement."

The total color short subjects based on patriotic subjects will be increased next season, according to Norman Moray, short subject manager.

20th-Fox Classified List

Twentieth Century-Fox salesmen in the field received this week a classification listing on 54 of the 59 pictures for 1938-39. Darryl Zanuck Productions are designated on 29, and Sol Wurtzel Productions on 26. The two groups included the following classifications:

Nine "spectacles": "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Suez," "Kentucky," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Jesse James," "King of the Khyber Rifles," "Alexander Graham Bell," "Splinter Fleet," "Hudson Bay Company."

Ten "musicals": Eddie Cantor special, untitled; "Lucky Penny," "Susannah of the Mounties," "They Met in College" (tentative title), with Sonja Henie, and a second Henie film, untitled; football story, untitled; "Five of a Kind," "Straight, Place and Show," "Moonstruck," "Three Musketeers."

Eleven "dramas": "Ellis Island," "Dance Hall," "The Rains Came," "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Falling Star," "Song of the Island," "Time Out for Murder," three True Stories series.

In the "domestic" classification are four "Jones Family" pictures, two titled "Safety in Numbers" and "Bundle of Joy" and two as yet untitled.

Eight "comedy dramas": "He Married His Wife," "Accent on Love," "Night Before Divorce," "Little Princess," "Hello Hollywood," "Kid Texas," "Salomy Jane," "Meet the Girls."

The "mystery" films will include three Charlie Chans and three in the Mr. Moto series. Warner Oland is scheduled to return to the studio in the summer to resume the Charlie Chans.

Four in the Romantic Girl series will stress feminine appeal. The first will be titled "Girl Models."

The sports-action division includes "Sporting Chance," a second contemplated to be on the adventures of a newsreel cameraman and a third not set.

A record sales effort is planned by Twentieth Century-Fox during the sixth S. R. Kent drive, which will start August 20 and run 18 weeks, concluding December 17, and a 52-week contest, both for delivery.

The effort will serve to celebrate Mr. Kent's 20th anniversary in the business. There will be 12 cash awards, available to all employees at as many branches. During the 52-week contest, which will include the 18-week drive, there will be additional cash prizes for the first eight branches in the final standings.

William C. Gehring, central division manager, and William Sussman, eastern division manager, this week started tours through their respective territories in order to discuss results of the Twentieth-Fox sales convention.

Yates Announces Plans

All of Republic's 54 films and four serials on this year's contracts will be delivered to exhibitors by September 1, when the 1938-'39 releasing season will start. This was decided this week in New York by H. J. Yates, Sr., who will leave for the coast Tuesday to arrange for early completion of this year's product.

Mr. Yates will also arrange for Republic's first national sales convention, to be held May 3 to 5 at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood.

Republic has abandoned plans to increase the feature schedule by 10 films next year and the program will remain the same, numerically, as this year. Included in the new 54 will be 24 westerns. Even though Gene Autry is still at odds with the studio, he will be scheduled for a series of eight westerns. The "Three Mesquiteers" will again make eight. Bob Steele will be dropped as a western star and in his stead there will be a series of eight with Roy Rogers, a newcomer, and Smiley Burnette. Also, Republic has decided to make a "Lone Ranger" feature for next season as one of its specials.

Republic has purchased a series of Liberty articles titled "Doctor's Don't Tell," by Dr. George Raymond, to be the season's first.

Selznick Increases Schedule

Continuance of its policy of independent production will be maintained by Selznick International Pictures, Inc. This was revealed last week by John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board, in his report to stockholders.

A larger schedule of pictures than has been produced in any season since the formation of Selznick International was seen in new plans for the immediate filming of "The Young in Heart," from the Saturday Evening Post novel, "The Gay Banditti," which will star Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Paulette Goddard; "Heartbreak Town," "Of Great Riches" and "The Earl of Chicago."

Monogram to Meet May 8th

W. Ray Johnston, president, arrived in Hollywood this week to discuss Monogram's 1938-39 production plans with Scott R. Dunlap, production chief.

Mr. Johnston announced that he will preside at the annual sales convention, May 8th to 10th, in Cincinnati, and that the company has signed Boris Karloff to star in a series of James Lee Wong detective stories for next season.

Monogram is launching a sales drive in honor of George W. Weeks, new general sales manager, from May 15 to June 18. One hundred shares of Monogram stock will be given to the top man in the exchange making the best showing against the drive quota.

Financial setup reconstructed (Page 28), Imperial Pictures this week announced plans for 32 feature productions through exchanges operating under franchises. The productions will consist of four series, 10 "Blue Ribbon Specials," eight frontier dramas, eight musical westerns, and six "Exploitation Specials."

Plans for 1938-39 now under discussion at Universal call for the release of 12 western pictures, William A. Scully, general sales manager of Universal announced.

Six will star Universal's new singing cowboy, Bob Baker, who this season appeared in four.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Texans

(Paramount)
Romantic History

In a dozen or more pictures produced on an extensive scope, Paramount has demonstrated an aptitude to treat little known semi-historical subjects in a manner which permits the entertainment significance of romance to predominate over any instructive quality the story may possess. The procedure is being followed in the forthcoming "The Texans." Time of the story is the immediate post-Civil War period when northern carpet baggers swept into the South and some of the conquered but never-say-quit Confederates turned to monarchistic Mexico in search of assistance to wage a new war on the North. As the forces come into conflict the call of love is sounded and a northerner, endeavoring to establish a rule of reason and conciliation, persuades a girl to let him drive her cattle to market. Despite incredible hardships, prairie fires, fights with Indians and trouble with renegade Federals, the destination is reached. There love triumphs.

An exceptionally strong cast includes Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott, Robert Cummings and May Robinson, with support by Robert Barrat, Walter Brennan, Harvey Stephens, Raymond Hatton, Clarence Wilson and Jack Moore.

The picture is being directed by James Hogan, who made "Ebb Tide" and the earlier "The Arizona Raiders" and "Desert Gold."

Release date to be determined.

The Muddled Deal

(RKO Radio)
Triangular Romance

London is the locale. The time is the present. Thematically the picture deals with the ingenious scheme of a newly rich Cockney to break off his daughter's engagement to one of his employees, and the unexpected results achieved by an actress hired to do the job. The plot is peppered with non-formula situations, and comedy and excitement are the principal essentials. The British flavor is accentuated by the fact that a noted English actor is featured in his American screen debut and several other British actors are in the cast.

Joan Fontaine, in eight RKO-Radio pictures since she was "discovered" a year and a half ago, is featured with Derrick de Marney, who is familiar to American audiences and exhibitors who saw "Victoria the Great" and "Things to Come." He is also a stage and radio celebrity in the United Kingdom. Lilian Bond, last in "The Bishop Misbehaves" and earlier in "China Seas," returns to the screen. Among other British personalities are Cecil Cunningham, seen in several Paramount pictures, Claude Allister, who commutes between Hollywood and London, and Robert Coote, a member of the "A Yank at Oxford" troupe. Olaf Hytton, John Sutton and Ann Shaw also are included.

A William Siström production, as were "Everybody's Doing It," "There Goes My Girl" and "Forty Naughty Girls," the feature is being directed by Joseph Santley, maker of six previous pictures for RKO-Radio. Four name writers, Harry Segal, Paul Yawitz, Charles Kaufman and Viola Brothers Shore, collaborated to adapt Aladar Laszlow's original story.

Release date to be determined.

Kentucky Moonshine

(20th Century - Fox)
Comedy

The story of "Kentucky Moonshine" deals with four radio aspirants, the Ritz Brothers and Marjorie Weaver who never can get an audition. Learning that sponsors are going into the Ozarks in search of real hill billy talent, the quartette get there first. Temporarily they are mistaken as survivors of a feud, but everybody forgets feuding after a few shots of Kentucky moonshine, and then the fun is on. Promoters Tony Martin and Wally Vernon arrive in search of talent, complications begin, as does a mixed up romance between Martin and Miss Weaver. The group is taken to New York for a broadcast. The revelation that the four are pseudo hill billys leads to an uproarious climax.

M. M. Musselman and Jack Lait, Jr., with the benefit of added dialogue and comedy songs contributed by Sid Kuller and Ray Golden, concocted the original dizzy story. Music and lyrics are credited to Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell. David Butler, maker of the comedy "Pigskin Parade," and several Will Rogers and Shirley Temple films, is directing.

As featured players the Ritzes have added much to the fun and fury of many features. Marjorie Weaver was discovered in "Second Honeymoon." Tony Martin, Slim Summerville, John Carradine, Wally Vernon, Berton Churchill, Cecil Cunningham, Mary Treen, Claude Allister, Jan Duggan, Si Jenks and Joe Twerp need practically no identification. Also among those to be present are Eddie Collins, Paul Stanton, Francis Ford, the Brian Sisters, Frank McGlynn, Jr. and Irving Bacon.

Release date: April 29, 1938.

Crime Takes a Holiday

(Columbia)
Melodrama

Crime will do no such thing as take a holiday in the story of this production, but rather increase in intensity. The producer, Larry Damour, has adopted the surprise-suspense formula. A district attorney ostensibly turns crooked to trap a gang of business racketeers, whom he knows to be headed by a supposedly respectable citizen.

When the district attorney finally wrings a confession from his enemy, he is resourceful enough to see that the man's words go out on a radio broadcast, thus exonerating him of criminal complicity. A romantic story develops.

As in all the Darnour pictures for Columbia, Jack Holt will be the star of "Crime Takes a Holiday." The heavy is Douglas Dumbrille, and Russell Hopton and Marcia Ralston carry the romance. The supporting cast lists Thomas Jackson, Billy Van Every, John Wray, William Pawley, Harry Woods, George Anderson, Matty Fain, Arthur Hohl, Hal Price, Paul Fix and Hal Taliaferro.

Henry Altimus wrote the original story and Jefferson Parker and Charles Logue collaborated with him in preparing the screen play.

Lewis D. Collins, who directed several recent Darnour-Holt pictures, is serving in the same capacity.

Release date: May 4, 1938 (tentative).

Hold That Kiss

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)
Comedy-Romance

There appears to be much for showmanship in the title "Hold That Kiss," as well as in the cast, story idea and production technique. It looks as if it will mean to audiences what the several numbers in the "Judge Hardy" series have, and there is more than a possibility that it may attain the surprise entertainment values of "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" and "Navy Blue and Gold."

For names, regardless of billing priority, the picture offers exhibitors Mickey Rooney, one of the top juvenile drawing cards, who came into his own in "Slave Ship," "Captains Courageous" and "Judge Hardy's Children." It is more than likely the juvenile Rooney will be the star. The other top ranking names are Maureen O'Sullivan, seen in "A Yank at Oxford" and featured in the yet unreleased "Port of Seven Seas" and Dennis O'Keefe, who came into prominence via "Bad Man of Brimstone." Supporting this trio are Frank Albertson, Phillip Terry, Fay Holden ("Mrs. Hardy" in "Judge Hardy's Children"), George Barbier.

While romance, encountering many conflicting situations, is the basic premise, laugh provoking comedy is the principal reaction. The theme follows the boy-meets-girl idea. Each thinks the other is rich and tries to play up to that impression, which blends pathos with hilarity, desire with dislike and squabbles, in an air of heart warming human interest. Naturally the denouement, brought about by Rooney, ambitious to be a jazz band leader, sends boy and girl into each other's arms.

While writing credits have not been fully established, the production is being directed by Edwin L. Marin, who made "Married Before Breakfast" and "Everybody Sing."

Release date: May 13, 1938.

Ridin' Gent

(Monogram)
Trapping Counterfeiters

Although the story has to do with the operations of a counterfeiting ring and how it is trapped by an undercover government investigator and a girl, the picture is essentially a "western" in character. It follows formula, with plenty of action and suspense and a necessary romance. From a preview standpoint, it seems that the idea of having counterfeiters supplant rustlers and claim jumpers is the most useful showmanship angle in addition to name value.

With Tim McCoy starred, beauteous Suzanne Kaaren featured and Karl Hackett, one of the most villainous of all heavies, the supporting cast is made up of a group of players often seen in outdoor pictures, John St. Polis, John Merton, Harry Strange, Charles King, Dick Cramer, Tom London and Herbert Holcomb.

A Maurice Conn production, being directed by Sam Newfield, maker of scores of similar films, "Ridin' Gent" is based on a story by Stanley Roberts and Joseph O'Donnell which O'Donnell adapted.

Release date: May 4, 1938.

WALL STREET SEES CIRCUIT BUSINESS HOLDING; CANADA REPORTS INCREASE

Net Close to $2,067,599 Predicted for Twentieth Century-Fox Quarter; Pathe Film Shows $466,918 Profit for the Year

Attendance, since the first of the year, at motion picture theatres operated by the large producing companies has been equal to, and in some weeks ahead of, attendance during the same period last year, according to the Wall Street Journal.

As a result, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, for one, was expected to report a net profit of the first quarter close to $2,067,599 earned in the 13 weeks ended March 27, 1937, which was equal after preferred dividends to $1 a share on 1,684,075 common shares. A profit "somewhere in the neighborhood of 90 cents a share on the shares now outstanding," it was predicted.

Other financial news of the week included a report of Pathe Film Corporation and subsidiaries, showing a profit for the calendar year 1937 of $466,918.26 as compared to $183,953.18 in 1936;

Announcement by J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, that his company recorded an increase of more than 10 per cent in gross receipts for the first quarter this year as compared to a similar period last year:

Net profit of $98,317.93 reported by Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., for the year ended January 31, 1937;

Declaration by Loew's, Inc., of a quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the cumulative preferred stock, payable May 14th to stockholders of record April 28th;

Registration of 425,000 shares of Imperial Pictures stock with the Securities and Exchange Commission becoming effective.

In submitting the 1937 report for Pathe, O. Henry Briggs, president, pointed out that the volume of film printing increased last year to 78,698,000 feet, over the 51,552,000 feet total in 1936.

Dividends Maintained

Regular dividend payments of the $7 convertible preferred stock were maintained during the year and a $400,000 bank loan was fully repaid, the statement pointed out. The statement also announced that the new laboratory under construction in the building at 35 West 45th Street, New York, should be ready about May 1st, and that the additions is expected to increase the company's volume of printing work now done at the Bound Brook, N. J., laboratory.

The net profit of $466,918 included $472,500 in dividends received from the Du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation. The profit is equivalent to 70 cents a share on 585,072 shares of common stock. In the preceding year the profit equaled 22 cents a share.

The consolidated balance sheet as of December 31, 1937, shows current and working assets, including $102,105 cash, amounted to $472,732 and current liabilities were $272,235, compared with cash of $220,876, current and working assets of $779,984 and current liabilities of $664,123 at the end of 1936.

Total assets as of December 31st amounted to $3,961,542 against $3,943,662 on December 31, 1936. Capital surplus totaled $1,737,212 and earned surplus, $544,245, compared with capital surplus of $1,710,604 and earned surplus of $133,234 reported by the company at the close of the preceding year.

Imperial Stock Registered

In announcing that the registration of its stock had become effective, Imperial Pictures said that there will be a public offering of the 425,000 shares at $1.50 a share, through the underwriting firm of A. R. Titus & Company, 111 Broadway, New York. Morris D. Kopple is general counsel for the registrant.

In addition to Mr. Fitzgibbons reporting a ten per cent increase in gross receipts for the first quarter of the year for Famous Players Canadian, a subsidiary, United Amusements, Ltd., this week reported a net profit for the year 1937 of $100,170, equal to $1.24 per share on 80,829 shares of common outstanding stock. The net for the previous year was $101,134. Famous Players reported earned surplus of $2,716,717. All officers were reelected.

The rate of improvement for Famous Players, the Wall Street Journal announced, is being continued, with the better entertainment well spread over all sections in which the company operates.

"Because movie attendance is counted one of the most sensitive barometers of business trends and sentiment, the current trend of this company's business may be counted as a commentary of the general business mood in Canada," the Journal stated.

In its annual statement, Metropolitan Playhouses, real estate operating company for the Skouras and Randforce theatre circuits, explained that rent income amounted to $3,609,831.61 and that expenses totaled $2,888,401.78. Dividends received from affiliated companies and interest earned amounted to $179,945.57. Provision for federal income taxes was set at $19,903.09.

A 90 per cent drop in net income for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for February as compared to the same month in 1937 was reported this week. AT & T, parent corporation of Western Electric and its motion picture equipment subsidiaries, announced its net income for the month was $73,711 as compared to $873,149 for the same period in 1937.

Kiesling Leaves on Publicity Tour

Barrett C. Kiesling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Hollywood publicity department left New York Wednesday on an extended tour of the country. The purpose of his trip is to "visit and aid photoplay, radio, fashion and picture editors by analysis of their needs, plus delivery of special pictorial and story materials and to aid theatre and branch managers in any way the visit makes possible." Mr. Kiesling will end his tour in Los Angeles on July 31st.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Let the disillusionment work where it may, Snow White wants a cocktail, and pronto.

Three years ago Walter Disney, in Hollywood, telephoned the singing studio of Maestro Caselotti and asked him if he had a pupil with a little-girl voice. Adriana, daughter of the teacher, was eavesdropping on another phone, and when her father had hung up, she dashed down stairs shouting: "Send me! Send me!" He did. And that's how Snow White was born.

Today, Adriana is in New York visiting. But she's a little sick of this Snow White business. Says she has to wear a hair-ribbon because Snow White does. "And I can't even take a cocktail in public for fear of disillusioning somebody."

Just because Walter Wanger has a line of dialogue in his "I Met My Love," about "those cocktail-drinking Bradleys," a Bradley family in Vermont is suing him for $300,000.

"Warners Rule Out Pictures With Limited Audience Appeal," says a Film Daily headline. Now we're getting some place.

Sigrid Gurie, Goldwyn's Garbo from Oslo, who turned out to be a product of Flatbush, Brooklyn—and everybody had fun being fooled—is being taught Americanism by Godfather Goldwyn. Already you should hear her say "Colossal!"

Republic Pictures has bought "Doctors Don't Tell." Life magazine does.

Paramount Publicity would have us believe that the 68-year-old Sultan of Johore is to journey from his province in the Federated Malay States to Hollywood this summer to search for a bride after seeing Dorothy Lamour in Paramount's "Jungle Princess." "And he makes no secret of the fact," says the Paramount blurb, "that he is looking for a girl as much like Dorothy Lamour as possible."

Wisecracker Milton Berle asserts he was playing golf with Jack Oakie one day near Hollywood, and when he reached the sand trap on the eighth hole he found Grand National shooting a desert scene.

Universal probably had the Japs in mind when they changed the title of "Half Way to Shanghai" to "Sinners in Paradise."

"Music is not noise," asserted Toronto's City Council, and as such cannot be banned under the new civic prohibition of disturbing sounds. Apparently they have never heard some of those Major Bowes amateurs.

Some of those who attended the Twentieth Century-Fox sales convention in Kansas City still are unaware that the passes given to them by Bill Elson, manager, for free admittance to the RKO Mainstreet, had appended to them a bottom-line reading: "We positively do not show Fox product."

Aside to Nicholas Schenck and Louis B. Mayer: Your Greta Garbo has purchased a 63-carat diamond for $360,000 in Stockholm.

Forty-two years ago next week, on April 23, 1896, Koster and Bial gave the first public exhibition of a motion picture on Armat's Vitascope, forerunner of present-day projection, at their Music Hall theatre, 34th Street and Herald Square, New York. To Thomas Armat, of Washington, D. C., the world owes the intermittent movement mechanism which, introduced in the Vitascope, manufactured by Thomas A. Edison, made practicable the projecting of motion picture films upon a theatre screen.

The Vitascope was programmed in the vaudeville "chaser" spot on its natal presentation. Another ten years were to pass before the screen overcame that casually forced tradition, to start on its way to a two billion dollar project and to the Selznicks, Warners, Mayers, Goldwyns and Schencks of today.

The films used in their first Vitascope exhibition were each 50 feet in length, and the New York Herald for Sunday, May 3, 1898, reported "they are to be improved shortly by films from 150 to 500 feet in length," among them "pictures of Niagara Falls, a steamer going down the Lachine Rapids and an ocean greyhound leaving her pier with her decks crowded with passengers waving adieus to their friends on shore."

That first Vitascope screen exhibition that was given in Koster and Bial's Music Hall, where now stands Macy's department store, embraced some 11 subjects: "Sea Waves," "Umbrella Dance," "The Barber Shop," "Burlesque Boxing," "Monroe Doctrine," "A Boxing Bout," "Venice, Showing Gondolas," "Kaiser Wilhelm Reviewing His Troops," "Skirt Dance," "Butterfly Dance," "Cuba Libre" and "The Bar Dance."

"By means of the Vitascope, life-size figures of men, women and animals and scenes from nature are thrown upon a screen, and present to the spectator an animated, moving panorama," reported the New York Herald in what probably represented the first newspaper "review" of a motion picture. "The result is intensely interesting and pleasing," continued the account, "but Mr. Edison is not quite satisfied yet. He wants now to improve the phonograph so that it will record double the amount of sound that it does at present; and he hopes then to combine this improved phonograph with the Vitascope so as to make it possible for an audience to witness a photographic reproduction of an opera or a play—to see the movements of the actors and hear their voices as plainly as though they were witnessing the original production itself. And when it is remembered what marvels Edison has produced, it would not seem at all improbable that he may yet add this one to his many others." That was in April, 1896. Talking pictures came just 30 years later.

(Historical facts from Terry Ramsaye's article, "The Founding of the Screen," pp. 17 to 23 of 1936-37 issue, "International Motion Picture Almanac.")

Youngsters attending Republic's "Lone Ranger" serial at the Ace theatre, Wilmington, Del., are "frisked" before entering the theatre and compelled to check all "firearms" and knives at the box office.

Too much shooting in the theatre during exhibition of the serial with toy machine and tin submarine guns, toy revolvers, pistols and repeaters, and slashing of seats with scout knives brought about the ban by Manager Benjamin Shindler.

The New York Post is "happy to hear Mr. Will Hays, czar of the motion picture industry, announce that the cinema has no room for propaganda; in fact never propagandizes at all."

"This reassures" the editors of the Post, who "are glad the screen is not devoted to spreading particular ideas abroad."

"To be sure," they add, "we have been wondering where Americans got the idea that platinum blonde hair is better than plain brown; where they obtained their special picture of the successful man as one who has seven telephones on his desk and a manicurist in his office; where they obtained the notion that the way to get on in life is to step right over three secretaries and barge into the chief's office; where they got the view that all managing editors are large, choleric gentlemen forever sending their reporters out into the jaws of death for a 'scoop'; where they obtained the impression that all elderly female society ladies wear lorgnettes and nurse poodles; where they learned that the best way to succeed is to marry the boss' daughter; where they found out that the true measure of a successful life is the possession of a swimming pool."

The New York Evening Post would not be expected to know a lot about success or its symbols.

Bob Burns is bemoaning the fact that one of the greatest physical culture experts in the world gave a lecture in Hollywood the other night on the care of the human body and nobody went because they didn't want to take their automobiles out in the rain and spoil their lustre.

Barney Oldfield, Motion Picture Herald correspondent in Nebraska, takes his Hollywood seriously. Called to California to be interviewed on the Cecil B. DeMille Lux Radio Theatre hour, Mr. Oldfield was indeed surprised when, alighting from the plane, a large delegation of welcomers, headed by Priscilla, Lola and Rosemary Lane, rushed in his direction, arms outstretched and lips all puckered. Barney was delighted—but he had failed to reckon on the lady passenger directly in front of him, who happened to be the mother of the screen's Lanes.

Added to all the other problems, protests, complaints and controversies occupying the attention of the independent exhibitor, New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association now is having a mad-on with the city fathers because they will not allow the municipal trucks to pick up the theatres' garbage, requiring the owners to employ private carters.

The double-bill in the sex-film line has arrived. The Broadway theatre, located in Tampa's Latin section of Ybor City, is offering a week of midnight double-sex-bills, with "Forbidden Adventures" and "Valley of the Nude," also "A Money Back Guarantee," whatever that means.

Eddie Cantor spends much energy talking about his five daughters. His chauffeur could do likewise. He has the same.

STANDARDIZING TO CUT AIR-CONDITIONING COST

But Highly Individualized Enclosures Limit Mass Production, Says W. H. Carrier

by GEORGE SCHUTZ
Editor of Better Theatres

Substantial reduction of the cost of complete air-conditioning depends largely upon greater standardization in the plans and forms of buildings, Willis H. Carrier told 25 editors assembled at the new manufacturing plant of the Carrier Corporation in Syracuse, N. Y. The editors, representing more than a dozen trade publications in various industries, were guests of the company, pioneer makers of air-conditioning equipment, on April 8.

In the new Syracuse plant, which is housed in buildings originally used for the manufacture of Franklin air-cooled automobiles, are consolidated all the Carrier operations formerly distributed among a number of plants in New Jersey, and a tour through the new establishment disclosed the extent to which the fabrication of air-conditioning equipment has already been placed on a "line" or mass production basis.

Mass production, however, is thus far severely limited, Mr. Carrier pointed out, because each air-conditioning system must be to a great degree designed for a highly individualized enclosure. The only exception is equipment adapted to a single room, such as an office or store. Two new Carrier units for these latter applications were demonstrated—one of three-ton, the other of five-ton cooling capacity.

Structural Diversity

Enlarging upon the standardization factor cited in his talk to the editors, in which he traced the development of air-conditioning for comfort from its early application to the motion picture theatre, Mr. Carrier said, in a conversation with the writer, that certain standardized units—socalled "package" equipment—now available for smaller theatres, represented a partial solution of the cost problem in this field, but that there was still too much structural diversity among all classes of theatres to eliminate special designing and construction of distribution systems, which add to the cost and therefore tend to restrict installations to a point making anything approaching mass production of mechanical equipment economically impossible.

Facilities Improved

Mr. Carrier did not indicate an opinion as to how far theatre forms might be more directly adapted to the requirements of relatively low-cost air-conditioning, but in view of efforts, such as those of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, to bring about some standardization of practices in auditorium planning, the general acceptance of air-conditioning as a requisite of the theatre may ultimately add this function to projection, acoustics, seating, etc., as another factor determining approved theatre forms.

Besides the unit air-conditioners especially adapted to stores, offices and residences, a recent development discussed at an afternoon meeting addressed by members of the engineering staff, was the application of Silica Gel to dehumidification in air-conditioning systems. This equipment, announced several months ago, employs a synthetic substance of great moisture-absorbing capacity, and its use effects reduction in the water content of the air without influencing temperature.

In welcoming the company's guests, L. R. Boulware, vice-president and general manager, said that, despite current economic trends, manufacturing facilities had been improved in the removal to Syracuse, while research was being fully maintained.

A dinner for the editors at the Hotel Syracuse was coupled, to conclude the day's program, with a local radio broadcast representing a grateful city's salute to the Carrier Corporation as its newest industry (the company regularly employs 1,700). Mr. Carrier, introduced by a dramatized reminiscence of his celebrated paper on rational psychrometric formulae in 1911, briefly recounted the history of air-conditioning as a distinct art.

Judge Outlaws Chance Games

Judge Harry S. McDevitt ruled this week in Philadelphia that Bingo, Bango, Lucky, Bank Night and similar games and giveaways are illegal. In a sweeping indictment of what he termed "gambling games," he declared they were at wide variance with the laws of the Commonwealth in that they violate the lottery and gambling ordinances. Judge McDevitt ruled in effect, that it is against the law to give a prize at any place in which an admission is paid or a chance sold.

Action on the ruling is not expected before April 25th, when a hearing will be held on exceptions filed by David S. Malis, attorney for the Palm theatre. Morris Somerson, owner of the Palm, had sought an injunction to prevent city authorities from interfering with the use of games at his theatre. It is estimated that more than 150 theatres in the Philadelphia area will be affected by the decision.

Chester County, Montgomery County, Lancaster County, Delaware County and Cumberland County, N. J., all in the Philadelphia film territory, have banned Bank Night.

Six Oklahoma City suburban theatres have abandoned Bank Night drawings after the managers were informed by Lewis R. Morris, county attorney, that he would prosecute owners who violate an attorney-general's opinion handed down April 2d.

The latest form of giveaway in Chicago is Auction Night, which is being adopted by many theatres there. Warner theatres and a number of Essaness houses have started the stunt and a number of Balaban and Katz theatres may soon adopt the plan, it is reported.

SEEKS MAYORALTY TO AID INDUSTRY

Henri Elman, president of the Capitol Film Exchange, Chicago, will run for mayor on the Republican ticket in that city in 1939. Announcing his candidacy he said:

"With all the troubles this business has been getting into around the city hall in recent years, it looks to me like it's high time that somebody from show business ran for public office in Chicago. . . . I'm not saying I'll be elected but I'll give them a good fight anyway."

Chicago's last Republican mayor was Big Bill Thompson, in 1927.

ERPI Directors Reelect Officers

Whitford Drake, president, and all other officers of Electrical Research Products, Inc., were reelected Tuesday at the annual meeting of the board in New York.

The other officers are: H. G. Knox, D. C. Collins and G. C. Pratt, vice-presidents; Fred Foster, Jr., treasurer, and H. B. Gilmore, secretary.

The parent company of ERPI, Western Electric, held an annual meeting of stockholders on Tuesday also. Directors reelected included Walter C. Allen, James W. Bancker, Edgar S. Bloom, John M. Davis, Harvey D. Gibson, Richard H. Gregory, William F. Hosford, William B. Joyce, Frederic H. Leggett, David Levinger, Thomas I. Parkinson, T. Brooke Price, Clarence G. Stoll and William T. Teague. Officers were reelected later at a directors' meeting. They are: Edgar S. Stoll, president; C. G. Stoll, W. F. Hosford, C. L. Rice, F. W. Bierwirth, W. H. Meese, T. Brooke Price, W. T. Teague and J. W. Bancker, vice-presidents; R. H. Gregory, chief comptroller; H. B. Gilmore, secretary, and F. H. Leggett, treasurer.

College Swing

(Paramount)

Campus Syncopation

Radio bands and swing stylists have been loudly informing the population of the approach of this multi-starred spoofing of collegiate customs, a good natured and tuneful treatise somewhat more adroitly integrated and novelty motivated than most. It offers billable names to tax the most spacious marquee and all of those present get a chance to do their stuff. There should be no difficulty in assembling a quorum, and if there's a minority report it must come from the arthritic and stone deaf, a type the billing itself doubtlessly will weed out.

Gracie Allen has the best lines and doesn't monopolize the camera. Bob Hope gives added promise of a bright future in films. Edward Everett Horton and Ben Blue turn in their customary sound performances, and Martha Raye steps up the temperature each time she takes over. There's timeliness in the appearance of Jackie Cooper and Betty Grable. Florence George and John Payne sing a superfluous romantic interest agreeably.

The story idea by Ted Lesser, worked over by three other writers, concerns the scholastic deficiency of "Gracie Alden," whose failure to earn a sheepskin in 1738 prompted her grandfather to leave his fortune to the custody of the school until such time as she or a descendent on the distaff side shall graduate.

Producer Lewis E. Gensler distended his budget where it would do the most good, and Director Raoul Walsh kept the touch light and the action brisk. Frank Loesser and various collaborators contributed seven song numbers, at least two of which are popular and should become more so.

Under Western Stars

(Republic)

Musical Western

When Gene Autry some months ago announced to Republic, in the middle of his series of musical westerns, that he wanted more money and wouldn't make any more pictures unless he got it, the studio, after attempting to make overtures to the No. 1 cowboy star of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll, announced that it would groom a young chap by the name of Roy Rogers for stardom in a musical western series. Rogers, a radio singer and leader of an air troupe, "Sons of the Pioneers," which has acquired some measure of prestige on the Pacific Coast, was teamed with Smiley Burnette, who has continuously added to his comedy laurels in Republic productions.

Rogers has a definite personality, a grand voice and an appeal to virtually every class of patrons. Naturally, comparisons with Autry will be made, but Rogers has nothing to worry about, nor has Republic, nor, probably, has Autry.

"Under Western Stars," founded on a substantial original story by Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, who with Betty Burbridge wrote the screenplay, probably will rate as one of the better western pictures.

"Rogers" wins a congressional election after battling a water company. In Washington, he fails to get his colleagues to vote cheaper water, though he shows them newsreels of the drought conditions. Later, when a congressional party travels through his state, "Rogers" has them placed on horseback, and an actual dust storm makes the solons see things in a different light.

There are five songs—"Send My Mail to the County Jail," "When a Cowboy Sings a Song," "Back to the Backwoods," by Jack Larence and Peter Tinturin; "Rogers for Congressman," by Eddie Cherkose and Charles Rosoff, and "Dust," by Johnnie Marvin. All are well suited to the type of production.

Outstanding is the photography by Jack Marta.

Nurse from Brooklyn

(Universal)

Melodrama

When members of an audience at the Pantages theatre, generally conceded to be a "tough" place in which to preview a picture—especially a melodrama—go out audibly praising the offering, it is a good indication that the film will please virtually any type of audience. That is what followed the initial showing of Universal's "Nurse from Brooklyn." Melodramatic in style, the film offers well balanced action, suspense and romance.

The cast consists of Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly, Larry Blake, Maurice Murphy, Morgan Conway, David Oliver and Lucile Gleason. S. Sylvan Simon directed the adaptation, by Roy Chanslor, of the Liberty magazine story by Steve Fisher. Edmund Grainger was associate producer.

"Craine," a criminal, failing in his attempt to lure "Danny Thomas" back into a life of crime, kills "Thomas" and wounds "Jim Barnes," a police officer. "Barnes' nurse, "Elizabeth Thomas," is the sister of the dead youth. "Craine" attempts to have "Elizabeth" lure "Barnes" into a trap. But she loves "Barnes" and "Craine" is killed in the fight.

Mr. Moto's Gamble

(20th Century - Fox)

Melodrama

The latest of the Mr. Moto mystery melodrama pictures is compounded of the elements that make a good mystery and it has twice the amount of comedy found in most of the series. It also gives considerable footage to boxing, yet the production is well balanced and moves robustly throughout.

The cast of course is headed by Peter Lorre as "Mr. Moto." Keye Luke, "Charlie Chan's" son in that series, plays a comedy role. Maxie Rosenbloom, who recently was quoted as saying that he intended to forego boxing because of possible injury to his screen profile, evidently knew whereof he spoke. He improves with each role. Lynn Bari, a newspaper woman, and Dick Baldwin, a boxer, supply the romance.

"Mr. Moto," like his contemporary "Chan," gets around. The setting this time is New York. In this, "Mr. Moto" is definitely on the side of the law. He heads a crime school.

Accompanied by "Lee" (Keye Luke) and "Lieutenant Riggs" (Harold Huber) of the police, "Moto" attends a prize fight in which one of the boxers is killed. An autopsy reveals that the boxer died of poison transmitted by the glove of his opponent to a cut over the eye. After interrogation of boxers, handlers and gamblers leaves the mystery still unsolved, Moto locates a suspect, who is promptly murdered.

"Mr. Moto" becomes uncommunicative while calmly waiting for the championship fight. An inveterate detective story reader may have decided who is the guilty party just about the time that "Moto" does, and may be correct, for there are several clues along the way, a departure from the run of mystery films or books.

Hearts of Arizona

(Paramount-Sherman)
Western

The elements demanded by western picture fans are fully capitalized in "Hearts of Arizona," next to the last of this season's "Hop-along Cassidy" pictures which Harry Sherman is producing for Paramount release. With Bill Boyd are featured George Hayes and Russell Hayden. Supporting players include John Elliott, Billy King, Natalie Moorhead, Dorothy Short, Alden Chase, John Beach, Lane Chandler and Leo McMahon.

Unfavorable reaction may be drawn from dyed-in-the-wool western fans by the stilted discourses on love and by performances which might have been accepted in silent days.

"Hopalong Cassidy" befriends "Belle Starr" when the woman is freed from jail. Following her release, cattle rustlers become active and, while everyone suspects the woman, "Cassidy" uncovers the real thieves. In the gunfight "Belle" is killed.

Topa Topa

(Pennant)

Animal Feature

There's been so much concentration on human and cartoon characterization around Hollywood lately that nobody's done much about the long gap between animal pictures. Nobody, that is, except William M. Vogel, producer, who has had his troupe busy making one in which an extremely capable canine, named Silver Wolfe, and a trained eagle, Goldie, perform against a story background in the manner of the late Rin Tin and, of course, no feathered predecessor.

The incident featured in a screen foreword is the adoption of an infant by an eagle. This is perhaps the liveliest exploitation possibility. It is the dog, however, who gets most of the camera attention, and Silver Wolf is as fine an animal as the lens has fastened eye upon in a long while. The setting is a mountain in the Rockies (Topa Topa) and the incidents include a forest fire, the scaling of the peak atop which the eagle nests, a murder, a mountain hoe-down and kindred items.

The players, listed below, enact their story without diverting attention from the animals oftener or for longer periods than necessary. Production intent, throughout, is to capture the public interest in animal precocity, and the story is designed accordingly.

Go Chase Yourself

(RKO-Radio)

Nonsense DeLuxe

If the reactions of a representative preview audience mean anything, "Go Chase Yourself" should send plenty of persons who appreciate nonsensical comedy into hilarious glee. The picture makes no pretense of being other than what it actually is—about 65 minutes of absurd comedy. But it's legitimate comedy, the kind that makes folks laugh at circus clowns and similar entertainers. There are few sequences that make any sense at all and fewer that are in any way serious.

There's a story idea, of course, but that essential is merely a skeletonized framework for gags in situations, characterizations, action and dialogue. The theme may be summed up in a few words. "Wilbur," dizzy bank clerk, witlessly tips off bandits to a secret money vault, is kidnapped by them in a trailer which he won in a lottery; helps kidnap an heiress in the belief that he is doing her a good turn, and then guides the wild trailer down a mountain road for about ten minutes of the liveliest excitement the screen has seen in years. Few pictures have had such a breakneck climax.

The motivating idea is as elementary as in the old-fashioned two-reelers. After the real fun begins the accent is consistently ridiculous.

Previewed at the United Artists Theatre, Inglewood, Cal. The audience, which didn't seem to think much of the offering for about the first five minutes, changed its tone and surrendered wholeheartedly to the broad comedy. No matter how ridiculous or insane the gag appeared to be, the crowd seemed to think it was just the thing to do.—G. M.

Call of the Yukon

Arctic Adventure
(Republic)

Romance and adventure depicted against picturesque snow backgrounds are this film's major essentials. While Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts and Lyle Talbot carry the story, two dogs, Eskimo and Collie, are important in the action, and a pair of bear cubs and a talking crow provide the comedy contrast. Moving speedily, with action and dialogue well balanced, the show has appeal for adults and should prove a strong attraction for youngsters. Incidents introduced, such as a wild dog attack on a herd of moose, the antics of the cubs, an avalanche and a roughhouse fight between Arlen and Talbot, give the film plenty of punch.

Wild dogs, led by Black Lightning, menace the natives, trapper Gaston and author Jean. The trapper, inspired by love, endeavors to convince the girl she should flee. By a ruse he puts fear into Jean's heart, and as Black Lightning becomes the mate of the collie Firefly, the long trek over snow and ice to civilization begins. The show builds interest consistently to the climax wherein rivals Arlen and Talbot stage their he-man fight. As they reach safety, Lightning comes under the refining influence of Firefly.

Produced in the vivid style that once made Malemute dog films highly popular, the picture appears to have entertainment and showmanship content to make a satisfactory attraction for audiences appreciating novelty and thrills.

The film is based on James Oliver Curwood's novel, "Swift Lightning." Reeves Eason directed in typical action fashion. Class was given by producer Armand Schaeffer.

MUSIC NOT "NOISE", SAYS TORONTO COUNCIL

The Toronto city fathers have decided that music is not noise and, accordingly, cannot be banned as such under the new civic prohibition of disturbing sounds. The use of loudspeakers for ballyhoo purposes in front of theatres and advertising sound trucks will continue to be outlawed.

The question of music versus noise came to a head when J. W. McMaster of the Toronto Musical Protective Association, composed of union orchestra and band musicians, appeared before the health committee to protest against classification of music as "noise."

However, Committeeman Lumsden Cummings suggested that "a trumpeter who opens the window when he is practicing should be hanged."

Deny RCA Report

E. C. Cahill, head of RCA Photophone's equipment department, issued a statement this week denying a report that the company was considering withdrawing from the servicing field. "Photophone is in the servicing business to stay," Mr. Cahill said. "We have a permanent stake in the business and have no intention of withdrawing from the field. Our servicing operations are increasing and our service staffs are being enlarged."

"Robin Hood" Pressbook Out

The Warner Brothers advertising department has turned out an unusually large pressbook on "The Adventures of Robin Hood." Coogan Sues Mother For $4,000,000

Jackie Coogan filed suit in superior court in Los Angeles this week against his mother and stepfather. He alleged that $4,000,000 constituting his life's earnings has been denied him. Judge Emmet H. Wilson issued a temporary restraining order and named John F. Biby, an attorney, as receiver.

The complaint demanded that the court enjoin his mother, Mrs. Lillian R. Coogan Bernstein, and Arthur L. Bernstein, his stepfather, from selling or disposing of any property in their possession, including the assets of Jackie Coogan Productions, Inc., and of Coogan Finance Corporation, pending a hearing April 20th before Judge Wilson.

Mr. Bernstein and Charles J. Katz, attorney, denied that Mr. Coogan earned $4,000,000, declaring the amount was considerably less. "His mother was entitled to all his earnings up to the time he became of age," Mr. Katz said. Mr. Coogan is 23.

To Hold Buckman Trial

Three officials of B. E. Buckman and Company, Madison, Wis., investment firm, have been bound over to municipal court in Milwaukee for trial on fraud charges in connection with the alleged sale of unregistered securities, including stock of Condor Pictures, Inc. Street Busker

"St. Martin's Lane" decorative artery of metropolitan London, resort of Britain's theatrical and vaudeville artists, and fringe of London's night life, has been recreated in the Associated British Studios, Elstree, as a set for the Laughton-Pommer production of that name.

In the film Charles Laughton appears as a busker, street corner performer and entertainer of London's theatre queues, a picturesque character whose piece de resistance is the recitation of "The Green Eye of the Little Yellow God." He meets Vivien Leigh, who is an unemployed Cockney girl, and they form a quartet with Tyrone Guthrie and Gus McNaughton, one playing the mouth organ and the other the mandolin. For the musical ends of the picture Charles Laughton plays the tin whistle.

"St. Martin's Lane" included landmarks of the neighborhood, Leicester Square and Charing Cross Road, and covers an area of half a mile which the art director has squeezed into a set barely 250 feet deep. The set has been built in perspective, and buses which are only six feet high run up and down Charing Cross Road.

Noted buskers from London's kerb side appear in the film; characters known to the town boulevardiers, and popular with theatre queues. They include a paper tearer, a song and dance troupe and some performing dogs.

The original story was written by Clarence Dane. Writing the songs and music for this Mayflower Production is Arthur Johnston, composer of "Pennies from Heaven" and "The Natural Thing to Do." Erich Pommer is producing, Tim Whelan directing, and Jules Kruger is at the camera.

Teddington Resumes

Teddington Studios of Warners in London resumed production last week with the first of the 1938-39 program going before cameras. The first picture started under the new Films act is "The Return of Carol Sawyer," starring Bebe Daniels, with Arthur Woods directing. This is also the first picture since the appointment of Jerry Jackson as managing director and executive producer.

"Lost Lady" Starts

Paul Lukas has been placed under contract and will appear in a new Alfred Hitchcock drama "Lost Lady" (previously known as "The Wheel Spins"), which is in current production at the Islington Studios of Gainsborough Films.

It is announced that numerous other artists of front rank calibre will be engaged to play roles in the new production. Among those recently engaged is Dame May Whitty, veteran character actress whose performance in "Night Must Fall" focussed the attention of film companies. It will be her first British film, and she will have the principal role, a spinster.

Maurice Ostrer is in charge of production and Edward Black is to produce.

Charles Laughton and Vivien Leigh in a new Pommer-Laughton production for Mayflower, "St. Martin's Lane."

Gas Masks

Britain's plans to defend her towns and people against the menace of enemy air raids colloquially known as "A. R. P." (Air Raid Precautions), will form the background and subject matter of a Pinebrook Production, the cooperative concern which works at the Pine-wood Studios and is headed by Capt. Norton. The film, however, will not go into production until May or June.

A larger budget than usual is contemplated,

THREE KORDA FILMS ON BROADWAY

Alexander Korda had three films simultaneously playing at Broadway first run houses last week. The pictures which are released by United Artists are "The Divorce of Lady X" at the Radio City Music Hall, "The Gaiety Girls" at the Rivoli and "Storm in a Teacup" at the Carnegie.

Further attention was focused on Mr. Korda's activities with the return to New York this week of Merle Oberon after completing a second color film for the producer, Robert E. Sherwood's "Over the Moon." In addition, Mr. Korda's color film of India, "Mutiny in the Mountains," had its premiere in London at the New Odeon theatre on Monday.

and it is said that between £40,000 and £50,000 ($250,000) will be spent on production.

Directing the A. R. P. epic will be Maurice Elvey, British director who was associated with the Anti Air Craft Corps during the last war. The story will not be a comedy, but a suggestion that there will be light relief is contained in the news that Gordon Harker has been engaged for one of the parts.

Pinebrook have just completed "Spot of Bother" at Pinewood.

Phillpotts Comedy

The rocky fishing coves of Cornwall, the rolling moorlands of Devon and the high-hedged lane ways of Southwest England will form locations and background for the Associated British Production of "Yellow Sands," based on Eden Phillpott's play of the West Country.

Shooting started at Elstree on April 4th, with Herbert Brenon in direction and Claud Friese Greene at the camera.

Already numerous shots have been taken on location and subsequent filming will take place at Elstree.

"Yellow Sands," generally regarded as one of Eden Phillpotts' best, is a human comedy of character and in many ways an apt successor to Herbert Brenon's "Housemaster."

The story tells of a maiden lady with money and the attitude of her relatives towards her impending demise. Diana Churchill has the leading part in the comedy, and will have opposite her Robert Newton as the old lady's nephew with radical ideas. Wilfred Lawson has the role of a typical English beachcomber, "Uncle Dick."

Others in the cast include Patrick Barr, Amy Veness and Drusilla Wills and Muriel Johnston as two old ladies who might be described as the equivalent of the pixilated aunts of Mr. Deeds.

Murder Story

David Macdonald and Emlyn Williams, director and star respectively of "Dead Men Tell No Tales," are to make another picture for the same company, British National. This is to be "Murder in Suburbia." Once again the Welsh actor will have a sinister role, as a suburban medico who uses his professional activities as a screen behind which he commits a series of murders.

This film will be followed by a new production, set in Scotland.

Under the title of "Take Off That Hat" Viking Films are on the floor at Cricklewood with a production in which are numerous leading figures of British vaudeville and radio.

These include Scott and Whaley, popular colored stars of English radio and variety, Noni, the clown, Fred Duprez, Gypsy Nina, Inga Anderson and others of repute higher on this side than on the American side of the Atlantic. As is the case with many musicals, it is claimed that this is no hodge-podge of musical variety, but has a logical story.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 107

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 107 was: (A) What type of electrical powers are required to operate a sound system? (B) How are they obtained from an ordinary a. c. line? (C) What two classes of circuit are found in modern amplifiers? (D) Why do sound reproducing systems require a mechanical drive?

The following made acceptable replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; T. F. Bochert; L. Cimikoski; C. Oldham; M. and J. Devoy; O. H. Schmidt; C. Champney; G. Thompson; W. E. Limmroth; K. and R. Wells; L. H. Kelley; H. Edwards; G. H. Payne; D. Coates; W. Schoeneman; G. Burdis; E. Sulpezio; J. J. Petersen; E. H. Toedte; C. A. Whitlock; L. Day; R. W. Groton; H. Bunker; C. H. Lowrie; D. and W. Porter; J. Morton; C. Umphrey; L. Johnson; P. and L. Felt; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; H. T. Todd and L. E. Dodson; C. L. Brant; K. Irwin; S. Hewitt; L. G. Simmons; J. M. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; G. L. Goss and Son; N. L. Wooden; L. and F. L. Saylor; M. D. McGuire; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; K. L. Brant; A. C. Greene; R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson; R. H. Carter; L. D. Tomlinson; H. T. Randolph; L. F. and G. Brown; A. D. Lonby; F. M. Brown and R. Davis; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; F. W. Brandenburg; S. L. Maxwell; T. D. Williams; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; J. B. Bratenburg; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; G. T. Vieller; L. W. Whitmore; E. Exline; L. G. Dillon and W. B. Byers; P. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; E. M. and F. Wentworth; W. V. Henderson and H. M. Jackson; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; L. M. Richardson; R. M. Schneider; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; L. J. Rubin; C. A. Whitlock; B. L. Kent; L. R. Sampson; T. D. Williams; M. C. Cordell; S. U. Lamont; B. L. Kent; L. B. Daniels; H. S. Benjamin.

I'm afraid I must say that no answer to Section A is altogether satisfactory. If you will examine page 490 of the Bluebook, you will find what you should have looked at carefully before answering. It is here quoted verbatim:

"Exciting lamps: d. c. or a. c., but most often d. c., usually eight to 12 volts, two to four amperes. Photoelectric cells: d. c. only, usually 90 to 135 volts, but only the minute fraction of one ampere. Microphones: d. c., if any; most commonly three to 12 volts; less than 0.25 of an ampere. Drive motors: a. c. where possible, line voltage, usually 110. Amplifier "A": d. c. sometimes; a. c., usually one to 10 volts, 0.25 to 12 amperes. Amplifier "B": d. c. always; up to 1,000

(A) In installing a motor-generator set, just in what manner would you decide the most efficient size of supply wires?

(B) How about possibility of future current consumption?

(C) Just how would you calculate the voltage drop of the supply circuit?

(D) Under what condition should the projectionist demand to know the performance curve of a generator?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

volts, 0.25 ampere. Amplifier "C": d. c. always; usually less than 50 volts, almost zero amperage. Speakers: d. c. always, from seven to 110 volts or higher, seldom more than five or less than 0.10 ampere. The above represents the actual, or primary, requirements of average sound systems."

(B) T. F. Bochert says, "Direct current power of various suitable voltages and current strength is converted from a. c. (except where power supply is d. c.) within the amplifier, though the work of power conversion is no part of the function of an amplifier in so far as has to do with amplification. Apparatus necessary for the work is built inside the amplifier wholly as a matter of convenience in construction, operation and the conservation of space. If the apprentice will keep this fact in mind he will find his study and understanding of amplifier circuits to be very much simplified. He will avoid any possible confusion between amplifying values and attendant, but wholly separate (as to function) apparatus."

"Students" will of course understand this deals only with the more modern equipments. The older ones had the voltage conversion element as a separate unit.

(C) E. H. Todte says, "The modern amplifier used in theatre work has two distinct classes of circuit, namely, speech and power circuits. If one will clearly distinguish between them, the understanding of amplifier circuits will be very much simplified, both in study and in repair work."

W. E. Limmroth says, "Modern amplifiers utilize two classes of circuit, namely, Classes A and B. Incidentally, some amplifiers have a class known as "A-B," which consists of a combination of the two. A large percentage of theatre amplifiers employ Class A because of the superior type of sound it supplies. Class B amplifiers supply a higher current per tube than Class A, making it possible for a relatively small amplifier to supply ample volume for a moderately large theatre, but this may only be done at some sacrifice in quality."

(D) G. E. Doe replies, "For the simple reason that without mechanical power there could be no sound in so far as applies to motion pictures. How could the film be moved? How could the disc be rotated? How—but what's the use. No motion, no sound."

M. and J. Devoy say, "Not only is a mechanical drive necessary, but it must be one that will attain and maintain a constant, very precise speed for the reason that if there be the least variation between speed at which sound is recorded and reproduced, then the reproduction will be different in tone or pitch, and different in visual action as well. At very low ratio of difference, the effect may be scarcely noticeable, though there is a difference. If the difference be large, the whole effect, both in image and in sound, may be ruined."

National Poster Reelects Officers

The National Poster Service Association, Inc., on Sunday wound up a two-day convention at the Hotel New Yorker, New York, by reelecting all officers and directors and setting plans for new advertising displays and policies for the coming year.

It was tentatively decided to hold next year's convention in Los Angeles on April 9th.

Officers reelected were: Simon Libros, president; Guy C. Packard, vice-president; George F. Aaron, secretary and treasurer. The board of directors includes the officers and I. Sokoloff, Omaha; William Bien, Cincinnati; Joseph R. Powers, Minneapolis; John Bylincik, Cincinnati; B. R. Wolf, Los Angeles; LeRoy Kenfield, Charlotte. The executive committee, also reelected, includes: E. R. Behrend, Harry Schlitt and Louis Weinzimmer, all of New York, Mr. Sokoloff and Mr. Libros.

Under an agreement made between R. Hilton, Altec Chicago branch manager, and L. J. Ludwig, assistant secretary of the Minnesota Amusement Company, 76 theatres, comprising this company, are to be serviced by Altec.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Can only say that this picture is all that a thousand or more exhibitors have said before in this column, and that is "Great." A laugh from start to finish and the finish is the cutest you have ever seen on the screen. Played April 1-2.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

CATTLE RAIDERS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Pretty good western that pleased our weekend crowd.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNSEL FOR CRIME: Otto Kruger, Douglass Montgomery—Not much but filled out a double bill OK. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HEADIN' EAST: Buck Jones, Ruth Coleman—A western that was different due to the fact that the cowboys didn't wear big hats and leather pants. Plenty of action and some good comedy made a picture that pleased, generally.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—This western had a new twist and the patrons kinda liked the change. Good show and enough action to make them like it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

OLD WYOMING TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—This Charles Starrett is proving to be our best bet in westerns. He's easy to look at and a good actor. Columbia is putting some good music in their westerns and not overdoing it. Keep giving this Starrett some good stories and you've got something, Columbia. Played March 11-12.—Milton L. Du Bose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

ONE MAN JUSTICE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—A good western that had its full share of riding, fighting and shooting. Pleased my western fans. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PAID TO DANCE: Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells—O. K. on lower half of dual if you haven't anything better to play. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 12.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, John Howard, Jean Parker—A good picture, not a special like Columbia thought, but an action picture that pleased an average crowd. Not as good as the other prison pictures of the year, but it will get by and please.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RANGERS STEP IN: Bob Allen, Eleanor Stewart—My patrons, real western fans, considered this pretty terrible. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SHADOW, THE: Charles Quigley, Rita Hayworth—Fair mystery story under the big top.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

THEODORA GOES WILD: Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas—A last year's picture, but a good one on the screwball type. Our patrons found lots of fun in it. Played March 17.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—Pleased and held its own on a double bill. My rural patrons eat up a picture like this. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Ted Healy, Rosemary and Lola Lane, Mabel Todd, Benny Goodman and His Orchestra—This was about the worst musical I've ever seen. The songs were nothing to brag about. Benny Goodman's orchestra sounded like a lot of pounding on tin pans, and Mabel Todd was terrible. The only thing that helped this show was Ted Healy. Too bad for Warners that he is gone.—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

MISSING WITNESSES: Dick Purcell, Jean Dale—Only a fair program picture. Best for dual, if you double bill. I don't.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris, Doris Weston—Enjoyable picture with submarine background. Drew and pleased.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris—Very good. If there is such a thing as special, this sure is one. Entertaining all through. Running time, 98 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THEY WON'T FORGET: Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson—A good picture but a bit too depressing for the average movie goer. Business only fair. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Gaumont British

DR. SYN: George Arliss, Margaret Lockwood—So unlike any Arliss picture I have ever played that I just couldn't believe it until I had seen it. An action packed pirate story with Arliss as the leader of a gang of desperadoes and smugglers, who has taken on the guise of a peace loving minister. This picture will hold the suspense of any audience. It not only surprised me but several of my regular attendants expressed the same viewpoint. For once the English have really come through with two exceptionally fine pictures ("King Solomon's Mines" and "Dr. Syn"). Being more or less critical to foreign made pictures of any kind, these two productions came as a real surprise. Here's hoping Gaumont British and the rest of the foreign companies will make more and better pictures of this kind.—W. F. McKinney, Cameron Theatre, Denver, Col.

DR. SYN: George Arliss, Margaret Lockwood—Picture O K but did not draw. It may have been too nice outdoors to get them inside. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 20-21.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

KING SOLOMON'S MINES: Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roland Young, Paul Robeson, Anna Lee—A top notch adventure picture with a splendid cast, fast moving throughout and leading up to a spectacular climax. You'll have to look a long way to find a star with the beauty, charm and acting ability of Anna Lee. She should go a long way in motion pictures. By playing up the action angle, I was able to do a fine business during the entire three day run. Once inside, the theatre goers will find a pleasing and exciting hour of entertainment.—W. F. McKinney, Cameron Theatre, Denver, Col. General patronage.

Grand National

WALLABY JIM OF THE ISLANDS: George Houston, Ruth Coleman—We hope Mr. Irving Cohen reads this report, as we want to thank him for such a fine program picture that built itself up to capacity business the second night and got a big hand from a most appreciative crowd. More power to Grand National if they are all like it. Thank you for this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—Here's what the small town audiences want. A good story with plenty of action and some comedy. Biggest business so far this year. Played March 11.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—A dandy for our town; just the kind of picture we like to see Beery in. Business good in comparison to recent Sunday business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 6-8.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—We played this on our best days and did a very nice business. The location as filmed was beautiful and the tinting made the scenery stand out in all its glory. Buy it right, if you can, play it and you'll satisfy a lot of people who won't ordinarily like the outdoor and action type of picture.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—Excellent comedy. Play it by all means.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Did not draw them in. Pleased the women but a bitter pill for the men who came along. Running time, 111 minutes. Played March 29-30.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Judy Garland, Allan Jones—Pleased the majority of my patrons. Miss Garland's appearance in the Twin Cities at the same time we ran this gave us a swell boost, thanks to all the publicity given her. Business was good. My patrons enjoyed a nice little picture and my thanks to Miss Judy Garland. Welcome back to Minnesota. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—Very good entertainment. Judy has some nice numbers, Allan Jones very good and Fanny Brice adds plenty of fun. A very pleasing show. Played March 13-14.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—A good picture that drew average business and pleased. Not a special in any sense of the word, but not a program picture. Worth a playdate and on your best time, and will satisfy. Some good comedy and singing and some big ensembles, but they're a thing of the past and have been done so many times that patrons are tiring of them. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones, Warren William—From reports in "What the Picture Did for Me," believed that this would be just average entertainment and although I am inclined to agree that the picture is entirely too long, yet it went over here with a "bang." Friml's operetta has lost none of its beauty in its transposition to the screen and Jeanette brings alive again the tuneful songs of long ago. She has always been a favorite here and always will be. I cannot say too much for her interpretation of her role as "The Firefly"; it was one grand performance. Allan Jones assisted capably but I think was miscast. There is no doubt that he is a good singer, but his histrionic ability is yet to be tested. I do not hesitate to recommend this feature, for whatever weaknesses it may have are overcome by the musical score and the singing. Running time, 138 minutes. Played April 2.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Franchot Tone, Gladys George, Ted Healy, Mickey Rooney—A swell little comedy with the picture stealers de luxe, Healy and Rooney, stealing all the honors. The title ruined what business there was, as the patrons were afraid of it. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler—Pleasing show, but not big enough for the cast. Has quite a few laughs. Good for the whole family. Played March 27-28.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—We did all right with this picture but it is the first Crawford that was worth a playdate for a long, long time. It looks like Leo will have to dig up another one to roar about because poor Joan is on the down grade. In fact, she never was much of a draw in this town, but with the right support in this picture she wasn't noticed so much and they seemed to be satisfied. Just worth program prices.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—Without a doubt this will flop in any small town. A good story that was cut to pieces on the screen and so lost its flavor. Pulled after second day. No draw nor did it please. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell—A very fine example of what the small town audiences do not want. Mostly dialogue between two girls and the man they both want. Had a very slim attendance on this. Played March 18.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Frank Morgan, Robert Young—This is as good a picture as you could give to the most critical audience. It will please, as it pleased mine. I don't know why we haven't heard more about this feature. My patrons considered this far superior to "Nothing Sacred," "True Confession," and it was, too, as far as entertainment value went. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan—It's got a lot of good comedy and the location made a scenic background that was beautiful to see. Morgan can be funny and he had a lot of help. Business was average and the picture satisfied, so the run was a success in a small way. Nothing seems to draw any more, and if we break even, that's something.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger—The producers of this picture are still, apparently, laboring under the delusion that the more chorus girls and extras appear on the screen, the better the picture. If such were the case, "Rosalie" would be a world beater as the settings are all cluttered with extra people. We did just average business on this one and none of the cash customers displayed any particular enthusiasm. The comedy work of Frank Morgan and several others is the only thing that saved this from being an exceedingly boring flop. Played March 6.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger—Good show, but these big, super musicals don't draw like they once did and, personally, I would like to see Metro spend their money on other pictures and forget these. They're too long and these big ensembles are things of the past because they've been done so many times that people are tired of looking at them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY, THE: George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson—Good program picture that will do all right on Bargain Night or as one-half of your double bill.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Judge Hardy and his family will entertain all other families that see this show. Very good family picture. Played March 15.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Very fine. Right down to earth entertainment, and appreciated by everyone. Glad to have more like this. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 22-23.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Dandy comedy feature that pleased everyone. However, it didn't do very good at the box office. Played March 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Mickey Rooney has become such a favorite around town that his name on the marquee is about all that is necessary. Picture well liked; business good. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 3-4.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—I guess, perhaps, it has been a couple of years since I have sent in a report to this department but I could not resist telling other exhibitors that this picture really has entertainment and it did not come from one of the big majors either. Had many favorable comments from our patrons. It really is a 100 per cent family picture, a picture that you can boost to the limit and when it is all over your customers will go home satisfied. Looks like Monogram has got a good bet in this Cooper boy.—M. F. Bodwell, New Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

A "COLYUM" READER ISSUES CHALLENGE

"May I add best wishes for your continued success. I hope to read many more of your 'Colyums' in the HERALD as I have for many years past."

"I note you mention being in many towns, in different states, all called Battle Creek, which prompts me to say that you will probably not receive a letter from any other 'Skowhegan', as there is only one, and this is it. Maybe there's a reason."

CARL BEALS, Strand Theatre,
Skowhegan, Maine.

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Anne Nagel—Must Monogram always ruin a good picture with poor recording and lighting? Business below average. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 27-30.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

PARADISE ISLE: Movita, Warren Hull—A nice little picture which did very well at the box office. The recording is the downfall of the picture. It was the poorest recording of any picture I have played in a long time. Monogram is doing very well, but if they don't watch the recording and lighting, they'll lose their customers very fast. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 20-23.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Ben Blue, Judy Canova—I had heard that this show was pretty rough, but had no idea until I saw it just how vulgar the dance by Martha Raye was. I am thankful this was booked on a one day change as my patrons were very much disgusted and could not remember the good parts of the picture. Played March 24.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Ben Blue, Judy Canova—Not a good picture. The show was over at the end of the first hour and then they tried to tack on another thirty minutes. Business fair first night and almost nothing last two nights. Pleased 50 per cent. Running time, 98 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Kirsten Flagstad—Paramount again scores with us on a small town natural. Raye and Fields were tops. Thank goodness they put Ross back in again. She is a mouthful of sweetness and song and we appreciate her again. When the picture got to us, Flagstad had been relegated to the cutting room floor. Too bad after they had shown her in the trailer not to give her to the audience. I have seen several comments on this picture that were not so hot but when my audience goes out laughing and telling you that it's a good picture that is all I ask for. Played against "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and held up fine. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—The best entertainment this year by far. It equals any "Broadcast" in recent years, and as far as I am concerned would say it is the best of anything in years. It never has a let-down; just one big effort to please after another, and do they do it. Played this against "The Hurricane" to better than average business.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

BORDERLAND: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Very fine western. My second "Cassidy." Business fair. So far "Cassidy" is no drawing card here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff—Hats off to DeMille. Another natural for small towns. The direction, cast and acting can only be spoken of in superlatives. This picture has everything that a small town situation could ask for. Good for any day of the week. Miss Gaal has received more favorable comment than any actress we have ever shown, especially in her American debut. Take a tip from "Main Street" in Hollywood, Mr. Zukor and Mr. DeMille, and sign her on a long term contract. She is a sensation. Running time, 126 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Akim Tamiroff, Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame—This picture is as good as you will get from any producer now or at any future time. The foreign accent hurts because it is so hard to understand, but this picture has a cast, story, direction and locale. It didn't break any records, but did a satisfactory business and we are sure it satisfied most of the patrons who saw it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND COMES BACK: John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell—You can miss this one and never know it. They might be good but we don't think so. Plenty of action pictures that will get by better and for less money. Forget it if you can.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S PERIL: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell—Good program picture. Doubled with "Texas Trail," made business good.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff, Gail Patrick—Our patrons called this a good program picture of city politics.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong—Not much to it, but will pass as the lower bracket of a double bill. Made like sausage, and is about the same. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 25-26.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer, Ray Milland—Paramount really slipped on this one. The color, as usual, was beautiful, but I could not see much in the story. Our high school senior class sponsored this and, in spite of their efforts, it did very little business. It could have been three times as good if only there had been a little romance in it. There was only one love scene and there were perfect settings for a dozen. Played March 27-29.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—Let us hope this is the last of West. A flop. People don't care to see West, and they tell you by staying away. I want no more of them. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 25-26.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—We played this on our best nights; don't do it. Not quite as weak as reported, but pretty near. Didn't do much business on it and was glad of it. Pass it if you can; you can set better pictures than this one and you'll never miss it. Won't get you a dime over expenses and you're lucky if you break even.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: Larry "Buster" Crabbe, June Martel—The Zane Grey westerns always do a fair business and are well liked by the western fans. "Buster" Crabbe is good for any kind of action story. Played March 11-12.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—These westerns are on a par with any that we run and they do draw extra business. It seems that they spend some extra money making them, they are well photographed and the cast are not amateurs. Run them and you won't be sorry. They're about all Paramount's got this year as a redeeming feature.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NIGHT CLUB SCANDAL: John Barrymore, Lynne Overman—Good program picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns—Only fair program picture. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RUGGLES OF RED GAP: Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles—Maybe it's old enough to be full of moth holes, but it is still a lot better than some of the present day punks that are forced down our throats. Plenty of fun bordering on the slapstick, but a pleasing concoction that we are glad to have shown our patrons. Print I had was in good shape out of Kansas City.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RUSTLER'S VALLEY: William Boyd—Bill Boyd is an old actor who really knows his stuff. This series of westerns rates just about number one on our list. The acting and also the stories are better than in the ordinary western. Played March 18-19.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

SCANDAL STREET: Louise Campbell, Lew Ayres—Gossip in the small town is the theme of this one, and, being well made and well acted, the picture pleased. Played March 30-31.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry "Buster" Crabbe—I'm glad she's gone and I hope she had a nice trip. We didn't and if you can pass this picture, you'll save yourself some dough.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes, Judith Allen—The Hopalong always please. This doubled with "Bulldog Drummond's Peril" did well.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—Just another western. And rather slow moving at that. Got the usual western audience.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable—A swell little musical comedy that seemed to please. "Buddy" Rogers can still act and this picture was really built to suit him. The radio stars did their part. Betty Grable is a favorite with the young people. Played March 6-8.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: The Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue, Eleanor Whitney, Johnny Downs—Not strong enough to stand alone. If there were any thrills in this picture, I failed to see them, and there wasn't much of anything else, either. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 19-20.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: The Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Betty Grable—Good average program picture that did just average business. Played March 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Marsha Hunt—Another western and that's overrating it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray, Henry Fonda—Here is a box office natural. We played this picture three days to outstanding business. After it had a first and second-run, we played it third-run. Our advice is that any theatre can return it for the second-run and do a great business. It is one of those pictures that will get box office results. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 8-10.—Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—This picture is there and over and it did business. Not only that, but it satisfied, and if we had more of these we would be sitting pretty instead of trying to pay expenses. About the only redeeming feature on the Paramount contract but it is a small town picture and we only wish we had more of them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Wonderful production. Cannot fail to please. If possible, tie up with schools, and teachers will thank you. Played March 28-29.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

Republic

LADY BEHAVE: Sally Eilers, Neil Hamilton—A light comedy that filled the upper end of a dual bill nicely. This we doubled with "The Old Barn Dance" and it was this one which brought out the Autry fans. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 2.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Whenever we have an Autry-Burnette picture coming, we always dig up the SRO sign before the shows starts and then put it away until we get another. "The Old Barn Dance" was no exception, which brought us the largest gross since August, 1936, at which time we played "Oh, Susannah." And this in the face of a bad spring snow storm. Had the weather been nice, we might have broken all records because we had to turn many away. More power to you, Autry, you certainly have a host of unknown friends in this section. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 2.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

PARADISE EXPRESS: Grant Withers, Dorothy Appleby—A very poor picture which is valueless without a companion picture to hold it up. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 20-23.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS, THE: Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Syd Saylor—A picture that brings the kids in on the Saturday matinee. Not an extra good picture, but holds its own on a double bill. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Charlie Ruggles—One of the best comedies we have ever played and as clean as a hound's tooth. It is a gloom chaser. My patrons voted it the funniest show they had ever seen. I offered refunds to those who did not get a laugh, but no one wanted their money back. Had several repeats on Monday night. Played March 13-14.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGER PATROL: John Beal, Eally Eilers—No draw but pleased those who came. Not much to this. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliason, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen—Bobby Breen's poorest to date. Although a good following has been built up here for Bobby Breen, it didn't go over like his others. Business below average. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 20-23.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller—Well made, enjoyable musical comedy drama that pleased, but did not draw, due only to fact that we are obliged to play musical after musical and then feed them one and two-reel musical shorts as well. Played March 27-28.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—A very good picture but failed miserably at the box office. Drew the children fairly well, but the adults seem to shun Joe. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 13-16.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou—This is supposed to be a special, but I am telling the world that this did the lowest gross for me in thirteen years. I will recommend same for midnight show.—Jack De Marce, De Marce Amusement Co., Benson, Minn. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY GIRL: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Gene Raymond is well liked here, but this picture can only be given top billing on a double bill. Please, RKO, won't you please put Gene Raymond in an "A" picture? He has talent and a great deal of people like him, so give him the chance he deserves. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 27-30.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—O. K. little program picture. Played March 19.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: William Powell, Annabella—Did not appeal to the lower class of people. William Powell always good. Annabella should improve her English. Business fair. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 23-24.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—A fair "Chan" picture. Hardly up to standard of previous "Chan" pictures. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 9-10.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—Very good. We ordinarily run double features here on Saturdays but single featured this with "Charlie McCarthy," Donald Duck and "S.O.S. Coast Guard," episode two. It was very well liked.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—Here is just as good entertainment as anyone could wish.

Business the best in midweek for months and that is something here with our factory closed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CITY GIRL: Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—An excellent program picture. Pleased almost everyone. Played on Bargain Night. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 23-24.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—Plenty good, and with Don Ameche and Cesar Romero to help her out, this went over in a big way. This young lady can skate and how she can skate, so people like to see her strut her stuff, and then she can do a right nice job of acting. Worth a date on your best days and will do plenty of business.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—The only thing I'm glad about is that they can't put you in jail for what you think. Winchell can dish out the dirt, but as an actor or drawing card, he is just a columnist, and Benny can smoke his cigar on the stage as far as I am concerned. It just didn't click, and if Fox hadn't reallocated it, we would have lost plenty on it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie—Personally would say very ordinary. My patrons did not care for it. Missed fire badly. Not near their former offering. Simone should learn the English language before she attempts to make another picture. She has nothing on the ball. A lot of girls in Hollywood could do better. Get wise to this, Zanuck. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 27-29.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

LOVE ON A BUDGET: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—Played with Walt Disney's Academy Award Revue. Made a nice show for the whole family. On a par with the other Jones Family pictures. Played March 20-21.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Gloria Stuart—Best picture Shirley Temple has ever made. Not a slow scene in the picture. Business fair. Suggest that anyone play it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 30-31.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

WILD BRIAN KENT: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke—Kept putting this one off (as I did all the 1936-37 Fox westerns). Played it on Bargain Night. Fair semi-western picture. Not bad. I read last fall that Fox had signed Tom Mix. What happened to him?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

United Artists

BELOVED ENEMY: Merle Oberon, Brian Aherne—Samuel Goldwyn sure let us down on this one. There is absolutely no entertainment in this one. We had

THRILL YOUR CUSTOMERS WITH TODAY'S NEWS

Here's how: Hundreds of exhibitors in 48 states now feature spot news releases daily—farthest overnight, nearest in two hours—by specifying AIR EXPRESS, straight to their door. Cost? A trifle more—but it's a box-office wow! Ship all your films by the "natural" route. Nation-wide service, also to Canada, Latin America, Honolulu, and Far East. Phone the nearest RAILWAY EXPRESS office and merely say "AIR EXPRESS Division."

some walkouts and the rest stayed and complained afterwards. This picture may be better in big cities. Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne did swell considering the plot they had to follow. Shows like this are hard on good stars. Played March 25-27.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea—Good program picture. No special about this. The rental too high. This lost money. Running time, 93 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Sabu—Wish to express that this picture has broken the house records, for a two days showing, in the history of the theatre. We tied up with the schools here and they had advance ticket sale and plugged this picture by giving all necessary advertising possibilities. This picture pleased both adults and children. Our advice to any exhibitor is to do the same thing as we have done and you will be happy. Running time, 1-2.—Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Wonderful production. Splendid performance by Lamour and Hall. Appealed to everyone. Business fair. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—Don't know what drew the folks; have had better shows that did not draw half the business this did; but it will draw and please. The hurricane scenes very good. Played March 24-25.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—This picture seems to have had plenty of advance publicity because we had people come to see it who have not been in theatre for a long time. Everybody pleased, including the box office. During the hurricane scenes, you almost seem to live right through the scenes yourself. Played March 31-April 1.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—Terrible. The only person I know of who liked this was the cashier. Played on Money Night.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

KNIGHT WITHOUT ARMOUR: Marlene Dietrich, Robert Donat—Fine picture in spite of accents and British direction. Pleased all who came and most of them came because there is nothing else to do here. One of the few foreign products worth mention. Played March 29.—James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Tex. Small town patronage.

LOVE FROM A STRANGER: Ann Harding, Basil Rathbone—Does not appeal to anyone, not even the employees. Most brilliant performance by Rathbone. Business terrible. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 11.—Joe Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—One of the best audience pictures of the year. Excellent cast, excellent story and excellent production. Our audience in an uproar most of the time. Color very fine.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Very good picture of this type, which held up well for two days. Played March 27-28.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles—We had a number of patrons ask for this picture, so went and bought it for them. They didn't show up and we hardly paid expenses. It's a good picture and worth a date, but hardly worth the price we paid to run, after all of the surrounding towns had reaped a harvest. If you can buy it right, it should make a little money.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TROOP SHIP: Leslie Banks—An English made picture that fails to please. Used this on a low admission and still had plenty of squawks.—M. F. Bodwell, New Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Joan Bennett, Warner Baxter—This is no doubt the most beautiful picture made. A swell picture for the ladies, but the men did not care for it.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Joan Bennett, Warner Baxter—This hardly seemed like the same Joan Bennett that was in "I Met My Love Again." She was so much nicer. Color added a lot to the fashions in this picture. Give this best play dates. Played March 30-31.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

Universal

BOSS OF LONELY VALLEY: Buck Jones—Buck Jones is one cowboy who has held his following and I never did hear him sing a note. I hope he never does and just keeps on making westerns as good as he has in the past.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princeton Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FIVE MORE REPORT FOR FIRST TIME

In this week's "What the Picture Did for Me" department appear reports of five showmen who never before have contributed comment. The five are:

Jack DeMarce, DeMarce Amusement Co., Benson, Minn.

James I. Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas

Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn.

W. F. McKinney, Cameron Theatre, Denver, Col.

Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

Returning to the corps of active reporters after two years' absence is M. Bodwell of the New Paramount Theatre at Wyoming, Ill.

COURAGE OF THE WEST: Bob Baker, Lois January—Pretty good western. Only fair at the box office. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COURAGE OF THE WEST: Bob Baker, Lois January—This new star seemed to get over with the big hat boys and they liked his singing. The picture has action and comedy mixed together so that it pleased our action lovers on Saturday night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

GIRL WITH IDEAS, A: Wendy Barrie, Walter Pidgeon—An average program which should be double featured. An almost impossible newspaper story which brought several laughs and seemed to please. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 26.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

IDOL OF THE CROWDS: John Wayne—One of those that was shot during lunch hour. Probably O. K. for a double bill. We don't run doubles, but will have to if the producers keep making so many of this sort. Played March 26.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

LADY FIGHTS BACK, THE: Irene Hervey, Kent Taylor—Fair little show. The scenery the best part of the picture. Played March 22.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

ONE HUNDRED MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou, Alice Brady, Leopold Stokowski—A very good picture that failed to click at the box office. Although opposition was very keen, the picture should have done much better. This is one of Universal's better grade of pictures. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 27-March 2.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Richard Cromwell, John King, Andy Devine, Slim Summerville—This is one of the best pictures of its kind that every theatre should show, showing the outcome of war. Much credit goes to Universal for such a picture. Business only normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SPY RING, THE: William Hall, Jane Wyman—Title best part of this picture. Expected some action, but nothing happened. Played March 23.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

WEST BOUND LIMITED: Lyle Talbot, Polly Rowles—A very fine train picture suitable for double bill. I appreciated it very much after running a block to catch the train after booking this picture on a west bound train.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WESTLAND CASE, THE: Preston Foster, Carol Hughes—Fair. Too slow. Too much talk and not enough action. Poor at the box office. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—Here is a "sweetheart" of a picture. It has anything you could ask for.—M. F. Bodwell, New Paramount Theatre, Wyoming, Ill. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—A very good musical comedy and well liked by everyone. This picture did not do business, but the weather was against us and "The Hurricane" was being played in a town only 24 miles from Rifle. Played March 27-28.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland—Nothing much to this, but patrons seemed to enjoy it more than some of the Class A's about which producers raved. Competent cast and good direction.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—A masterpiece in every way. Muni's acting great. Running time, 116 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Joseph Schildkraut—Wonderful picture. Few didn't like it, but most did. I think it's very deserving of the Academy Award it won.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomation, Ala. General patronage.

MARRY THE GIRL: Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland—The stock company didn't do so well on this, but it filled up a blank space on our double feature with no big kicks.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—No good as a drawing card. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS, THE: Color Rhapsodies—It's pretty good cartoon in color.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DIZZY DUCKS: Scrappy Cartoons—Much better than the average Scrappy cartoon. This one will keep them laughing.—Harold Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIFTY YEARS OF BARTER: Columbia Tours—A very interesting and enlightening subject that was well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FROM BAD TO WORSE: Charlie Chase—Hilarious as only Charlie Chase can be. Newlyweds will get a great kick out of this one. Play it by all means.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NOVELTY SHOP, THE: Color Rhapsodies—As nice a color cartoon as anyone could wish.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RAILROAD RHYTHM: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A cartoon and just another one.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RIDING THE WAVES: Special Sport Thrills—A review of all the water thrills that is most interesting. Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1.—Very good, and the oldtimers bring back memories that your patrons will enjoy. They like that stuff.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Special Sport Thrills—The hot shots of the bowling alleys do their stuff and how they can manipulate that mahogany ball. Worth a date any time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SITTER DOWNERS, THE: 3 Stooges—These guys are funny and their two-reelers actually do draw in some extra patrons. Hope Columbia don't see this 'cause the price will go up, but they're about the only two-reelers that are funny, always.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

THREE STOOGES COMEDIES: Broadway Comedies—By all means play all of the Stooges comedies as they mean extra revenue at your box office. They also please the customers. We play them on weekends on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 20 minutes each.—Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

Educational

BASHFUL BUCKAROO, THE: Charles Kemper—plenty of fun and while I never saw this comedian before he got enough directorial help to fill these two reels with a lot of laughs. Play it; it's not a tragedy.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HOW TO DANCE THE SHAG: Song and Comedy Hits—Small towners eat this up because they've never seen them dance this new dance. A good lesson so they can get started.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

KOO-KOO CORRESPONDENCE SKOOL, THE: Jefferson Machamer—Poor. No runs, no hits, no laughs, no nothing. Running time, 18 minutes.—A.

Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—It got better as it went along and finally finished among the leaders, if you know what I mean.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TIMID RABBIT, THE: Terry-Toons—Another cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AUDIOSCOPIKS: Special—These cause more comments, cost twice as much and then some for glasses, but your patrons will get a kick out of watching them, so just cut the program short a one-reeler and you'll still satisfy them all. Plenty of ducking, dodging and laughing when they're being shown.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BEHIND THE CRIMINAL: Crime Does Not Pay Series—These shorts are very good and this one deals with the shyster lawyers who spring the crooks and the way this one was caught. Very interesting and worth a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOSKO IN BAGDAD: Harman-Ising—Another cartoon with some nice coloring.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Musical Comedies—Nothing much but passed by O. K. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CANNED FISHING: Our Gang—This Gang comedy did get some laughs, and then you have to have something for the kids and these are it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURE: Historical Mysteries—These Historical Mysteries are good and the patrons seem to enjoy them. At least they will start an argument and that means they liked some parts of the short subject.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNTY HOSPITAL (Reissue): Laurel and Hardy—These old reissues get the laughs and I don't know why unless they know what is coming and get tickled beforehand. We've done all right with the four of them and don't know why they can't make them any more.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DEXTERITY: Peter Smith Specialties—Here is real entertainment with a capital "E." One of the best sport shorts we have ever witnessed. These Pete Smith Specialties have what it takes to please an audience. Book this with no regrets. Running time, 9 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FRIEND INDEED: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good Pete Smith short subject dealing with the fight to put the "seeing-eye" dogs in chair cars with their blind masters. Worth a playdate and an extra plug.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES, NO. 2: Peter Smith Specialties—Pretty good and the monks do some fancy tree climbing after they get full of hair tonic. Plenty good for a filler with most any feature.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAND OF INCAS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Not as interesting as some, but our patrons like these colored Travel Talks and we run them all.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LA SAVATE: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting explanation of this French art of fisticuffs and foot-cuffs. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE BUCK CHEESER: Harman-Ising—The best Harman-Ising cartoon we have played. Just a knockout, that is all we can say. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

AMERICA MARCHING ON (Modern Talking Picture Service): Lowell Thomas—Very good short. Furnished gratis. Contains no advertisement. It's fine. Running time, 1 reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

COWBOY SHORTY: Paragraphics—These monkey comedies satisfy the kids and don't do so bad for the old folks.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—Just a bit different and will please. Worth a date on your best nights.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT SCIENCE, NO. 2: The best of this series to date. Paramount certainly has them licked when it comes to shorts for this season. Good subjects well diversified with beautiful color that make it hard to beat. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 2—Good enough for a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES: Color Special—Not so good as "Popeye The Sailor Meets Sinbad The Sailor," but the coloring on these is very good and with that third dimension drawn in they are different. Not worth the price they get, but okay if you can buy them right.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SERVICE WITH A SMILE: Betty Boop Cartoons—This Betty Boop cartoon was good, and when Grampy gets going he really does his stuff.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—Plenty good as are most of the Grantland Rice Sportlights.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ZULA HULA: Betty Boop Cartoons—The best of the Boops to date. Enjoyed by all. Musical score is very good for a cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

DUMMY OWNER, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—A few laughs but below par in comparison to previous Errol comedies. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

HARRIS IN THE SPRING: Phil Harris—Clever short. Pleased. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HARRIS IN THE SPRING: Radio Musical Comedies—A very good two-reel band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LATIN RHYTHM: Nu-Atlas Productions—Absolutely no good. Leave it in the can.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LONESOME GHOSTS: Mickey Mouse—All of the Mickey Mouses are great, and grownups enjoy them as well as the kiddies. Running time, 10 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME SERIES: They look forward to this. It is very well liked by everyone. It grips the audience; there is never a sound while it is being shown. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 7: A very good number in this very educational series. "March of Time" is becoming more popular each issue. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MURDER IN SWINGTIME: Condor Musicales—Terrible. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MUSIC WILL TELL: Ted Fio Rito—A fine two-reeler. Ted Fio Rito has a swell orchestra. Running time, 20 minutes.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Tex. General patronage.

PATHE PARADE, NO. 1: Just another picture that had too much fashions and art in it for a small town audience. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PATHE PARADE, NO. 2: O. K. short. Was interesting and pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PATHE PARADE, NO. 4: A very interesting and educational short on aviation training by the United States Army. Good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

QUINTUPLAND: Dionne Quintuplets—Very fine. Helped at the box office. Play it and advertise. Running time, 2 reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SWEET SHOE: Rita Rio—A fine little band number with Miss Rio trying to dance in her mediocre way. If she would stick to singing this would have been a knockout. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

FILMING NATURE'S WONDERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very interesting. Such pictures as these always please our audiences. Running time, nine minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Universal

DUMB CLUCK: Oswald Cartoons—It filled up some running time about as well as anything. Kids like these things, so we run them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MECHANICAL HANDY MAN: Oswald Cartoons—Got a few laughs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION SERIES: No. 42—Pretty good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ALIBI TIME: Radio Ramblers—Extra good music and imitations. Play it any time for a good short. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ALL AMERICAN DRAWBACK: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Just as funny as it ever was and worth a date.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ARNOLD JOHNSON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The weakest Melody Master we have seen. No pep, no originality. Bad recording. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CANDID KID, THE: Josephine Huston—What a peach of a little musical this turned out to be. Miss Huston should be featured in some of our better musicals as she has a voice that is something. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FLOYD GIBBONS' "YOUR TRUE ADVENTURE" SERIES: One of the finest series of shorts being made. They are a distinct departure from anything that has been done and are a credit to any program. Deserve extra billing. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HERE COMES THE CIRCUS: "Poodles" Hanneford—An excellent subject for the spring season. Lion tamer especially good. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MALAYAN JUNGLES: Colortour Adventure Series—This is one of the most entertaining travel talks we have had for some time. The color is not the best, but it is very interesting. Running time, 19 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MERRIE MELODIES SERIES: We consider these cartoons the equal of any that are made, without any exceptions. They are very well liked, and are always an addition to any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE ON THE HOUSE: Willie, West, McGinty—This Brevity is good. It has several good musical numbers and comedy that got more real laughs than anything for some time. Recording only fair. Warners' two-reel musicals have always been tops, but they are ruining them with bad recording. Running time, 21 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEWS: No. 6 (New Series)—Good. Held interest. Hockey and horses pleased especially. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PORKY'S ROMANCE: Looney Tunes—Very good. If only this series were in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

POSTAL UNION: Georgie Price—This is a very good Brevity. Price is clever and seemed to be well liked. Recording not good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT'S PICTURES: Broadway Brevities—A bang-up musical with diversified entertainment for any situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serials

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—Can't say much for this serial. Columbia will have to do better than they have with their first two. Very slow for a serial.—J. Glenn Caldwell, Princess Theatre, Aurora, Mo. Small town patronage.

TO PARENTS WHO LOVE THEIR DAUGHTERS:-
Did it ever occur to you that while you are a Mother or Father to your children - you may be a stranger, too?

Boys, they say, will always be boys. But what about young girls? Should, or shouldn't they be permitted the same freedom in molding themselves - and in choosing their friends?

And what about parents? Frequently in their zeal to correct a wrong, they make matters worse. They think they have a problem child. Little do they realize that often they alone constitute the problem.

This perplexing and vital question is presented in a motion picture - "Beloved Brat". Here is a story which can be the story of any young girl - drama, open and frank, of a headstrong girl, reckless, wilful, but not really bad - yet!

In producing "Beloved Brat", Warner Bros. have dealt with the problem squarely and entertainingly, minus any harshness. Moreover, the film presents a satisfying, pleasant solution. You undoubtedly will want to see "Beloved Brat", which I sincerely recommend as a worthwhile film. It will be shown starting next Friday at this theatre.

QUARTERLY COMPETITIONS FAVORED BY THEATREMEN

Revised Quigley Awards Rulings Bring Record Results from Entrants in Five Divisions; First Quarter Judging Set

With the deadline set for midnight of April 16, inspection of entries submitted in the January-March Quigley Quarterly Awards for 1938 indicate a new high for material received in the Competitions, now in their fifth year.

Comment from Round Tablers reveals the wider latitude of the refashioned Awards rulings separating entries into five classifications judged quarterly instead of one classification judged monthly, as heretofore, has encouraged participation from theatremen new to the Competitions in addition to those who have won prizes in former years.

New Policy Aids Grosses

Members also disclose that the new rulings allow the entry of institutional campaigns and single exploitations as well as entries on individual pictures, have found immediate favor among contestants. It is felt, too, among theatre executives that eligibility in the Awards of all contributions to Managers' Round Table having to do with advertising, exploitation and publicity, has resulted in increased activity by theatremen in the field. Increase of material received by the Round Table for the Second Quarter of the 1938 Quigley Awards, from April first to June 30, is pointed to in support of this opinion.

The new policy of the Quigley Awards was determined upon to stress activities of theatremen pursuing a definite plan in getting most out of every change of program. The original plan of singling out showmen for work on individual pictures having accomplished its purpose in bringing industry attention to the efforts of men in the field, it was felt the time was ripe for extension of such recognition to the manager who did the best week-to-week job over a period of time. It was not the intention to discourage single campaigns. Rather, it was planned that more recognition would be given those displaying consistency in advertising shows over each three-month period and reporting these activities regularly to Managers' Round Table.

Competition Found Keen

To make possible the widest participation from all exhibitor quarters, it was further agreed the Awards would be given in five different classifications so that each entrant would compete only with others in similar situations and not "against the field" as previously. In addition, a further quarterly Citation was determined upon to be given for the entry selected as the best from among all the winners, regardless of classification. It was decided that all entrants were to "start from scratch" in each quarterly competition, the winners in the Quigley

Complete Rules and Regulations for 1938 Quigley Quarterly Awards

Competitions are now divided into four Quarter Periods:

Jan. 1-Mar. 31; Apr. 1-June 30; July 1-Sept. 30; Oct. 1-Dec. 31.

Entrants will compete in five classifications, according to population and situation:

A—Cities, 250,000 and over.

B—Cities, 100,000 to 250,000.

C—Cities, 25,000 to 100,000.

D—Cities, Up to 25,000.

E—Neighborhood and subsequent-run theatres.

Quigley Quarterly Awards will be given as follows:

Silver Plaque to best entry in each classification.

Citation of Merit Sheepskin Certificate to runner-up in each classification.

First and Honorable Mention Sheepskin Certificates in each classification to be awarded other entries deemed worthy of recognition.

An additional Citation of Merit will be awarded each quarter to the entry selected as best from among that quarter's Plaque winners, regardless of classification.

Every contribution, including institutional campaigns, to the Round Table will be considered in determining the quarter winners. Although it is not necessary to forward complete campaigns, they are also eligible for consideration.

Entrants will be judged on their contributions to the Round Table over each quarter period and not upon single picture campaigns, as heretofore.

Entrants will all "start from scratch" in each quarter. Winners of the Annual Awards will be selected from among contestants making the highest scores over the four quarters of the year.

ley Annual Awards to be chosen from among those making the best records in the four quarter periods.

According to the Awards Committee the new arrangements have received immediate acceptance and it is anticipated that entries for the Second Quarter, April-June, will top the total for the year's initial period.

Preliminary examination of entries forwarded for the First Quarter is now scheduled and completion of voting for the winners of Plaques, Citations of Merit, First and Honorable Mention Certificates is looked for in time to be announced in the issue of April 30.

Campaigns from situations in all classifications have been described during the past months in these pages. Others on hand that show diversified handling from large and small cities are set down briefly.

As to be expected, the flood of spirited campaigns on "Snow White" continues, and among those entrants marking up fat exploitation scores on the date is Manager Bob Russell, Loew's Poli, New Haven. In the 76 different ideas listed by Russell, newspaper publicity was widespread and topped with a shot in the morning daily showing delivery of print via armored car in front of the theatre. Bob, supported by Barney Pitkin, RKO branch manager, supplied the action by receiving the can of film. Accompanying caption of course included mention of theatre, picture and date.

Listed also as a "first-time" by Russell, was a page-one announcement in the evening paper run some two weeks ahead and counted effective also was a special editorial in another daily run current with the date. The rest of the New Haven campaign covered about every possible exploitation and advertising angle found employable.

"Snow White" Ideas Featured

For his second-week "Snow White" hold-over, Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Majestic, in nearby Bridgeport, found much interest aroused by means of a 60-inch co-op ad incorporating a jigsaw puzzle. The sponsor, a dairy, contributed cash prizes and color photos, distributed literature calling attention to the contest, planted advertising on delivery trucks and in windows of local dealers.

Faced with a quick booking, Manager

FIRST QUARTER ENTRIES DIVERSIFIED

Paul J. Harvey, Strand, York, Pa., was successful in putting together a neat "Snow White" job. In the absence of the regular trailer, Harvey arranged for announcements at each show by performer in his stage unit, immediately planted spot radio broadcasts, created street floats. Much attention was given in the local press to a tie-in with local realtor who was host at a special morning performance to crippled and orphan children. Paul also was successful in his merchandising tie-ins, outstanding was that with department store which purchased full set of "Snow White" models for animated display ahead and during run.

The bicycle sequences in "Yank at Oxford" were called upon by Frank Murphy, at Loew's, Wilmington, Md., for use in a special matinee, between three and five, wherein everyone arriving on a bicycle was offered free admission. Special laugh trailer and publicity stories built up sufficient attention, Murphy reports, to work into a traffic-stopper.

For "Everybody Sing" Frank discovered local residents related to Judy Garland who he entertained at the picture, gathering additional publicity thereby. One of the dailies used shot of the young star reading paper. Also current was a General Foods Week by the sponsors of the "Good News" radio program through which Murphy was able to obtain poster publicity for his date in many food store windows.

Appoint Judy Honorary Governor

Loew-man H. C. Burkhardt, at the State, in Providence, R. I., found recent outlet for his talents for the benefit of a Judy Garland personal appearance when he arranged a reception at the station headed by the Governor and local Mayor. Judy immediately was appointed Honorary Governor for the day of her visit and headed a parade led by local bands, the proceedings broadcast. Local florists named a flower in her honor, signaling the tie-in with presentation of bouquet at the station. Miss Garland also sold autographed copies of local paper in theatre lobby, for the benefit of a college building fund and topped off her visit by singing Ave Maria at Sunday morning church services.

Contest that ran for seven consecutive days in advance of his "Firefly" date was the record of Manager Wm. G. Serrao, of the Avenue, Brackenridge, Pa. In his first effort Serrao conceived the idea of an essay competition inviting readers to express themselves within 100 words on whether or not they thought Allan Jones a greater screen lover than Clark Gable or Nelson Eddy. Two-column cuts accompanied each day's publicity. For the interest of the juveniles, a coloring contest was run simultaneously, the net result of the two publicity endeavors aiding the attraction greatly, reports Serrao.

Down in the heart of the Oklahoma ranch country, 1936 Grand Award winner Lew Chatham dug up an old-time authentic stage coach for bally on "Wells Fargo," at the

"TEST PILOT" WINNERS TO MEET CLARK GABLE

Top contest tie-in arranged by MGM on "Test Pilot", offers two round trips to Hollywood via American Air Lines as first prizes for best essays on airplane as means of national defense. Idea is aimed at over 10,000,000 adult and juvenile air-enthusiasts and behind the project are many junior flying clubs, trade papers, etc. Winners will meet Clark Gable at MGM Studios and be presented with flying suit like the one worn by star in the picture.

Sooner, Norman, Okla. For further atmosphere, Chatham and the house staff dressed in frontier costume, accompanying the coach around town. There was a girl driver, armed guard serving as lookout, mounted horsemen firing blanks, for additional color. For lobby display Lew borrowed a collection of firearms popular during the period the picture portrays.

On the same attraction Frank Gooch, of the Opera House, Bath, Me., reports though limited to a small budget, the promotion of a record publicity campaign topping 1,000 lines of free space. This is an all-time top in his situation for a two-day date on a single attraction, Gooch claims. In addition to effecting many of the press-book tie-ins, Frank arranged for leading pastor to speak on the picture as the topic of his Sunday sermon, day ahead of opening.

Subsequent-Runs Effective

In the subsequent-run classification, Harold Grott, Metropolitan, Baltimore, reports the highlights of his "Wells Fargo" date, street stunts and colorful lobby displays bringing the best returns. Some two weeks ahead, in a lobby space, eight feet by 14, Grott had painted a huge canvas background representing a Western landscape. Center of the display was a model of the Baltimore & Ohio's crack locomotive of 1864. Floor was artificial grass. Small tent with all the fixin's, including full Indian regalia alongside attracted, as did an exhibit of Boy Scout paraphernalia, in charge of a delegation of local Scouts who answered questions. On opening day Harold dressed his doorman in complete Indian costume, including war paint, who, in company with usher, costumed in the picture's period, plugged the date throughout the section.

"See your voice" was the stunt found most effective by Grott for the benefit of "Thrill of a Lifetime," which he applied to the idea as well as the picture. Set up in the lobby was a microphone and patrons invited to talk into it saw green line moving erratically around a white disc. Movements of the green line were supposed to be voice reproductions, the apparatus explained, as follows:

Microphone feeds an amplifier coupled to a cathode ray tube, tube being similar to those used to reproduce television signals and also in use to service theatre sound systems. Grott decorated frame around the equipment with stills from the picture for additional advertising.

Columbus Welcomes Mae West

The advent of Mae West for a week's engagement at the RKO Palace, Columbus, Ohio, gave publicity director John Barcroft sufficient outlet for one of his typical campaigns put on in cooperation with Manager C. Harry Schreiber. Front page stories, feature articles and contests were all over the papers. Barcroft blanketed the city and surrounding territory, planted window cards in railroad and bus stations for miles around. Special electric signs and life-size cutouts of the star were used profusely in and around the marquee and the lobby.

Top exploitation stunt was tie-in with National Used Car Week, taking place during star's arrival. John promoted a 300-car parade, each auto decorated with "welcome" signs. Motorcycle police escort, uniformed ushers, highway patrolmen, local celebrities and others made up the procession, led by brass band and progressing through the downtown district to theatre.

Neighborhoods Stress "Zola" Ideas

In the Washington Heights section of New York, Manager M. Katz and M. Cole cooperated on a smart job of publicity on "Zola" at the Lane Theatre, playing the picture a month after the chain neighborhood houses. Immediate attention was called to the date in advance with the construction of a 40 by 60 letter "Z" covered with advertising from pressbooks and other cost-free sources. Another 40 by 60 carried top reviews on the picture.

Week ahead, a contest was planted on page one of the community newspaper, and also in advance the theatremen arranged for one of the ushers dressed as Zola to distribute calling cards with theatre and dates throughout the neighborhood. Day prior to opening a full page ad was taken in the community paper which cooperated with a front page streamer and on opening day the lobby and marquee were heavily decorated.

BEN DOES A "BERGEN" AS USHER DUMMIES

To give the kids a chance to win a Charlie McCarthy, Ben Mindlin, of the Bellerose, in Bellerose, L. I., has been putting on an Edgar Bergen contest with dummy dolls as prizes. Week before he started, Ben pulled a "Bergen" on the stage with one of the dolls, usher behind the curtain acting as the McCarthy half of the cross-fire while they both discussed how the youngsters could gain one of the "Charlies."

ALL CLASSIFICATIONS REPRESENTED

Striking what was termed a profitable note of conservatism well in advance of his campaign on "Tovarich," Manager J. R. Preddy, Orpheum, Waco, Texas, aimed his initial publicity at his more discriminating patrons, feeling that their word of mouth advertising would aid in building the attraction. Preddy reports his posters from National Screen Accessories fitting in with this slant. Arousing the desired curiosity was a series of tack cards reading, "Reserved for Tovarich" with no other copy. This was followed with a mailing of post cards to clubwomen and wives of local professional men. Local book stores carried out an accompanying Russian theme in a window display. Street stunt that attracted included boy and girl dressed as maid and butler distributing tie-in cards in cooperation with local druggist advertising a sundae named after the picture.

Constructs Model Hotel

A model hotel of four floors, measuring six feet in height, was the feature of Frank Aydelotte's lobby display for "Hollywood Hotel" at the Tower, Drumright, Okla. Framework was built of one by two scrap material and the front from scrap celotex. On top was erected sketeton sign to resemble steel framework. Fifteen windows were cutout in the front and covered from the rear with white blanking paper. Miniature shades of brown wrapping paper were hung from each window. Sign was constructed to hang from roof to marquee, painted to resemble typical hotel sign, lettered with title of picture, double-sided, and illuminated from interior. On each floor was lettered cast names and stills were planted alongside. Miniature marquee covered small revolving door of pasteboard turned by concealed fan. Sides and rear of "hotel" were covered by old window cards and the entire cost, reports Aydelotte, was a matter of dimes.

Doormen and cashiers wore bell-hop hats made with fillers from old hat boxes, tops and sides painted with vari-colored water color. Silver band was painted around the hats and picture credits lettered across front. Elastic was used to hold hats on head at an angle.

Creates McCarthy Pater

In the midst of the northwest timber country, Portland, Ore., proved a good spot to plant a story on "Goldwyn Follies" at the Broadway, which broke nationally. The J. J. Parker theatremen had a long yarn in the Oregonian having to do with a fictitious "Fir Tree McCarthy," long-missing father of Charlie. Story ran as an interview with local ventriloquist supplying the answers for the dummy's "parent" and a two-column cut, properly captioned, was further evidence of this smart publicity job.

Wally Caldwell's profitable contacts with his newspapers brought two contests, six-day and seven, in the Toledo News-Bee, for "Goldwyn Follies" at Loew's Valentine. The first competition was a "comeback" slant, paper running two-column scene cuts

"CONSTANT HAMMERING" FOUND MOST BENEFICIAL

The new Awards rulings are encouraging members who hesitated about competing under the former set-up, as illustrated by a note from one of the Midwest theatremen:

"I like the new plan since I don't seem to have the knack for pulling spectacular campaigns, shooting the works for one picture and coasting for weeks after. I'd rather spread my stuff because in the long run, theatres benefit more by constant hammering."

and story daily with various of the stars in the picture cracking-wise to Charlie. Prizes were given readers for the best answers and included McCarthy dolls as well as guest tickets. Wally's second tie-in with the same sheet was a classified hook-up in behalf of the used car section, with theatre display ad atop page daily tying in the auto drive to the picture.

Much activity in the field on "Tom Sawyer" is noted and among the campaigns received, attention is called to Roscoe Drissell's work at Loew's State, in Norfolk, Va., where the theatremen was able to have the day prior to opening set aside as "Mark Twain Day" in the local schools. It was said to be a "first-time" for cooperation between the school system and a motion picture, further evidence of which was a treasure hunt open to students announced on school bulletin boards, and a Sawyer essay contest. "Old songs" radio contest and preview were also reported.

With the personal appearance of the two young starlets on the opening day of his "Sawyer" engagement, George Hunt put together a fitting campaign to welcome the children to Loew's, Louisville, Ky. Here, too, the school officials were receptive to participation and evidenced, for instance, by having each school select the honor student of the month to greet the visitors on arrival at the station. Since Louisville is in the center of the racing country, it was arranged for the children to visit Churchill Downs and select their choices for the Derby.

"Tom Sawyer" Day in Dallas

The stop-over in Dallas for a Texas visit was handled in gala fashion by Manager Walter Henshel, at the Palace, with the cooperation of publicist Forest Thompson. After a press breakfast, the children paraded to the mayor's office where his honor proclaimed a "Tom Sawyer Day," with young Kelly appointed to the post for the duration of his visit. Ceremony was filmed for and shown in advance at the theatre. Visits to schools were arranged where recesses were declared so that students could meet the stars. Announcements of the date were made in all the schools daily and special students' tickets authorized. On behalf of the Governor, Tommy was presented with a Texas Ranger commission and Ann was made an Admiral in the Texas Navy.

Top stunt on the date at the Aztec, in San Antonio, was a kid show arranged by Manager Homer LeTempt with prizes given for the first and second best "Tom Sawyer," a large number of children reported to have come "in character." Working with LeTempt was City Manager William O'Donnell, who supervised the awarding of prizes. Here, too, the schools gave full cooperation as did the executives of the American and Mexican Scout troops through whose aid the date was plugged, via mailing lists, to all members.

Ties in With Used Car Week

Riding along on the crest of the publicity accorded the recent National Used Car Week, Galy Varnell, Erie Theatre, Hugo, Okla., for "Merrily We Live," tied in with local automobile agency which bannered cars with copy reading "Merrily We Live and merrily you'll live if you drive a reconditioned," etc., etc. Model T car was planted at busy street corner with card reading, "For sale cheap; must have money to see."

For his newspapers, Varnell used cartoon type of teaser ads, opening day ad carrying a personal endorsement by the theatremen and street ballyhoo consisted of headless man carrying head in his hands, back copy advising that he laughed his head off at the picture.

Since Missoula, Mont., was selected for the Intermountain premiere of "Gold Is Where You Find It," John Taylor, Wilma Theatre, secured wires of congratulations from the stars appearing in the picture and used these together with scene stills for his lobby display. Samples of gold were obtained from the University of Montana and local mining companies and these were planted in local jeweler's window. Special preview was held at which celebrities attending were given autographed photos of Olivia De Havilland and George Brent, while for street bally bannered nag was pulled about city streets by ushers dressed in miners' outfit.

BRIDGE TOURNAMENT PILES UP PUBLICITY

Since the many private bridge clubs in Provo, Utah, are opposition, Jack Braunagel, Intermountain City Manager, found a way out by sponsoring the annual city bridge tournament in the mezzanine of the Paramount, this year's contest being the second under his wing. Folks come to the theatre now to do their playing instead and the papers have given the contest a splendid ride during the weeks of the competition with the house, of course, mentioned prominently.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

The general belief is that the world revolves every 24 hours, but a fellow out here has proven that to be a phony notion. He told the school professor that he put a rock on the top of a post one night and the next morning it was still there, and he asked how it could still be there if the world turned over.

This reminded us of a cartoon where the owner of a racehorse at the county fair got up behind the jockey and said, "I am going along with you to see if I can find out why my nag never wins a race."

While we haven't been there for several years, we still remember Nampa, Idaho. Nampa has a very fine theatre and manager Brown treated us royally when we called on him.

An item in the paper says that the Senate purchased a jackass for $4,500 to improve the strain. Gosh, but that's a lot of money for a mule. We supposed they have a pretty good strain in the Senate right now.

The paper tells of a woman who said that her husband left her so much property to worry over that she sometimes wishes he hadn't died. That's the trouble with a lot of these husbands. There's no darn sense of a man leaving his wife a lot of stuff to worry over that way.

There's also the man who was induced by a crook to put $1,700 in an envelope and he would put it in his safety box to remain until his return, when it would have grown to $20,000. He waited seventeen years for the man to return and then had the envelope opened and, instead of $20,000, it contained some leaves from an old magazine. The fools are not all dead yet.

The other day we went down to one of the pool halls to see if we could get one of the relief boys to spade our garden. He asked us how much we'd pay and we said we thought $3.50 a day ought to be about right, but he said, "Not on your life; I don't work for starvation wages for nobody." These boys ought to be furnished with roller skates. Walking around pool tables on these hard floors is liable to give them flat feet. The Government ought to do something about this.

The other day we went to Norfolk and went through the clinic. The doctor examined everything except our carburetor and he gave us some capsules to swallow that would choke an ox and he told us to go to bed for a couple of weeks, but how in thunder is a man to lie in bed when the Moon theatre is playing such pictures as it is.

If our health will permit, and if we can get some gasoline, and if our hired girl doesn't run off with the ice man, we are going down and call on those Jayhawker boys whether they want to see us or not. MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

April 23, 1938

ASKING for PROHIBITION

REFUSAL, after much pressure and argument, of the State Board of Regents of New York to permit the showing of "The Birth of a Baby" in the theatres of the state is a decision to have been anticipated.

The insistence of Martin Quigley, and his publications, that the picture was to be held unsuitable for entertainment screens and general audiences, made amply manifest in the pages of Motion Picture Herald for the month past, has been based on plain showings of simple facts.

The unwisdom of entertainment showings and the unfitness of the product for such purposes is too obvious and conspicuous to permit of even a pretense of intelligent disagreement. Two elements of pressure have been observable: those who would take profit at any price, and those who would make propaganda at any cost, to others.

The action of the Board of Regents is a decision in behalf of both the amusement screen and its public.

A disservice, meanwhile, is done to the screen when motion pictures call down upon it external regulative prohibitions. That is asking for trouble, destroying the prided "freedom of the art". Enough pride would avoid the invitation to reproof, reproach.

EXPERTS and IDEAS

NO OTHER art has ever so enjoyed the anxious concerns of so many persons, institutions and interests which would help it attend to its own business, entirely with advice, as the motion picture. Most newspaper editorial pages have at least one self-constituted expert on the movies, intermittently engaged in explaining just what they ought to do and be.

At the moment there's a ripple of attentions to that element of Mr. Will Hays' annual report, recently made public, which repeated and reiterated in substance the utterance against propaganda on the screen made by Mr. Martin Quigley at Williamstown last summer.

"Propaganda with a capital P can ordinarily be detected instantaneously in any form of art," remarks, for example, the "Daily News" of Logan, Ohio. "An overzealousness in attempting to avoid it, however, can induce a kind of oversensitiveness in the faculty of detecting odors, and lead to the indiscriminate rejection of all material bearing the faintest scent of an idea."

"It might be good to remind them (picture producers) also that an effort toward no end but entertainment in a superficial sense is as likely to produce exceedingly dull fare as effort toward no end but propagandizing. Entertainment is more than skin deep..."

It is entirely possible that the press, including our Ohio contemporary, can leave that little problem up to the industry to solve for itself.

FURTHER there is no evidence whatever that "entertainment is more than skin deep." Examination of the nature of the art wares and expression of all sorts consumed by the majority would indicate no clamor for ideas. Persons with ideas are commonly not in the market for synthetic stimuli from the arts. Happily they are few in number. The vast preponderance of the population is of the sit-and-take-it order of mind which makes box office customers and consumers of easy-to-read papers, periodicals and books. They are, bless 'em, the customers.

The essence of success in the merchandising of all the arts is in new tellings of old stories. There are no new ideas, but some of the old ones are pretty good yet.

Sift out the best sellers of a quarter of a century of the feature picture, or of any number of centuries of the stage or literature, and see what you get.

Inevitably and always, those who contend for "ideas" and messages in the entertainment media have some of their own they want delivered.

SPEAKING of the stage this same Logan Daily News remarks: "It might be good to remind them that Broadway a few years ago discovered, greatly to its profit, that theatre goes long undernourished on theatrical whipped cream would stampede a show that served them something they could get their teeth into. . . ."

What the stage of Broadway did really discover was that the motion picture had taken its flow of mass customers and that it had to make and present specialized minority audience product of specialized appeal, resulting in entertainment that could find a supporting audience in the great concentrations of population in New York, but not nationally. The acquisition of some of this material for the screen also got the motion picture into abundant trouble—with the customers.

When the country really "got their teeth" into it there was a call for the Lavoris.

HARVESTING THE TARES

HERE and there about the land arise laments that "Bingo" parties and other chance games, conducted by various churches, lodges, sewing circles and such, are proving costly competition for motion picture theatres. And that is a part of the harvest that the motion picture reaps from its depression-born folly of making its theatres lottery houses some years ago. It was then and thereby that the nation was infected. The recrudescence of the lottery represents social decomposition, in which there is no abiding profit.

BLOCKHEAD SLUMP

DUE to the style debacle in women's hats, now in its second painful year, business has gone to pot in a little backwoods village theatre down south. It is in the poplar belt, where they specialize in cutting big thirty-inch trees to make the eight-by-eight sections of clear softwood so desired by the makers of hat blocks. Now the milliners are throwing their absurd hats together without blocks, and they look it. Meanwhile the payroll is off at the hatblock mill. There ought to be a law.

This Week

Independents

Important in the general preview of product to come for the 1938-39 season are the plans of the independent producers, more numerous than ever and claiming a substantial portion of the market. From that sector come approximately 100 features of 600 odd produced annually. Activity in the states right field this year is expected to be stimulated by policies of centralization being adopted by the larger companies and by the continued demand created by the double bill situation.

Plans of producers in this portion of the industry are reported on pages 12, 13 and 14.

Paramount Product

Paramount Pictures will release 58 features; 104 short subjects, including a single two-reeler, and the regular 104 issues of Paramount News, during the 1938-39 season, sales executives were told by Neil Agnew, vice-president, at a meeting last Friday and Saturday in Washington. Mr. Agnew identified 16 of the 58 features and announced that the remainder of the 1938-39 program would be further identified on the coast within two weeks by Adolph Zukor, production chief. Mr. Agnew expressed confidence that the public's interest in screen entertainment and its attendance at motion picture theatres would increase during the new season. It was because of this belief, Mr. Agnew said, that Paramount decided against any decrease in the number of pictures to be produced in the approaching season.

The 16 titles announced by Mr. Agnew are included in a story on page 15.

Convention

More than 200 delegates are expected to attend the fourth annual national convention of the Variety Clubs of America which will be held in Cincinnati Saturday and Sunday. Ned Depinet of RKO will head a delegation of home office executives from New York. Special cars will leave from several cities. A business meeting will be held Saturday and the national banquet on Sunday.

Target of Italians

Hollywood "is a cheat" like the mirages of the Sahara, says one of several writers in Rome who en masse are attacking the production center for drawing the best of film talent from Europe. They call it sabotage, with stars, directors and technicians kept "idling away on the shelf until their usefulness is gone."

The Italian writers' complaints of Europe's "sacrifices" to Hollywood are recorded by Joseph D. Ravotto on page 17.

Cooperative Ads

Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, this week warned exhibitors that the methods employed by a small group of theatre operators is jeopardizing the continuance of cooperative advertising campaigns, a plan under which distributors and exhibitors share the costs of local advertising for certain pictures. The "chiseling methods" of some exhibitors, Mr. Cohn said, have forced Columbia to establish a lineage department which keeps a close check on theatres' local advertising. He also declared that cooperative campaigns, in the future, will be offered by his company only to exhibitors who have displayed their willingness to carry out their part of the agreements.

Details are on page 18.

Technic

Technical progress in the industry and examination and discussion of new and proposed tools and processes for use in motion picture production will be given thorough attention next week at the spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers which opens Monday in Washington, D. C.

The program and titles of papers are on page 52.

Open Warfare

Decision of the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association to break off round table discussions with the Kinematograph Renters Society and declare open war over the vexed problem of grading and rentals precipitated the British film trade into a struggle which has been long in the making. The decisive action, authorized by the exhibitors' council, will take the form of press and direct mail propaganda and the publication of the KRS "secret" list of "A" films with suitable commentary.

Aubrey Flanagan outlines the fight on page 55.

Chicago Theatres

Chicago's motion picture theatres, during 1937, had a total seating capacity of 338,000 or one seat for each nine residents, according to a recreational survey report made public this week by Arthur J. Todd, of the department of sociology and anthropology of Northwestern University. Although the seating capacity was approximately the same in 1926, there was a 20 per cent decrease in the number of houses since then, the report shows.

The report is discussed in an article on page 50.

Farm and Film

Four dollars and 70 cents is the average annual per family expenditure for motion pictures made by America's 32,000,000 farming population, whose land and buildings are estimated to be worth some $58,000,000,000, and from which they receive an estimated $9,000,000,000 in cash income yearly from their farm marketings.

The expenditures range from less than 50 cents for poverty-stricken sharecropper families in Georgia and Mississippi, to $9 per family in New Jersey, and $13 in California.

Farming families' film expenditures were determined by the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Home Economics. Its report appears on page 49.

Licensing Plan

New York City's proposed licensing plan which would force motion picture companies to produce 10 per cent of their annual output in New York, has won the approval of "one of the largest producing companies," according to the sponsor of the measure, Hugh Quinn, city councilman.

Although Mr. Quinn declined to identify the company, "for obvious reasons," he said he has conferred with officials of the organization and that they expressed a willingness to cooperate in the plan, provided at least one other company would join the movement.

Adjudged a Lottery

Ruling that Bank Night is a lottery, the United States Post Office Department this week denied the use of the mails to Affiliated Enterprises. An appeal to the Federal courts from the ruling, Washington observers said, will mean that the company will either regain the use of the mails or be forced to discontinue the chance game entirely. It was also pointed out that if the company attempts to continue Bank Night without the use of the mails there are criminal statutes which can be invoked.

These and other angles of the latest Bank Night ruling are explained on page 160.

Denies Blocking Probe

By a vote of five to two, the Federal Communications Commission this week refused to adopt the Payne-Craven resolution submitted last week, explaining that the commission investigation of monopoly is not an attempt to forestall a Congressional inquiry and putting the commission on record as not opposed to a Congressional probe.

The only members voting for adoption were the sponsors of the resolution, Commissioners George H. Payne and T. A. M. Craven.

Representative Lawrence J. Connery, Democrat, of Massachusetts, last week urged that the House immediately make an investigation of its own into conditions in the radio industry.

Marketing Projector

Actual marketing of International Projector Corporation's Simplex Four Star Sound System, described in detail in the February 12th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, was announced to the trade press by Earle G. Hinds, president of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., at a luncheon last Thursday.

The new equipment, designed with complete access to the patented sound devices of both Western Electric and RCA and reconciling in the machine itself the industry's patent rights, is being distributed through the facilities of National Theatre Supply Company.

Reorganization

Conferences in London among four of the five director-owners of United Artists resulted in a unanimous agreement on reorganization of the operating set-up of the company. The announcement was made Tuesday after newspaper reports stated that the London discussions were on plans for the purchase by Alexander Korda and Samuel Goldwyn of the stock held in the company by Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks.

Details are on page 46.

WPA Radio Shows

The first nationwide effort of the Federal Government to revive the road for theatrical touring companies will be started within 30 days by the WPA Federal Theatre Project, it was disclosed at a meeting of the project's national policy board in New York Friday.

The board hopes to organize subscription audiences in at least 200 communities, which would be asked to underwrite all expenses except labor costs. The WPA theatre would guarantee the sponsoring community a specified number of productions.

Evan Roberts, director of the Federal Theatre's radio division, was appointed by Hallie Flanagan, national project director, to supervise the new plan.

"Zola" First Again

Of approximately 25,000 replies to the New York Mirror's Motion Picture Contest, which was concluded last week, "The Life of Emile Zola" was chosen as the "best" picture of the last 12 months with 11,906 votes.

The favorite film hero chosen was Paul Muni with 4,355 votes followed by Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable. The favorite film heroine was Myrna Loy with 5,674 followed by Bette Davis and Claudette Colbert.

Aid from British

Joseph H. Seidelman, general foreign manager of Universal, completed important financial arrangements in behalf of the company while in London, he revealed Tuesday when he arrived in New York on the Aquitania.

Mr. Seidelman referred queries for details to J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of directors, who confirmed that a new financial arrangement had been made, but refused to disclose any additional information. He said he considered it a "private matter."

During his ten-week stay abroad, Mr. Seidelman completed sales and distribution deals in Great Britain and the Continent which are expected, by Universal, to increase its foreign revenue 15 to 20 per cent in the near future.

Call Action Invalid

Trustees for Grand National this week answered a Federal Trade Commission's charge of misrepresentation by asserting that the action is not valid because it was brought after the company was placed under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act.

Edward Alperson and Loyd Wright, trustees, also pointed out in their formal answer that since the business was turned over to them, February 25th, they have issued instructions to the sales and advertising departments to refrain from using the title "In His Steps" in connection with the film "Sins of Children."

The FTC charge was based on the claim that Grand National advertised the film as being suggested by Dr. Charles E. Sheldon's novel, "In His Steps," and that the novel was a religious story, whereas the film was a love story.

Exhibitors Meet

Meeting dates were announced this week by four exhibitor organizations, the newly formed Allied Theatres of New York, Allied of Connecticut, the Southeastern Theatres Association and the New England unit of Allied, Independent Exhibitors, Inc.

Connecticut Allied will meet in New Haven, May 26th, to elect officers.

The Independent Exhibitors will convene Tuesday in Boston and Nathan Yamins, national Allied president, will preside.

The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, will hold its annual convention at the Lookout Mountain Hotel, Chattanooga, June 5th, 6th and 7th, Sam Borisky, general chairman, said.

Mr. Yamins and Abram Myers, general counsel and chairman of the Allied national board, are expected to attend the New York meeting which will be held at the Astor Hotel, May 3rd.

POPEYE'S popularity in the Argentine is attested by his unofficial enlistment in a recent political campaign, specifically in the Socialist party poster above in which the invincible sailorman, after feeding himself on the "popular vote" can of spinach, knocks out Bluto who represents "fraud, oligarchy and illegality."

Tom Baldridge, manager of Warners' Capitol theatre in Winchester, Va., who is director-general of the 15th annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival which will open, complete with Apple Blossom Queen, next Thursday.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, left, and Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign manager of the company, on board the Rex before they sailed from New York to attend sales conventions in Paris, May 5th, 6th and 7th, and in London, May 12th, 13th, 14th.

PRODUCT OF 40 COMPANIES IN INDEPENDENT FIELD IN SIGHT FOR '38-'39

Continuance of Duals Favors Independents; Curtailment of "B" Features by Several Large Companies Is Called Factor

That integral part of the motion picture industry known as the "independents," producers and distributors, has before it a potential sales market for product in 1938-39 far greater than in many a season of recent years.

Contributing 100 features, or thereabouts, to the 600-feature annual requirement of the country's 15,000 theatres, the independents today are as deeply engaged in new-product formulations as are the so-called "Big Eight," buying stories, signing stars and directors, writers and cameramen, in order to present their product portfolios at the doors of exhibitors during the selling season now underway. Product from 40 independents is already in sight for the new season.

One of the greatest strengthening factors for the independent market in the new year would appear to be the trend toward curtailment, if not elimination, of the so called "Class B" feature by some of the "majors."

Double Bills Stay

There is no sign of any abatement of the double bill, "happy hunting ground" for the independent in the states right market, while the reputedly almost certain deathknell for the chance game and other forms of cash giveaway would appear further to strengthen the independents' position, requiring, as it would, further demands for product, or something, to take the place of the giveaway practice. Only this week the cash "lottery" received its greatest setback in all the long series of legal and legislative attacks against it, when the United States Government closed the mails to "Bank Night," on grounds of illegality as a lottery under postal laws.

The running this year for independents may not be expected to be as smooth as in other years, certain restrictions presenting strong possibilities that they will be required to intensify the sales and merchandising job than previously, as well as budgeting and production.

Financial backers of independents, as other financiers, are not so willing as in earlier years to part with money under unsettled conditions generally existing and in view of the precipitate rise of production costs, especially since the Screen Actors Guild labor contracts came into force.

Regardless, and quoting Maurice Conn, of the independents, "The states right market today is in its best condition in years insofar as the demand for pictures is concerned." And here many of his colleagues point to the relationship of the law of supply and demand.

Considering the reorganization or liquidation processes through which parts of the independent

CLUB REVIVES "NICKELODEON"

The Arden Club in Arden, Del., has revived the "nickelodeon" days with the showing of old silent films starring Charlie Chaplin, Harry Langdon and others. The opening show last week presented Chaplin in "The Pawnbroker." The ancient melodramas and other films of the days when pianos banged out the musical accompaniment and sound effects are shown bi-weekly.

production system were forced in recent years, indications point to a market far from a low ebb. Where some have passed on, others have as rapidly sprung into place. Within the last few weeks, the industry has received announcements of the new Ben Judell Pictures, resumption of Victory Pictures, continuance of Stan Laurel Pictures, revival of Associated Features, Inc., by Jed Buell, continuance of Fanchon Royer Productions, reorganization of Grand National, revival of Criterion Pictures by Phil Goldstone, continuance of Sol Lesser and David L. Loew as independents with increased budgets, likewise Harry Sherman Productions and Larry Darmour.

E. B. Derr's Crescent Pictures has had a contract renewal with Monogram, the while continuance in the field is expected from Coronet Pictures, Supreme Pictures and others.

Additional "new blood" in independent production and distribution appears in the formation within the fortnight of Pictures Corporation of America, by Ira Greene and Victor Halperin; Malcolm-Brown Picture Company, by Joseph R. Malcolm and John E. Brown; Frank Kassler, Inc.; American Pictures, Post Pictures, Cosmorama and Surety.

Other names presenting prominent possibilities for the independents' market in 1938-39, some new, include: Atlantic Pictures, Box Office Attractions, Castle Films, Diamond-Royce, E. B. Derr, John Doran, Front Page Productions, Imperial Pictures and Le Baron Productions, Merit Pictures, Metropolitan Pictures, Musart, George Pal, Pictorial Films, Milton Schwartzwald, Leo Seligman, Syndicate Exchanges, Vidor, Warwick Pictures, and additional possibilities now in the making.

The United Artists producers—Selznick International Pictures, Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Ltd., Edward Small Productions and Walter Wanger Productions—were not included in this survey because theoretically they do not fall into the classification of independent producers for the purpose of this recapitulation. Likewise, Republic and Monogram, which, while giving the independent market much of the life sustained, are not necessarily independents on the states right market, in view of their both owning some of their own exchanges. GB Pictures, of course, is not an independent because its physical distribution is handled by Twentieth Century-Fox Film.

There will be a decrease in the number of pictures next season made for "regular" or major company release channels. This is due, for the most part, to the centralization policy of majors which have decided to place most of their production activities under their own roofs, or under their direct supervision.

Evidence of this is the dropping by Paramount of contracts with B. P. Schulberg and Emanuel Cohen, and by RKO Radio of the Condor Pictures deal for George O'Brien "action pictures," with the subsequent signing of the star by RKO, and failure of various other prospective deals for releasing arrangements by independents through major channels.

Judell's New Company

Most active in the states right field at present is Ben Judell, exhibitor-distributor, who has completed three of a contemplated ten features for the present season, and has announced a program of 42 features for 1938-39, from his Progressive Pictures Corporation, of Hollywood, and including 30 "exploitation features," six outdoor adventures and six westerns. The 30, he says, will include "controversial and problem subjects," of which the first three are: "Delinquent Parents," "Wayward Daughters" and "Scandal House." Headquarters are at 7250 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood.

Sam Katzman's Victory Pictures, inactive since last fall, when a fire burned his equipment and sets at the old Foy Studios in Culver City, will turn out three "exploitation" features for 1938-39: "Her People," "Child Wives" and "Nobody's People." Mr. Katzman said he has a financing deal for other films underway, returning from New York last week after conferring on that matter.

Grand National is undergoing reorganization. As the co-trustees Edward Alperson and Loyd Wright proceed with their plans, it is expected that either new companies will be formed or dormant ones revived to furnish product for Grand National.

Max Alexander of Colony Pictures, Inc., is producing two Ken Maynard vehicles to be distributed by Grand National with federal court approval.

Phil Goldstone has revived his Criterion Pictures, Inc., which last year produced a remake of "Damaged Goods" for Grand National release, to make three "Renfrew of the Mounted" features, starring James Newill, for the distributor. Thus far, these two producers have the only court approved Grand National contracts for future production.

Stan Laurel Pictures, Inc., headed by the comedian and his business manager, L. A. French, has three more Fred Scott musical westerns to produce under a releasing contract with Spectrum Pictures. Mr. Laurel and Mr. French also have a contract with Scott to appear in an additional six.

Jed Buell, who last week resigned as production executive of the Laurel organization, is reviving his Associated Features for 1938-39, to produce "novelty features" for the independent market. Already planned is "The Terror of Tiny Town," a musical western with an all midget cast. Mr. Buell may also produce some features with all-Negro casts, following his "Harlem on the Prairie," now in release.

MANY NEW COMPANIES IN ACTION

Mr. Buell will use the "Singer Midgets" in his novelties, with Fred Myton writing original scripts, Helen Gurley acting as story editor and Charles Wayne as assistant director. The company has established headquarters at 937 North Sycamore Street, Hollywood.

Others for Negro Patronage

Another new possibility for 1938-39 in the Negro-film field on the independent market is Merit Pictures, of which Richard C. Kahn is president, and which is nationally releasing its first, "Two-Gun Man from Harlem," through Sack Amusement Enterprises.

Bernard B. Ray, who formerly produced under the banner of Reliable Pictures Corporation, is inactive at present.

Another independent producer, Fanchon Royer, will states-right "Religious Racketeer," starring Mme. Harry Houdini, widow of the magician. The only woman producer in the independent field, Miss Royer says her future pictures and those for 1938-39 are not set.

Having the highest per picture budgets of independent producers releasing through major companies are David L. Loew and Sol Lesser, Mr. Lesser working as Principal Pictures.

Mr. Loew is producing for the new season a Joe E. Brown starring picture, "The Gladiator," and has another Brown story to make under the commitment with the star. This, however, may go through RKO, and not Columbia, RKO having previously released three of the Brown comedies made by the David Loew organization. The second picture is to be "Flirting with Fate."

In addition, Mr. Loew is negotiating for release by a large company of from four to six features in 1938-39, but no announcement of their nature has been made. Loew has Edward Gross now working with him as associate producer.

Loew and Lesser budgets are the only ones among independent producers, outside of the United Artists producers, to run in excess of $150,000 per picture.

Mr. Lesser's deal with RKO Radio has been renewed for 1938-39 and for the new season he will supply three Bobby Breen features. In addition, Mr. Lesser, as head of Principal Pictures, Inc., will produce "Celluloid," original by Rupert Hughes on the history of motion picture production, and possibly some other high budget features for the new year. No releasing arrangement has been set for "Celluloid" and those to follow. He also will make six "Peck's Bad Boy," the first for RKO release.

Missing from the Twentieth Century-Fox company's recently announced feature program for 1938-39, were the Smith Ballaw westerns produced by Sol Lesser. While Lesser this week had not been officially notified of Twentieth Century's dropping of the Ballaw releasing arrangement, it is generally thought that such notification will be forthcoming. Lesser, under contracts already signed, has one more Ballaw, "Lord of the Pantamints," and "Tarzan Speaks" to deliver to Fox. In the event that Fox does not resume with the Ballaw series, of which there have been four a year, Mr. Lesser will probably drop the series entirely. He would then discontinue "B" pictures and produce only "A's." Already Lindsley Parsons, producer of the Ballaws for Lesser, has settled his contract. Probably coming next to the Loew-Lesser

Warners Set Two Regional Conventions; RKO Schedule at 48; Fox Keeps GB Films

Progress was evident this week in 1938-39 product formulations, highlighted by Paramount's announcement of 58 features (see page 15), and the decision of Warners to hold two sales conventions, in New York, May 9th-11th, and Dallas, May 16th-18th. Gradwell Sears, sales manager, said he selected Dallas in tribute to Bob O'Donnell, of Interstate Circuit.

Warners sold 50 per cent more ad sales accessories in the final week of the "Sears Sales Drive" than any other time. Rentals for the last week of the drive were 45 per cent greater than in any Warner week in ten years. Business for the entire 16-week period was reported 37 per cent above other drives.

Sam Morris, foreign head, returned this week from London with word that Warners will produce 14 features at Teddington in 1938-39, four less than this year. Jerome Jackson is the new London production manager.

Leo Spitz, RKO president, returning from Hollywood, announced 48 features for 1938-39, same number as this year. The annual convention will be held in June.

With Jules Levy and Walter Branson, RKO sales executives, working the field, RKO's "Ned Depinet Sales Drive" rounded its fifth week, with Buffalo first.

Radio this week designated Victor Moore as a star, exercised options on Milton Schwarzwald for 13 one-reelers for 1938-39, signed Gregory La Cava to produce and direct, signed Garson Kanin for the same, and arranged with Sol Lesser for three Bobby Breen features for next year.

W. Ray Johnston, president, said Monogram will release 42 features, 16 of them westerns, two Jackie Coopers, four with Boris Karloff, four Frankie Darro, three with John Carroll and Movita. The convention is at Cincinnati May 8-10.

Republic has budgeted between $7,000,000 and $7,500,000 for its 55 features and four serials, H. J. Yates said.

S. R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, sailed from New York to preside at a Paris sales convention, May 5th, and in London, May 12th. With him went Walter Hutchinson, foreign manager, who said 35 will be distributed in Europe.

Mr. Kent said the corporation will again distribute GB pictures in this country. MGM has $3,000,000 budgeted on four 1938-39 features for production in England, according to Robert Ritchie, head of Metro's British studios. In Culver City, the company re-signed Henry Hull, Eleanor Powell, Anita Loos, Alan Curtis, Albert Mannheimer and W. S. VanDyke.

budget range in the independent market is the "Hopalong Cassidy" series produced by Harry Sherman Productions for Paramount. Mr. Sherman, producing Paramount's only "outside" pictures, spends $90,000 to $125,000 a picture. Bill Boyd, No. 2 in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD exhibitors' poll of western stars, is starred and George Hayes and Russell Hayden are featured. Mr. Sherman's deal for six Boyd westerns has been renewed by Paramount for 1938-39, and there is a possibility he may make one or two other features for the same distributor, such as "The Barrier," which he completed this season.

In virtually the same category as the Sherman budgets are the Larry Darmour pictures, starring Jack Holt. Darmour, for years in the action-film field, produces six yearly for Columbia, and his deal for 1938-39 has also been renewed. With next year's program, Mr. Darmour increases his costs, most of the rise going to Holt under a raised option.

One of the most prolific of this group of independent producers releasing through majors is Trem Carr, whose financing is so interlocked with that of Universal, his releasing company, that he is generally thought of as a Universal producer, and not as operating in an independent capacity as head of Trem Carr, Inc. He produces six Bob Baker westerns and six action pictures per year for the company, and will continue with this pace in 1938-39.

Universal has another independent producer whose product it releases—The Crime Club Productions, Inc., headed by Larry Starr and Irving Fox, which makes six mystery melodramas annually and whose pact will be continued for another term.

E. B. Derr's contract under which Monogram releases Crescent Pictures, has just been renewed for 1938-39, but the new contract provides that Derr produce eight, double the number of the old season. Four of the pictures might be from the "Secret Service" stories which Mr. Derr purchased some time ago. "Private Nurse" winds up the Derr commitment for Monogram this year.

Republic Pictures has renewed the independent-producing contract of A. W. Hackel's Supreme Pictures, which makes eight Bob Steele westerns annually.

Coronet Pictures, headed by Howard Lang with L. G. Leonard as executive producer, and another of the independents producing for major release, has three more Buck Jones westerns to do for Columbia.

Hal Roach, one of the oldest in business as an independent releasing through a major company, is relinquishing his active interest in the production of the "Our Gang" shorts for MGM to the studio, after a dozen years, and is embarking on a new program of six "high-budget" features for the same releasing channel. MGM hereafter will produce the "Gang" shorts, with Roach, and Milton Bren, executive producer, concentrating on features.

From time to time there have been rumors on Hollywood Boulevard that producers and directors on major studio pay-rolls would set up their own independent production companies and release through majors, but reluctance of the large companies to return to a decentralization in production has been responsible, for the most part, for the failure of the deals. With production activities under one studio roof, a major company's general studio overhead may be apportioned among the budgets of the various units, making a lighter and fairer proportioned charge on each, while another advantage of centralization is the opportunity for close control of all company production activities by the studio head or heads.

Returning to independent producers aiming for states right releasing, away from major channels, Standard Pictures Corporation stands out prominently among programs scheduled for 1938-39. Headed by Barry W. Richards, Standard has taken over the old Vitagraph studio in California, where it is committed to some 32 features and 16 westerns for the new season. Mr. Richards is now in New York for releasing conferences.

Prospects are said to be bright for resumption of independent production by Howard Hughes, following his proposed flight around the world. Robert M. Savini, of Atlantic Pictures Corporation, releases reissues on former Hughes productions.

Extension of activities for next season by Boxoffice Attractions, of Hollywood, is seen in the company's announcement that it has acquired road-showing distribution rights of "Wanted," made by Sound City Films, and featuring ZaSu Pitts; also "Heritage," starring Mary Maguire. Expeditionary Films, of Australia, made "Heritage" and "Uncivilized," which Boxoffice is releasing. Sound City Films is of London.

Surety Productions, Inc., has incorporated in Los Angeles and announced plans for four features annually based on the Nick Carter novels. Production will be supervised by I. A. Allen and Samuel K. Wiesensthal and the budget for each film will be $150,000. Camera work will start in 60 days, the announcement issued by Mr. Allen said.

With headquarters at 1033 North Cahuenga Boulevard, Hollywood, Cosmorama Productions has been formed to film current happenings not covered by newsreel cameramen, starting with "The Fishing Fleet," about Pacific Coast fishing, a 1,500 foot subject. Members of the organization are Gene Hagberg, Lennie South, Thor Loovos, J. Henry Kruse and Hank Levy.

The name of Bernarr Macfadden, physical culture proponent, as returning to independent production, was mentioned in Hollywood this week. Regardless, David Diamond and Arthur Royce have an option on 24 short stories published in Macfadden's Liberty magazine, ostensibly intended for film production, probably two-reelers.

John T. Doran, formerly general manager of Film Art Studios, in the Bronx, is said to

TELEVISION ON REGULAR BASIS

Television broadcasts for the New York area on a regularly scheduled basis got under way Tuesday. The schedule calls for a four-week period of experimental transmissions from the National Broadcasting Company's television station W2XBS in the Empire State tower.

The televised series is intended primarily for NBC and Radio Corporation of America officials. Amateurs in the New York area, however, who have built receiving sets, will also be able to look in on the programs.

be planning a series of six features at that plant, for release in 1938-39.

The new season may find Educational Pictures among independents, at least as a producer, in view of the termination of the E. W. Hammons company's short subject releasing contract with Twentieth Century-Fox.

One of the most active in the states right field is Imperial Pictures, which, two weeks ago, received permission from the Securities and Exchange Commission, in Washington, to go ahead with refinancing plans. At the same time the company announced 32 features for 1938-39 financing coming, partially, from the new stock issue. The new program will consist of 10 "Blue Ribbon Specials," eight "Frontier Dramas," eight "Musical Westerns," and six "Exploitation Specials."

Foreign Subjects

Frank Kassler, Inc., is another new company, formed by Frank Kassler, in New York, to distribute French and Polish pictures here. He already has acquired distribution rights to "Dark Eyes," Vladima Tourjansky's production starring Simone Simon and Harry Baur.

Jaime Salvador, vice-president of LeBaron Productions, independent, left New York this week for Hollywood to start production of two more Spanish features.

Ralph Like is producing six "girl detective" features for 1938-39, having finished the first, "Held for Ransom," in Hollywood.

Malcolm-Browne Pictures Corporation, of 244 West 49th Street, New York, has been formed by John E. Browne, president, and Joseph R. Malcolm, of Malcolm Laboratories, as vice-president.

The company announces 20 features for 1938-39, with production in Hollywood, and added that $400,000 already has been budgeted. The program will include eight westerns, eight action features and four specials.

Al Selig, former film press agent, is director of publicity, advertising and exploitation.

Malcolm-Browne this week signed Melvin Hirsch and Bert Kulick to the first territorial distribution contracts, for New York, and followed with sale of Boston rights to Ambassador Film, of New England.

A new Metropolitan Pictures Corporation, headed by Harry Webb, formerly a partner with Bernard Ray in Reliable Pictures, is reported in formation in Hollywood, with six "exploitation melodramas" and six musical westerns in contemplation for 1938-39.

Music is in sight for the new season, with Musart Film Producers, of New York, announcing two features, the first, "Life of Tchaikowsky," to go into production in May, under direction of R. E. Von Allen, and featuring a 120-piece symphonic orchestra. Michael J. Gann, president, also said that production on a series of musical short subjects on Russian and Gypsy Folk songs will start this summer, both groups for 1938-39.

George Pal, creator of a "puppet-cartoon" process, returned to Europe last week, after conferring with Hollywood producers, and said he plans a studio on this side to make his one-reel "Puppet-Toons." David Bader, of London, continues in Hollywood as Mr. Pal's representative.

Pictorial Films, of 130 West 46th Street, New York, is proceeding with several series of shorts, including "Snow Fun," "Water Fun" and "Master of the Camera."

Organization of Pictures Corporation of America was announced in New York by Ira Greene, president. Victor Halperin, who has made 30 features variously for United Artists, Paramount and RKO, is vice-president in charge of production, and J. Burgi Contner, president of Motion Picture Supply Company, is secretary-treasurer. Budd Getschal, formerly of Universal and The Film Daily, is director of publicity and advertising.

Mr. Greene, head of Continental Film Industries, Inc., film investment bankers, said production will be at Film Art Studios, Bronx, with home offices at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

Five Musicals

Milton Schwartzwald will produce five musicals for 1938-39, three of them for Nu-Atlas Pictures, the others for Mentone, with production starting in New York in May. Mr. Schwartzwald will direct, assisted by Larry Williams and Bill Kelly as cameramen.

Leo Seligman, of 630 Ninth Avenue, New York, is extending his distribution activities. This week he obtained national rights to "Man's Paradise," story of Bali.

Syndicate Exchanges, New York, is reissuing Mickey Rooney pictures.

Zoli and Laci Vidor, of Hungary, now in New York from Europe, will import foreign pictures, starting with "Her Wonder Team."

J. J. Milstein, former vice-president in charge of sales for Republic, has organized Warwick Pictures, to distribute political films, starting with "The Fight for Peace," anti-war subject.

Importations

In addition, the states right system in this country usually has 65 or more features imported variously during the year. Although given limited distribution (see foreign films survey, page 12, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 16th), the pictures do represent a part of the independent market. Some of the importers of foreign films, all with headquarters in New York, and marketing through states right exchanges, are: Danubia Pictures, Malmar Pictures, Lenauer International Films, Herman Weinberg, Ufa-Film, International Cinemat, Hoffberg, Cinelux, Gallio, Cinema Arts, B. N. Films, Hungaria-Films, General Films, British Lion, Fenorama, Best Film, Mayer-Burstyn, AFE Corporation, World Film, Geist Pictures, Modern Film, Amkino, Norton, Collective, ACE Pictures, Associated British, Mindlin, I. C. I. Pictures, Guaranteed Pictures, European Pictures, Pax Films, French Motion Picture Company, Viennese Pictures, Foreign Cinema Arts, Prometheus Pictures, C. U. C. Films, American Tobis, Associated British Pictures, Daven-Lauer, Schwab, Bueno.

PARAMOUNT'S SCHEDULE REMAINS AT 58 FEATURES, 104 SHORT SUBJECTS

Sixteen of the 1938-39 Pictures Are Named at Washington Convention; 2,000 Contracts Reported on the Books

Paramount Pictures officially got its 1938-39 selling and sales convention period under way this week with a meeting of 27 home office, district and division executives, in Washington, at the Shoreham hotel.

Formally announcing a program of 58 features—about the same as 1937-38—with 104 short subjects, only one in two-reel length, and the regular 104 issues of Paramount News, Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, expressed the belief that "public interest in screen entertainment and attendance at motion picture theatres will be on the increase during the coming year."

Identifying 16 of the contemplated 58 features, the Paramount executives announced that in two weeks Adolph Zukor, production chief, will further identify the remainder of the program, also the star, player and directorial assignments for most of the group.

Not formally announced at the meeting, held on Friday and Saturday, was the tabulation already of some 2,000 contracts for the new product, representing one-fifth of the 10,000 contracts sold on features this season.

Territorial Meetings Soon

New product plans and the sales policies under which they will be sold are to be relayed soon to the exchange managers, bookers and salesmen in the field at individual territorial sales meetings.

Paramount's continuance of both its feature and short subjects program at approximately the same numerical length as 1937-38, running to 58 or 60 features and 104 shorts, is contrary to a previous impression prevalent that the feature lineup would be reduced to about 50.

Mr. Agnew, forecasting increased attendance, said:

"Consequently," he said, "the studio plans no diminution in the quality or number of pictures to be produced during the next 12 months. Instead, we are going ahead with even more ambitious plans, a program definitely tailored to public taste and audience acceptance of pictures."

Of the "Wells Fargo" Type

"The success of 'Wells Fargo,' 'The Buccaneer' and other pictures of this type have convinced us that audiences the world over want more swooping, spectacular pictures of the romantic, historical type, and our production plans for the new season embrace several big pictures in this category."

He listed as among this type:

"MEN WITH WINGS," with Fred MacMur-ray, Raymond Milland and Andy Devine. William Wellman, who directed "Wings," will direct.

"UNION PACIFIC," to be produced by Cecil B. DeMille, and described as "the story of Hell on wheels and the building of an empire."

"IF I WERE KING," Justin Huntley McCarthy's story, with Ronald Colman, to be directed and produced by Frank Lloyd.

"KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE," identified as an "all-star production dealing with King Arthur's Court and its glamour and courage."

PARAMOUNT IS THIRD TO HOLD SALES MEETING

Paramount Pictures, meeting in Washington last Friday and Saturday, is the third major company to hold its annual sales convention for the discussion of product and policy for 1938-39. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer met on March 13th, in Kansas City, where 52 features and 93 short subjects were announced (titles were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on March 19th), and Twentieth Century-Fox met April 2nd, in Chicago, where 59 features and 58 shorts were set (titles appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on April 2nd).

Other new sales and production formulations for the new season appearing in this issue include the activities of independents for the new year, described on page 12.

"THE TEXANS," a story of the rise of the Lone Star State, starring Joan Bennett, and Randolph Scott, with May Robson and Walter Brennan, directed by James Hogan.

Tailored to Star

"Following our 'tailor made' plan," Mr. Agnew continued, "the studio will fit special material to the unique personalities of several of our stars. We have countless requests for Bob Burns in a story with a 'razor back' background, so among the pictures that Bob will appear in this year will be 'The Arkansas Traveler.'"

"S. S. Van Dine believes that Gracie Allen is a female Philo Vance, and he has written a story for her called 'The Gracie Allen Murder Case,' which will star Gracie and George Burns."

"Musicals are always good and we will have several on our program this year, all rattling good stories with music—not musical 'clam bakes' with unrelated acts popping in and out. Those fast moving stories with music will be suited to such personalities as Bing Crosby, Jack Benny and Martha Raye."

On Topical Subjects

Further development of the "tailor made plan," Mr. Agnew continued, will include immediate action "on a series of subjects that now are the center of public attention." He listed in this group:

"AIR RAID"

"CAFE SOCIETY"

"NAVY NURSE"

"ILLEGAL TRAFFIC"

"KING OF ALCATRAZ"

"TOUCHDOWN ARMY"

"CAMPUS CONFESSIONS"

"SONS OF THE LEGION"

Color will be used in at least two films, "Men with Wings" and "Tahiti," Mr. Agnew explained. Dorothy Lamour and Raymond Milland will appear in "Tahiti."

Series pictures such as the Hopalong Casidays and the Bulldog Drummonds, Mr. Agnew said, will be continued.

The short subject lineup will include a series of 12 Popeye cartoons; 12 Sally Swing cartoons, replacing the Betty Boop series; 15

Paramount headliners, 13 Paramount paragrahics, 12 Paramount pictorials, 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights, six color classic cartoons, six popular sciences, six unusual occupations and seven films in a new series, "Paramount Color Cruises."

In addition, Max Fleischer studio will produce a two-reel cartoon, the title and character of which have not been decided upon yet, Mr. Agnew said.

There will be no feature length comedy from the Fleischer studio on the Paramount schedule for 1938-39, officials explained, pointing out that no plans for such a production have been settled and that the company estimates that a minimum of 18 months would be required to complete such a production.

Among those at the Washington meeting were J. J. Unger, Charles Reagan, Robert Gillham, C. N. Odell, Fred LeRoy, Myke H. Lewis, M. A. Milligan, Harry Goldstein, G. B. J. Frawley, Ralph Libson, Allen Usher, Oscar Morgan, Hugh Braly, Milton S. Kusell, Arthur Dunne, Herman Lorber, Jack Roper, Alec Moss, Terry De Lapp, A. O. Dillenbeck and Bob Gibbs.

Operations Analyzed

Mr. Agnew called the first session to order with discussions of general policy for the new season and an analysis of the operations in the field. The meeting was adjourned to permit the executives to attend a screening of "Cocoanut Grove" at the Earle theatre. The conference was resumed at 3 P. M. and continued until 6 o'clock.

Sales problems were discussed at the Saturday session. The meeting was interrupted while the executives were entertained at the Variety Club. A buffet luncheon was given at the hotel Saturday in honor of the sales officials by Carter Barron, Loew's Washington division manager.

The company's new season sales policies and production plans will be outlined to the branch managers in each of the 11 sales districts by the district managers within the next few weeks, Mr. Agnew announced after the Washington meeting.

In districts comprising widely scattered exchanges, such as the southern, far western and Canadian, the district managers will call in the branch managers for a meeting in a centrally located city, in districts where the branches are relatively close together, such as the east and central territories, district managers will visit the exchanges individually to outline the plans.

Barney Ballaban, Paramount president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, will leave New York Friday for an extended visit at the studio.

Settle "Chain Gang" Suits

Six out of a total of seven libel suits against Warner Brothers in connection with the film adaptation of the Robert E. Burns' book, "I Am a Fugitive from a Georgia Chain Gang," have been settled out of court, it was said this week in Atlanta by Vivian L. Stanley, prison commissioner. Mr. Stanley still has a case against the company pending.

'Time' To Cover Radio News

Time, weekly magazine, this week announced it will institute a radio department within the next two months. The new department will have its own staff of researchers and correspondents, the announcement said.

'BANK NIGHT' LOSES RIGHT TO MAILS, U. S. RULING GAME IS A LOTTERY

Affiliated Enterprises To Ask Injunction Against Post Office Ruling; Company's 1936 Income from Exhibitors $769,528

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

A terse announcement by the Post Office Department last Saturday that "Postmaster James A. Farley has issued an order denying the use of the mails to Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., Denver, Col.," is held by postal officials to mark, eventually, the end of "Bank Night."

The order, the announcement continued, was issued "on the ground that the 'Bank Night Theatre Prize' distributing scheme is a lottery." Several cities and state courts also have so ruled.

The Federal Communications Commission announced that advertising Bank Night by radio was prohibited by the Communications Act.

Affiliated Enterprises will apply to the District of Columbia high court for an injunction to restrain the Post Office Department from enforcing the ruling, according to Edward Goldstein, New York representative.

If the matter goes to the courts and the department's order is upheld, it will mean the end of Bank Night, Washington observers said, pointing out that there is a federal statute, enforced by the Department of Justice, prohibiting the transportation of lottery material in interstate commerce.

It is estimated, as a result of the investigation, that the annual income of the Bank Night company is in the neighborhood of three-quarters of a million dollars.

Court reviews of fraud orders are asked infrequently, largely because the concerns against which the orders are directed are faced with practically unassailable evidence that their operations are without the pale of the law.

Added to this is the fact that many of the respondents in fraud cases are small operators who "take a chance" on making a "clean-up" before the Government catches up with them.

Affiliated Enterprises, however, is in a different category. Its operations are conceded by department officials to have been open and "above board"; no suggestion has been made that its activities have been criminal or are designed to evade any law. The only point involved is whether Bank Night, as it has been operated, is a lottery.

If, in spite of the ban upon the use of the mails, the company attempts to continue Bank Night by personal representatives or other means, department officials said, there are criminal statutes backing up the lottery prohibition of the postal regulations, which can be invoked.

Prosecution of the company, formally, started last October, was conducted under the direction of Karl A. Crowley, solicitor, who approved the findings that the scheme was a lottery as he prepared to leave the postal service to devote himself to an effort to be elected governor of Texas.

In Mr. Crowley's findings of fact, it was pointed out that Bank Night was originated by Charles U. Yaeger and Rick Ricketson. Operating as Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., they introduced the plan in theatres. The investigation disclosed that in 1936 the company's income from exhibitors was $769,528.31.

BANK AWARDS COST EXHIBITOR $17,500

With the dropping of Bank Night in about 250 theatres in Oklahoma, following a ruling that the game is a lottery, Hugh Marsh, Muskogee exhibitor, decided to do some figuring.

He discovered that in conducting Bank Night in his theatre during the last five years he had given away $17,500 in awards.

Over a period of several years, the department instructed postmasters who made inquiry that they should refuse to accept Bank Night advertising from exhibitors. However, it was not until last year that, acting on complaints received, an investigation of Affiliated Enterprises was undertaken.

As a first step, the department instructed postal inspectors to attend Bank Night at local theatres and to report whether they considered it a lottery. The inspectors' reports held that the distribution of prizes was dependent entirely upon chance, not skill.

A number of hearings were held late in 1937 and final argument was delivered before department officials in Washington in January of this year.

Connecticut High Court Rules Game a Lottery

Bank Night was outlawed this week in Connecticut by the supreme court of errors which ruled it a lottery "designed solely to serve the selfish ends of the owners of the theatres who operate it" and "contrary to the public policy of this state." The case was brought to the high court on an appeal by Ernest Doran, Middletown theatre owner, who was convicted in superior court of operating a lottery.

Permission Granted To Reopen Philadelphia Chance Game Case

John T. Connelly, Philadelphia attorney, was granted permission this week to intervene and reopen the recent Bank Night cases which resulted in Judge McDevitt's ruling that the game, and all other chance games, were illegal. Mr. Connelly, counsel of Mayfair Theatre Corporation, made his motion to reopen the case on the ground that he has additional testimony. Meanwhile, all proceedings are stayed.

The decision means, it was explained, that regardless of the ruling on the exceptions taken by the attorney for the Palm Theatre, which will be heard on Monday, chance games will be permitted to continue until the new case is decided.

District Attorney Halts Bingo Games in Bronx

Although chance games in theatres are not affected, Samuel J. Foley, district attorney of the Bronx, this week declared he had suppressed Bingo in his borough and that he "would see to it that it stays suppressed."

Mr. Foley issued the statement after the conviction of the president and two members of the North Side Republican Club for running a Bingo game. "We are ready," Mr. Foley declared, "to prosecute any organization that tries to start again."

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York recently launched a survey of the metropolitan area to compile information on Bingo games. The organization contends the games are "unfair competition" to theatres.

Oklahoma Attorney General Reaffirms Lottery Opinion

Reaffirmance of his opinion that Bank Night is a lottery, was contained this week in a ruling by Mac Q. Williamson, Oklahoma attorney general, in a ruling to the Carter County attorney.

At Ardmore, police called a game "Hospitality Night," but Mr. Williamson said it is a lottery and referred the attorney to his recent opinion that Bank Night is illegal. The opinion was written by Fred Hansen, assistant attorney general, on request of E. W. Schenk of Carter County.

"Yellow Jack" Ban Is Sought in Cuba

On the basis of reports received from Hollywood by the Havana newspaper El Mundo, to the effect that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has distorted historical and scientific facts in preparing the script of "Yellow Jack," dealing with the isolation of the carrier of yellow fever, the Lions' International Club of Havana has addressed a petition to the National Censorship Board, urging that if the report in question is true, the film be banned in Cuba, according to word received from Jose Barba of Havana.

Mr. Barba said the report from Hollywood was to the effect that MGM has omitted in the treatment of "Yellow Jack" giving credit to Dr. Finlay for his work in connection with the isolation of the yellow fever carrier.

Louis Nizer's article on "Proprietary Interests in Radio Programs; Recent Developments," which appears in the Columbia Law Review for April, has been reprinted in pamphlet form. The article discusses the protection of ideas, program titles, news and events, names and personalities, and defamation and unfair competition in radio.

Warner Circuit Rejects Nazi Sequence in 'Time'

A sequence in the current March of Time release, dealing with Hitler's annexation of Austria, has been rejected by the Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., according to Joseph Bernhard, general manager.

The same circuit was one of the first to take action against the last March of Time Nazi release, banning the reel from exhibition in its theatres.

HOLLYWOOD ROBS EUROPE OF TALENT THEN SHELVES IT, ITALIANS CHARGE

New Film Weekly in Rome Says Hollywood Is Afraid of Europe; Vittorio Mussolini Delays Screen Operas

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO
in Rome

Hollywood is sabotaging the European cinema industry by calling on her best actors, directors and technicians and then usually keeping them idling away on the shelf until their usefulness is gone, if one were to believe a number of recent articles in the Italian press. Some of the critics make the accusation by inference, others train their guns directly upon Hollywood.

"Film," new Italian motion picture weekly, in an editorial headed "Hollywood Roundtrip," says: "Hollywood is afraid of Europe. It subtracts its best forces, uses them up, tires them out and makes them uselessly fade away."

In more subtle fashion, Sandro Defeo, critic of Messaggero, Rome's most important morning newspaper, points to "sacrifices" made in bolstering up Hollywood. He writes:

"Some day, when the true story of films is written . . . will be known how and in what measure the sacrifice of talent has been made and is continuing to be made by Europe in strengthening the lymph of the American cinema."

Still another publication holds that "Europe has paid with its intelligence," that the European elements that have gone to make Hollywood a success have prevented the European industry from realizing its objective.

If nothing more, Film's article is interesting if not amusing. Its author, saying no one goes to Hollywood without fear of a return ticket dangling "like the sword of Damocles," continues:

"Telegrams of invitation, promises of contracts, moving farewells from fast ships, and then . . . directors end up by doing at most half a film, actors finish up by quickly returning, tired and deluded. Evidently something is not functioning, and the times—the famous times of Hollywood—are changed."

He lists the old European actors and directors who went to Hollywood and made good and compares them with a new list, most of whom have returned to the Continent without setting the world on fire. Then he warms up with these words:

"The Hollywood mirage is really beginning to be a cheat like the promises of an oasis in the Sahara desert."

"First, large, handsome parchment contracts are waved in the air, then comes the distribution of photographs of the 'revelations' done up by the magicians of down there, then comes the announcement of a film, then the film is changed, then a 'suitable' director must be sought, then the director cannot be found, then . . . well then, that which has happened has happened and in quick succession, the Mireille Balins and the Danielle Darrieux . . . bah, let the French worry about this."

The last sentence of the article reveals what is troubling Film:

"We, too, have something to think about. That's why the slogan must be: Keep our eyes on Miranda."

As one American distributor pointed out several days ago, "Isa Miranda has been in Hollywood some time now without doing anything and the Italians are frightfully worried that she will be shortly sent home without turning a film." If there is some truth to this judgment, it might be ventured that Film already is seeking an excuse in the probability of Signorina Miranda's emptyhanded homecoming. Miss Miranda is under contract to Paramount. (She is now appearing in "The Lie of Nina Petrovna," produced in Paris by J. Konigfest, Solar Films, distributed in the United States by Jean Lenauer, Lenauer International Films, New York, recently shown at the Filmarte theatre, West 58th Street, New York. The picture was reviewed on page 42 in the April 9th issue.—THE EDITOR.)

After listing the names of Scandinavian, German, Russian and more recently French actors and directors who have contributed to Hollywood's greatness, DeFeo in the Messaggero in his more objective study of the situation concludes:

"Some day . . . we will know how much America owes in this field to the old motherlands. . . . Nothing prevents America from being America and the American cinema from being American cinema, which is the most important and saddest lesson of all emigration."

Vittorio Mussolini's Plans

The filming of operatic films, for which ERA Film Productions with Vittorio Mussolini at head was especially formed, has been relegated to a minor place in the company's new policy.

"Rigoletto," planned originally as the debut venture, has been moved down to third place and two non-musical pictures moved in ahead.

First is "L'Orologio a Cucu" (The Cuckoo Clock) from a comedy by Alberto Domini. The second is "Capriccio" (Caprice), with script by Jeannie Macpherson, supervisor of production and distribution for the company. It probably will be directed by Camillo Mastro-cinque. He and Mario Soldati, another director, have been studying the script.

Miss Macpherson, long identified with Cecil B. DeMille Productions as a scenarist, was sent over by Hal Roach, some say as a sort of sop when the proposed Roach-Mussolini (RAM) combine fell, due to Hollywood's antagonism.

With her in ERA is Warren G. Doane, also of Hollywood, in charge of artistic direction.

That Miss Macpherson commands respect in Italian circles is brought out in a recent issue of the Corriere de la Sera of Milan, which says that "her technical authority in Hollywood has always been great."

Although "Rigoletto" may have been postponed indefinitely, the contest held by ERA through Cinema Magazine and reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of January 22 has brought to light a leading woman for the film whenever it will be produced. She is Oretta Scrobogna, 18, of Fiume.

Stokowski's "Best"

Greta Garbo may be the woman that Leopold Stokowski loves best on earth, but he refused to place her in the list of his preferred stars for newspapermen. At the Villa Cimbrone he said John Barrymore and Charles Boyer were his favorite actors, but parried the question as to his favorite actress with "Oh, let's talk about something else."

Stokowski told the reporters that he came to Ravello "among other reasons" to prepare a new musical score for another Walt Disney full-length feature. Among Stokowski's announced projects are the filming of "Parsifal" and a film on Italy.

The maestro predicted a great future for opera through the cinema provided it is "stripped of its present coverage and done in a new cinematographic style."

Public interest in Stokowski has reached such a high point that "100 Men and a Girl" packed them in at the Corso theatre in Rome.

Seizure of Cummins Film In Hands of Federal Court

Action of the United States Government to compel Jewel Productions, New York, of which Samuel Cummins is general manager, to surrender a print of the Vienna-made "Mysteries of Sex" (or "Science of Mankind"), rejuvenation subject, is now in the hands of the Federal Court, where a trial will be held. The collector of the port had originally cleared the print, without inspection, and later demanded that Jewel surrender it, which they refused. Jewel this week lost a suit for a temporary injunction to restrain the government from interfering with distribution of the picture, and Mr. Cummins said he will not surrender the print pending final disposition of the case.

"Mysteries of Mankind" was imported from Austria, in print form, by Mr. Cummins, and when the negative arrived later, in February, 1937, under the title, "Mystery of Sex," it was seized by customs officials on grounds of obscenity.

In another so-called "sex film" matter, "Birth, or the Duties of Motherhood," which just completed a nine weeks run in Newark, N. J., got its title by transfer from an old picture to one not so old. "Motherhood," released many years ago, also is controlled by Mr. Cummins. "We simply had transferred the title 'Motherhood' as we thought it would be appropriate for our picture," he said.

COHN TO CHECK FUTURE "CO-OP" AD SPENDING

Columbia Vice-President Says "Chiseling Methods" of Some Exhibitors Jeopardize Plan

Denouncing the "chiseling methods" employed by some exhibitors in connection with cooperative advertising campaigns, Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, this week sounded a warning that the "lack of vision of a minority group of exhibitors is jeopardizing an advertising practice that has been highly productive in the motion picture industry for many years."

As a result of exhibitors' failure to carry out campaigns agreed upon, Mr. Cohn declared his company has been forced to set up a lineage department to check the advertising used by theatres. In the future, he said, cooperative ad campaigns, in which a theatre and his sales company split the costs of local ad campaigns for a particular picture, will be offered only to those exhibitors who "we know will carry their share of the cost of the campaign."

Columbia's stand on the matter of cooperative advertising is similar to that adopted by Warner Brothers which announced (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, February 12th) that "we feel we have been imposed upon." The company also announced that it would join in cooperative campaigns only when it had complete control over the advertising.

Some of the methods employed by exhibitors are almost unbelievable, according to Mr. Cohn, who amplified his declaration by citing the case of an exhibitor who originally had set up a $500 budget for advertising a Columbia picture.

"We offered the exhibitor a cooperative campaign under which he agreed to spend his original budget and an additional $500," Mr. Cohn explained. "In return for his spending $500 above his budget, we agreed to spend a similar amount."

"The way it worked out, though, was that we did all the spending. The exhibitor didn't even spend his original budget. And, on top of that, the exhibitor even pocketed part of the $500 we supplied."

Plan in Use 13 Years

Mr. Cohn expressed himself as strongly in favor of cooperative campaigns, when properly conducted. Columbia was one of the first companies to realize the advantages of the distributor aiding exhibitors in advertising productions, Mr. Cohn said, pointing out that the company used cooperative ads as far back as 12 years ago.

"Cooperative advertising in the film business, like in every other branch of commerce, was conceived and developed so that both distributor and exhibitor recognizing the exceptional merits of any given piece of merchandise deemed it good business to mutually help in putting extra pressure behind the product," Mr. Cohn said.

"It's a 50-50 effort which has meant plenty of extra revenue to every one participating. There is, however, a certain type of exhibitor who consistently gives more thought to chiseling than to showmanship. He's the exhibitor, who by misrepresenting budgets on which cooperative allotments are predicated thinks he gets the better end of the deal—of course he doesn't.

"This practice, unfortunately, has become so conspicuous in this small group of exhibitors in certain key spots that distributors are saying 'what's the use of trying to help if we have to worry about getting a square deal.'"

"Considering the small percentage of chisellers in comparison to the thousands who play the game honestly, it seems a pity that a highly successful merchandising method be discarded by the distributors merely to penalize the few."

Seeks Laws to Solve Trade Ills

Passage of some form of "appropriate" legislation designed to solve trade practice problems was advocated by Emil K. Ellis, attorney, at a luncheon meeting this week of the Motion Picture Associates, an organization of New York film salesmen.

"The industry has an opportunity to kill the Neely bill if the exhibitors and distributors through round table discussions can arrive at an acceptable formula themselves," Mr. Ellis said.

"In the absence of a conciliatory attitude on the part of the majors, the only alternative is Federal legislation. If some form of legislation is not passed at this session of Congress or the next, there will be tremendous pressure from aggrieved elements in the industry and public groups for general Federal regulation of the industry and drastic Federal censorship," Mr. Ellis said.

Executives of large companies will be invited to present their arguments against the Neely bill at a dinner to be given in Boston next Tuesday by the Twentieth Century Club, a local civic organization which is supporting the bill. Abram F. Myers, chairman of Allied, will be guest of honor at the dinner and will speak on the bill.

Members of the Akron Independent Theatre Owners Association have protested by letters to distributors in charge of Cleveland exchanges against the 42-day availability date to subsequent run houses practiced in the 1937-38 season and asked that they return to the 1936-37 schedule of giving them product 35 days after the close of the first run engagements.

The letter, signed by 17 exhibitors operating subsequent run theatres cites the "graveyard" condition of Akron, due to labor conditions in the rubber industry, together with drastic availability schedules as conducive to "near complete ruin." Erection of two new deluxe theatres caused the change of availability dates during the current season.

A number of complaints have been placed before the Arbitration Board of the Film Section of the Toronto Board of Trade by distributors following the action of exhibitors in cancelling a feature from their contracts because the exchange presented one attraction on the year's schedule as a roadshow.

Miss Lillie Messinger, New York story editor for RKO Radio, has been appointed story editor for the company with headquarters in Hollywood. Miss Leda Bauer, Miss Messinger's assistant for some years, succeeds her in the New York post.

Dietz Replies to Critic on Foreign Picture Praise

Critics who extol foreign films as superior to the Hollywood product speak for a limited audience to whom American producers are unable to cater, because of production cost restrictions, Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Loew's, pointed out in an article published in the amusement section of the New York Times last Sunday.

"Where there is a special audience," Mr. Dietz said, "there can be a special art, but the amount of investment required has a tremendous effect on what is to be done. If one could make films inexpensively, one could afford to make limited editions. As it is, the producer has to be a daring gambler even to be conventional."

Mr. Dietz also pointed out that even with the foreign producers' advantage of smaller costs there are plenty of authorities who challenge the contention of Frank S. Nugent, Times' film critic, that foreign pictures are superior to Hollywood product. He cited the fact that while 1,800 foreign pictures are produced annually, Hollywood's 500 supply 70 per cent of the motion picture fare of foreign film audiences, clearly outranking in international appeal the pictures of any other producers. Only 240 of Europe's 1,800 features annually find any playing time in American theatres whatever, Mr. Dietz said.

He attributed the New York critic's penchant for foreign films to the romantic aura which things foreign hold for one over-weary with familiar things. He said that Hollywood asks no favors of the critics but does ask "sympathy for the problems of motion picture production and toward the productions themselves."

"What Hollywood would like you to do," he concluded, "is to judge each picture for itself in terms of its possibilities within the confines of its purpose. Don't contrast stories of human conduct with adventure fantasies about gangsters. Don't judge musical revues as if they were intended to be more than that."

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Productions

Of 13 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage and six were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Bar 20 Justice," "Flash Casey, Candid Cameraman," "Green Fields," "Land of Fighting Men," "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," "Rolling Caravan." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Female Fugitive," "Nurse from Brooklyn," "Reckless Living," "La Tendre Ennemie" (French), "Women Are Like That."

Towering above all, the industry's first company looks forward to its greatest season,
1938-39

FOREWORD

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, because of the high quality of its product and by virtue of its fair dealing with exhibitors, has become the company that exhibitors throughout the world look to as their first source of profit.

We are about to begin a new season. General business conditions are unsettled. In view of this, we could, with justice, trim our sails or even lower the negative investment in our coming pictures.

Instead, we have chosen the other road. To protect our customers in the season 1938-39, we have planned the most ambitious program in the history of this company. We have taken this stand firm in the belief that in these troublous times only the greatest pictures can insure to our customers and ourselves the greatest profit.

These pictures will be made, of course, under the supervision of Mr. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production. It was no accident that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences recently voted to Mr. Zanuck the Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award for "the most consistent high quality of production achievement." While he has been producing the fine pictures which have carried the trademark of Twentieth Century-Fox to new heights, Mr. Zanuck also has built the finest organization of producers, writers, directors and technicians ever gathered within one studio's walls. All of this is insurance for quality.

On the following pages we list the pictures which we plan to release next season. Every one of these pictures is scheduled to surpass all previous Twentieth Century-Fox standards; but I wish particularly to call your attention to the large number of virile, dramatic subjects based on important themes.

In listing these pictures, we have purposely refrained from naming the casts. Our accounts know from experience that this company gives to its productions the best acting and the strongest box-office names available in the industry. Therefore, we prefer not to tie the hands of our studio by listing the casts months in advance of production but, on the other hand, to allow our producers every opportunity for putting into each picture the strongest box-office names that can be obtained at the moment of production.

We feel that leadership of an industry brings with it definite responsibility. This responsibility can best be discharged to our customers by offering to them the best line-up of pictures it is within our power to make.

President, 20th Century-Fox Film Corp.

Irving Berlin's

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND

The dramatic cavalcade of a generation. 20th's first spectacular hit of the new season. A deeply stirring story sweeping through 25 exciting years . . . with three new Irving Berlin songs—probably the greatest he ever wrote—and some of his ever-remembered hits of the past. Because the picture already is in the cutting room, we give you the cast: TYRONE POWER, ALICE FAYE, DON AMECHE, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley, Jean Hersholt, Wally Vernon, Helen Westley, John Carradine, Douglas Fowley, Paul Hurst, Eddie Collins, Ruth Terry, Chick Chandler—and thousands of others. Directed by Henry King . . . directorial genius of "In Old Chicago."

SUEZ

The most elaborate, expensive and important picture 20th has ever made—with no exceptions. The amazing story of de Lesseps—great lover, great statesman, great engineer—and his struggle to build the Suez Canal, thrilling theme of current headlines. A struggle that pitted the might of nations against one another and created an empire. A picture that sweeps from glittering European courts and bizarre palaces of India's princes to the glaring sands of Africa's desert. A cast equal in importance to that of "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK

From Walter Edmond's greatest story . . . first a Saturday Evening Post serial, then a novel that headed best-seller lists for over half a year—and sold more than half a million copies! Drama of the upper New York frontier during the Revolution . . . brilliantly alive with vivid, vigorous people caught in the sinister flame of fierce, barbaric war. And threaded through it a great romantic love. Epic in the highest sense of the word!

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY

Tumultuous, romantic adventure unparalleled in all history. The gripping experiences of a giant French trader . . . cheated by a rascal of his own race . . . who went in revenge to England's king . . . wrested for him an empire in the Canadian wilderness . . . won the love of a noble lady and lost it through a friend's treachery. Every moment a-throb with savage forest conflict and surging emotional impact. Marked for the productional scope of 20th's very biggest!

KING OF THE KHYBER RIFLES

The celebrated novel by Talbot Mundy that sold over a million copies . . . which tells of the unrelenting rivalry in love and war of two officers . . . each determined to prove the superiority of his branch of the service against the hordes of fanatic tribesmen attacking vital Khyber Pass! The majesty of the Himalayas . . . and spectacular scenes of war . . . form a thrilling background for this tale of gallantry and romance.

FOOTBALL MUSICAL COMEDY

(as yet untitled)

20th's mastery of that essential showmanship element, surprise, is never better exemplified than in its football pictures. Samples: "Pigskin Parade," "Life Begins in College." This year the lid will be off again. And, additionally, every player on the lot will be in the picture. To be released at the height of the football season. Watch for sensational announcements.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE

The brightest, fastest-moving and most hilarious marriage-and-divorce comedy ever made. A dizzy whirl of male plots and female counter-plots with ten laughs for every kiss—and the kisses come thick and fast. Remember 20th's "Love Is News"!

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE

The absorbing story of the greatest newspaper correspondent that ever lived . . . climaxed by his amazing search in the heart of Africa for his boyhood benefactor, Dr. Livingstone . . . the astonishing and world-famous adventure, so powerful in its truth that fiction pales in comparison. Indicating the vast scope of this production, already more than two years in the making, an expedition of 23 people spent months in Africa filming scenes that will be but one sequence in the completed picture.

SPLINTER FLEET

Heroic saga of an extraordinary chapter in the World War . . . told for the first time. Thrilling exploits of the fragile, tiny ships that were laughed to scorn but came to glory through the courage of men who had joined-up as a lark. A magnificent drama of love and duty . . . culminating in the most spectacular and unusual sea battle ever screened.

THE RAINS CAME

Louis Bromfield's sensational Cosmopolitan Magazine serial and new best-selling novel! Compelling drama of an Englishman who sought refuge from a forbidden love in a remote Far Eastern paradise. How his retreat was rudely invaded . . . how tragedy shattered its tropic calm . . . and how the woman who had caused his exile came within his reach . . . all this told with deep sincerity and vital force. 20th's plans call for a cast of top-rank importance!

ELLIS ISLAND

The first great film story of the last Gateway to Freedom—written from the inside. Throbbing drama of varied and colorful characters . . . their loves and schemes . . . hopes and dreams . . . as they await entrance to the Land of Liberty . . . mounting to one of the most emotional and fascinating climaxes!

Twentieth Century-Fox has introduced a new note to the American screen through the creation of the "Series" idea in pictures — a production plan which has been so successful that it is now the envy of the industry. The care and production values that have been built into each of these series have made them one of the surest-fire profit-makers today. Now 20th has decided to give you four additional series. These pictures will, in every way, measure up to the high standards set by Charlie Chan, the Jones Family and Mr. Moto.

3 CHARLIE CHAN PICTURES

with WARNER OLAND

Three more opportunities to cash in on the thrilling adventures of the screen's most celebrated sleuth. A new series of even higher production standards than have marked these outstanding pictures.

4 JONES FAMILY

America's best-loved family becomes bigger boxoffice with every release . . . to such an extent, in fact, that many members of the "family" today have developed sufficient marquee draw to carry a picture individually. 20th plans to protect and enhance this drawing power during 1938-39 by even stronger story material.

3 MR. MOTO

The famous Saturday Evening Post detective, played by Peter Lorre, has already won an enviable and growing screen following. In line with 20th's expansion policy, these pictures will be given more important casts and production strength.

...and these are the new series...

Today, the four following series are just names to you. But 20th Century-Fox has definite and daring plans for each of them. By next year, each series will be as solidly profitable as the three so firmly established in popularity.

3 TRUE STORIES

3 SPORTS DRAMAS

3 MISS MODERN GIRL

4 ROMANTIC ADVENTURES

...Based on the life of a newsreel cameraman ...

ACCENT ON LOVE

Rapid-fire, down-to-the-minute, comedy romance dramatized from Paul Hervey Fox's most recent novel, "Masterpiece." A hilarious expose of the fake antique racket . . . and a bright young man who decides love, too, can be faked! Richly mounted, happily cast . . . to make it one of the season's boxoffice high-spots!

SONG OF THE ISLANDS

In the land of the South Seas . . . abode of beautiful maidens . . . country of breath-taking moonlight nights and enraptured romance . . . occurs this fascinating drama inspired by the haunting song which is the greeting and farewell to all travelers to Hawaii. Truly an unusual picture . . . with every emotional mood heightened by melodies of the heart!

JESSE JAMES

In TECHNICOLOR. For the first time, the true, breathtaking story of this colorful figure reaches the screen. The law-abiding farmer who turned bandit and train robber because of the rapacity of land agents and the injustice of the law . . . who lost the one love of his life, and was finally betrayed by one of his own band for a bag of gold . . . but who first defied and terrorized a nation by the most daring and spectacular deeds in the annals of American crime. Photographed in the actual historic locales!

THE NIGHT BEFORE THE DIVORCE

What a title! And the story matches it in sock! When a smart young detective discovers that his wife, about to divorce him, is suspected of murder, things happen fast. Reno and smart dude ranches form the locale. What pictures need to get the women this has . . . and spelled SRO!

DANCE HALL

(tentative title)

The turbulent life of an amusement park . . . with its welter of shrewd, blatant, loving, fascinatingly vital people . . . and caught in their restless whirl, a humble piano player who dreams of fame. These, plus a dynamic musical score unique in pictures, mark this a truly exceptional entertainment!

The DIONNE QUINTUPLETS in a musical FIVE OF A KIND

Your most successful producers of unusual musicals give you something sensationally different! What 20th has up its sleeves for the Quins to do—now that they're full-fledged entertainers—is showmanship triple-plus. A typical 20th top-musical cast, of course. We have scheduled it for one of your biggest!

SONJA HENIE

in two of her greatest

THEY MET IN COLLEGE

The incomparable Sonja in a new—an American, down-to-earth—setting, giving her every opportunity to wear a wealth of smart clothes, surrounding her with young collegians . . . as a sub-rosa model for a big department store in a famous co-ed university. Skating? . . . the best! Romance? . . . by the bus-load! Tunes? . . . more than ever! Boxoffice? You tell us!

AND ONE MORE SONJA HENIE HIT

in one laugh smash

(title to come)

Eddie's most hilarious and by far most original role! . . . Eddie wins a contest as "The Average Man" but in doing so becomes a human guinea pig . . . with spies watching every intimate detail of his life. A screaming situation . . . and what Eddie does with it makes laugh history. Spectacularly produced . . . with a flock of beautiful gals . . . a whopping all-star cast of swingsters, funsters . . . and the grandest songs that ever topped a Hit Parade!

4 JANE WITHERS

Bigger and more important than any Withers pictures ever made, each of these pictures will reflect the increased production values with which 20th Century-Fox will surround this dynamic "First Ten" star. Chosen with the utmost care, the stories are designed to give added impetus to Jane's ever-increasing popularity.

KENTUCKY

In TECHNICOLOR. The sensationally popular story by John Taintor Foote—first a Saturday Evening Post serial . . . currently a novel which has run through more than a dozen editions. The epic of the American thoroughbred . . . heart-warming, powerful, thrilling. The bitter rivalry between two great families of horse-breeders . . . that began in the stormy days of '61 and intensified through the years. With a smashing climax that is one of the greatest ever depicted on the screen. Imagine—in glorious color—the world-famed Kentucky Derby . . . and the matchless beauty and glory of the historic Blue Grass country.

THE LIFE OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL

(tentative title)

The astounding, real-life romance of the man who gave the world the telephone and wrote one of history's most stirring chapters. Behind the instrument at your elbow is one of the great human dramas of mankind . . . the story of a scientist beginning in obscurity . . . his discouraging struggles . . . his proud invention of the telephone . . . his battle against public ridicule . . . his hopeless fight against great companies . . . with only the girl he loved to spur him on. Inspiring for its courage and emotional power. One of the "greats" of the season. Exploitation possibilities—limitless!

FALLING STAR

Written by Richard Sherman, author of "To Mary—With Love," this is the most daring and soul-searing story ever written about Hollywood. The experiences of a Hollywood star who, mistakenly, is believed to have been killed . . . and the things he then learns about himself, his friends, and the women who fawned on him. A role to tax the talents of the most brilliant star. 20th will cast it accordingly.

THE RITZ BROTHERS

... in three masterpieces of musical goofery!

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW

From "Saratoga Chips," the new racing play by Damon Runyon and Irving Caesar. A new high in nonsensicality for the rollicking Ritzes. They back horses, buy horses, rent horses . . . in this mad scramble of horseplay and horse-laughs. A boxoffice sweepstakes for you!

(tentative title)

Frederick Stephani's new story of a European princess seeing America incognito . . . which gets her into a mess of trouble! And then she meets three helpful singing waiters (Guess who!) From then on the Ritzes take charge . . . and the lid is off on the roaringest riot of laughs yet!

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

When Alexandre Dumas wrote this, Alex wasn't thinking of the Ritz Brothers! But the Ritz Brothers were thinking about him. They're always thinking about their author . . . and matching to see who plays what! But it's your audiences that win! And when these three kings of nit-wittery go to town as Dumas' swashbuckling heroes . . . well, boys, start thinking about hold-overs!

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

in three boxoffice champions—two of them musical, the third dramatic—all with outstanding casts.

LUCKY PENNY

A story of today that makes its heart-aches seem like all the fun in the world . . . when a little girl turns her father's upside-down life right side up . . . just because she thinks the man in the pent-house upstairs is Uncle Sam with the famous chin-whiskers. A picture with joyous lift . . . glorious rhythms . . . sparkling new dance numbers . . . and the world's No. 1 star!

SUSANNAH of the MOUNTIES

From Muriel Denison's internationally famous book. The most compellingly thrilling and action-ful story in which Shirley has appeared . . . leavened with fine romance and spiced with delightful comedy. Dancing specialties and musical hits round it out into one of Shirley's most thoroughly entertaining hits.

LITTLE PRINCESS

Frances Hodgson Burnett's immortal story of childhood . . . unforgettable for its pathos, sincerity and understanding. The story of a little American girl, suddenly orphaned in London, and her strange and wonderful experiences. For its ability to capture hearts of all ages, this will be hailed as Shirley's best.

HERE IS THE SHORT PRODUCT...

Determined on giving to its shorts the same high quality as its features, 20th Century-Fox will this year produce its own distinctive one-reel subjects under the supervision of Truman Talley. New studios are now being built in New York for the production of these pictures which will be the pride of every theatre that plays them!

6 LOWELL THOMAS' MAGIC CARPET OF MOVIE TONE

Retaining all the photographic beauty of former Magic Carpets but, in addition, tied up dramatically with current news. Narrated by Lowell Thomas.

6 ED THORGERSEN'S SPORTS-PREVIEW

To be issued every other month at the beginning of each of the major sports seasons . . . outlining in terse, dynamic terms the highlights of the season to come...as only Ed Thorgeresen can do it.

6 LEW LEHR'S KINDERGARTEN

A half-dozen howling subjects in which the screen's No. 1 funny-man comments on screw-ball events in the nation's news.

4 ADVENTURES OF A NEWSREEL CAMERAMAN

One of the most successful short series ever produced. Recognized by all exhibitors for its constantly increasing box-office draw!

4 VYVYAN DONNER'S FASHION FORECASTS

In TECHNICOLOR. One each for Autumn, Winter, Spring and Summer. A subject that will wow the women, fascinate the men!

—and—

26 TERRYTOONS

Paul Terry's famous cartoon organization will this year launch a far more ambitious program. At least six of the subjects in color!

MOVIETONE NEWS

The dramatic and complete presentation of the news has never been of more vital importance than today...when practically every hour brings word of events that can entirely overturn life as we know it. That is why it is so important to have a world-wide organization equipped to gather and distribute the news...in which department Movietone News stands unchallenged as first. This organization...which gave you the Panay Films and many other specials at no extra cost to you...will continue to give you the best in newsreels twice each week.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

13 Started

Production made a noticeable upward surge during Easter Week. Work began on 13 new pictures; eight were completed. Run of the mill material is dominant in both the new and finished films, but three or four of the starters seem to be of the caliber in personnel, story and production values that should cause exhibitors and patrons to enthuse. The production spurt made is but a forerunner of increased activities that will prevail in Hollywood until the mid-summer months. Several studios, RKO-Radio, Paramount, Universal and MGM, recalled labor and technical crews to embark upon a set construction program which will accommodate the numerous productions that will go into work during the next few weeks.

Three Paramount features were given the starting gun. After preliminary location work, "Prison Farm" returned to the studio. The cast is headed by Shirley Ross, Lloyd Nolan, J. Carroll Naish and John Howard. With Martha Raye, Bob Hope and Jack Whiting as the principals the first shots were made on "Give Me a Sailor." Installed at his enlarged new quarters in General Service Studios, Harry Sherman started "Beneath Western Skies." The familiar William Boyd, George Hayes and Russell Hayden have the leading roles.

Two pictures were started at Columbia. Edith Fellowes and Leo Carrillo, with Frank Sheridan and Helen Jerome Eddy, will be seen in "City Shadows." The featured players in "Valley of Violence," a Larry Darmour production, are Jack Luden and Joan Barclay.

Grand National Starts Two

Grand National, overcoming its organization and financial difficulties, also started two productions, "Trails West" will present Ken Maynard and Ruth Findlay as the stars. "Renfrew Rides North," for which the cast has not been completed, has Jimmy Merrill and Terry Walker.

Both pictures that started at Warners promise to be in the important attraction class. The leading players in "Valley of the Giants" are Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Charles Bickford, Jack Larue and Frank McHugh. "Because of a Man" should be unique from one viewpoint, as it will feature the three Lane sisters, Lola, Priscilla and Rosemary, with Errol Flynn, May Robson, Gale Page and Claude Rains.

At Republic, "First Prize" started. It will present the new team of Alison Skipworth and Polly Moran with Robert Livingston, Max Terhune and Berton Churchill.

"Suspicion" was started at Universal. Warren William and Gail Patrick, borrowed from MGM and Paramount, are the leading players. William Lundigan and Constance Moore head the supporting cast.

Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Mary Astor and Marjorie Rambeau are the principals in "Enemy Territory," which MGM started.

Three of the eight completed pictures are credited to Warner Bros. The cast of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" includes Edward G. Robinson, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Gale Page, Donald Crisp, Maxie Rosenbloom, Curt Bois, Ward Bond and Vladimir Sokoloff. "Mr. Champ" will present Johnnie (Skat) Davis, Lola Lane, Penny Singleton, Chester Clute, Donald Briggs, Vera Lewis, Sid Bracy, John Harron and Jack Mower. James Cagney returns to the Warner fold in

FOOTAGE MADE OVER FOR KEEN EXHIBITOR

After nearly six months shooting, Harold Lloyd's "Professor Beware" finally has been finished. It was believed that the picture actually was "in the cans" three or four weeks ago, when a rough cut was tried out on a group of exhibitors and a few newspaper men. To most, the unscored laboratory print appeared perfectly logical, but one theatre man insisted that it was not clear to him whether Mr. Lloyd's role was that of a modern student of archeology or whether the impression had been created that the star considered himself a reincarnation of an ancient Egyptian prince.

The footage in question was in the first reel. It was re-run. Thereupon those who had been less observant, including Mr. Lloyd and director Elliott Nugent, noted definite possibilities of misunderstanding.

The production went back into work. New dialogue was prepared and new situations staged which now make it clear that Lloyd is a student, not a reincarnation.

"Boy Meets Girl" in company with Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Dick Foran and Ralph Bellamy.

Two pictures were finished at Monogram. Sally Blane, Lloyd Hughes, Mayo Methot, Clay Clement, J. Farrell MacDonald, John Arledge, Ward Bond and Morgan Wallace are among those who will be seen in "Private Nurse." "The Marines are Here" will present Gordon Oliver, June Travis, Ray Walker, Guinn Williams, Ronnie Cosber, Billy Dooley, Pat Gleason.

Another two were finished at Columbia. The Larry Darmour production "Crime Takes a Holiday" will feature Jack Holt, Marcia Ralston, Russell Hopton and Thomas Jackson with John Wray, William Pawley, Harry Woods, Matty Fain, Douglas Dumbrille, Arthur Hohl, Paul Fix and others. "Swingtime in the Saddle" has Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith as the leads with Bob Nolan, Dick Curtis, Pat Brady, Ed LeSaint and Art Mix also listed.

Grand National's "The Whirlwind Horseman" will offer Ken Maynard, Joan Barclay, Bill Griffith, Kenneth Harlan and Joe Girard.

$1,000,000 Budgets

The words "It cost millions" are creeping back into discussions of picture costs despite everything from admonitions to ukases that budgets must be reduced. Paramount's "The Texans" will bear a $1,000,000 price tag. Twice that amount will be necessary for the history of aviation picture, "Men with Wings," which is being done in color. Air pictures are always expensive propositions. "Test Pilot" cost over a million. The record for such a film is held by "Hell's Angels," which cost $4,000,000. "Spawn of the North," Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific" and "If I were King," which will star Ronald Colman, will be allocated million dollar budgets.

MGM's "Marie Antoinette" is running well over the seven numeral figure. "Alexander's Ragtime Band," 20th Century-Fox, is more likely to cost more than less than a million before it is ready for release. Harold Lloyd announced that he was starting out with $1,000,000 when he began "Professor Beware." Circumstances forced that figure to be exceeded.

Samuel Goldwyn hasn't got around to announcing his next season plans yet, but he has never been one to indulge in five and ten cent store tactics when others are talking Tiffany prices. Nor will David O. Selznick fail to be included among those who think little of spending more than a million for a picture.

Warner Bros. are getting ready to preview one of their more than a million undertakings, "Golddiggers in Paris," and if they wind up "Valley of the Giants" under $1,000,000 it will be figured that a lot has been saved.

"Passage" Delayed

Although active work was to have begun at MGM on "Northwest Passage" immediately upon the conclusion of "Marie Antoinette," Robert Taylor, scheduled to be the star in the Kenneth Roberts story, will appear first in "Give and Take," a story of a prizefighter from the slums. Joining him will be Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Guy Kibbee and Nat Pendleton. Richard Thorpe will direct.

Preliminary location surveys have been made and color tests started for "Northwest Passage," but shooting will be delayed until July. It will be MGM's first feature picture in color and will be directed by William S. Van Dyke, presently working on the final sequence of "Marie Antoinette." Taylor and Spencer Tracy have been assigned to the picture and it is probable that Wallace Beery and Franchot Tone also will be spotted in important roles.

On Universal

"Three Smart Girls" and Deanna Durbin were just what Universal needed. Much is expected of "The Rage of Paris," in which French importation Danielle Darrieux will be seen in the company of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mischa Auer and Helen Broderick. Enthusiasm is running high for "The Devil's Party," successively titled "Hell's Kitchen" and "Riot Patrol."

Now production chieftain Charles R. Rogers is making plans for the immediate future. From Paramount, where they did "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," he has borrowed Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder to write the script of Miss Durbin's next picture, "That Certain Age."

He turned to Paris again for Jacques Deval, French author and screen playwright, to work on the screen treatment of "Serenade for a Wealthy Widow," a Richard Sherman novel which will be produced by Joe Pasternak.

Three unknown girls will be given the opportunity to emulate the success of Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey and Barbara Read, when they will be featured in "Three Smart Girls Leave Town."

NEW YORK REGENTS BAN "BIRTH OF BABY" FILM

Board Rules That the Motion Picture Is in Conflict with the State's Education Law

Exhibition of the motion picture "Birth of a Baby" in any private or public place of amusement was barred by the New York Board of Regents in a decision this week. The ruling upheld the earlier ban by Irwin Esmond, director of the Bureau of Motion Pictures for the state.

The board said that the film had been produced under "careful scientific supervision and undoubtedly has high educational value," but ruled that it was in conflict with Section 1082 of the Education Law. It offered to issue a permit for private showing of the picture, "if the applicant requests it."

The American Committee on Maternal Welfare announced that an immediate court appeal from the decision will be taken. They contended that since the board held that the film "has high educational value" no justification exists for refusing permit for public showing of the film. The appeal will take the form of an application for a writ of certiorari in the appellate division.

The Board of Regents, explaining their action, said: "Special provision is made in the Education Law for the issuance of a permit to show such a picture, where it is not to be exhibited at any private or public place of amusement. Such permit will be issued, if the applicant requests it."

"As an amusement picture we find the film so far in conflict with Section 1082 of the Education Law that we cannot license it."

The action of the board followed repeated editorial expression of Martin Quigley and QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS that the picture is not suited for exhibition in theatres.

Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, said in the April 2d issue that "from printed page and public rostrum Mr. Quigley has, with the acute disapproval of the propagandists and chiselers-in of other fields of expression, insisted on the right of and necessity for, the amusement business tending to its own business."

And in the issue of March 26th Mr. Ramsaye had said: "The organized motion picture industry, in solving its problem of the decency of the screen, now finds itself invaded in a cause with which it has no proper concern as an instrument of entertainment." And again, last week: "No matter what the adjudications may prove to be, an importantly large sector of the audience has been given the impression that the public screen is being, or is in peril of being, made a forum of sex education, a place for the promulgation of lore of life entirely outside of the purposes for which people and their families have been attending the motion picture theatre."

The picture was produced by Jack Skirboll and Charles Christie, under the name Christie Productions, Inc., and, according to the original application for a state license made by Sam Citron, a cutter, was financed by Mead, Johnson and Company of Evansville, Ind., manufacturers of infants' diet preparations. These facts were recorded in a news article in the February 5th issue of MOTION PICTURE

BABY SHOW AT WHITE HOUSE IS ABORTED

Indorsement of the motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," which has been forbidden for exhibition at a number of points, was given this week by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. On Monday, she announced a special showing of the picture would be arranged for the White House by Katherine Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor. Four hours later the White House let it be known that there would be no showing, for reasons unexplained.

HERALD, together with the information that when Mr. Citron appealed to Dr. Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education, Dr. Graves upheld the censorship division which had rejected the first application made in January, 1937.

The American Committee on Maternal Welfare this week said that more than a quarter of a million persons have seen the film in Minnesota and that it had been indorsed by YMCA officials, Boy Scout officials, United States Surgeon General Parran, Katharine Lenroot of the Children's Bureau, the New York Times, the New York Herald-Tribune and the Federal Council of Churches.

Special Pictures Corporation, commercial distributors of the film, issued a statement this week which said: "The Federal Council of Churches in the leading editorial of April 16 of the 'Information Service' bulletin published by the Research and Education Departments, advocates general public showing of the film."

Meanwhile the Ohio division of film censorship, Columbus, passed the film for showing in the state.

In Missouri, the council of the State Medical Association has approved the film and the maternal welfare committee of the organization will sponsor showings whenever they are requested. The showings will not be held in theatres which are in regular operation, but as special shows, which will be advertised as such. The screenings will be restricted to persons more than 12 years old and will carry an admission charge not exceeding 50 cents.

The American Committee on Maternal Welfare said Monday that the National Board of Review had approved the film for public exhibition.

Another low point was reached by the Ohio division of film censorship for the week ending April 15th when but one elimination was ordered out of a total of 135 reels reviewed.

Trans-Lux to Omit Dividend

Although stating that earnings for the first quarter were more than sufficient to provide for a dividend, Trans-Lux Corporation this week advised stockholders by letter that the regular dividend of 10 cents per share due to May 1st would be omitted in order to conserve cash for future operations. The action was being taken, the letter explained, in view of what the directors regard as an unpromising outlook for business.

Life Scores Point In New York Case

A New York test case to determine whether the stills taken from the film, "The Birth of a Baby," and published in the April 11th issue of Life Magazine, were indecent got under way in Court of Special Sessions Tuesday with the defense scoring on the first admittedly vital point of the trial.

Despite the objections of Herman Fliederblum, assistant district attorney, the three presiding judges granted the defense permission to introduce the testimony of 21 expert witnesses who described the pictures variously as valuable, constructive, dignified and decent.

Roy E. Larsen, publisher of the picture magazine, is defendant in the case and is charged with violating Section 1141 of the Penal Code which relates to indecent and obscene material. The test case was arranged when Mr. Larsen volunteered to sell a copy of the magazine to a detective in defiance of an order issued by Samuel J. Foley, district attorney of the Bronx, banning the sale of the issue in the Bronx.

Mr. Fliederblum declared the question before the court was not one in which expert testimony was admissible. Morris Ernst, defense counsel, argued that the ruling on which the prosecutor based his claim had been changed since it was handed down 50 years ago by the court of appeals. Mr. Fliederblum insisted the higher court had reaffirmed its viewpoint as recent as two years ago.

At the end of the two-hour session the prosecuting attorney was instructed to file a reply to Mr. Ernst's brief by Friday.

The Dominion Government prohibited the entry into Canada, either by mail or express, of the magazine Life, which contained stills from the film, "Birth of a Baby," censorship being applied by Government agents at border cities. Subsequently, permission was granted for the delivery of copies of the magazine to subscribers providing the pages bearing the illustrations in question were removed.

Irving Trust Institutes $49,803 Suit Against Pathe

The Irving Trust Company, as trustee for RKO, this week filed a $49,803 breach of contract suit against Pathe Film Corporation in United States district court, New York.

The action is an outgrowth of the purchase of Pathe assets by RKO in 1931, involving items in dispute as to their inclusion in the purchase which were left to be decided by a referee. The Trust Company charges Pathe has not complied with an agreement resulting from the referee's findings which, it is charged, is a breach of contract to pay over moneys and a breach of contract for failure to deliver property or pay over the agreed value.

Coincident with the filing of the suit was the announcement of the leasing of the old Pathe studio building at 1988-94 Park Avenue, New York, to the H. C. Oswald Supply Company, Inc., distributors of steam and hot water boilers. The two-story building has been vacant since 1929 when 11 persons lost their lives in a fire in the building. The supply company will remodel the structure.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

To Elias Sugarman's Billboard, of circus and sawdust, we are indebted for the disclosure that the name of Vincent Lopez, musical maestro, is on a copy of The Star Spangled Banner in the United States Government archives in Washington.

Although Mr. Vincent Joe Lopez never stood in the dawn's early light (as has Mr. Sugarman) watching bombs bursting in air, he has been accorded an honor enjoyed only by Francis Scott Key in all the 100 years since Key wrote the anthem.

Mr. Lopez got into the government Star Spangled Banner archives as a result of his continual attempts to stimulate wider use of the anthem through a revised and more singable version. 'Twas those very high "C's" in the original that "got" Lopez. Anyway, he obtained a copyright on a new arrangement.

We hope that the aforementioned mentions of Mr. Sugarman will in no way militate against our receiving the usual annual passes to Mr. Ringling's circus.

Gracie Allen, in Hollywood, has acquired a new surrealist painting. She calls it "Behind the Before Under the Vast Above Tomorrow was Tuesday."

Lionel Barrymore recalls his greatest gustatory thrill, dating back some 51 years, when he was but a nine-year-old—he will be 60 on the 28th of this month.

Brother John, then seven, and Lionel were each given half-a-dollar by their father to go out and get lunch. They went to Delmonico's. French pastry was listed on the menu at 25 cents, and they decided this was the greatest place they had ever heard of. The waiter brought a big platter and joyfully they consumed them all. Then they found out that the menu meant 25 cents per pastry. Lionel had to stay "in hock" in the restaurant while John went to the theatre and got their father to bail them out for about five dollars.

Mr. Goldwyn is just about fed up with all of the kidding about the Brooklyn birthplace of his Sigrid Gurie, touted far and wide as "more Garbo than Garbo," before it was discovered she was not from Norway. "After all," Mr. Goldwyn says, "you don't have to be born in the Canary Islands to be a canary."

Nothing is wasted in Hollywood these days since economy waves hit the studios. Joan Bennett was accidentally cut on the cheek by a bayonet in the hands of an extra working with her in "The Texans." Instead of waiting until the wound heals, Paramount is using the stabbing shot in the picture, changing the story to conform to it, Miss Bennett wearing a bandage which covers the wound below her right eye.

Apparently concluding that the Paramount publicity department's hosting to a monkey from Central Park Zoo at a screening of Dorothy Lamour's "Jungle Love" will open a new field, the W. B. Connor Air Engineering Corporation is seeking publicity in the trade press on its new process: "Odor Control for Animals."

California, says a business writer, produces most of the lemon crop.

Edward Abbott McNamee, editorial expert for the National Screen trailers of Herman Robbins, and "Mayor" of his native Greenwich Village in New York, is at this writing in a state of erubescence. With a "Thought you might be interested in a new position offered me," Abbott sends along the following letter to explain the cause of his redness:

REVEREND JOHN CHARLTON
MAPLEWOOD, N. Y.

DEAR MR. McNAMEE:

No doubt you have heard of me and my great work in the cause of temperance. For several years I have been traveling about the country appearing on the lecture platform. Perhaps you are familiar with some of my better known talks, such as 'Down with the Drink Evil,' 'Rum and Rebellion' and 'There is no Alcohol in Christianity.'

For the past three years I have had as my constant companion a true and faithful friend, one Herman Fortesque, who used to sit with me on the platform, and I would point him out to the audience as an example of the ravages of drink. Unfortunately, during the last Summer, dear Herman passed away, and I wonder if you would consent to accompany me on my Spring tour, to take poor Herman's place.

Expectantly,
(Signed) John Charlton.

Paramount announces that Bing Crosby has donated a $1,600 organ to St. Charles' Church in North Hollywood, and that he will sing at a sacred concert to be given at the installation ceremonies.

Meanwhile Paramount is hustling production of Bing's newest picture, "Sing, You Sinners."

Neatest trick of the month was Fawcett Publications' change in the title of their magazine, "For Men Only," to "For Men."

Tip to exhibitors on an ingenious scheme to raise money when triple-features, chance games, giveaways and 10-cent admissions fail to produce results:

Faced with dwindling attendance and attendant dwindling collections, a church in Sylvan Valley, N. C., called the countryside to a "hugging social." Schedule of prices for participation was: Two-minute hug, 15 cents; 15-to-25 minute hug, 50 cents; another man's wife, $1; old maids and no time limit, three cents. The younger element want to give another "social" to clear the church debt, but the oldsters protest.

Bernie Smith, wise-cracking press agent of Hollywood radio station KFI, sends out a story that a woman sword swallower will be the guest of James Vandiver on the "Meet Some People" program.

The story ended with the shot: "Her career has been one gay blade after another."

Following publication of our announcement that Cohn Brothers' Columbia Pictures is about to interpret "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen" on the screen with a "Buy Mere Mister Nuts," the company has decided to re-title the production "By Mir Bis Du Nuts."

Big New York show attractions of the week are Ringling's circus, at Madison Square Garden, and Mae West's arrival from the coast.

Mae, feeling like "an angel without the wings," rode into Broadway with a three-ton mink coat, a 200-carat star sapphire and a 20-carat diamond, shielded by a retinue of bodyguards and accompanied by an army of reporters, who brought back to their city editors the Westian tidbit: "Don't let this halo hat deceive you, big boy. . . I just wear it to cross state boundaries."

(Elias) Burton Holmes, now 68, has finished his 48th season of travel lectures with films. Mr. Holmes, in a sense, was one of America's first motion picture exhibitors, being one of the first to obtain a license to the machine of Thomas E. Armat, responsible for the intermittent movement mechanism which made practicable the projection of motion picture films upon theatre screens in their present form. That was in 1900. Mr. Holmes had been lecturing with crude slides 10 years before that, starting in 1890.

"Apparently China and Japan forget their differences when a good picture arrives in the Orient," chortles Columbia, referring to the reception of its "Lost Horizon" at the Metropolitan theatre in Shanghai. "There," they said, "the spectators, about equally divided between Chinese and Japanese, sat together in perfect good fellowship, engrossed in Columbia's picturization of the James Hilton novel."

Maybe those newspaper pictures of civilian bombings by both Japs and Chinese are greatly exaggerated.

Mark Ethridge, newspaperman, is the new radio czar pro tem, but he turned down the proffered salary of $25,000. He must think he's going to have a lot of fun.

With a newspaperman directing the destinies of the radio industry, why should China and Japan have such a hard time getting together?

Herman A. DeVry, head of the projector manufacturing concern bearing his name, is celebrating his silver anniversary in the business. Mr. DeVry comes out of his first 25 years in motion pictures with two factories and a yacht. His 82-foot boat is the Typee. It parallels the name of his projector: Type E, but was already a part of the craft when he purchased it, which, of course, in no way militated against the highly anticipatory efforts of the previous owner of the boat to induce Mr. DeVry to buy it at a fancy price.

Joan Crawford arrived in New York the other morning from Hollywood and told scores of reporters and admirers assembled at the station that she is taking up opera singing.

No sounds of deep breathing exercises nor soaring treble scales greeted those who waited for her, but, instead, the clicks of Crawford molars gnashing Crawford molars, in a furious, rhythmic chewing-gum jaw work-out—for exercise.

Advertising Age reports that advertising men are turning the annual reports of big corporations into beautiful typographical productions, the modern dress of an annual corporation report including plenty of color. Stockholders would much prefer to see beautiful black figures all the way through.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Test Pilot

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Vocational Melodrama

They could have called this "Test Picture" with as complete accuracy. If all the big men of MGM had got together and pooled their ideas for the purpose of fabricating a single motion picture with which to test the current capacity of showmen to sell entertainment and customers to pay for it, just such a picture as this would have been the result. Maybe they did that. In any case, "Test Pilot" is a box office picture in all the better meanings of that occasionally abused term, a big, rounded, polished, handsome, solid piece of merchandise with more built-in exploitation material than any reasonably level-headed exhibitor expects to find in more than one picture in a given year.

If the big men of MGM had got together and scanned the studio roster for talent known to be in current public demand, they couldn't have omitted Spencer Tracy, unusually popular choice for the 1937 Academy award. They might have figured out that killing him in "Captains Courageous" had something to do with making the public love him in that picture and, therefore, that to kill him again in this one might be equally effective. Anyway, he's in this, and they kill him.

They wouldn't have had to do much calculating as to whether Clark Gable might belong in the picture. He's been head man on the MGM list for so long, and top man in the annual MOTION PICTURE HERALD poll of exhibitors to determine ranking Money Making stars, that to leave him out of a test picture would be to discount the project in advance. They made him head man in "Test Pilot."

Eying the distaff side, they couldn't have missed Myrna Loy. She's been on the upgrade ever so long, with no setbacks. She was one of the 10 ranking box office stars in 1937, and a few weeks ago a loudly proclaimed poll conducted by the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News and some other pretty good newspapers crowned her queen of the screen with fitting ceremonies nationally broadcast. She got the job.

What to do with these three self-selling personalities after deciding to send them in, might have been a more perplexing problem. It would have been pretty clear that a couple of he-men like these and this lively gal had no business in quiet stuff. They had to have a story in which things happened and kept on happening. It couldn't be ordinary. This story conference could have run to quite some footage. Maybe it did.

Whether it did or not, Frank Wead's story about the men who take the new planes up and try to fly their wings off is all the things a story for this talented trio had to be—fast, big, vital, important, informative, educative in an offhand way and essentially fresh. They gave it to Vincent Lawrence and Waldemar Young to work over for screen use and these dependables built it to the Gable-Tracy-Loy blueprint. When they got around to casting the secondary roles they found a natural for Lionel Barrymore (the "Captains Courageous" Barrymore) and another for Marjorie Main ("Dead End" and points north). The rest of the casting was a pushover.

At about this point in their consultations the big men of MGM would have had to pick out a producer and a director they could count on to get everything out of the picture that had been poured into it, and this would have been a bigger problem in this studio than in most. The premises are practically overrun with producers and directors who have won their spurs in multiple. If the big men had got into an argument about the matter, a good arbitrator, such as Nicholas M. Schenck, might have pointed to the fact that Louis D. Lighton and Victor Fleming got along pretty satisfactorily together as producer and director of "Captains Courageous," so why not give them a go at this? Whether this happened or not, they got the tickets.

Upshot of all this would have been "Test Pilot," a test picture if there ever was one. It contains, in addition to the most spectacular aviation sequences ever filmed, comedy, romance, melodrama, tension relief, characterization, acting—and it contains no villain and no dirt.

The story is about a test pilot, his buddy and his girl, who becomes his wife. The test pilot business, it is told, is risky and hard on the nerves, therefore its practitioners, necessarily rugged as to physique and a little crazy or they wouldn't keep at it, hit the bottle prodigiously and decline to plan for the day after tomorrow. His wife and his buddy try to keep this test pilot sober, but forgive him when he gets plastered. He finally cracks up a ship and the death of his buddy in the wreck convinces him he'd better take a ground job, which he does, though he doesn't like it. A lot of things happen in between.

The picture was previewed in Hollywood on a Thursday evening and opened in New York the following morning. There's a theory around Hollywood that when a studio previews a picture that close up to premiere date there must be something the matter with it. Nevertheless, this would have been the way to handle the matter if, as above ifted, MGM had its executive mind set on finding out, right now, just how good or bad boxoffice conditions really are by throwing the public a top-caliber boxoffice attraction to sink the teeth into. Whatever the motive, MGM has turned out a piece of product any exhibitor in doubt as to whether his theatre is worth holding on to can use to find out with in a hurry. If he can't get 'em in with "Test Pilot," his theatre is for sale whether he knows it or not.

Ray June's high-flying camera brought back to terra firma an impressive demonstration of technical proficiency which may be worth exploitation mention in this era of acute lens consciousness.

Stolen Heaven

(Paramount)

Musical Intrigue

For specialized audiences Paramount has chosen a unique vehicle marking Olympe Bradna's starring debut. While probably not the type of attraction for which the masses will evince great enthusiasm, "Stolen Heaven" nevertheless possesses meritorious entertainment qualities. It is evident immediately that the entire production is a setting whereby Miss Bradna may be shown off to best advantage. To the young woman's credit, the burst of applause accompanying the climactic scenes seemed more a personal tribute to her than an indorsement of the picture. Exhibitors were thereby notified they have a valuable screen personality to earmark for future reference.

Produced in picturesque fashion, with finely presented semi-classical music coinciding with the narrative, Miss Bradna is the outstanding exploitation asset, although Lewis Stone and Gene Raymond are worthy supports.

Escaping jewel thieves, "Steffi" and "Carl," hide out in the rustic home of "Langauer," once a great concert pianist who has lost his magic touch. While "Klingmann's" police draw the net tighter, the old man's unfinished music casts a spell over the girl. A strange bond of sympathy and understanding binding the two together, "Steffi" inspires "Langauer" to regain his great talent. Preceded by musical pageantry, "Langauer's" return to the concert stage is a festive occasion. While the girl is near him, he plays masterfully, but when the police nab her he flounders on the keyboard. "Carl," foregoing a chance to escape, picks up the melody on a violin to come to the man's rescue. As he plays triumphantly police lead "Steffi" and "Carl" away, but both know they will be free soon to start life anew.

The opening musical numbers are stirring features, and after the breakneck chase the picture returns to the melodies of Strauss, Liszt, Chopin, Grieg and Moszkowski.

The human interest element, where the girl becomes the Svengali of the pianist, dominates the melodramatic crook episodes. Always, though, there is suspense binding them together.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, it was noticeable from the outset that the audience was interested almost exclusively

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Gun Law

(RKO Radio)

Action Adventure

For years George O'Brien has been listed among the top notch western actors. A prime favorite with audiences, young and old, since "The Iron Horse," he is now directly under the RKO-Radio banner. The story chosen for his next appearance, "Gun Law," embraces all the standard elements of rough and tumble outdoor action. Directly it deals with what happens when a U. S. marshal disguises himself as a notorious outlaw while investigating a series of stage coach hold ups.

Most recent of the scores of outdoor offerings in which O'Brien has appeared are "Windjammer," "Hollywood Cowboy" and "Park Avenue Logger." A new personality will be seen in the leading feminine role; Rita Oehmen has been an entertainer almost since childhood. The musical content will be taken care of by Ray Whitley and his Six Bar Cowboys, heard in "Hopalong Cassidy Returns" and "Mountain Music." One of Hollywood's best character actors, Robert Gleckler, has the chief menace role. Supporting players include Paul Everton, Ward Bond, Francis McDonald, Ed Pawley and Ethan Laidlaw.

The story used is an original by Oliver Drake, who has done such pieces as "Riders of the Whistling Skull," "Ghost Town Gold" and "The Sagebrush Troubadour." David Howard, who directed O'Brien in "Park Avenue Logger," "Daniel Boone," "Border Patrol" and "The Mine with the Iron Door," is handling the picture.

Release date to be determined.

Songs and Bullets

(Spectrum)

Outdoor Adventure

Three players seen in "Rangers' Round Up"—Fred Scott, Al St. John and Carl Hackett—will be featured in "Songs and Bullets." The second production by Stan Laurel Pictures, Inc., it also will present Alice Ardell, Charles King, Frank LaRue and Bud Buster.

With the addition of songs to be sung by Scott and chorus, the story follows the tried and true outdoor adventure formula with a thread of romance supporting the roundup of the rustlers.

George Plympton wrote the original story which he and Joseph O'Connell adapted. Music and lyrics were composed by Lew Porter. Sam Newfield, who made "Rangers' Round Up," is the director.

Air Devils

(Universal)

Adventurous Romance

The U. S. Marines have the reputation of always being ready for a fight or a frolic, and these are the substance of "Air Devils," an action story with romance, adventure, comedy, surprise. The setting is a South Sea Island. First class fighters who consider themselves heart-throbbers deluxe, they play havoc with the heart of a native girl, make things decidedly hectic for a queen of hearts from civilization, bring the native populace to the verge of civil war before they bust up a plot to prevent development of the island as a naval aviation base.

"Air Devils" is a Trem Carr production. Mr. Carr has been generally consistent in turning out films of definite entertainment and commercial value.

He is using an original story by Harold Buckley, who collaborated with George Waggner on the screen play. Both have provided Universal with much screen material, Buckley having done "Idols of the Crowd" and Waggner "I Cover the War" and "State Police."

None of the cast names is big, but most of them, save one, are fairly familiar. The air devils are Larry Blake, seen in "The Road Back" and "State Patrol," and Dick Purcell, long with Warners where his latest film was "Penrod's Double Trouble." Beryl Wallace makes her first screen venture. She was stage trained in "Sketch Book" and "The Woman." The fourth principal is remembered as a South Sea Islander in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Hurricane." Other members of the company are Charles Brokaw, Roy Mason, Paul Sutton, Al Kikume, Billy Wayne and Michael Visaroff, John Rawlins, maker of "State Police," is directing.

Release date to be determined.

Gunsmoke Trail

(Monogram)

Melodrama

The title is evidence enough that this is an outdoor adventure story. In the cast are Monogram's singing cowboy, Jack Randall, and such riding and shooting actors as Al St. John, John Merton, Ted Adams, Harry Strange, Kit Guard, Jack Ingram, Al Bridges, Hal Price and Henry Rocquemore. Louise Stanley is the girl in the case.

Greed compels a land grabber to abuse an orphan girl. Treading a trail of conspiracy, intimidation and murder, he comes face to face with the hero. Complications make the hero appear as anything but, but in the finale virtue triumphs.

Robert Emmett wrote the story, Fred Myton adapted and Sam Newfield is the director.

Release date to be determined

Yellow Jack

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A Story of Heroism

"Yellow Jack" is a true story of heroism packed with adventure. It is romance in the face of danger. While "The Crime of Doctor Hallett," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Arrowsmith" and "Jezebel" are similar in a few respects. "Yellow Jack" possesses two elements seldom used in screen entertainment. It is true-to-fact fight against yellow fever, with the mosquito as the villain. It discovers heroes in the ranks, men and women who dare the challenge of death with no thought of reward. Its background is picturesque army life in the tropics.

"Yellow Jack" was a sensational selling book.

It was also a successful stage play. MGM, with Jack Cummings producing and George B. Seitz directing, has given production of the story the benefit of all its resources.

Thus Robert Montgomery and Virginia Bruce, most recently in "The First 100 Years," will play the leads. He is a rookie who plays hookey from the army any time a blonde comes along. She is a girl who gives her life to a scientific job and her heart to the audacious soldier who volunteered for the human guinea pig test. The supporting cast lists Lewis Stone, who will appear as "Major Reed," Andy Devine, Buddy Ebsen, Henry Hull, Janet Beecher, William Henry, Alan Curtis, Sam Levene, Stanley Ridges and Phillip Terry.

Release date: To be determined.

The Marines Are Here

(Monogram)

A Service Story

Below the commissioned grades it is a popular belief that the enlisted members of the Marine Corps are more romantic than any other branch of the service, and there have been more pictures of Marines than of the others.

In "The Marines Are Here" producer Scott R. Dunlap has a story combining the elements of romance and loyalty to an ideal.

Two players long with Warner Bros., June Travis and Gordon Oliver, will be in the leading roles. The support will include Guinn Williams, Ray Walker, Ronnie Cosvey, Billy Doolley, Pat Gleason, Edward Earle and Wade Boteler.

Frank Andreon, Jr., wrote the original story, adapted by Jack Knapp, Scott Darling and J. Benton Chaney. Phil Rosen, who has made many pictures for major and independent studios, is the director.

Release date, May 4, 1938.

Private Nurse

(Monogram)

Crime and Romance

This will not be a hospital picture, but the story of a romance that flowered under the menace of a criminal. An innocent man is arrested in a bond theft. His sister, a nurse, through alliance with the police and with a doctor whose friendship soon takes a romantic turn, establishes contacts with parties whom she believes to be the real thieves.

An E. B. Drr production, "Private Nurse" is being directed by Karl Brown, who made "In His Steps" and "Michael O'Halloran." The original story and screen play are by John T. Neville, a specialist in melodramatic stories such as "Raw Timber," "Drums of Destiny," "Tough to Handle" and "County Fair."

The title role has been assigned to Sally Blane, a sister of Loretta Young, who last was seen in Jane Withers's "Angel's Holiday." The hero, "Dr. Russell," will be played by Lloyd Hughes, who has been in comparative retirement for some time. Other principals are Mayo Methot, Clay Clement, J. Farrell MacDonald, John Arledge, Ward Bond and Morgan Wallace. Minor roles will be occupied by Robert Fiske, Ralph Dunn, Oscar O'Shea, Mary Lou Lender and Howard Hickman.

Release date, May 25, 1938.

Exploitation Picture

The definition given above is from a typed notation supplied reporters covering the Hollywood preview of this entirely presentable screen extension of the late Harry Houdini's campaign against phoney spiritualists, seers, necromancers, fortune tellers, etc., who pretend, for a price, to commune with the departed. Mrs. Houdini appears in the picture and takes part in a story which has to do with the ridding of a certain unnamed city of the pseudo-clairvoyant gentry whose devices of deception her husband exposed in life and whose theories of supernatural phenomena he sought to explode in a worldwide series of seances conducted according to his request in the decade after his demise.

The story is rounded out with love interest, incidental comedy and considerable action, but its prime purpose is to expose the methods and utensils of fakirs who take money from mourners on pretext of affording them communication with their dead. These exposures are interestingly achieved and manifestly authentic. Robert Fiske, as the arch fakir, Betty Compson and Helene Le Berthon as his principal victims, and Robert Fraser as a police inspector, turn in creditable performances.

The production is, as its sponsors say, an exploitation picture. That is to say, it contains material susceptible of forthright ballyhoo billing and various types of exploitation tieups. It does not mean that the picture is sensational in any way save in its exposure of trickery which is itself sensational. There are no extraneous or off-color elements or incidents. The tone is serious and the film has a ring of sincerity.

International Crime

(Grand National)

Crime Doesn't Pay

Majoring in melodramatic theatricals, although not without a respectable quota of comedy and romance, "International Crime" is a number in "The Shadow" series. Many interesting excursions are taken from the main plot as a criminal nemesis enjoys his hobby of hazing the police department, makes sport of his quarry, engages in a battle of wits with a potential murderer, striving to uphold his publisher's courage and endeavors to rid himself of the unwanted though valuable assistance of his scatter-brained feminine assistant.

Held together by suspense and semi-mystery, the film moves speedily, and although there is quite a bit of necessary dialogue, there is a sufficient amount of excitement to satisfy the thrill action devotees, and there's comedy.

Dastardly acts of foreign power agents "Flotow" and "Starkov," seeking to prevent an international loan, bring into action the Shadow, broadcasting reporter "Cranston," and "Weston's" police. "Cranston" ridicules "Weston," worries publisher "Heath," and in turn is pestered by addle-headed "Phoebe Lane." The strings of the story are pulled together when he establishes contact with "Flotow" and "Starkov," but he must undergo further adventures before he prevents further killings and blasts the conspirators' plot.

The Volga Boatman

(J. H. Hoffberg)

River Dirge

This French production with appended English subtitles is not to be considered a foreign version of the old DeMille masterpiece of the same name. Both are equally dated. The DeMille work, released in 1926, concerned a Revolutionary boatman and his royal romance, with the fadeout preaching according to the De-Millennium philosophy that true love alone recognizes no class distinctions. This newest variation on the Russian river chant carries no undertones of social significance, being of the "love and love alone" thematic classification.

Pierre Blanchard, who made memorable and terrifying his role of the epileptic "Thierry" in in "Dance Program" or, as the French would say, "Un Carnet de Bal," walks through the principal part in this work as though he were practicing trance expressions. Vera Korene as the woman in the case is competent but no more, though she is from the Comedie Francaise. Direction and setting are unpretentious with the exception of a huge ballroom scene. Besides repeated renditions of the theme song, there are some lively gypsy tunes.

The story is detailed in flashback style. Pulling a barge, "Borzine" comes across his love, near her death after an excursion boat disaster. Then the memories.

Linguistic, musical and national groups may be coaxed to display interest.

Men Are Such Fools

(Warner)

Love vs. Business

Showmen have an unusual amount of exploitation material in this comedy romance. The title, in addition to telling the complete story, has a provocative significance and is one that lends itself readily to many curiosity-intriguing stunts and gags. For name value, there are the up-and-coming Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane (previously together in "Love, Honor and Behave"), Humphrey Bogart, whose role as a romantic menace is halfway between his characterizations in "Dead End" and "Swing Your Lady"; the dependable Hugh Herbert, Marcia Ralston, Penny Singleton, Mona Barrie, Johnnie (Scat) Davis, Gene and Katherine Lockhart and Donald Briggs. The story is made up of romantic and marital misunderstandings and mixups, played against backgrounds of radio and press advertising. Peppy dialogue and smartly contrived situations are nicely blended and the film moves on at breezy speed.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre, April 6. The audience gave evidence several times that it was thoroughly enjoying the picture. The reaction up in the balcony, where a goodly number of young folks were gathered, seemed to indicate that "Men Are Such Fools" should prove equally amusing to similar groups and that general audiences will find it a pleasing attraction.—G. (Paramount-Harry Sherman)

Hopalong in New Dress

A dozen or more releases having proved that the "Hopalong Cassidy" are not mere flashes in the pan, producer Harry Sherman has added to "Bar 20 Justice" a unique plot and production setting. While all the elements that have come to be recognized as the body of the series have been retained, and action, excitement, suspense and comedy have been accentuated, "Hopalong," temporarily, it is presumed, turns to adventures with gold ore hijackers in mine caverns and on the surface.

An interesting story, intelligently prepared, is acted with realism and conviction and pictured against quality production backgrounds. The theme embraces melodrama, comedy, skullduggery, traces of love interest, and a sufficient amount of good old-fashioned villainy. There's plenty to hold the adults and it should prove a hit for the youngsters.

Hijackers who don't even stop at murder, looting "Ann Dennis" gold mine, bring "Hopalong," "Windy" and "Lucky" and the Bar 20 cowboys into action. "Slade" and "Frazier" prove worthy foemen. When it looks as though "Hopalong" has been eliminated, the Bar 20 boys take good care of the looters' henchmen miners, and "Hopalong" personally accounts for "Slade" and "Frazier" in the thrill action finale of the picture.

For houses accustomed to featuring the "Hopalong" attractions, here's one little tip. In advertising the show, while taking full advantage of the prestige of the earlier numbers and capitalizing on the William Boyd, George Hayes and Russell Hayden name value, it might be wise to let the patrons know that "Bar 20 Justice" is not a sequel but has a fresh production idea as the setting.

Female Fugitive

(Monogram)

Melodrama

What distinguishes this "lady on the lam" is her profound knowledge of philosophical thought. Midway in the picture, while she is masquerading as a cook, our erudite heroine rallies to the defense of her sex against Schopenhauer, as quoted by her employer, by observations from the writings of Aristotle, Francis Bacon and Nietzsche.

"Peggy Mallory" had not counted on her husband "Jim" being a truck hijacker and, incidentally, a murderer, so she leaves him. "Jim's" idea has been to buy her "the world and put a gold fence around it." "Peggy" becomes the cook of a bachelor artist, "Bruce Dunning." "Peggy" entrances her boss with intellectual dishes. Husband traces wife, but G-man kills husband. Widow marries artist.

The personable presence of Evelyn Venable gets little name support from the remainder of the cast.

Women Are Like That

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy Romance

A conversation piece, the subject emphasizes comedy in detailing the marital discord of a couple over an advertising agency. In the story, which is none too substantial, a highly successful advertising executive marries the daughter of the agency's president. The president absconds with the firm's funds. The husband covers up for him until the situation becomes unbearable and he tries to drink his way out of the mess. His wife emerges as the agency's best salesman. The husband makes a comeback and wins her back as well.

Kay Francis, wearing a variety of costumes, which have their exploitation value, plays the wife; Pat O'Brien portrays the husband. Supporting players include Thurston Hall as the easy going father, Ralph Forbes, co-worker and rival of O'Brien; John Eldredge, Phyllis Claire and Herbert Rawlinson.

Besides the comedy element, there is much of the romantic, with Miss Francis and O'Brien appearing in numerous sequences. All is done chiefly in dialogue, slowing up the action, a handicap which the comedy scarcely succeeds in offsetting.

The picture was adapted by Horace Jackson from a magazine story by H. C. Carr. Stanley Logan directed.

Four Men and a Prayer

(20th Century-Fox)

Munitions Melodrama

Here is an up-to-date melodrama wherein four sons, intent on avenging the murder of their father, scoot hither and yon about the globe, getting into and out of a South American revolution and countless lesser brushes and brawls before unmasking the munitions manufacturer responsible for it all and expounding the principle that if there were no guns there would be no shooting. Showmen given to doctrinal exploitation may be able to capitalize this point in their copy. It isn't necessary, though, because the picture is lively as a cricket, lethal as a tommy gun, and contains enough billable player names for half a dozen run-of-mill shot and shell shockers. (See roster appended).

The story stems from a book by David Garth which Richard Sherman, Sonya Levien and Walter Ferris reduced to screen play form. John Ford, noted for his handling of gun powder fiction, directed the staccato goings on without missing a volley, while Kenneth Macgowan, executive producer, may be said to have poured it on as concerns budgetary facilities. The outcome is a handsomely upholstered and well spoken adventure tale with no holds barred and the wide world no farther away than the next subtitle.

Loretta Young plays a reckless young woman in love with one of the four sons of a British army officer dishonorably discharged and then murdered. The boys set out to prove their father's innocence. The trail leads them, and the girl, to South America, India, Africa and other exciting places before they discover that the girl's father is president of a munitions company which incited an Indian revolt fallaciously implicating the deceased. He is persuaded to sell his stock in the concern and his general manager is forced to confess responsibility for the insurrection and murder.

The love interest is minor. British family traditions are impressively registered in the opening sequences. Most extraordinary of the several stirring episodes is a mass machine-gunning of trapped revolutionists whose women and children perish with them. Although the picture may be interpreted as incidentally a lecture against war and the ways of war, it is primarily melodrama and likely to register most effectively where offered as such.

Robinson Crusoe's Broadcast

Cartoon

A Terry-Toon cartoon, this is a burlesque on the Robinson Crusoe radio broadcasts. Crusoe as pictured here is a tough Irish sea-faring man with a decided accent who describes how his ship sailed from Plymouth upside down around the world and after all hands but a parrot and himself were lost in a storm they found land where a cannibal tribe drops him into the cooking pot. When questioned by the radio announcer as to what happened then the Crusoe character replies, "they ate me of course." Running time, 6½ minutes.

Timely Sport Subject

Coincidental with the opening of the baseball season is the release of this sport subject detailing the many hard days of labor devoted to training. Besides an instructional portion, the men (the New York Yankees) are seen going through a varied collection of calisthenic drills. There are added shots of pitching, fielding and batting. The climax is the opening day of the season.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Excellent Band Act

Featuring the smooth musical stylization of Maestro George Hall and his orchestra and spiced by the lively vocal renditions of dimpled Dolly Dawn and the Landt Trio, this band act number proves to be excellent lightweight entertainment. The program numbers such song hits as "Dipsy Doodle," "Good Night, Ladies," "Every Day's a Holiday," "The Moon Is Here Again" and "Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea." The jazz session likely will have the younger set of the swing school tradition toe tapping and tune humming in their seats.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Good

The initial section of this Pictorial subject is a description of the artistic craftsmanship in the manufacture of silverware. The middle portion describes the thrills of ice boating. The final sequence details with the effectiveness of some good color the manipulation of a miniature railroad. Material and editing combine to make the number an interesting novelty piece. Running time, 10 minutes.

PLAN TO REORGANIZE UA OPERATION VOTED

Original Project of Purchase of Partners' Shares by Korda and Goldwyn Dropped

Reorganization of the operating structure of United Artists was agreed upon unanimously by four of the company's five directors, Samuel Goldwyn, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Alexander Korda, at a series of conferences held in London.

Although the announcement contained no details, it said that the "new policy will provide for greatly reduced cost of distribution to producers, who will thus further participate in the profits of the parent company according to their individual contributions." The reductions were reported to be: domestic, 7½% from 30%; British, 10% from 40%; other countries, 10% from 50%.

"This new policy of operation, it is believed, will make the company particularly attractive to other independent producers who are seeking world wide distribution," the announcement said.

The plan is expected to bring about an immediate reopening of negotiations for a renewal of David O. Selznick's releasing contract with the company.

Reports that the London conferences resulted in the consummation of a long series of negotiations by which Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda would purchase the holdings of Miss Pickford, Mr. Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, were answered with the assertion:

"After months of negotiations the original project whereby Goldwyn and Korda were to have purchased the shares held in United Artists by Miss Pickford, Chaplin and Fairbanks has been definitely abandoned because of present economic conditions."

While United Artists officials declined to amplify the formal announcement of the reorganization plan, it was believed to be similar to that reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD April 2d.

"Mr. Goldwyn's proposal reportedly contemplates stabilization of the controlling ownership of United Artists as it is now constituted, that is, without any sale of the stock interests . . .," the HERALD story said.

"The present inactive partners, however, are asked to exchange their present common stock for a new issue of preferred which would pay a fixed dividend rate. Active producers would exchange their present common stock for a new issue of common stock which would be entitled to participation in company earnings remaining after payment of dividends on the preferred.

"For non-stock owning producers, percentage deals would be made on individual pictures and long term distribution deals between United Artists and individual producers would include options to purchase common stock, if desired by the producer.

"Mr. Goldwyn's proposal is understood to have been tentatively approved by Mr. Chaplin although Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks are reported not to have committed themselves on it."

Mr. Chaplin was the only one of the five directors not present at the London meetings.

The United Artists denial that the Goldwyn-Korda deal had been agreed upon was made after the New York Times on Tuesday published a story reporting completion of negotiations.

"Details of the arrangement are expected to be made public at a meeting of the stockholder-producers here next week, possible Tuesday or Wednesday," the Times had reported. ". . . It is understood that changes in the policy and personnel of the company will be decided at the meeting. . . .

"Financial backing for Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn was arranged through the formation of an English banking syndicate."

Miss Pickford, Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda sailed from England on the Queen Mary Wednesday and are scheduled to arrive in New York Monday. They will "work out final details of the reorganization plans" in New York, the company announced.

UA TO DISTRIBUTE FOUR FILMS IN MEXICO

United Artists this week acquired one feature and four short subjects from J. H. Hoffberg Company for distribution in Mexico.

The feature is "Fire Trap," and the shorts are "Isle of Paradise," "Carillon Makers," "Young Explorers" and "Floridian Curiosities."

Seek Closed Shop In Laboratories

Contracts calling for a closed shop will be submitted to 15 eastern laboratories and newreels, except Universal, it was said this week by John Rugge, president of Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Close to 1,300 employees are affected.

The proposed pacts contain other provisions which are wide departures from present labor practice at the laboratories. They are a 35-hour, five-day week, instead of the present 40-hour week; $25 minimum wage for all crafts; seven legal holidays a year with pay; one week vacation for those employed more than three years; night workers to receive 10 per cent above the regular day scale; overtime and special rates for Saturday and Sunday work. The union's minimum wage heretofore was $22.

The wage pacts to be negotiated will vary with each plant. Laboratories which will get the new demands are: Malcolm, H.E.R., Du Art, Warners' Ace and Cellulose Products, Paramount News and Producers, all of which have granted the union recognition; De Luxe and Consolidated, where contracts have expired; Pathoscope, Mecca, Paramount Long Island, Film Service, Films, Inc., Mercury, Pathe News, March of Time, News of the Day, and Movietone News. The union has no members at Universal News and no contract will therefore be submitted to this newsreel.

Delivery Strike Ended

Film truck delivery service out of Des Moines, halted March 14th by a strike of the drivers, has been resumed after contracts for a year had been signed by three delivery firms which were affected. Companies signing the contracts were the Iowa Film Delivery Company, Inland Film Express, and Film Transportation Company.

The drivers, heretofore on a weekly pay basis, are now, according to the contract, on a mileage pay scale of two cents per mile for one ton trucks and two and one-half cents per mile for one and a half ton trucks and 60 cents per hour for city pickup service. The union had demanded 70 cents per hour for city pickup and 75 cents per hour for out-of-town trips.

Major Philip J. Kieffer, former Army officer, now an extra and bit player, has been elected president of the Junior Screen Actors Guild. Harry Mayo was elected vice-president; Peter Du Rey, second vice-president; Jack Grand, secretary, and Warren Dearborn, treasurer, Aubrey Blair, executive secretary, status is unchanged.

Sitting in conference in London where on Tuesday they determined the future of United Artists (l. to r.) were David Rose, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.; Douglas Fairbanks; Edward Raftery, general counselor; George Elcock, director, and Oscar Deutsch, managing director, of Odeon Cinemas; Mary Pickford; Stanley Bates, director of Odeon Cinemas; Alexander Korda, Samuel Goldwyn, and Murray Silverstone, managing director of United Artists.

FARM FAMILIES AVERAGE $4.70 SPENT YEARLY AT FILM THEATRES

It's $13 a Year in California, Less Than 50 Cents Among Negro Sharecroppers in Georgia and Mississippi

Four dollars and 70 cents is the average annual per family expenditure for motion pictures made by America's 32,000,000 farming population, whose land and buildings are estimated to be worth some $58,000,000,000, from which they receive an estimated $9,000,000,000 annual cash income from farm marketings.

Farmers' film theatre expenditures range from less than 50 cents a year spent by the poverty-stricken Negro sharecropper family in Georgia and Mississippi, to the top expenditure of $13 per year made by the comparatively wealthy white farming family of California.

The recreation and amusement-expenditure study of farming families was made by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, as Part Two of "A Study of Consumer Purchases." The first report, issued by the Department last month, covered film spending by village families, whose expenditures on pictures average between $10 to $16 yearly, against the 50 cents to $13 spent by farming families.

16,779 Farm Families Studied

Taking a cross-section of the country as the basis for establishing "consumer purchases" of theatre tickets, the Government's Home Economics Bureau arbitrarily selected 16,779 farm families in "typical locations" in 20 states.

The Government determined that while over half of the farming families interviewed spend some money during the year on pictures, they average less than 25 cents in film expenditures out of each dollar available for amusements, with the exceptions of New Jersey, where large city theatres are handy, and California, home of the motion picture industry.

In contrast to this, the recent study of non-farming families in 140 villages in virtually the same areas showed that a much higher percentage attended the theatre and that almost 30 cents out of each amusement dollar went for tickets to film houses. (Non-farming village families' film expenditures were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on March 12th, page 23).

The Competition

"Apparently," the Government report commented, "the home talent play or baseball game, equipment for various games and outdoor sports and the radio put up a lively competition with the movies for the farm amusement dollar."

On the other hand, the more favorable position of the film in amusement spending of non-farming rural families, as previously reported, caused the Department to observe: "This family-living study has given illustrative figures to bear out the belief that both the motion picture and the automobile have assumed an increasingly important place in American village life. Even in villages too small to have a movie, the automobile makes accessible the picture shows of the neighboring towns and cities."

The latest investigation disclosed that in New Jersey, 64.5 per cent of the farming families interviewed attended motion pictures and,

Expenditures for Films by "Typical" American Family in Farm Communities

Survey by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture on the film-going expenditures of native-born, American, non-relief families in the average American village community was reported on page 23, March 12th; an identical survey by the Bureau on film expenditures on American families engaged in farming, follows:

¹Percentages are based on the total number of families.

²Averages are based on the total number of families.

³These percentages were computed by dividing the average amount spent for movies by average total recreation expenditures.

⁴Because of the economic and social significance of the system of farm tenancy in the Southeast, these data have been tabulated separately for each type of tenure. Negro farm families were studied only in the Southeast.

⁵Less than fifty cents.

city admissions averaging higher, the average admission expenditure for each of the families studied was $9 per year, while in Colorado, Montana and South Dakota, where 64.9 per cent of the families surveyed attended pictures, the average expenditure was but $6 per family yearly.

In New Jersey, 30.8 cents out of every dollar spent by farming families for recreation goes to motion picture exhibitors, while in Colorado, Montana and South Dakota, only 17.1 cents per dollar for each family is so spent.

California Leads

Highest farming-family dollar expenditure for film theatres was in California, $13 per year or 28.4 cents out of every recreation dollar; lowest was $1, or 16.1 cents per dollar, for the North Carolina family, and 50 cents for Negro sharecroppers.

The percentage of total recreation-dollar expenditures going to exhibitors was highest at 23 in Oregon and Washington, 19 in Illinois and Iowa; dropping to 18 in Vermont; 17 in North and South Dakota, Kansas, Colorado and Montana; and 14 in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin. New Jersey and California were considered in a class by themselves because of special factors, New Jersey having a percentage of 30.8 and California 28.4.

The part played by accessibility of theatres in directing the recreational expenditures of farm families is demonstrated by figures for Oregon. Among 383 families living in the vicinity of Portland, the average expenditure was the same as among the 496 families living in New Jersey.

Because of the economic and social significance of the system of farm tenancy in the Southeast, that section was studied separately.

FEWER, LARGER THEATRES IS TREND IN CHICAGO

20% Fewer Theatres in 1937 Than in 1926, But the Seating Total Is Unchanged

Although there were 20 per cent fewer picture theatres in Chicago in 1937 than in 1926, the seating capacity remained at approximately the same total due to construction of larger houses, according to a recreation survey sponsored jointly by the Chicago Recreation Commission and Northwestern University and conducted under the auspices of the Works Progress Administration, the National Youth Administration and the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission.

Chicago's theatres, during the year, had a total seating capacity of about 338,000, or one seat for each nine residents of the city. The number of seats ranged from 255 to 4,029.

The report on motion pictures takes up nine pages of Volume II of the survey and it traces the history of films and theatres from the time when pictures "which moved" were shown as added attractions at permanently housed circuses. In 1908 there were 340 nickelodeons in the city, the inquiry shows, while last year motion picture theatres numbered 316 of which 276 were licensed. The licensed houses paid a total of $105,825 in fees to the city.

Total collections for all license fees amounted to $5,825,184.75, but this included $5,636,850 from liquor establishments.

In commenting on films, Arthur J. Todd, chairman of the committee that prepared the report, declares that they "have so entered into the very texture of American social life that they figure seriously as a subject of social politics and are becoming a focal point in the processes of social control." Mr. Todd is a member of the department of sociology and anthropology at Northwestern University.

"Apparently," Mr. Todd reports, "social control of moving pictures is reaching out beyond suggestions for governmental censorship and mass boycott, in the direction of research and publication of special studies of the motion picture industry and local planning as a means of eliminating the less desirable aspects of moving pictures. The role of educational institutions in developing taste and power of discrimination is also becoming more readily accepted. Partly for these reasons, partly because of improved technique and a better comprehension of the potentialities of the 'silver screen' it may be said that in general the calibre of motion pictures in the past few years has shown marked improvement."

Censorship of motion pictures, the report shows, had its beginning in Chicago in 1909 "as the result of pressure brought by religious and civic improvement groups in the city." At present, the report continues, five moving picture censors at a monthly salary of $205, two projectionists at $110.55 a week, and five exhibition investigators at $200 a month are employed by the city. The 1937 budget for the city provided $34,737.20

WHITE FRONT HOUSE RECALLED IN REPORT

The first positions held in the motion picture industry by Carl Laemmle, former head of Universal Pictures, and Sam Katz, of Balaban & Katz, are described in a Chicago recreation survey report made public this week.

"In 1907," the report explains, "Carl Laemmle opened the White Front Theatre on Milwaukee Avenue, one of the first locations in Chicago devoted solely to moving pictures. Music was furnished by a piano played by a former messenger boy named Sam Katz."

to carry on the work of the division of moving picture censorship.

During 1937, 7,618,000 feet of film were inspected by the censorship division and 14,720 permits were issued. The all-time record for Chicago, the survey shows, was established in 1929 when 8,147,000 feet of film were inspected and 20,892 permits were issued. The total revenue of the division for 1937 was $97,000.

Seating capacities compared as follows:

Seating Capacity	1926	1937
Not over 350.....	116	49
Not over 750.....	92	82
Not over 1,000.....	81	77
Not over 1,500.....	51	47
Not over 1,750.....	10	15
Not over 2,100.....	17	18
Not over 2,300.....	2	3
Not over 2,500.....	5	6
Over 2,500.....	14	19
Total	388	316

In a report on programs, the report shows that 85 per cent of the 190 theatres which advertised in newspapers operated under a dual bill policy.

"It is probable," it is pointed out, "that if not-advertised theatres were included in the compilation the percentage of double feature theatres would be even greater."

"The popularity of radio entertainment is said to be responsible in some degree for the double feature vogue in movie theatres. As an increasing number of surveys of recreations preferences are released, with radio showing decided gains as a 'favorite recreation,' some observers hold that it has become necessary for commercial amusement proprietors to provide stronger inducements to get the customer out of his home and away from the radio. Whether this is literal fact or wishful thinking cannot be determined from data available for this study. But undoubtedly increased activity in participating sports, the sudden vogue of home games and other forms of recreation have combined to offer some competition to movies."

Academy Reports On Standards for Sound Projection

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, from Hollywood, is transmitting copies of the report of the Council's committee on standardization of theatre sound projection equipment characteristics to the engineering departments of each of the companies participating in the Council's cooperative technical program.

The report contains recommendations covering the various parts of the theatre reproducing system, resulting from approximately 18 months of tests and experimental work by the committee.

Appointed by the Council in November, 1936, the committee, under the chairmanship of John Hilliard, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, set out to prepare standards and specifications for theatre sound equipments which will permit the best possible reproduction under general operating conditions of the recordings of all studios in all theatres, regardless of the type of manufacture of the sound reproducing equipment.

The specifications and recommendations contained in the report have been prepared for the guidance of the engineering departments of the producing companies participating in the Research Council cooperative technical program, and the engineering departments of the associated companies affiliated with these producing companies, in purchasing new sound projection equipment.

Copies of the report have been distributed through each company's representative on the Council to the proper officials in each producing company.

Copies of the report are also available upon request to all sound equipment manufacturers, to be used as a guide in designing, testing, or manufacturing new equipment, or to theatre servicing organizations and exhibitors who may be interested in the opinions of the Council on sound reproducing equipment.

As part of its program, the committee installed several reproducing equipments in the Filmarte Theatre in Hollywood, where, through the cooperation of Fox West Coast Theatres, a series of experimental tests were conducted on each of these equipments under identical operating conditions.

During the course of the work two committees were appointed to assist the standardization committee; one, a horn test steering subcommittee under the chairmanship of Homer Tasker and consisting of John Hilliard, Don Loye, William A. Mueller and Wallace V. Wolfe, which drew up all of the test plans, and the other a test operating subcommittee consisting of John Hilliard, chairman, John Aalberg, Lawrence Aicholtz, Lloyd Goldsmith, Don Loye, K. F. Morgan, Gordon Sawyer, William Thayer, S. J. Twining, John Volkman, Samuel A. Waite and Wallace V. Wolfe, which actually conducted all of the tests from which the conclusions in the new report were drawn.

In addition to the producing companies participating in the Council's technical program, Fox West Coast Theatres, Electrical Research Products, RCA Manufacturing Company, International Projector and Ashcraft Lamp Company all cooperated in the test program.

The committee's report is divided into six parts and contains general recommendations on each of the following classifications: The sound head and associated equipment, volume control equipment, amplifiers and filters, loudspeakers and dividing networks, servicing requirements, studio and preview theatre requirements.

RKO Net Profit At $1,821,165

RKO Radio's net profit for 1937 was $1,821,165, Federal Judge William Bondy was informed this week by the Irving Trust Company, reorganization trustee for RKO, at a hearing in United States district court in New York.

The net for 1937 compares with a net profit of $2,485,911 for the preceding year. The 1937 figure, however, does not include RKO's share in undistributed earnings of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation. Dividends to RKO from that source are estimated to amount to $297,801.

RKO plans 48 features for the 1938-39 season, the same number which the company announced for release this season, it was said following the return of Leo Spitz, president, to New York from the coast. The new season production plans are still in work and details on story properties and titles probably will not be ready until shortly before the company's annual sales convention early in June.

A motion to compel a second interim dividend of 12½ per cent to creditors of Orpheum was denied by Federal Judge Alfred C. Cox. Judge Cox stated that a creditors' hearing had been set for April 28th before Bankruptcy Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn, and that the question of dividends could be acted on then.

Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee, will apply for approval for his final account. Gross receipts were $703,527 and disbursements $329,306, leaving $374,221 cash on hand. Total claims allowed were $2,152,555 with $322,305 paid out as a 15 per cent first dividend. Orpheum assets were sold to Stadium Theatres Corporation, an RKO subsidiary.

Irving Trust Company has filed a petition asking that the claim of the Hippodrome Building Corporation for $450,000 against RKO be allowed in that amount. The claim is based on a lease guaranteed by RKO and entered into on July 1, 1930, for the Cleveland Hippodrome for 17 years at $150,000 yearly. The lease was defaulted in March, 1933.

Meanwhile a separation of RKO's picture and theatre operations into individual corporate entities as a means of facilitating the reorganization of the company was reported to be the plan of reorganization factors now being studied.

Members of the board of directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum have been reelected. They are: Donald K. David, Monroe Goldwater, Malcolm Kingsberg and Peter J. Maloney, representing the preferred stock; Mr. Spitz, representing RKO; Lunsford P. Yandell, representing the Radio Corporation of America, and Richard Jones, representing Atlas Corporation.

Mr. Spitz was reelected chairman of the board and president of KAO. William F. Whitman, formerly assistant secretary, was elected secretary, filling the post which has remained vacant since the death more than a year ago of James Field. Other officers reelected are Malcolm Kingsberg, vice-chairman of the board; Leon Goldberg, treasurer; O. R. McMahon, W. J. Kernan, William Murray and H. E. Newcomb, assistant treasurers, and Louis Joffe and Harry M. Pimstein, assistant secretaries.

The board also declared a dividend, out of capital surplus, of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for the quarter ended June 30, 1935. The dividend is payable July 1st, to stockholders of record June 15th. The payment will reduce the accumulated dividend arrears on the preferred stock to $19.25 a share.

During the year, the company acquired 18 new houses.

The board has approved a reduction of the company's authorized common stock from 2,000,000 shares to 1,400,000 shares.

20th Century-Fox, Loew's Deny Music Suit Charges

Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's, Inc., Robbins Music Corporation, Jack Robbins and Movietone Music Corporation, defendants in a $1,500,000 suit brought by Sam Fox for alleged conspiracy and damage to business reputation, have answered the suit with a general denial of the charges. The litigation comes as the sequel to Twentieth Century-Fox transfer of its publishing alliance from the Sam Fox Music Publishing Company to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer controlled Robbins Music Corporation, which became effective in August, 1937.

In his bill of complaint Mr. Fox lists three causes of action. The first is against Loew's, the Robbins firm and Jack Robbins personally and asks for $1,000,000 damages. The second is against Twentieth Century-Fox and Movietone Music and seeks damages of $500,000, while the third involves all defendants but Loew's and asks the court to enjoin the further dissolution of Movietone Music and to declare that Sam Fox has the exclusive publishing privileges of all works in the Movietone catalogue until their current copyrights expire.

Coogan's Mother Denies She Promised Trust Fund

After being served with a summons by a process server who forced his way into her home, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein testified Monday at a deposition hearing in Hollywood in connection with the $4,000,000 suit instituted against her and her husband, Arthur L. Bernstein, by her son, Jackie Coogan.

Mrs. Bernstein said she had refused to give her son any of the $4,000,000 he earned as a child star because "he was more than just a bad boy—he was a 20-year-old bad boy." She denied that she had ever told her son, who is now 23, that she would create a trust fund for him.

ASCAP Files Request For Tennessee Stay

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has filed an application in Federal district court in Nashville for a temporary injunction to restrain Tennessee officials from enforcing its law barring the music licensing society from operating within the state. The society also applied for the designation of a three judge statutory court to hear the injunction proceedings and an action to be instituted later to test the constitutionality of the state law.

Infringement Suit Filed

Richard C. Bordon and Alvin C. Busse, authors of "How to Win an Argument," have filed suit in the United States district court in New York alleging infringement of their copyright against General Motors Corporation and Jam Handy Picture Service, Inc., in the film "Smooth Sailing," produced by the defendants. An accounting of the profits and a permanent injunction and damages are sought.

A net operating profit of $1,641,537 for the 13 weeks ended March 26th was reported by Twentieth Century-Fox this week at an annual meeting of stockholders. The profit, figured after normal federal income tax, was a decrease of $426,061 as compared to $2,067,598 for the first quarter of 1937.

All officers of the company were re-elected at a meeting held Wednesday.

Profit for the fourth quarter of 1937 was $2,574,800, exclusive of dividends from National Theatres Corporation of $1,134,400. No dividends were received from National Theatres, the company announced, during the first quarter of this year or last.

After allowing for the first quarter's preferred dividend, the profit is equivalent to 73 cents a share on the 1,741,897 shares of common stock outstanding March 26th.

Gross income from sales and rentals of film and literature amounted to $13,515,285.15; dividend income, $35,096.10 and other income, $300,443.55. Expenses totaled $11,888,403.63, leaving a net operating profit, before interest, depreciation and federal income taxes, of $1,962,421.17. Interest and depreciation of fixed assets (not including depreciation of studio buildings and equipment of $210,157.89 absorbed in production costs) amounted to $99,735.05 while $221,148.39 was deducted as provision for federal income taxes. No deduction was made for surtax on undistributed profits.

Four Changes in Stock Reported

Disposition of large quantities of Warner Brothers debentures by the three Warners in February is disclosed in the semi-monthly summary of transactions of officers and directors in the securities of their corporations, released by the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday.

During the month, the report showed Harry M. Warner, Albert Warner and Jack L. Warner each disposed of 25,000 debentures. The three brothers also filed reports of January, showing that each had disposed of 233 shares of preferred stock.

The report further showed that at the end of February Albert Warner held 59,648 shares of Warner Brothers common, and 1,759,000 debentures direct and another 5,460 through a holding company. H. M. Warner held 62,860 shares of common and 1,379,000 debentures. Jack L. Warner held 88,060 shares of common and 1,183,000 debentures. In addition, each of the three held 10,618 shares of preferred direct and another 4,267 shares through a holding company.

B. & K. Earnings $2,183,301

An increase of $308,993 in earnings for 1937 as compared to the preceding year was reported Tuesday by Balaban & Katz Corporation, one of the largest theatre circuits, which is affiliated with Paramount. The earnings for 1937 totaled $2,183,301 as compared to $1,874,308 in 1936.

SMPE MEMBERS IN WASHINGTON FOR MEETING OPENING MONDAY

Special Sessions on Photo and Laboratory Procedure, Color, Sound, Educational and Industrial Films, Optics, 16mm. Field

The Spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers opens Monday morning, at Washington, for four days, during which analysis will be made of the new technical processes and equipment developed for all of the industry's branches since the Society met last fall. Special sessions will be conducted on photographic and laboratory procedure, color, sound, educational and industrial application of films, optics and projection, 16mm pictures and other technical phases of the industry.

S. K. Wolf, president, is to preside, assisted by chairmen of nine committees, as follows: G. E. Matthews, papers committee; Nathan D. Golden, reception; W. C. Kunzmann, registration; Mrs. R. Evans, ladies' reception; R. Evans, banquet; Will Whitmore, publicity; H. Griffin, projection; Sylvan Harris, apparatus; J. G. Bradley, transportation.

The complete program follows:

MONDAY, APRIL 25th

- 9:00 a.m. Registration, Little Theatre Entrance.
- 10:00 a.m. Little Theatre, Business and General Session.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN INITIATES EXHIBITOR WARFARE ON GRADING

Trade Crisis Follows Failure of Negotiations with Distributors; "Secret" List of "A" Films Published Over Protests

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the propensity of Everest for dwarfing the mighty peaks which lie in shadow, the Films Bill, towering Titan among contemporary trade problems in Britain, has masked the no less crucial and bitter enigma of renter exhibitor relations, an enigma the inability to reach a solution of which is fast precipitating a trade crisis.

Recent discussions between the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association and the Kinematograph Renters' Society, over the vexed question of grading, during which a relentless tug-of-war has gone on over the latter's insistence on the right to categorize certain films as "A" and to book them exclusively on percentage, have been abortive. Their complete collapse was indicated last week when the CEA general council was empowered to take immediate and decisive action.

Though the present situation has been precipitated directly by the grading situation, the trouble lies deeper, and it is more a case of this last straw breaking the camel's back of exhibitor resistance to the general distributor policy. All along the more blunt and cynical spirits in the CEA have, across the round table, questioned the grading policy as anything but the thin end of a wedge to higher rentals all round. Ultimately the Association's negotiators came out into the open with this charge, and demanded that the elimination of long programs be separated from the question of percentages, and challenged the right of the renters as a body to assess the values of films, a matter, they claimed, which concerned individual buyers and sellers.

On this very point the talks have broken down, with the KRS insisting on their rights to categorize certain films as "A" films, to be booked on percentage only, and the CEA, with the cards on the table, determined and decided to play their own game their own way and cease all pretence of peace.

Back from the inconclusive negotiations, the CEA secured the authority of its members to launch a national propaganda campaign which will include the circularization of every exhibitor as well as provincial mass meetings, five of which already have been arranged. The CEA will challenge the distributors by announcing their own grading on "A" films, advising exhibitors which ones should not be booked on percentage.

A first shot was fired in the preliminary battle before open war was decided upon, with the issuing to members in memorandum form of a detailed and historical survey of the negotiations, of their significance no less than their content, and an analysis of the problem's present seriousness. No member of the CEA had anything left to his imagination, regarding either the talks or what the CEA considered they masked.

Infinitely more significant, however, than this analytic survey, were two riders which went with it, both of which gave some indication and flavor of what form the forthcoming battle may take. A direct lead was given to exhibitors to concentrate as many of their bookings as possible on four distributors, Associated British and its affiliated body Pathe, Twentieth Century-Fox and General Film Distributors, none of which organizations subscribe to the KRS grading policy. To exhibitors also went a copy of the recent and allegedly secret list of "A" films compiled by the KRS for the guidance of its members. Of itself this was an invaluable guide. Accompanied by the CEA invocation to its members that any films not on this list should be treated as "B" films and booked therefore at flat rate terms only, it must have proven a thorn in the distributor side.

Publication of the list was the CEA's first move in its open warfare on the question of grading and rentals.

That its publication proved an embarrassment to the distributors was patent from the talks, during which reiterated and almost impassioned appeals were made that such a breach of etiquette should not be committed. One leading renter took the view that the guarded secrecy of the list would have the very effect which the exhibitors were aiming at through its publication!

Quite apart from the aspect of ethics, and of trade rights, exhibitors were positively decisive about the inclusion of many of the films on the "A" list, films which have proven on showing to be something lower than "B" films. The list itself, they claimed, "blew the gaff" on the grading scheme, containing, as they allege it does, many films which normally would be booked at low flat rentals. In this regard it was claimed that the placing of many of these films on percentage defeats the renters' own end for the latters' ultimate receipts, thanks or no thanks to the grave and universal slump which the trade is experiencing currently, are inevitably much lower than they would have been on a flat rate basis.

Problem Division Refused

Meanwhile the KRS expressed their willingness to continue negotiations with the CEA on the more general matter of rentals, without specific reference to such incidental problems as "A" and "B." They made this known to the CEA in rejecting their suggestion on the "A" percentage question, and again, in their Annual Report, reaffirmed their willingness to go further into the wider problems. In their decision to reject this offer and declare open war, the exhibitors' rank and file and their leaders indicated their feeling that the proposal was but a subtle bait still further to burke the issue and delay the day of reckoning.

It is no less a vital fact that complete and unsullied unity in the CEA ranks is not a matter to be taken for granted. There has seldom been 100 per cent solidarity on anything in the Association, and it does not follow that there is on this, or that every officer represents the feeling or reaction of every individual member. It is quite within the renters' power to divorce individual elements from the fight by discreet and subtle trading, and it is not by any means impossible that individual exhibitors will prefer to continue to book "A" films on percentage where it suits their individual competitive purpose.

There is an intensifying conviction that the action planned, if it can be taken precipitately and dramatically, may have the effect of splitting the renters' ranks, already, as witness the quartet of dissentients, by no means as four square as might be. And the exhibitors have the considerable tactical asset that on this matter their ranks, solidly and closely, include both the circuits and the independents, in an unbroken line hitherto despaired of by even the most optimistic exhibitor politician.

In many ways the present situation is a reflection of the native psychology. For long past exhibitors have nursed a growing resentment against much which has been presented to them by the renters and with characteristic English stolidity have borne it—and grinned. There is always a breaking point, however, after which the whole mood changes and in which the spirit of bellicosity is as bitter as previously the line of least and easiest resistance was preferred. It would seem that this breaking point has been reached and that mood is now one of war.

Equipment for Navy

Every ship in the British navy above and including the category of gunboat and embracing vessels under construction as well as those on the high seas is to have film equipment and is to show motion pictures for training and instructional purposes.

This, however, will not be the only use to which the apparatus will be put for arrangements are rapidly approaching completion by which the warships will be able to stage film shows of a purely entertainment nature.

British renting houses and American organizations here have agreed to supply programs for the use of the Navy at a mere figure covering the cost of prints. The department booking and supplying the films is to be headed by a leading trade executive who will hold a government appointment. The name of Arthur Jarrett, booking and theatre chief of Gaumont British, has been unofficially mentioned in this connection.

(A) H. Edwards answers, "When an electric arc is operated at fixed voltage and its length is maintained at fixed value, the current flow will tend to increase because of decrease in carbon resistance with increased temperature. Ballast resistance is connected in series with the arc in order to check this increase. The drop in voltage absorbed by ballast resistance equals the ohmic resistance it offers, times the current in amperes flowing through it. Where the arc is fed by a.c., the effect of ballast resistance may be and often is taken care of by impedance supplied by a transformer.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 114

(A) Name basic objections to locating a motor-generator set at a distance from the projection room.

(B) Name basic objections to basement location.

(C) Upon what kind of springs, and how, may a motor-generator set be so mounted that all vibration will be absorbed, none of it reaching the floor?

(D) How much open space should surround a motor-generator set, and why?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

"When a ballast resistance and arc are operated in series, a certain amount of the applied voltage is required to maintain the arc itself. A relatively small portion is required to overcome the resistance of the various elements of the circuit, the wires, switches, fuses, the carbons and metallic parts of the lamp through which the current must flow. The remainder must be and is absorbed by the ballast resistance. Under this condition the tendency would be, but for the ballast resistance, for carbon temperature to increase, hence for current volume to increase. However, when this takes place the resistance (voltage, or as the engineers put it, the 'ohmic drop') across the ballast resistance instantly increases in exact proportion, which of course has the effect of stopping the amperage increase and thus 'stabilizing' the arc."

Friend Edwards did well, but omitted one important point covered by very many others, that when the arc is struck, at the instant of contact between the electrodes a short circuit would occur but for the ballast resistance, which operates to stop the resultant surge of current that would blow a fuse or operate such other device as might take the place of a fuse in the circuit.

(B) R. Feasel says, "In the case of all metals employed in electric conduction resistance increases with increase in temperature. This holds true for all things so employed except carbon, in which the rule is reversed and resistance decreases with each increase in temperature. This of course means that the voltage drop through an electric stream of fixed length decreases with increased temperature of the electrodes."

E. H. Todte says, "Negative temperature co-efficient means that, considering an electric arc of uniform, fixed length and current flow, the resistance of the carbons, therefore of the arc, considered as a whole, is decreased with each increase in temperature and, again considered by itself, the current flow is increased."

Brother Toedte will find the wording of his answer materially altered, as will many others, but his line of argument remains unchanged.

(C) T. F. Bochert says, "Voltage absorbed by ballast resistance increases as current flow increases, and vice versa."

(D) T. F. Bochert answers, "As the carbons burn away, increasing the arc length, the resistance of the arc, hence its ohmic resistance, is increased, which of course tends to reduce the flow of current. This latter of course tends to decrease voltage drop across or through the ballast resistance, which in its turn increases the voltage applied at the arc, all of which, as a moment of study will divulge, has a decided stabilizing effect upon the arc."

"To illustrate by specific example: Assume a 30-ampere, 55-volt arc operating from a 115-volt supply circuit. Ballast resistance of two ohms will absorb the difference of 55 volts between circuit and arc (110 — 55), hence the arc will pass its requisite 30 amperes of current. But should the arc length increase, as it normally will in operation, the arc resistance will increase, whereupon amperage will drop because of the diametric difference in metal and carbon in resistance reaction to temperature. Since the resistance of the metallic ballast resistance drops, it will pass more amperage (line resistance remaining constant), whereupon the arc amperage (and carbon temperature) will rise proportionately, and since the one balances the other, the arc (current flow) is stabilized."

Maintenance Men Benefited by Law

A bill, passed during the last session of the New York legislature, was signed this week by Herbert Lehman, governor, making it obligatory that one day of rest in seven be granted motion picture engineers, firemen and janitors or watchmen tending the buildings. The bill was sponsored by Robert F. Wagner, Jr., assemblyman, who is the son of the United States senator.

The measure was not opposed by either the larger circuits or exhibitor organizations. It was estimated that the total cost to theatres affected by the measure may reach $25,000 annually.

Mr. F. J. A. McCarthy
Universal Pictures Company, Inc.
Rockefeller Center
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. McCarthy:

Just a line to advise you of the results of the show which you selected for me in Bethlehem, namely, Frankenstein and Love Before Breakfast.

The business was in my opinion very satisfactory. You may unreservedly tell your men in the field, if you wish, to sell this show to the exhibitor as a unit, that it did for me more than 75% in excess of business ordinarily done in my theatre. Not only was the business highly satisfactory, but the show combination proved excellent entertainment. You understand, of course, that all of this was without any of the sensational publicity and advertising that "Frankenstein" originally had when you first released it.

In conclusion, I feel certain that no exhibitor would make a mistake in booking this show. The chances are that it will out-gross most of the attractions being played.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Harold E. Eskin

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BROADWAY BILL: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—Still fair money in this grand old picture. Has everything anyone could want. Business below average due to Lent. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 19-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

CRIMINALS OF THE AIR: Rosalind Keith, Charles Quigley—Our patrons were definitely disappointed in this one and said so in no uncertain terms. This might be all right on a double bill, but as a single feature it won't stand on its own feet. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 28.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—No pull at all and pleased about 50 per cent of those who did turn out. Business way off. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 23-24.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas, Stuart Erwin—Below average business. Too much song. Cut four sequences to relieve audience restlessness. Some comedy relief furnished by Stuart Erwin. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 26-29.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—With the networks grinding out swing music and hotcha songs, it is hard to convince people that this was a fine picture from every standpoint. Business fell below average, but with a picture of this type and in a small town it was to be expected. Wonderful acting. Miss Moore's singing superb. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 18-19.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS ROUGHNECK: Edith Fellows, Leo Carrillo—Here's a talented child star who could go places with the public. Every picture we have played with her in the cast has her in a role that makes patrons thoroughly hate her. She needs a change to prove her acting ability is not confined to one type of role. This picture gave her a fine opportunity to display an amazingly mature voice. Comments very favorable and business over average. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Excellent. Did only average business. A little too deep for most of our patrons. Capra is tops in this line. Running time, 110 minutes. Played April 3-4.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER IN GREENWICH VILLAGE: Richard Arlen, Fay Wray—Just another murder mystery. Average business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 23-25.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

MURDER IN GREENWICH VILLAGE: Fay Wray, Richard Arlen—This picture was a flop here and to my notion would be anywhere else. My patrons couldn't see through it. We are headed for the biggest depression the picture industry ever saw if the producers keep on with this kind of product. After all, when people pay their money at the box office, they expect something for it. Played April 1-2.—Ruff Brothers, Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

NO TIME TO MARRY: Richard Arlen, Mary Astor—Light, fast moving comedy in line with the present vogue. And if your patrons like this type of show, this one will satisfy plenty. Played with "Little Miss Roughneck," this picture stole the show and I suspect is the reason for the better than average business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OLD WYOMING TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—O. K., Columbia. If it weren't for these pictures we would be out of business. Nice weekend business. The music was fine. Give us more.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SQUADRON OF HONOR: Don Terry, Mary Russell—A mighty good program picture that had no pull at the box office. Running time, 55 minutes. Played March 30-31.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—Holt fans will be pleased with this one. Action is fast and story interesting. Played March 17.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

UNDER SUSPICION: Jack Holt, Katherine De Mille—Just a picture that pulled only average business and pleased the payees to about the same extent. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 18-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

UNDER SUSPICION: Jack Holt—Not the type of picture for Holt, and otherwise terrible. Jack used to be quite a drawing card here, but since Columbia has given him such poor stories, his pictures won't draw flies. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 26-27.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—Patrons sensed that this would be the best Joe E. Brown picture in years and turned out to up the average nicely. Well liked generally. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 25-26.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan, Gordon Oliver—Warner Brothers did not take advantage of the opportunities they had for they could have made a real big production of this. Seemed to be enjoyed by our patrons but did not compare with "San Quentin." Running time, 62 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell—Good entertainment. Running time, 67 minutes. Played April 1-2.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—Warners can make outdoor pictures and this one is of the best. Good story setting in the natural action and everything for a weekend picture in a small town.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—Thought I'd go to town on this but stayed home instead and wondered where all the people had gone to. Don't know why they stayed away but they did. My Saturday night patrons did show up Sunday to surprise me though. The colors nice but players are rather hard to understand. Fairly interesting, too. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Ted Healy, Johnnie Davis, Lola and Rosemary Lane—This was a disappointment, was spotty and slow; had two walk-outs. Some of the orchestra music sounded like native tom-toms; altogether too extreme. Lola Lane is not particularly beautiful and her tantrums were unreasonably foolish. They sent a checker, but did not get coverage. Played April 3.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan—A riotous comedy, typical of Damon Runyon. Sent bargain night customers away more than satisfied. Did extra business on second night. A relief from Robinson's customary trip to the morgue in the final scenes. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 5-6.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT CERTAIN WOMAN: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—Can't say much for this one. Running time, 92 minutes. Played April 2-4.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WEST OF SHANGHAI: Boris Karloff, Beverly Roberts—A good picture that proved more of a comedy than we expected. Karloff, instead of being the monster, was a kind hearted general. Surprised. Seemed to please most of the people. Running time, 63 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Grand National

TEX RIDES WITH THE BOY SCOUTS: Tex Ritter—Tex should have better direction. He has a fair voice, but at times it gets harsh. Besides that, his screen manners in this picture were supposed to be funny, and managed instead to be crude. His Texas accent didn't sound just right to us northerners. We tied in with the Boy Scout organization on this. Played April 1.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—A very good picture and it just suited my patrons. Make more like this one, MGM, so we can have some real western pictures from other companies. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 1.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—Very satisfactory. Good story and pleased. Morgan well liked here. Made a profit. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 30-31.—M. W. Matcheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—A swell comedy; just the type for any situation. Frank Morgan great, so is Miss Rice. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 23-24.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—As good a program picture as one would want to play, with Morgan stealing all honors and John Beal showing up as a coming juvenile. If producers would copy from such programmers as this, there would be no reason to double feature. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BILLY THE KID (Reissue): John Mack Brown, Wallace Beery, Kay Johnson, Karl Dane—Too far back, this one. How this industry does move. Recording not to be mentioned with the present and it seems crude with the later pictures. In its time, it was ace picture, but I don't want any more this far back. They didn't go for it at all. With the indication that the next season will, according to producers, see less one-set pictures and perhaps less sophistication in the product, I know one property that would remake and that is Robert Service's poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—Personally, I thought this a very fine picture, one of the best that I have seen with Joan Crawford, except for her "Dancing Lady." It pleased all who saw it, and I was sorry we did not use it on a Sunday, but other exhibitor reports gave me the wrong impression.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Sophie Tucker, Buddy Ebsen—Where are the good old days when the "Broadway Melody" was the talk of the town before you played it and months after. There was something lacking in this picture. Although it was very good, people were very much disappointed that Sophie Tucker didn't sing more or Buddy Ebsen dance more. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 20-22.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Manager Finds Way to Play New Low-Level Prints

NEW YORK—"Like many other exhibitors, I have recently faced the problem of playing the new low-level sound prints and have often been forced to choose between inferior sound as reproduced from the old-style recordings, or attempt to play new prints with the sound so low that patrons complained they could not hear," declared Harry Karesh, owner of the Park West Theatre here.

"I asked my Altec Inspector, W. B. Essex, if anything could be done about it. He examined my sound system, and informed me he could make the needed modifications as a part of my regular service policy without additional cost.

"I now play the new prints perfectly. I figure my Altec service, in this instance alone, has more than paid for itself for months to come."

Let the Altec Service Inspector explain how he sets up a Performance Standard for your individual equipment (an exclusive Altec Service agreement feature), and how that gives you greater protection.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy—Although everyone who saw this picture agreed that it was a very fine picture, our box office did not prosper especially well. However, the second day's business was better than the first, so the picture must have appealed to this particular small town. Running time, 116 minutes. Played March 11-12.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—A big picture which went over nicely, both stars, direction, etc., perfect. Better than average business and many compliments. Cowboy fans came expecting to see some shooting; but, alas, only stark drama; they sat through it, though. MGM claims this picture cost them $3,800,000, but for the life of me I can't see how it could have cost a penny over $3,750,000. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 31.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—Metro has done much better by these stars. Nothing extra at box office. Judy Garland is first class, but Jones doesn't seem to click here. Seemed to please. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 7.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Billie Burke—Little Judy is clever as a button; she is black face in one sequence and it's a honey. Seemed to please. Fanny Brice did her stuff. Billie Burke in it too, and, as always, she overacts; reminds me of the way it was done some eighteen years back. No doubt about it but that Billie is a throw-back to those days. At that, we had some walkouts on it. Are they getting tired of musicals, I wonder? Myself, I like them, but I think that they have been overdone with magnitude. Too many elaborate settings that added to the cost, but not to the merit of the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—One grand musical comedy with Fanny Brice stealing the show. But for some reason this did a nose dive at the box office and we're still wondering why. Patrons commented favorably but there were not enough patrons turned out to bring business up to average. Running time, 91 minutes. Played April 1-2.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—Through no fault of Jeanette or Allan, who are both plenty good, our showings of this picture were punctuated by numerous walkouts. However, I could have stood to have more walkouts if I had taken in enough to pay film rental. Running time, 138 minutes. Played March 21-22.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, Ia. Small town and rural patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—This was a good one but it would take a hundred years to fill the house like the title of the picture. No draw. Played April 1-2.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—One of these clever nutty comedies that seem to be rounding the usual Hollywood cycle. A limited number of our patrons liked it, but the rank and file thought it was terrible. The answer seems to us to be that this type is not suited to rural theatre goers. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 1-2.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Crawford much better in this than her last couple of pictures, but without Spencer Tracy doubt that "Mannequin" would have pulled business. As it is, this held up to good business and pleased generally. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 3-5.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Was accepted as a good feature by many patrons. Heard no kicks and everyone seemed pleased as they left at the end. Personally, I hate to see Metro waste Spencer Tracy's talent by casting him with Joan Crawford. May this be the only time. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Florence Rice, Billie Burke—This is excellent entertainment beside yielding no little in way of information as to life of midshipmen at the Naval Academy. It was well received and I believe it is one of Metro's best for this season. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 8-9.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Gene Reynolds, Beulah Bondi, Leatrice Joy Gilbert—Exhibitors, in this picture you have something. It is down to earth entertainment. A homely story and the cast, yeah, boy, were they in the picture for all they had! They were. Hand it to little Gene Reynolds, he will be heard from. Little Miss Gilbert is a sweet kind. It will jerk some tears out of the patrons, and wait until you see John Carradine's "Lincoln" for a superlative bit of acting. It would be gilding the lily in Walter Huston to add any praise to him. He is out in front by himself. I gave the full cast of main characters, for it would only be justice to them for the work they did.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—This was a very fine picture and the few who saw it said it was the best they had seen. Crowd was small because of one of the famous West Texas storms. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 7.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—A nice piece of down-to-earth drama that my patrons kept plenty far away from. A feature like this hasn't any draw here. My operators, the usher and I thought it a very fine and entertaining picture. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—I just don't know what to say about this one. Business was below average. Gable and Loy did a perfect job for their parts, but this did not mean a thing to my patrons. This picture has proven to me that you can't take a big-town picture and expect a large gross in a small town. Metro should make these pictures optional as far as the small exhibitor is concerned. Played March 25-26.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Admitting that Nelson Eddy has a wonderful voice and that Eleanor Powell certainly can dance, the general opinion here is that these are the principal assets of these stars. This production is wonderfully made, but did not satisfy as many as we anticipated. Business a little above normal. Running time, 122 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SARATOGA: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow—We played this one rather late, in fact, too late, as was shown by our box office report. Our patrons seem to be forgetting Harlow rather quickly and the fact that this was her last picture didn't help a bit. Some said it was good, others were disappointed. Our experience proved that Metro was "all wet" in their estimation of what this picture was worth to us. Running time, 94 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—This is a picture that will bring patrons in and please them. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 18-19.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ronald Sinclair—Thanks, Metro! A swell picture, devoured like peaches and cream in this man's town. This New Zealand kid is as good as Freddy. Did some extra advertising with excellent results. Everybody happy, and it knocked my first tent-show opposition of the year higher than RKO's quotation on "Snow White." By the way, why don't some of these smaller producers take lessons from Leo on how to make Real program pictures for small towns, quit their cheap bally and deliver the goods. This didn't cost a million. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 24.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Griffith Jones, Vivien Leigh—Finally, MGM has given Taylor a vehicle that is worthy of his ability. A picture that every one enjoyed, with a simple theme that is understandable. Griffith Jones and Vivien Leigh are artists of no mean ability and the former took the acting honors in one big stride. Running time, 103 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore—Taylor has never meant box office in this situation, but, after playing this one and providing Metro continues him in roles that have the audience appeal of "A Yank at Oxford," he will mean box office. A grand picture that did a nice business and pleased the patrons just about 100 per cent. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 27-29.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore—This was a dandy. Some of the showmen I notice said it not so good, but it is to my way of thinking the most original picture that has been put out in years. Taylor was fine and helped his popularity with the men who after all are the ones who put up the money at the box office. A good clean cut picture that anyone should be glad that they had seen. Let's have more of this kind of Robert Taylor. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 27-28.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Now there's a picture! Thoroughly enjoyed by everyone and I fully believe that is 100 per cent if there ever was that universal an opinion. Just what a small town wants. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 30-31.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Metro has something in these Judge Hardy pictures. This one went over mighty well here with our prevue crowd, though those who saw it in more leisurely fashion on Sunday afternoon enjoyed it more. On the adverse side, I would only suggest that the characterization of the young sophisticate was somewhat overdrawn. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 26-27.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

ATLANTIC FLIGHT: Dick Merrill. Paula Stone—Cannot praise this very much from a production standpoint. But Monogram has done well by taking advantage of Dick Merrill's name. This is just a programmer, but will certainly help your show. Running time, 59 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BLAZING BARRIERS: Frank Coghlan, Jr., Edward Arnold, Jr., Florine McKinney—A good action picture that pleased our patrons. It moves along rapidly and proves a good portrayal of life at the C. C. Camps. Running time, 65 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—A very good production from Monogram with Jackie Cooper doing a splendid job. It is too bad that this company does not produce a few more pictures of this type. Running time, 74 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

CODE OF THE RANGERS: Tim McCoy—No April fool joke, this picture. It's a whiz of a western, carefully produced, expertly acted by the old trooper, Tim McCoy. Monogram seems to possess the knack of knowing how to turn out good ones. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 1.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

COUNTY FAIR: John Arledge, Fuzzy Knight, Mary Lou Lender—Just a fair picture and very slow moving at times. Running time, 65 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PARADISE ISLE: Warren Hull, Movita—A fair South Sea Island story with a good cast. It cannot stand alone but as a supporting feature will help the program.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PORT OF MISSING GIRLS, THE: Judith Allen, Milburn Stone, Harry Carey—Be careful how you handle this one if you want it to click at the turnstile. There's dynamite in this title if you go after it. Even a Chicago blizzard which swept our way didn't keep 'em from coming out. No super-super picture, but a darned good box office film if correctly sold. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 6.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR: Judith Allen, Grant Withers—For general run a very pleasant picture. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 3.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—Although a bit slow moving for those craving real heman action, this picture received very favorable comment from several members of our audience. Story, direction and technical detail all of a class which places this picture far above the usual western "quickies." Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 14.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—Pleased the Friday and Saturday crowds. Scenery beautiful. Played March 25-26.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Shirley Ross—Worst picture of 1937.—L. D. Jones, Star Theatre, Malad City, Idaho. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye—This had nothing to it but seemed to draw well. Fields is always good but his pictures have nothing to them. If it hadn't been for a bad rainstorm coming up on Saturday we would have had a very nice gross on it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 25-26.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper—This was enjoyed by all but myself. I can't stand to see a he-man of the pictures wrecked by a long tail coat and a shave. Makes him look out of place. Paramount, don't do that again. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 3-4.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatre, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal—Failed miserably at the box office. Majority did not care for it. Too many mob scenes, too much shouting and story not cared for. Lost plenty on this Paramount special. Paramount must pick their spe-

FOUR RETURN TO REPORTING

Returning to the reportorial forces of "What the Picture Did for Me" after more than a year of absence are the following showmen:

Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y.

Erma and Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D.

E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark.

Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmersville, La.

cials by shaking the dice. Running time, 127 minutes. Played April 3-5.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal—Truly a great picture that was a terrific flop at B. O. The smallest Monday and Tuesday in weeks. Running time, 125 minutes. Played April 3-5.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell—Our patrons do not care for these "Bulldog Drummond" pictures, and they don't make any bones about saying so. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 14.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Frank Darien—Old reliable back again to make the turnstiles click. We can always count on a Hopalong for satisfied patrons and this one is no exception. Paramount should be highly praised for this series of pictures. Could not be better. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EBB TIDE: Frances Farmer, Oscar Homolka—Not being a special, we did not expect too much and were not disappointed. Color added to the picture. Would say that it was very ordinary. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 6-7.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—Lost money. Glad I was out of town when played, but my being away didn't keep my patronage from telling me it was punk, and a few seen it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 29-30.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

NIGHT CLUB SCANDAL: John Barrymore, Lynne Overman—Pleased everyone who saw it. Funny and clever. Played March 30-31.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE ASKED FOR IT: William Gargan, Orien Heyward—Some clever spots. Average double bill picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 2-5.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—Just another western with no more drawing power than the majority of them. Still lacking what most westerns lack, outstanding story, and having what most of them have, outlandish action. Played April 1-2.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—A better than average Western. Cassidy series has pulled up many a weak program for us. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 26-29.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Bob Burns, Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Superb entertainment. One of the biggest grosses of past six months. Audience raves thick. Bob Burns is strongest member of cast to sell. McCrea and Dee excellent. Holds interest from start to finish. Running time, 115 minutes. Played April 2-5.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—There is no doubt that this is a great picture; in fact, by far Paramount's best one so far this year. However, it seemed to us, and some of our patrons agreed, that the producer tried to cover a little too much history, and, in so doing, kept the picture jumping from one thing to the next a bit too fast. Running time, 6 reels. Played March 25-26.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

GIT ALONG LITTLE DOGIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—These Autrys stand up pretty well, but perhaps they are too much alike and that probably is the reason we do not have them do the outstanding business which the first three or four did. Running time, 62 minutes. Played April 1-2.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LADY BEHAVE!: Sally Eilers, Neil Hamilton, Marcia Mae Jones, George Ernest—Good comedy. Should please the most sophisticated audience. The two kids in this picture just about steal the show. Republic has put out some good shows but some of their scenes are too dark. I wonder why. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 23-24.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MAMA RUNS WILD: Mary Boland, Ernest Truex—Good clean comedy. Mary Boland good as usual. Should give Truex more of a break. He always pleases. Running time, 63 minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This one broke all records for Saturday matinee attendance. Autry never fails to bring 'em in. Smiley Burnette deserves credit for much of Gene's popularity. One of the pair's best. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 8-9.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Boonesville, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

PRISON NURSE: Henry Wilcoxon, Marian Marsh—A much better than average program picture. No complaints. Business slightly better than usual. Running time, 67 minutes. Played April 6.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

PRISON NURSE: Henry Wilcoxon, Marian Marsh—Nice picture, good story, swell acting. All in all, an extra good picture with plenty of interest to hold their attention. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 16-17.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

SHIEK STEPS OUT, THE: Ramon Navarro, Lola Lane—Patrons on the whole seemed to like this one. Used as a preview, it clicked very well. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 18-19.—M. R. Harington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Just about the best Autry I've ever played. We ran this one weekend to better than average Western business. This fellow Burnette just about steals the show. We're going to have to begin advertising him along with Autry as he has a wonderful following. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 18-19.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Charlie Ruggles—You did it, Katy. Whether it was your own idea, this type of a role, or someone else's idea, suffice to say you put over a better show than did Carole Lombard in "Nothing Sacred." Forget your Mary of Scots stuff and send us some more of this type; everyone thoroughly enjoyed it. You're on the road back, Katy, more power to you. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 3.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns and Allen—I agree that Fred and Ginger should be teamed together again, but this is a darned good picture regardless. It drew well with no extra advertising, and there were compliments galore, including many from colored balcony patrons. Incidentally, the exhibitor who said that Burns and Allen are scarce in here must have had an expurgated print. They were not only frequent, but they were good. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

DOUBLE DANGER: Preston Foster, Whitney Bourne—Just another picture. Played it on a double bill but still could not get by. This sort of thing is the exhibitor's reason for running double bills. When the producers make fewer pictures and really put something into those they do make, then the exhibitor will not have to cry "Wolf." Just no good. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack—Joey is good in this. He's losing out a little here, however, and needs selling. Clever comic situations. Below average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 19-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—This is another comedy with the usual liberal sprinkling of humor, and these go quite well with us if not spaced too closely. However, any of these teams seem to definitely weaken in box-office drawing power after half a dozen appearances, even though the comedian's work continues to be quite as good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 24-25.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Fair. Average business. As funny as any Wheeler and Woolsey picture. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 23-25.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY: George O'Brien, Cecilia Parker—It is our opinion that this picture would get by nicely on the bottom half of a double bill on bargain night. George O'Brien is washed up so far as our patrons are concerned. At least, that's what they tell me. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 21.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Just too, too silly. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 28.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

QUICK MONEY: Fred Stone, Dorothy Moore—Just another program picture to occupy the tag end of a double feature bill. Running time, 59 minutes. Played March 30-31.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Jack Oakie, Bob Burns—For a change RKO put out a good one. Play this on week days and watch your gross go up. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 5-6.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—This was a disappointment to me. Did above average business but no one raved about it like they did in the cities. Four days was too long for my town. Could have done as much in three. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 8-11.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang, Tony Martin—On the whole, this was received unenthusiastically by our prevue crowd, though there were some who said they particularly enjoyed it. Here is proof that gorgeous photography cannot cover up countless defects such as pointless jokes. There are numerous would-be New Deal critics in connection with this picture, but if the New Deal ever needs a few extra mascots, I can suggest where some may be found. Running time, 81 minutes. Played April 2-3.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, June Lang—Lacked something. Pleased just fairly well and did not draw any extra business. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—It just flopped. I did not see it as I was out of town, but it surely failed to draw. Why? I don't know. Played March 20-22.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: William Powell, Annabella—Just fair; one of the Budapest things with his excellency and so forth. Annabella was a little hard to understand in this one and I lay it to the recording, as in her previous pictures her voice was clear, except that she has a decided accent.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: William Powell, Annabella—This one flopped at the box office in a big way. When they take Loy away from Powell it is like taking a bone from a dog. Also not any too good a picture either. Loy went down when she tried to make one without Powell also. Better keep this team together if they want to eat. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 20-21.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—This is the best of the Jones Family pictures so far played; was really amusing without being far fetched. It did not draw as well as it deserved, but everyone was pleased.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Marjorie Weaver—This one seemed to be a little above the usual run of "horse operas." There is a little singing to sweeten it up, and the story is slightly different. Our audience liked it. Now that Fox has started giving their western Florida premiere showings, I suppose they will put them in the top allocation next year. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 7.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Unfortunately, Charlie Chan does not draw here, even on bargain nights. Played March 23-24.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CITY GIRL: Ricardo Cortez, Phyllis Brooks—One of the best done, most absorbing programmers I have ever run; gave complete satisfaction, but no draw. If I were to run this picture again, I would advertise it as "The Wrong Road," make special paper, circulate heralds, ballyhoos, the tar out of this countryside, play to "adults only," fill up my house, pay off the mortgage, etc. It's a cinch; if you can get them in they will eat it up! And a wonderful moral. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 5.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGER—LOVE AT WORK: Jack Haley, Ann Sothern—A very nice comedy, almost slapstick, that was well received. Business fair. Played April 1-2.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

DANGEROUSLY YOURS: Cesar Romero, Phyllis Brooks—Here is a very fine little picture that held attention all the way through and pleased 100 per cent. A mystery with plenty of comedy, but nothing overdrawn or slapstick. Played March 30.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp—A pretty poor western. Just barely got by. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 1-2.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers—Leave it to little (getting rather fat) Jane Withers to please the small town audiences and help keep our cashier busy. Our patrons look forward to these Withers pictures, and then turn out in goodly numbers to support their star. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 18-19.—George W. Pettengill, Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

HOT WATER: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—Our first Jones Family picture. Played our Family Night and it was just the thing. No draw, but the reaction on this will justify my giving "Borrowing Trouble" a little extra boost. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 24-25.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (Reissue): Will Rogers, Anita Louise—Repeat engagement and it fell flat. Evidently our customers don't want to see Rogers after his death. Played April 3-5.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—A weak sister and failed to satisfy. Missed fire. Lost money on it. Story failed to click. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 27-29.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—I had wondered why Simone Simon had such a build-up for her work, but that's easy after hearing her sing in "Love and HisSES." She has a wonderfully smooth voice and quality galore. People in my audience that appreciate good singing raved about her ability to sing. Winchell-Bernie feud was great. Played March 15-16.—B. A. McConnell, Emerson Theatre, Hartford, Ark. Small town and coal mining patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—Simone really comes into her own in this picture; she is good and has rather a nice singing voice, not much power, but sweet. It is not as good as "Wake Up and Live," but an okay program picture that will please the audiences.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE ON A BUDGET: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—Jones Family picture. These pictures are as clean as a hound's tooth. A family picture. But I do think that if Fox releases three or four a year with them it will surfeit the public; they are good to run about twice. The pictures are a typed production with a similarity of stories, the precocious younger child and the young romance, that is what I mean, not much change to them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple—Due to a lost print, we only showed this picture one day and that day happened to be a stormy one, with one of the last of the season's snowstorms to contend with. Nevertheless, this picture got out as large an audience as could be expected and we made a little money. Picture okay and heard several remarks that they thought Shirley got better in every picture. Played April 9.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Fred Allen, Tony Martin—This one a good musical. Played it on week days and really brought my weekly gross up by doing so. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 22-23.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen, June Lang—We join those other exhibitors who report the Temple pictures as doing about half as much business as they did a year ago. Rental for this product will have to be reduced proportionately to induce use to buy again this next year. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 4-5.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, May Robson—Remarkable, this immortal classic in beautiful colors. What a peach, broke house records since theatre opening. Played in rain and cold. Saw faces never before in my theatre. Thanks, Selznick, again for your greatest hit. Well done and acted. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, May Robson—This is a natural. Broke all box office records for Friday-Saturday. Packed by house from the time I opened Saturday until one hour before closing. U. A. made up for some bad draws that they gave me before this one. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 18-19.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins—Pretty grim stuff. These kids are holy terrors. The picture has bang up good acting; good story of its type, but not extra business, and some of the parents said it was no picture for kids. Maybe they would learn too much, for these four were just about as ornery a lot in their roles we have ever seen. Really a little hard to believe.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea—Opinion was evenly divided on this type of picture. In a small town these New York stage successes do not mean a thing. Taken from a standpoint of performance, Sidney, McCrea and Bogart did a swell job. Folks said the ending of the picture left you in the air. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 27-28.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GAITY GIRLS, THE: Jack Hulbert, Patricia Ellis—Was afraid of this London production, but pleased to say it was thoroughly enjoyed by a medium-sized audience. Patricia Ellis seemed to be liked better in this than any U. S. production that we have ever had her in. Played April 6-7.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Jon Hall, Dorothy Lamour—Words can't express the pleasure it was to play this feature. It drew fairly well and pleased everyone. I believe "The Hurricane" caused more talk and discussion concerning the wonders of Hollywood in this community than any picture to date. The storm scene sure wowed 'em and how they talked about it. Running time, 102 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—A fairly good picture if you can get them in. I would recommend a midweek date. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 1-2.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—A swell show for your best playing time. Very different type picture made in a long time. Had many favorable comments on this one. Business better. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—Very well executed picture. Joan and Henry have styles all their own and when you get them both in one picture, I don't see how you could ask for anything better. Played April 4-5.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO COULD WORK MIRACLES, THE: Roland Young—The biggest miracle was that anyone came at all. The worst and most foolish picture we ever played. No business. Did us a lot of harm. Don't play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MURDER ON DIAMOND ROW: Edmund Lowe, Ann Todd—Mystery intrigue plus good work from Edmund Lowe makes this an exceptional picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 31.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—If your patronage liked "True Confession," they will enjoy this one. My opinion, it's nuttiest. Business very poor, color beautiful, but they just don't go for that kind of picture here. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 3-4.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

STAND-IN: Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell—This picture was a complete flop here. Leslie Howard may as well hang up his hat for our situation. Didn't make rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Good in any spot. Will please all classes of people. Janet Gaynor is tops in this one and Fredric March exceptionally good. Supporting cast extra good. The plot is well carried out in detail. Color and sound good. Play it. Advertise the title as well as the stars. Running time, 112 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

Universal

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—We have finally found the picture that did less Sunday business than "Camille" and this is it. Lowest Sunday gross in four years and swell weather. Played March 27-29.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

ONE HUNDRED MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou, Alice Brady, Mischa Auer—Eagerly awaited, this feature proved to be every bit as good as we expected, and then some. Deanna certainly has captured our hearts. It takes a picture like this to bring before the public the fact that "swing" music cannot hold a candle to the soul-stirring music of a real symphonic orchestra. In this feature, Stokowski leads his group of real musicians through such tid-bits as "Hungarian Rhapsody," "Traviata," etc. Deanna sings a popular number and follows with "Hallelujah" and "Traviata." In between there is a real plot enacted by Deanna, Adolphe Menjou, Mischa Auer and others. It's one of the best pictures of the year and so different from the usual run of features that it stands out all by itself. Thanks, Universal, for a real "treat." Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

DICK FORAN WESTERNS: Dick Foran—I cannot understand why Warner Brothers discontinued making this series of Westerns. Foran's singing is very good and the production of the pictures outstanding. Foran was just becoming popular and it is too bad that Warner Brothers decided to stop making westerns.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—The much heralded stage play comes to the screen, but it should have been produced in English instead of the pigeon Russian that Boyer uses. If your audience gets half of it they will be fortunate. They may have gone nuts over it in Paris, London and New York, but the audience displayed no such enthusiasm here. It laid an egg, as we expected it to do. It, as with a lot more of Vitagraph's pictures, is all dialogue. I cite "First Lady," "That Certain Woman." "Tovarich" has its moments, but there was too much of Boyer's talk that the audience had to strain for, and then some of them said they did not get it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND HORSES: Barton MacLane, Ann Sheridan—I don't know whether this print was worn out and they had tried to save it by patching it up but the plot was sure disconnected. Otherwise, a nice little picture. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 23-24.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Shorts

Columbia

CASH AND CARRY: Three Stooges—This one is a knockout. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MERRY CAFE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A dandy Krazy Kat cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLANE DEVILS: New World of Sport Series—A real thriller. Don't fail to play it. Everybody liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCRAMBLED LEGS: New World of Sport Series—A sport short that's a real "knock-out." Book this and treat yourself and your patrons to some real fun. They call it wrestling, but I call it the best short comedy of the year. It's excellent. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 2: These subjects are always popular here. Running time, seven minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 3: Very good. Always well received. People enjoy seeing their favorite stars.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Special Sport Thrills—Extremely well done and attracted lots of interest. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

SPORT'S GREATEST THRILLS: Special Sport Thrills—Columbia certainly has what it takes when it comes to making sport reels. This one is great. Thrills that will lift you out of your seat, with broncho busting, polo playing, motorcycle races, auto racing and what not. It's a natural for any theatre. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STUCK IN THE STICKS: Andy Clyde—A dandy little comedy in the slapstick style. Guaranteed to chase the blues away. It had the men in stitches. Book it. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Educational

BILLY GOAT'S WHISKERS, THE: Terry-Toons—A cartoon for kids only.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

BILLY GOAT'S WHISKERS, THE: Terry-Toons—Finally, a fair cartoon from Education. Running time, seven minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

BUGS BEETLE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Terry-Toons—We would rate this cartoon from Educational as being fair. It is done in the new tint and tone process, and while not real color, we think it is an improvement over the old black and white cartoons. At least, the dirt and scratches don't show up as bad. Running time, seven minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

CALLING ALL CROONERS: Song and Comedy Hits—Good one-reel musical comedy.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Louise Massey and the Westerners—A splendid song and comedy hit.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MEET THE BRIDE: Two-Reel Comedies—Pretty fair two-reel, with a thrill or two, some laughs, and some dancing that was not bad.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—Two or three nice dance numbers, one silly song, and some fair music. Much better than some Educational shorts which we have run. Running time, nine minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

RHYTHM SAVES THE DAY: Cabin Kids—Average one-reel. Cabin Kids good.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SAW MILL MYSTERY, THE: Terry-Toons—After seeing this cartoon on the first show, we put it back in the can and did not show it again. "Terribul."—

A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TIMID GHOST, THE: Two Reel Comedies—Judging from the laughs this brought out of a very small congregation, I should say it's the best two-reeler yet from Educational. Running time, 16 minutes.—Harold T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmersville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

VILLAIN STILL PURSUED HER, THE: Terry-Toons—Rather less than average.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

MGM

BLUE MONDAY: Captain and the Kids—Done in sepia, this proved to be a fair cartoon. Think color would have added much to the enjoyment. Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FLORAL JAPAN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—When this comes, wipe off all lenses and tune up all equipment and even then chances are that you will not do this subject justice, for FitzPatrick has hit a new high. Running time, nine minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

HONG KONG, HUB OF CHINA: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—FitzPatrick knows the answers when it comes to travelogues.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOW TO START THE DAY: Robert Benchley—A swell Benchley that had them all holding their sides with his wit. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT MAY HAPPEN TO YOU: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very educational and also very entertaining. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—A review of years gone by with yesterday's stars of the silent screen passing in parade. It holds a tear and a memory for many, and towards the end, when those who have gone never to return appear, you will sit in silent tribute to these departed stars. Show this by all means. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES, NO. 2: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith has something here; clever and entertaining. From past accounts, Pete Smith has consistently delivered unique and pleasing subjects and our folks cheer when they come on the screen. Running time, nine minutes.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

MAIL AND FEMALE: Our Gang—One of the best of this series. Alfalfa with us is the male Shirley Temple. Better put him in features, Mr. Roach. He'll make them click for you. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF THE WEST: Fitz-Patrick Travel Talks—Can add nothing to what has been said on MGM Travel Talks. They are the outstanding travels in the industry. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NEW AUDIOSCOPIKS, THE: Special—Wish Metro would make more of these. This is far ahead of the first one and patrons commented more on their enjoyment of this short than they generally do on feature pictures. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—This man is good and he wouldn't have all this trouble in our theatre because we always have plenty of choice seats at every performance, lately.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERFECT DAY, THE (RE-ISSUE): Laurel and Hardy—A brand-new print, good photography and perfect sound. It's slapsticky, but we like 'em that way; our folks laughed more than they have in a blue moon and still mention to me about how they enjoyed it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmersville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

PIPE DREAMS: Harman-Ising—One of the best cartoons I've played this year. Play it by all means. Your patrons will like this. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting and different. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SKI SKILL: Pete Smith Specialties—Although we have been playing ski shorts a lot, this winter, this one is very different and well worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SKI SKILL: Pete Smith Specialties—This one is a headliner on any program.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WAYWARD PUPS: Harman-Ising—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Paramount

AVIATOR SHORTY: Paragraphics—These monkey shorts are very well liked.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

COWBOY SHORTY: Paragraphics—How the kids ate this one up. Would suggest playing it on a heavy feature program to relieve the tension. This is just a knockout. Could not be better. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FOWL PLAY: Popeye the Sailor—All Popeye cartoons are good.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—What a swell short. In my estimation, Paramount tops all others in short subjects for this current season. This picture has everything you could ask for in a single-reel musical. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—This subject is different and pleased our crowd very much. It is about a lot of thrilling stunts which people perform for their living. Running time, nine minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

LITTLE LAMBY: Color Classics—This is one of the Color Classics series which really is a "classic." Play it and you will please the kids from 1 to 100. Running time, nine minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

OH KAY, RHYTHM: Headliners—Good enough "Headliner."—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FILMS, NOT EGOTISM, URGED BY EXHIBITOR

"From a small town exhibitor's viewpoint, in face of the recent recession, I think it is time some of us exhibitors should wake up to the fact that Academy Award pictures are not doing business," writes Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario.

"Much of the added production cost has resulted from egotistical ambitions of producers to top the other fellow by more spectacular and elaborate settings than ever before. If they succeed it is only their vanity that is satisfied. In most cases the pictures do little extra business for those who want entertainment, not art.

"What we need today is entertainment and not art. If producers continue to spend money like drunken sailors, and in return increase film rental, extra business will be required for the exhibitor who is not doing even normal business."

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND FORTY THIEVES: Color special—This is an extra price cartoon of two reels, which was just one reel too long. They can't sustain the audience's attention for the extra length and it got boring before it was half way through. Don't buy it. Kids, of course, like it, but you don't pay off with them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES: Color Special—Worth very little more than a regular Popeye. Oversold to me. Not as good as last year's color Popeye. Running time, 16 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS, NO. 3: Very interesting short in color.—A. B. Jefferis, Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BUCKAROO BROADCAST, A: Smart Set—If RKO made 52 shorts each year on the order of this and the Austins, exhibitors would break their necks to get an RKO contract. Running time, 18 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

DONALD'S OSTRICH: Mickey Mouse—Again Disney scores with this cartoon. Had them in the aisles whistling, laughing and shouting at the antics of Donald and the Ostrich. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 5: These are always interesting and very timely. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 7: We've got "Time" on our hands and don't know what to do with it; we've tried advertising it like it was something and not advertising it at all. Don't draw one bit; but we personally think every one the tops, as do a few patrons. There is wild cheering at the end of each one; they are glad it's over. Running time, 19 minutes.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmerville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

MORNING, JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—The tops in Kennedy comedy. Running time, 17 minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

NO SALE: Nu-Atlas Productions—Very poor. An array of mediocre talent in a totally wasted short. Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OLD MILL, THE: Mickey Mouse—This one is sure to please. The color is 99 per cent of this reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Smart Set—One of the best ever shown here. Running time, 19 minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOX MOVIE TONE NEWS: Although, in our opinion, Fox has the best newsreel, they have fallen into the same rut with all the other newsreels in that they seem to try to have exactly the same subjects as the other reels. We watched the woman explorer and her pet Pandas in four reels, and we have just watched Ambassador Kennedy arrive in England and tell about his children for the fourth time. Well do we know that he planned to take them over to England in installments, "five the first time, two in the second group and two in the last group." If the newsreels are getting too tight to hire separate camera crews, they might at least afford separate "takes" on a subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Me. Rural patronage.

KING GEORGE VI CORONATION: Color Special—The most beautiful, clear color yet, perfect sound, interesting narration by Lowell Thomas. Didn't draw a dime. We feel that it did as good as March of Time at that, however, oh, boy, just think of the prestige we mugs have got. Running time, three reels.—Harolde T. Young, Palace Theatre, Farmersville, La. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

COCK OF THE WALK: Silly Symphonies—We paid a special price for this and my patrons are complaining on this kind of comedy. We get by better with Mickey Mouse.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

SKIPPY: Skipper Cartoons—The first of the Skippy series proved to be just fair. Good animation, nice coloring and synchronization, but even so there was nothing outstanding to assure the success of future releases. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WALT DISNEY'S ACADEMY AWARD REVUE: Five Award Winners—Although we had played them all, we found these well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

HOLLYWOOD SCREEN TEST: Universal Special—Our patrons enjoyed every minute of this fine subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

Vitaphone

DAY AT SANTA ANITA, A: Sybil Jason—Pleasing. Race track story with Sybil Jason making it good box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DAY AT SANTA ANITA: Sybil Jason—A very good color two-reeler that is still worth a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOG DAZE: Merrie Melodies—Good Merrie Melodies cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SEPTEMBER IN THE RAIN: Merrie Melodies—Very clever and well received. Running time, seven minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

VAUDE-FESTIVAL: Fritz and Jean Hubert—Some good acts, at least my patrons like them because they don't see many vaudevillians.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WOODS ARE FULL OF CUCKOOS: Merrie Melodies—An amusing comedy in color, caricatures of all the well known radio stars and announcers. I considered it very clever, but the kids wouldn't like it.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

FLASH GORDON'S TRIP TO MARS: Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Jean Rogers—Boys, you ain't seen nothing yet. If this pipe dream holds up for fifteen weeks with the start it got, we'll all be glad to run serials. It's got the patrons wondering now and if the screen magazines don't spill the beans, we're going to do all right with it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TIM TYLER'S LUCK: Frankie Thomas, Jr., Frances Robinson—It must have been the animals, but we did all right with this serial and the kids sure did stay with it for the full run. Nothing to get excited about, but if you run serials, this one is okay.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

NO REASON FOR PANIC

One of this department's field scouts came galloping in a lather with a flash that some of the boys in a sector where chance games were banned recently, are in a panic for box-office ideas to replace the free money gagaroos. Customers educated to something-for-nothing showbusiness, it appears, are now staying away in large numbers. The theatremen are searching about frantically. They are at a loss to seek out those long-discarded exploitation ideas valued in the days when picture entertainment was the only thing to sell.

Well, it can be imagined that managers must be on their toes for a plentiful supply of ideas to feed the always voracious boxoffice. But we are nonplussed to find theatremen, expected always to be in command of the situation, frantic over a seeming lack of digestible exploitation fodder.

Let it be said immediately that the showman who calls himself one is ready at all times to compile a respectable listing of selling slants to fit the occasion. Ideas for single pictures, seasonal or institutional campaigns, or what have you, come easily to mind. And there are the files to freshen his memory. As he goes along, your theatremen adds to his store of savvy by noting what others are doing and suggesting. Rarely is he left without ammunition.

There is no intention here to convey that this ammunition lands solidly upon every boxoffice objective. But it does mean the guy with the git-up is trying his almighty durndest to do something worthwhile on every date.

How much chance games and giveaways have to do with it is neither here nor there, but there is in evidence a lamentable softening of exploitation fibre in too many sectors. This lack of effort in the cause of picture showmanship is nothing newly developed and might be pointed to as one of the reasons for growth of chance games, in the first place.

Whether the theatremen himself is at fault or whether he is handcuffed by procedure outside his control, it is a startling commentary upon the status of showmanship to find seasoned managers in a whirl over what to do next.

In one of his recent newspaper columns, Dale Carnegie recommended the incorporation of more showmanship in general business. Since the man who makes the meek speak appears to be familiar with showbusiness, he might write another pep-up book aimed at theatremen and entitled: "How To Win Drives and Influence Patrons".

SPRING WARNING

Spring is beguiling. Spring says "come out and play", but to the lad who listens, the vernal season is giving warning that Summer is just a step behind and there are things to do.

"Things to do" are not confined to making ready the theatre for the heated months. Theatremen of all degree are poised to go through the routine of cleaning and changing, renovation and suchlike. But to the smart son, the coming of Summer, and especially this Summer, is a challenge he will be set to meet. Gone are the days when a cooling plant was sufficient. Everything is air-cooled today. He knows it will take more than that to get his share of the business.

As far as he can influence his programs, your far-seeing theatremen will labor to insure the best available entertainment and properly exploit it. He will not be satisfied with just a well-kept house but will demand immaculate, summery crispness. His staff will reflect this atmosphere in personal attire and meticulous attention to the handling of patrons. Himself, more than ever, the manager will be genial host in every sense and shading of the term.

In short, he and his personnel will not be satisfied until the theatre invites the entertainment-minded as an oasis does the desert-weary traveller.

SAYING IT AGAIN

A last-moment entry for the first 1938 Quigley Quarterly Awards reached Headquarters just before deadline, accompanied by a note from the contestant leading off as follows: "I did not realize until today that the Awards were made in accordance with the work done during a three-month period."

Theatremen still uncertain about procedure are invited to read the rules and regulations on page 53, issue of April 16. These detail the policy of the refashioned Awards and emphasize again that the Competitions are now judged on a quarterly basis instead of monthly, as heretofore.

A-Mike Vogel

Conceived by Charlie Bierbauer and his assistant Nick Todorov at Wilmer and Vincent's State Theatre, Allentown, Pa. was giant lobby setpiece for "The Lone Ranger," shown above. Display was done in brilliant colors with the title in cutout letters. Provision was made for card slide in the frame for each change of episode.

Round Table In Pictures

Outstanding indeed was front created by Louie Charninsky, manager, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas, for "Harlem on the Prairie." Covered wagon on streets week ahead helped plug the engagement as did special midnight preview. Personal letters were mailed out over the signature of employees and heralds were distributed as a further buildup.

Above is reproduced scene in Lloyd Thayer's lobby of the Bijou Theatre, Aberdeen, Wash. for "Alcatraz." Replica of jail was set up in which was staff members dressed in stripes. Catch copy and "wanted" circulars completed the effect.

Taking one of the newspaper advertisements from portfolio made up by Oscar Doob's department, Milt Harris, Loew's State, Cleveland had it made up into a three sheet easel for lobby display to advertise "The Goldwyn Follies." Exhibit was later placed in the lobby of hotels during run.

Three-day exploitation slant was used by George Tyson, Harris' Alvin Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. for "Penitentiary." Members of house staff dressed in convicts uniform with chest banners paraded busy streets followed by armed guard.

Reported as creating unusually favorable comment from his patrons was giant lobby setpiece constructed by Sam Gilman, Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Penna. for "Of Human Hearts." Display featured 40x60 blowup of one of the picture's sequences.

Described elsewhere in this section is Moon Corker's "Buccaneer" campaign at the Palace, Athens, Ga. Shown above are members of local sororities who entered theatremen's pirate costume party held on stage for which faculty members acted as judges.

Airplane engine parts were displayed in lobby of the American Theatre, Butte, Mont., for "Non Stop New York." Ribbons attached to each part led to chart showing names and from this, other ribbons led to cross section drawing showing where parts fit in engine.

Phonograph record window was secured by M. Westreich of Warner's in Paris, France for the run of "Hollywood Hotel" at the Apollo Theatre there. Display consisted of cafe scene with cutout figures of Benny Goodman and his orchestra.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

"Spirit of Youth"

To publicize "The Spirit of Youth," starring Joe Louis, manager Jack Harris, Loew's 116th Street Theatre, New York City, used a special 24-sheet on ballyhoo wagon which toured through the streets of Harlem two days ahead of opening. Entire lobby was dressed for the occasion, oversize compo-board boxing gloves were used for display purposes with tiein copy and cutouts of Joe Louis together with scene stills were used.

Special throwaways were distributed at all sporting clubs, movie magazines were promoted and special front page imprint containing cut of the champ was placed on each and distributed week ahead of opening. Through tieup effected with five and tens in the neighborhood, stores devoted entire windows to frames containing picture of the fighter and local colored newspapers came through with abundant newspaper breaks.

Honorary Governor

Bob Huffman, Lincoln Theatre Corporation head, Denver, sold "Boy of the Streets." Huffman, together with the manager of Station KFOR and manager of local hotel, went to the center of Lincoln, tabbing the first boy that turned the corner "Boy of the Street." The lucky kid was given a dinner, $100 in merchandise by local cooperating merchants, and topping all, was made honorary governor for a day.

Neides Full Page Ad

Harry Ormiston, Universal publicity department has made available to theatre managers a reproduction of the full page break planted by Hal Neides, Orpheum Theatre, San Francisco, for his campaign on "Mad About Music." For use in advance lobby displays, the reproduction features a special cartoon by Bill O'Malley titled "The O'Malleys Go to the Movies," and is centered entirely around Deanna Durbin and scenes in which she appears in the picture.

PUNCH
That's what you want in every foot
... and that's what you get when you order Special Trailers from FILMACK TRAILER CO.
843 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

SO YOU WON'T TALK? ASKS PERRY OF POLLY

Manager S. Perry, Skouras' Broadway Theatre, Haverstraw, N. Y., for "Old Chicago" hired a parrot three weeks ahead and set about trying to teach him to speak the title. But no dice. Undaunted, Perry placed his fine-feathered friend in a cage in the lobby with phonograph alongside grinding out title name over and over during peak hours. Card queried patrons as to whether they thought the bird would be able to say "Old Chicago" before end of date. The theatremanager does not tell us how successful he was in getting Polly to talk.

Lobby Display

Display of Western props was used in the lobby of the Fox Carmel Theatre, Hollywood, by Manager Dick Moss, consisting of a genuine Wells Fargo box to plug that date. Pony Express mail pouch, rifles, lariats, money sacks completed the atmospheric effect. Study guides and study charts in the form of questionnaires on the historical points of the picture were distributed amongst teachers of local high school.

Public libraries carried announcements and large displays showing scenes from the picture. Both of these were used on the bulletin boards in full view of all those entering. Huge Western Union telegrams containing message about the picture were placed in all local offices, large card exploiting the feature was hung in all local railway express agency windows, sniped with theatre name and playdates and several thousand special heralds distributed to all schools.

Atmosphere

Entire staff of the Regent Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, were dressed as pirates by Mike Chakeres during the run of "The Buccaneer," with title sashes across their waists. For street bally, newsboys wore "Buccaneer" hats imprinted with title, lobby display featured photographic enlargements and illuminated six-sheet cutouts. Hotel beverage shop plugged a "Buccaneer" drink, scene mats were planted in ten county newspapers four days ahead and 60 three-sheet permanent display boards on all roads leading into city were covered with advertising material.

Personal Appearance

Since Mark Twain did much of his writing there and was buried in Elmira, N. Y., Al Beckerich, manager of the Keeney Theatre, put over a bangup campaign in connection with the personal appearance of Tom Kelly and Ann Gillis as an advance on "Tom Sawyer." Children were greeted by Mayor Beers and other city officials on the steps of the City Hall and were presented with the key to the city.

From there the children were taken to the Mark Twain Study at Quarry Farm, overlooking the city of Elmira, where they were greeted by relatives of the author. Special luncheon in their honor was held at the Mark Twain Hotel, attended by 50 guests, including honor students from each school and civic and social leaders. Stories were run in papers ahead of arrival of the stars and followed their leavetaking, tracing half-hour by half-hour their activities during the day.

Checker Tourney

Arranging a city-wide checker tournament was worked successfully by Manager Harold Pearl, RKO Schine Paramount in Syracuse, between the YMCA and the Boy's Club. Elimination contests were held at the "Y" and the club, with the winner from each playing the finals in the lobby of the Paramount, with promoted prizes going to winner and runners-up.

Two-foot cards were tacked on walls of both clubs and officers of each announced the contest and special night at the theatre to boys attending meetings. This activity was conducted in addition to many swell plugs at schools, in newspapers, over the radio and in store windows.

Street Ballyhoo

For "Navy Blue and Gold" date at the Lane Theatre, New York City, Melvin Katz, aided by Morton Cole, dressed their entire staff in white sailor hats, imprinted with picture title. Outer lobby was swathed in blue and gold streamers, life savers with anchors carrying title were planted on doorman's box and railings leading to it. Opening day, the Junior Naval reserves of the districts were invited to attend en masse, entire front was hung with American flags and for street bally trailer toured neighborhood properly bannered.

Pirate Costume Party Sponsored For "Buccaneer"

Full cooperation of Athens Banner-Herald was secured for Moon Corker's pirate costume party, held on his stage in connection with the opening of "The Buccaneer" at the Palace, Athens, Ga. Members of ten sororities entered the contest, made possible through cooperation of college authorities. Paper came through nicely, breaking the opening story on the front page week ahead, each day thereafter carrying a story of the progress of the girls.

Features were written by a student selected each day from the senior class of the Journalism school. Each sorority was permitted two entries, they to be dressed as the pirate John LaFitte or the dutch girl, Gretchen. (See photo in Round Table picture section.) Winners were selected by seven judges, first prize being a theatre party for the girl and her entire sorority, runner-up received a handsomely bound copy of the original "Buccaneer" script autographed by Cecil B. De Mille and the leading stars in the picture.

Art contest was held through cooperation of Prof. Dodd, head of the School of Art at the University of Georgia. Prof. Dodd lectured on the Battle of New Orleans and stated that all work had to be done in class and be original. Six paintings were selected by three judges from over 200 paintings, prizes going to winners.

Still another contest was planted in the form of essays submitted on the picture. Judges were members of the faculty and gifts were also awarded these winners.

Corker says this was one of the most successful campaigns he has ever staged and with the exception of the free theatre party and passes given to the art contest winners, there was no added cost to his regular advertising. All the newspaper publicity, which was abundant, was gratis.

Stage Coach Run Exploits "Wells Fargo" for Limerick

Borrowing old stage coach from department store, George Limerick, Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas, for "Wells Fargo," dressed man in full regalia and had the bannered coach make the run from Ft. Worth to his city delivering the film. Planted atop was large steel strong box lettered with title and driver wore ten-gallon hat, leather jacket, cowboy boots, chaps and two 45-pistols strapped to his belt.

At the edge of Cleburne a team of horses was hooked on the coach in front of the mules and from there to the theatre, stage was pulled by four steeds. Within five blocks of the city square entourage was halted by Chief of Police who arrested Limerick for parading without a license. George was taken to the City Hall while approximately 1,500 people saw him lodged in the local bastille for a period of three minutes. This gag, which was promoted by the Mayor and prominent business men of Cleburne, came as a complete surprise, and was responsible for page one newspaper breaks.

OFF TO HOLLYWOOD

In one of these powerful, de luxe United Air Lines Mainliners, the 1937 Quigley Annual Award winners will be transported across the country to Hollywood, early in May, to be honored and feted in Studioland. Surrounded by the most luxurious appointments and every comfort, the winners will span the country in 16 hours over the famous scenic airway which follows the pioneer trail across the continent.

Mother's Day Campaign Now Underway by Lamm

With Mother's Day not far off, Louie Lamm, Warners' Palace, Lorain, Ohio, has already laid his plans. Last year this theatremen honored the mother with the largest family, but this year he has decided to give the angle a new slant by honoring the youngest grandmother. Arrangements have been made with the local editor to start the ball rolling with stories requesting readers to assist in finding "the grandmother" or come forward and reveal themselves if they fit the bill.

Promoted already for the winner is a theatre party for two at the Palace, a bouquet of flowers, box of candy, ice cream and photograph to be taken gratis at studio of cooperating merchant. Additional promotions are now in the works. Stories are run in local dailies as the search continues.

Theatremen Win "Firefly" Award

E. V. Dinerman, director of advertising and publicity for RKO Midwest Theatres, Cincinnati, has been awarded first prize of $60 in an exploitation contest on "The Firefly" conducted by MGM. Ted Gamble of the Parker Circuit, Portland, Ore., won second prize of $25 and Guy Martin, manager of the Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind., drew third money, $15. It is expected that MGM will sponsor a similar contest on "Test Pilot."

Rockwell Selects Cooper As Typical American Man

Woman's Home Companion recently commissioned Norman Rockwell, noted American artist and illustrator, to select and to portray on canvas the man whom he considered the acme of the typical American man. After a comprehensive study Mr. Rockwell chose Gary Cooper, declaring that the star "has the inherent quietness which inevitably stamps a personality, and in addition is an interesting, down-to-earth, well poised human being."

The artist's portrait was made during the filming of "The Adventures of Marco Polo" and theatremen might well use this information for exploitation fodder.

Easter Slants Planned In Boston by Granara

Jack Granara, RKO Keith Memorial Theatre, Boston, for Easter is planning a promotion tieup with local furrier, whereby a complete reel will be taken of their fashions. Society girls and Boston's most beautiful models will be used, merchant coming through with displays, newspaper publicity and ads.

Theatremen has already planted one of the Deanna Durbin special Easter photographs in the news section of the Boston Traveller as a buildup for his "Mad About Music" date. Also planned by Granara will be girl dressed in the height of fashion, who will be entered in the Easter morning parade.

This class includes all suburban or neighborhood runs as well as subsequent-run situations.

FOREIGN

All foreign entries are subject to the same classification as those above.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

EDGAR A. WEIMER, JR.

manages the Paxtang Theatre, Paxtang, Pa., for the Hill Amusement Co. While attending school, Ed worked as part time usher in various theatres, finally getting the job of playing piano in one of the "shooting galleries." Later, Weimer was promoted to organist in one of the Jackson Enterprises house and when sound made its entrance served as apprentice projectionist and played spot numbers on the organ. Working also as maintenance man, this theatreman later became chief operator at the State, Reading, finally joining the Paxtang staff as operator, which job he held until 1937, at which time he was promoted to his present spot. Well, Weimer, with your varied experience in showbusiness, you ought to be able to send along some mighty interesting stories.

SCOTT ROBERTS

manages the Comique Theatre in Camden, Maine, and started in the business as usher at the Strand in Dover, N. H. During college Roberts worked part time in various theatres and later in a full-time capacity joined the Graphic Circuit first in Ellsworth, then in Belfast and now in Camden. We have several of the boys in your circuit as members and we anticipate another active one in you. How about keeping us posted, Scott?

HOMER BURTON FULLER, JR.

is down in Orlando, Fla., managing the Beacham Theatre, one of the Sparks houses. Fuller started his career as secretary to Mr. M. J. Sparks in Orlando at the Beacham Theatre. After a year, he was promoted to assistant manager of that house, which position he remained in for a year, at which point he was promoted to manager of the Ritz. From there, for a short time, he managed the Grand Theatre and was then sent over to his present spot.

R. F. HOTZ

manages the Rialto and Rex Theatres down in New Braunfels, Texas, for the Jack Pickens Theatres. New Braunfels is not strange to this department, having already had contributions from there. However, since we have not yet received accounts of this theatreman's activities, we take this means of welcoming him into the Round Table and inviting him to send along reports of his exploitation stunts.

C. B. DORTCH

manages the Rialto Theatre in Morrilton, Ark., for the Malco Circuit and we're mighty glad to have him with us, since we have that circuit sewed up, Round Tabley speaking, about 100 per cent. The first position held by Dortch in theatres was as projectionist, holding this job for about three years, at which time he switched to the door, going on up to assistant and then manager. We have some other good friends in Morrilton, C. B., so how about starting up a little lively competition through these pages.

ELWOOD E. BLANC

is in Canton, Ohio, managing the Mozart Theatre for Young and Reinhart. Blanc started as page boy at the RKO Palace, going to Canton in 1926, when he became usher at the Alhambra Theatre. From then until 1929 he worked between the Palace, Loew's and the Alhambra, at that time leaving to work for the Botzum Brothers at their Strand Theatre as service director. From there over to the Mozart as assistant manager, later being promoted to manager.

E. F. INGRAM

in Ashland, Ala., is a partner and manages the Ashland and Lineville Theatres, having entered showbusiness as assistant to projectionist in Ashland. After a fling in the booth, Ingram worked the front of the house, later becoming theatre owner, with C. I. Hood, Jr., operating the houses in Ashland. This theatreman also operated the Ingram and Opera House in Talladega, Ala., and later spent some time in Hollywood, learning production, but returned to the exhibition field as his first love.

J. M. NASS

manages the Port Theatre in Poplar, Mont., for the John Survant Enterprises, beginning as an usher and doorman at the Roxy Theatre, Glasgow, Mont., then controlled by the Wellworth Theatres. From there Nass went over to the Orpheum in the same town as doorman and floor manager and then to the Fort as manager. Nass extends a cordial invitation to any and all of his Round Table brothers who might find themselves anywhere around Poplar while vacationing, to drop in and he promises them the key to the city. On behalf of the boys, we thank you.

BERNARD S. MURPHY

may be found managing the Roxy Theatre in Earlington, Ky., and started with his company when it first opened as projectionist, working in practically all jobs around the house until two years ago when he was made manager. Well, Bernard, you are the first member to join the ranks from Earlington and we're hopeful that you will keep us posted on how you exploit your shows down there.

JAMES MAY

is over in Brooklyn managing the Atlantic Theatre and started at the Windsor Theatre in the Bronx as doorman. After a year, May was promoted to chief usher and after serving for one year as chief, obtained position as manager of the Eagle Theatre in Harlem. Two years there finds the theatreman promoted again to the Atlantic, from where we look forward to hearing from him.

DON KELSEY

manages the Mount Theatre in Rocky Mount, Va., for the English Theatre Company. Kelsey is another showman to have started as a projectionist at the Lyric Theatre in Blacksburg, Va. After operating the booth for a period of five years, Don secured a position as manager of the Mount.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska.

Dear Herald:

It had always been our belief that cartoonists would never be able to make imaginary objects come to real life on the screen, but this notion has been knocked clear out of us by Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It is playing to overflow houses at each performance here. After this picture has completed its run, it should be hung in the Hall of Fame along with D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation."

We note by the HERALD that Frank J. Biberstein of the Attica theatre at Attica, Kansas, sends in some reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" and he winds up his letter with this: "Have old J. C. call on me."

Now, listen, Frank, you this, that and the other thing, where do you get that "old J. C." noise? Don't you know that some have gone to the penitentiary and some to Congress for less than that? We hope to be in Kansas before long and will try and call on you, and we will fight it out in the back yard with double barrel shotguns loaded with buckshot. By gosh, we never showed the white feather yet.

That nice big redfish that J. C. Fanning of Brownsville, Texas, didn't send us must have got lost in the mail.

Writing to his friend "Jo" in his column in the Omaha World-Herald, Guy Williams said he would have wired his Congressman a 10-word telegram regarding that reorganization bill but that he was afraid the G-men would rub him out for bribery. But then, he added, there are not many Congressmen who would rate a 10-word telegram anyway.

We wired our Congressman and maybe the G-men will rub us out, but we'll be at the rubbin'.

We have received letters from exhibitors in Maine, Vermont, two or three from Canada, one from Australia, one from England, but up in Minnesota and South Dakota are a lot of friends who must've lost their pencils, and this goes for a lot of those Longhorns down in Texas and over in Missouri. We did get a nice letter from Mrs. Jung of Glenrock, Wyoming, and Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Illinois, but Ma Welty of Hill City, Kansas, and Bert Silver of Greenville, Michigan, have never even wasted a postage stamp on us. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

We heard from over in Iowa Falls, Iowa, from a mighty fine fellow operating the Metropolitan theatre by the name of E. O. Elsworth, who, as we understand it, E. O. at one time furnished the bulk of the brains for the Iowa legislature, which, no doubt, accounts for Iowa being such a great state.

We send E. O. our best regards and best wishes, and trust he will remember us to our good friend, Frank Foster.

Pressure Denied in Effort To Cut Free Space for Stars

Attempts to curtail free space given in newspapers in publicizing film stars who are also appearing on commercially sponsored radio programs is a matter of individual editorial judgment and is not in response to any pressure from the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, the association said this week.

An RKO Radio exploitation man reported that in Dubuque and Duluth he received little cooperation from newspapers which reminded him that Walt Disney, who produced "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," has a Mickey Mouse program on the air.

S. Barret McCormick said this report was the only one of its kind received from 25 exploitation men in the field.

Presaging possible general doubling of newspaper advertising rates to radio program space users, five Metropolitan Los Angeles newspapers are eliminating all radio columns, with the exception of logs, increasing by 100 per cent or more "theatre of the air" space rates and will give no publicity on radio programs except to advertisers.

Huisman Leaves Best Film

Rene Huisman has resigned as president and stockholder of Best Films, which has "Cloistered" and "The Call," religious pictures, and has organized the R. C. H. Film Company, for distribution of "Sacred India."

Bert C. E. Silver has leased the New Silver theatre at Greenville, Mich., to the Butterfield Circuit.

Japanese Journal Predicts Record for Universal Film

The Japan Advertiser, English newspaper published in Tokyo, on March 28th, quoted Japanese film trade journals as predicting that the Universal film "One Hundred Men and a Girl," starring Deanna Durbin, will gross 1,000,000 yen, the first picture to do so. The newspaper said that the picture so far has drawn more than 1,000,000 attendance in Japan and has brought in 500,000 yen.

The Advertiser said the opening day of the film at the Hibiya Gekijo found film fans in five lines around the theatre and "has successively broken all showing records to date in Tokyo, where it has so far run six weeks, in two theatres, in Osaka, where it ran five weeks, in Kyoto, Kobe, Yokohama and Hakata, Nagoya, where it ran for two weeks, is the only place so far shown where it has not broken the record for length of first run."

Universal's publicity campaign was said to have cost $35,000.

"Tricheur" to Gallic Films

"Le Roman D'un Tricheur" (The Story of a Cheat), a French picture written and directed by Sacha Guitry and in which he plays the leading role, has been acquired for American distribution by Gallic Films, Inc. John Erskine, author of "Helen of Troy" and "The Brief Hour of Francois Villon," has been engaged to write the English titles for the film.

FAME STOCK

AS we are told in detailed particular in the news pages of this issue of Motion Picture Herald, the trading and borrowing of players in Hollywood has reached a new high.

There is in effect a stock company of Fame in the motion picture's chief production community. It is no secret that many a player contract of today was made not for casting, but for trading purposes.

Hollywood goes about this policy with vigour, and then presently sets up a hue and cry for "new faces," a lament on the paucity of talent.

The fact is that there is no scarcity of talent, but that there are concentrations of personal fame, and that producers intensify these concentrations by seeking to buy for each picture as much readymade fame as the market affords. The process is more understandable than laudable.

The report of The Herald's Hollywood bureau indicates that there are sixty-four players in predominant demand as evidenced by the borrowings. For a production output dominating the world market the figure is exceedingly unimpressive. It denotes an interior competition that says little for institutional enterprise or the independence expected of a creative activity. The tendency is to make the screen's wares into mosaics of too familiar units.

BRITISH MESSAGE

IN an advertisement extraordinary the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain and Ireland this week takes the pages of Motion Picture Herald to convey a cabled message to the producer-distributors of America. Incidentally, too, by their election to use the Herald to first present this message these exhibitors put their question and issue before the world membership of the industry.

The issue is embodied in the charge that London distributors of American product are imposing a handicap on the pictures and all concerned by a secret process of grading the pictures, empirically, it would seem, into two price classes.

The CEA holds that this automatically "degrades a large percentage of the product."

Inevitably this also brings to focus again the realization that in the home market, too, product and with it producers and exhibitors alike have been damaged conspicuously by the classifications known as "A" and "B" and their implications.

THIS week there is a certain low-cost and theoretically "B" class picture which is doing "A" class business, among those theatres which have acquired it rather by chance. The picture started to the market with the curse of "B" upon it, and the curse stays, despite the picture's large potentialities at the box office, proved daily, but unproclaimed to the hit hungry showmen merely because it came out of Hollywood with no promotion schedule behind it.

There are evidences enough that the only finally competent judge of the merchandise of amusement is the consumer.

WHO SAID WHAT?

THERE is a curiously ardent zeal for efforts to discredit the motion picture industry's self-regulative endeavors and to cast discredit upon the Production Code and its Administration. This is commonly made manifest in the more radical elements of the press. Just now one discovers the Times-News of Burlington, North Carolina, eagerly quoting the New York Evening Post to say that a memorandum has been issued by Joseph I. Breen, Production Code administrator, as follows:

"Feature: They Gave Him a Gun . . . Company: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer . . . Territory: Japan . . . Deletions: All scenes of kissing . . . Delete any footage which included the idea that war is not altogether glamorous and noble. . . ."

The fact was that Mr. Breen was transmitting a report of what the Japanese had done to a picture.

The newspaper writers, however, hasten to the conclusion that in behalf of Japan and Jap trade, Mr. Breen ordered those deletions and for those reasons. The absurdity continues with charges of sabotage of realism, rape of art, etc.

Meanwhile one may wonder by what process memoranda of the sort are made public, anyway?

STYLE NOTE

WITH an almost nationally audible snort the news editors of the daily press gave box and feature treatment to an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin Wednesday saying that the motion picture and press cameramen to cover the Hitler-Mussolini conversations in Italy had been put into snappy military uniforms. The newspaper correspondents are to be uniformed, too.

In view of the state of the arts and businesses of expression in the totalitarian states there is in fact nothing surprising about that.

Also while we are smiling, reflect on the annual parade of the cameramen in Britain assigned to cover the classic Derby, all, with their helpers, too, in top hats and morning coats. And that has been going on for years. The horse-and-society world is a dictator-state, too.

SPRING F.O.B.

SPRING came to Rockefeller Center last Friday, all in bloom and variously balled-and-burlapped, and potted, represented by many camions laden with azaleas, forsythia, hyacinths and burgeoning shrubs in the tender greens of nascent foliage.

It's a neat process, this, by which Spring is delivered by truck at the door and laid down like a carpet.

There is, too, a certain symbolism for all of this great show capital. The personalities of amusement, our flowers of entertainment, stars of screen and stage and air, come ready made like that, in their fashion also ball-and-burlapped for transplanting, not, let us hope, however, potted.

Flower and stars alike are nurtured in other places and other soils, until they come to bud—but this is the show-off place.

This Week

Swapping Stars

Interchange of talent by Hollywood studios, a practice indulged only rarely and under pressure of necessity in the industry's formative days, is rapidly becoming an established policy with definite effect on product lists and theatre box office returns. Factors bearing on the development include studio economics, players' temperaments and product bolstering.

The present method of conducting such trading, the conditions under which it thrives, and wherein it interests exhibitors are explained on pages 12 and 13.

Federal Guardians

Federal guardians for all children engaged in the motion picture industry are proposed by Representative Raymond J. Cannon (Dem., Wis.) in a bill which he introduced in Congress this week as a result of the efforts of Jackie Coogan to obtain return from his mother and step-father of part of the money earned by him as a child.

The proposed guardians would be appointed by the federal courts, and would have complete control and management of the children's estates until they reached their majority.

To assure the appointment of guardians, the bill prohibits the interstate transportation of any picture in which a child appears unless a guardian has been applied for, and provides violations shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not less than 30 days nor more than two years.

Minors in California are now under the guardianship of the state courts, but were not so subjected years ago when Coogan was a minor.

Sponsored Films

"The policy of the organized industry continues firm against the extension of advertising to the entertainment program," Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., said in Hollywood Sunday before leaving for the East. The statement, reaffirming his position against advertising on the screen, followed meetings with producers and declared that "the studios are thoroughly awake to the possible results of the reported efforts to use the motion picture theatre screen for sponsored films produced primarily for advertising purposes."

Mr. Hays said that "whatever the problems of general business recovery may be, the studios, in characteristic fashion, have launched a program of production of a great number of splendid pictures with the purpose of bringing about, rather than waiting for, a box office upturn."

Propaganda Warning

Citing "The River" as a fine motion picture, but definitely a propaganda picture, Gilbert Seldes, author, journalist, critic, warned a Book and Author Club luncheon audience Wednesday that the film-goer is going to stop paying admissions to theatres if he finds concealed propaganda on the screen.

"Most motion pictures are horribly over-written," he asserted, adding a good director can get along with almost any writer, and get a good picture.

185 New Theatres

Construction contracts for 185 theatres to cost $5,620,000 were awarded in the first few months of this year in 37 states, F. W. Dodge Corporation announced Wednesday. The totals compare with 196 theatres, costing $6,218,000, in the same quarter in 1937.

Educational and GN

Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, said this week that his company is considering taking over Grand National to obtain distribution of its short subjects after its releasing contract expires with Twentieth Century-Fox this summer.

Although he declined to reveal any details, Mr. Hammons said the Grand National deal is one of "several matters in hand that we are discussing."

That the plan being considered is the purchase of Grand National, which is now in reorganization under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, was disclosed by Mr. Hammons when he said that Educational would not consider distributing through Grand National "unless we own it."

Sales Districts Merged

Paramount has consolidated the sales districts of New York State and New Jersey under district manager Milton S. Kusell, the new district also including the Philadelphia and Washington, D. C., exchange areas formerly supervised by P. A. Bloch, who resigned last week.

Mr. Kusell has been named district manager of the combined territory with headquarters in New York, supervising besides Philadelphia and Washington, New York, New Jersey, Brooklyn, Albany and Buffalo exchanges.

Hit FCC Report

Shareholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at their annual meeting this week in New York threw their full support behind the management and policies of the $5,000,000,000 organization in its conflict with the Federal Communications Commission and denounced the recent "one-man" report by Paul A. Walker of the commission, a report attacking the company, including its participation in the motion picture business. More than 500 shareholders heard Walter S. Gifford, president, assail the FCC investigation as one, "not of impartial investigators but of partisans and prosecutors."

"Dizzy"

Chicago's Film Row is chatting over a rumor—very much a rumor—that exhibitors there will try to raise a fund to offer Jerome "Dizzy" Dean $40,000 a year, on a three-year contract, to quit baseball. Dean, now pitching for the Chicago Cubs, drew 35,000 fans to last Sunday's game while the radio listeners were estimated at half a million. Theatres had their poorest Sunday matinee business in weeks. Aaron Saperstein, leader of Allied Theatres of Illinois, said he had heard the comment but knew of no action.

Larsen Acquitted

Roy E. Larsen, publisher of Life magazine, was acquitted Tuesday in the court of special sessions, the Bronx, of offering for distribution and sale of obscene matter in his magazine. The publisher submitted to arrest after copies of a recent issue of Life, containing a series of pictures from the film "The Birth of a Baby" had been seized by District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of the Bronx. The film itself is under ban in New York.

The charge against Mr. Larsen was that he had violated Section 1141 of the Penal Code, which is a misdemeanor.

The decision, which was unanimous, was prepared by Justice Nathan Perlman with Justices Bernard Kozickie, presiding, and James E. McDonald concurring. Before announcing the decision the court overruled a motion by the assistant district attorney to strike out the testimony of all the expert witnesses at the last hearing, on the ground that such testimony was "hearsay."

Mexican Legislation

In Mexico a plan, calling for a law to limit film performances to from two to six P. M. daily, has been presented to President Lazaro Cardenas by the Mexican Actors' Association, strongest theatrical group in Mexico. The plan is designed to aid the moribund Mexican stage at the expense of film cinemas, which now run from four to 11 P. M. The industry there is also watching progress of a bill presented to the emergency session of Congress calling for an unspecified increase in the national income tax, which would affect company and individual incomes. Mexico City exhibitors are to be affected by a new tax the civic government has under consideration, an impost on seats and other furniture.

War in England

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in England, committed to a policy of open warfare on distributors over grading policies and rentals by vote of its General Council last week, opened a vigorous barrage of publicity the spearhead of which was publication of the supposedly secret lists of "A" films issued from time to time by the Kinematograph Renters' Society. The publication was accompanied by instructions to exhibitors not to book pictures not included in the list on any other than a flat rental basis. Additionally the KRS selection of "A" films was ridiculed. Other weapons called into use by the CEA were the organization of flying squads of speakers to address exhibitor meetings in the provinces and insertion of advertisements in trade papers and other journals.

Aubrey Flanagan reports from the front on page —.

Rebuke to Court

The United States supreme court returned the anti-trust conspiracy suit brought by the Government against distributors and two Texas circuits to the Texas district court with instructions for further fact finding. The case, the first involving motion picture trade practices to reach the supreme court on appeal, concerned contract clauses governing double billing and fixing of admission prices.

The court's ruling is on page 26.

De Vry Plan at Work

The Herman A. De Vry plan for building up a system of local newsreels, produced independently by exhibitors, frequently in a tieup with a local newspaper, is reported to be working, after a full month's testings in a number of key towns in north central and central Illinois.

New details of the plan and some of the reactions observed in its working appear on page 33. Also, on the same page, is a report on two new additional developments in the 16mm field, one embracing a plan said to be aimed at a national circuit of 16mm films in bars and cocktail lounges.

Fight Film Arrest

While denying that the action was not influenced by the Joe Louis "color line," Jim C. Smith, U. S. district attorney at Birmingham, said this week that Walter Brandenburg, 50, of Atlanta, had been arrested at Lexington, Ky., by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and charged with interstate shipment, from Atlanta to Birmingham last September, of films of the Negro's fight with Tommy Farr. The trial will be in Birmingham. Bail has been set at $2,000.

Mr. Smith, who said the films had been shown in three downtown Birmingham theatres, declared he had made two similar arrests a few years ago when an "all-white" print was shipped across the state line.

Chance Games

The newest anti-chance game weapon is to be tested in Ohio, where authorities have a court test pending on disenfranchisement of theatres using games, on the grounds that their licenses permit them only to operate theatres.

Philadelphia, Connecticut and New York also have chance game matters under advisement, as reported on page 17.

Unions Scored

Brock Pemberton, Broadway producer, this week attacked theatre unions as hampering production and tending to cut down the number of jobs available. He was one of several speakers who addressed a symposium on the theatre, a session of the Eastern Public Speaking conference at the Hotel New Yorker. Mr. Pemberton said he did not object to high wages for stagehands and other workers, as employment was seasonal and temporary, but he said he did resent "paying for work not done."

This Week In Pictures

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, working in close collaboration with Gabriel Pascal who is producing his "Pygmalion" for the screen at the Pinewood studio in England has agreed to the insertion of a bathtub scene in the script, a device made famous by Cecil B. DeMille in that Hollywood which Mr. Shaw does not admire. Wendy Hiller, star of the film opposite Leslie Howard, is shown above during the filming of the scene which, in the original play was only referred to in dialogue.

STAR-SWAPPING WAVE SEEN BENEFITING PRODUCERS, STARS, EXHIBITORS

Scientific Marketing of Talent Succeeds "Horse Trading" of Another Day; Economies, Prod- uct, Temperaments Factors

Borrowing and lending of players is the order of the day in Hollywood, reaching an unprecedented peak, and bringing broader opportunities for talent, a wider selection of personalities to producers searching for players suitable for specific assignments, and definite benefits to exhibitors.

Through the expanding studio-wide system of farming out talent, theatre owners are obtaining additional box office names not otherwise available to them in their comparatively narrow contractual distribution channels.

Talent exchanging today is evolving into virtually scientific marketing as compared to the "horse trading" of former years, when, for example, a financial predicament might compel a producer to relinquish a valuable player, on a "farming" arrangement, for cash; or, when a "big name," desired for a certain production, could be obtained only on a "swap" for a player of equal prestige or drawing power.

The widespread borrowing and lending of talent in which Hollywood now is indulging is attributed to many factors, involving, to mention a few, studio economies, product bolstering, and players' temperaments. Borrowings and lendings are expected to have an effect of one kind or another on product, subsequently on the exhibitors' income.

In the last few seasons, the 1937-1938 period particularly, the manner in which identities and associations were shuffled around led to baffling confusion as personalities long attached to one company suddenly popped up as the stars or featured players in pictures produced by rival organizations. But in practically every case, the loaning or borrowing was done for a definite reason.

An Exact Business Science

During their formative years the establishments now recognized as "major producers" guarded their screen personnel properties jealously. It was rare indeed when any swapping was done. In such instances as were recorded, the executives concerned were exercising their horse-trading instincts. Only players of equal prestige and box office power were traded. The players seldom profited, in a dollar and cents way, but that was before the days of the astute business managers and career counselors.

Today borrowing and lending has been reduced to an exact business and the player

FESTUS FIRST STAR, SAYS GIANNINI

Speaking on the subject, "The Motion Picture 50 Years from Now," and treating the theme in both serious and humorous vein, Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, California banker and a leading motion picture financier, on Saturday said that Festus, the Dionysian festival player of 600 B.C., was the world's first acting star and that Robert Taylor and Joel McCrea might occupy a similar niche in 1988, at which time Louis B. Mayer should be able to supervise by television Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production instead of "sprinting from one set to another as is necessary now."

Dr. Giannini spoke at the 50th anniversary celebration of Pomona College, substituting for Mr. Mayer, who was unable to appear because of illness. Taylor and McCrea are both graduates of Pomona.

On a serious note, Dr. Giannini pointed to the rapid scientific progress in late years, said that momentous changes are inevitable and that the nature of these changes is unpredictable by anyone lacking the "habitual courage" of Mr. Mayer.

involved, and his manager of course, have an equity in the deal. By no means is it a hit or miss proposition. When, for instance, Twentieth Century-Fox, as in the case of "The Baroness and the Butler," borrowed William Powell from MGM, it was a certainty that MGM would get someone in return. The loan quickly was repaid when Tyrone Power was borrowed for "Marie Antoinette." Powell and Power were not merely told to report at the other studio and go to work; contractual provisions took ample care that both were adequately recompensed and their consent first had been obtained.

Among the Reasons

Many causes enter into the mechanics of trading. Most of the deals, however, are made for these reasons:

(1) Absence of a suitable player on the contract list to play a particular part and knowledge that one who would be adequate is available on another lot.

(2) Wish of a player to accept a role which he has been invited to play.

(3) A mutually agreed upon decision that a temporary "change of scenery" would be beneficial to all concerned.

(4) Having a surplus of talent the services of which will not be immediately required by the home organization.

(5) Studio economies suggesting curtailment of the old policy of maintaining expensive talent rosters, on contract, in idleness.

Illustrating Factors

MGM's "Conquest" illustrates the first named cause. Despite the company's array of talent, executives realized that they had no one suited to the role of Napoleon. Charles Boyer therefore was borrowed from Walter Wanger Productions, a unit which specializes in lending talent. This deal was made on a straight financial basis with MGM paying Mr. Wanger and Mr. Boyer for the player's services. Conversely, the deal describes the fourth condition—Mr. Wanger had no assignment coming up immediately for Mr. Boyer, and his absence from the studio would not interfere with production plans.

Case three is demonstrated by the appearances of Claire Trevor and Arthur Treacher, Twentieth Century-Fox, lent respectively to Goldwyn Productions for "Dead End" and to Universal for "Mad about Music." Both had been invited to play the roles in which they were seen, and so requested and received permission to do so.

The "change of scenery" reason is a matter of delicacy. As human nature cannot always be consistent, it is sometimes advisable to shift contract players around until differences of opinion are settled, tempers cool off and harmony and understanding are restored. Otherwise there might be unpleasant suspensions.

A List of Borrowings

As one recalls any of the pictures herein-after mentioned, it will be noted that the borrowing and lending of talent was done in accordance with the first condition—the necessity of obtaining a suitable player for a particular role. The case of Wanger Productions, which makes a business of loaning talent, is the exception.

In the current season Columbia borrowed Madeleine Carroll from Wanger for "It's All Yours," and Joan Blondell from Warners and Melvyn Douglas from MGM for "There's Always a Woman." Earlier, Ronald Colman was borrowed from Selznick-International for "The Lost Horizon."

Warner Brothers found it expedient to go outside its own ranks for players for several pictures. Henry Fonda was borrowed from Wanger twice, for "That Certain Woman" and "Jezebel." Charles Boyer went from that company to appear with Paramount's Claudette Colbert version of "Tovarich." Paramount also lent Warners Gladys Swarthout, for "Hollywood Hotel" and Carole Lombard, for "Fools for Scandal." MGM lent Warners Ted Healy for "Hollywood Hotel," Nat Pendleton for "Swing Your Lady" and Rosalind Russell for "Four's a Crowd."

While lending Freddie Bartholomew to Twentieth Century-Fox for "Kidnapped," MGM did other borrowing, by using Paul Muni and Edward G. Robinson from Warners for "The Good Earth" and "The Last Gangster."

Paramount compensated for several of its loans by turning to Wanger productions three times; Sylvia Sidney for "You and Me," Joan Bennett for "The Texans" and Henry Fonda for "Spawn of the North." Jean Arthur was borrowed from Columbia for "Easy Living" and Lewis Stone from MGM for "Stolen Heaven."

RKO-Radio, which lent Katharine Hepburn to Columbia for "Holiday," did quite a bit of borrowing itself. James Stewart was obtained from MGM for "Vivacious Lady." Three times the studio went to Paramount for talent; Ray Milland for "Women Have a Way," Bob Burns for "Radio City Revels" and George Burns and Gracie Allen for "A Damsel in Distress." Kenny Baker was borrowed from Mervyn LeRoy, who holds that player's personal contract, for "Radio City Revels," and Louis Hayward was obtained from Universal for two or three pictures, notably "Condemned Women."

Samuel Goldwyn, whose few players' contracts include that of Joel McCrea whom he has lent out several times, borrowed Kenny Baker from Mervyn LeRoy for "Goldwyn Follies," Dorothy Lamour from Paramount for "The Hurricane," Barbara Stanwyck from RKO-Radio for "Stella Dallas," the Ritz Brothers and Claire Trevor for "Goldwyn Follies" and "Dead End."

Selznick-International took Madeleine Carroll from Wanger for "The Prisoner of Zenda" and Carole Lombard from Paramount for "Nothing Sacred."

Wanger's principal borrowings were confined to Joan Blondell, from Warners, for "Stand In," and Warner Baxter, Twentieth Century-Fox, for "Vogues of 1938."

From Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal requested and received Alice Faye for "You're a Sweetheart," Victor McLaglen for "Riot Patrol" and Arthur Treacher for "Mad about Music." In addition to the deals with MGM for William Powell and Freddie Bartholomew, Twentieth Century got Robert Young from MGM for "Josette" and Randolph Scott from Paramount for "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Borrowing and lending will continue on a widespread scale for product to be made in the remainder of the present season and into the 1938-'39 period. Indications are that there will be more of it than ever before.

Notwithstanding the fact that several new names crept into MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Box Office Champion and Honor Star lists as a few of the former headliners dropped out, there appears to be a talent shortage that neither the development of younger players nor the recruiting of others from the stage, radio broadcasting nor foreign fields will prove adequate to adjust. Since the taking of the last HERALD poll, no potentialities have appeared who in any way threaten the positions of the leaders.

On most plans for new product, especially that of the coming season, it is difficult to itemize the amount of trading that will be done. However, there are several very definite indications of what is in line. Early signs are seen in Columbia's borrowing of James Stewart and Lionel Barrymore from MGM, Ann Miller from RKO-Radio and Spring Byington from Twentieth Century-Fox for "You Can't Take It with You."

Already MGM has lent Hedy LaMarr (of "Ecstasy") to Wanger for "Algiers." In a wholesale pact it agreed to lend James Stewart, Robert Montgomery, Warren William, George Murphy and Rita Johnson to Universal.

Paramount plans to do considerable borrowing and lending. Borrowed faces to be seen in its product include Don Ameche, from Twentieth Century; Jack Oakie, RKO-Radio; Louise Platt, Wanger; Walter Brennan, Samuel Goldwyn. Arrangements have been made to lend Gail Patrick, who was in "Mad about Music," and Billy Lee to Universal. Randolph Scott will do another picture for Twentieth Century-Fox to which studio also will go temporarily Eleanore Whitney, Frances Dee and possibly Akim Tamiroff, while Florence George will be lent to Warners. Claudette Colbert will be lent to RKO-Radio, as will Ralph Bellamy.

From Goldwyn, Wanger Productions will borrow Sigrid Gurie and Joel McCrea, meanwhile lending Louise Platt to Paramount. It may be expected that practically all of Wanger's contract players will be seen in films produced by other companies.

There is a tentative deal for Selznick to let Paramount use Tommy Kelly, and another which calls for Warners to have the services of Claire Trevor, from Twentieth Century-Fox.

For "Three Blind Mice," Twentieth Century-Fox is borrowing David Niven and Joel McCrea from Goldwyn and Stuart Erwin from MGM. It is also possible that MGM's Myrna Loy will be seen in a picture to be made by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Universal borrowed Helen Broderick from RKO for "The Rage of Paris," Rita Johnson from MGM for "Letter of Introduction," and Victor McLaglen from Twentieth Century-Fox, for "Hell's Kitchen."

Twentieth Century-Fox also lent Myrna Loy to MGM, for "Always Goodbye," and Claire Trevor to Warners for "Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse."

While borrowing and lending accounts for the major shifting of talent identities from one studio to another temporarily, there is another growing circumstance leading to a breakdown of studio contract identities. The high salaries which some "name" players demand, plus the dual assurances of the stars' financial security already established and the desire to pick their own parts, as well as the number of appearances they will make and the times they will work, are tempting many top ranking players to free-lance.

PARAMOUNT JOINS FOX IN BARRING PRODUCT FROM 'SEX' DOUBLE BILLS

Rider Will Be Attached to New Exhibition Contract Forms; MPPDA Lists Thirty "Sex Pictures" on Market

Paramount this week took action to prohibit the showing of its features on dual bill programs with pictures not conforming to the Production Code Administration regulations. It was the second large company to act; Twentieth Century-Fox announced a similar policy April 2nd at its sales convention.

Although contract forms for the 1938-'39 season already have been drafted by the Paramount legal department, the number of "sex films" launched on the market within the last few weeks caused Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of production, to decide to attach a contract rider, which will be designed to prohibit the mentioning of Paramount product in advertisements of sex films in addition to barring its films from double bills considered unfavorable to the company.

A. W. Smith, general sales manager of United Artists, said officials of his company probably would take the matter under consideration while forming plans for the company's convention. The other companies have given no indication of planning to join the movement although their opposition to sex films is reflected in their signatures to the Production Code, which also prohibits signatories from handling films not carrying a PCA seal. Members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., who operate theatres are governed by an additional clause, making it a violation to show films not approved by the Production Code Administration. The Advertising Code of Ethics parallels the Production Code. Under a resolution adopted July 3, 1934, the members agreed to levy a fine of $25,000 against any member found by the PCA to have violated the regulations.

The showing of sex films thus is barred in 1,200 to 2,000 houses, said an MPPDA executive, explaining that there are about 800 theatres affiliated with circuits but in which the circuits may not hold a controlling interest.

Mr. Agnew's assertion that there is a "wave" of questionable films was substantiated at the MPPDA offices where it was estimated that there are approximately thirty such films receiving widespread distribution now.

Included in the MPPDA list were:

ECSTASY	ELYSIA
CHILDREN OF LONELINESS	FORBIDDEN
ASSASSIN OF YOUTH (Marijuana)	LUCRETTIA BORGIA
GAMBLING WITH SOULS	BODY BEAUTIFUL
CRUSADE AGAINST RACKETS	SLAVES IN BONDAGE
LOVE LIFE OF A GORILLA	RACE SUICIDE
GUILTY PARENTS	SHAME
CLUB DE FEMMES	THE LASH
DAMAGED GOODS	STRANGE LOVERS
DAMAGED LIVES	SEVENTH COMMANDMENT
SEX MANIAC	THE PACE THAT KILLS
SEX MADNESS	SMASHING THE VICE TRUST SINS OF LOVE
	GIRLS FOR SALE

CONTRACT DISCUSSED BY MAUDE ADAMS

David O. Selznick is negotiating with Maude Adams for a contract which would mark the screen debut of the famous actress. Miss Adams' first role under the contract would be as the wealthy dowager in "The Young in Heart," adapted from I. A. R. Wylie's "The Gay Banditti."

Although many screen offers have been made to Miss Adams since her retirement from the stage in 1918, she has refused to consider the possibility of a film career until now. Her most celebrated role was as Peter Pan in Sir James Barrie's story. After her retirement she was associated with the late Charles P. Steinmetz in experimental work at the General Electric laboratories in Schenectady, and as a result of her work there she is credited with the development of several spotlight devices now in use in Hollywood.

"The Young in Heart" is to go before the cameras early in May, with Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard and Roland Young.

HOW TO UNDRRESS MOTHERHOOD BEFORE YOUR HUSBAND UNCIVILIZED UNASHAMED

The widespread publicity given the film "The Birth of a Baby," through the publication of stills in Life, picture magazine, brought an immediate increase in film advertisements containing such phrases as "actual scenes of a birth of a child," and "the widely discussed film that shows the birth of a baby," it was said at the MPPDA offices.

It was the listing of "Wee Willie Winkie," a Shirley Temple picture, in an ad with a sex film that made Twentieth Century-Fox resolve to halt the practice of dualing its films with sex pictures, according to the MPPDA office.

In another advertisement, a copy of which was received at the MPPDA offices, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" was listed as a coming attraction while the main portion of the ad, illustrated with a drawing of a woman in the nude, was devoted to a sex picture.

Mr. Agnew said the clause which will be used by Paramount has not been drawn up as yet. He added that while he had not seen a copy of the Twentieth Century-Fox clause he had heard about it, and Paramount's would be similar.

The Motion Picture Baseball League season opened Wednesday with Simplex, the International Projector team engaging Consolidated Film Industries at the George Washington High School field in New York. Other games to follow will be played on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, and on Saturday afternoons. League participants include RKO, MGM, Columbia, NBC and Skouras.

French "Invade" Schools of U.S.

The recent success of French films in the United States has proved to Hollywood producers that huge expenditures, elaborate sets and involved stories are not prerequisites to making productions attractive to America's theatre-going public, according to Paul-Charles Biver, head of the Paris office of French Motion Picture Corporation.

Mr. Biver is in the United States to help conduct a contest by his company among 700 high schools, colleges and universities.

Seated in his room at the Barbizon-Plaza hotel, New York City, Mr. Biver occasionally groped for the correct English word and then, with the precise pronunciation characteristic of foreigners, summed up:

"I have been in New York for two weeks and have seen five French films open here. That is something that never happened before."

"You have 85 million people attend your theatres every week," he murmured, indicating the number by a sweeping gesture of both hands. "If we could have only a small part of that audience, just that much,"—half-inch space between his thumb and index finger.

The French Motion Picture Company, with offices at No. 126 in 46th Street, New York, is a distributing concern, Mr. Biver pointed out.

Most of the company's business, he said, comes from renting films to high schools, colleges and universities for use in connection with French language classes. With 700 accounts already listed, Mr. Biver expressed confidence that within a year the French Motion Picture Company would be distributing pictures to 2,000 educational institutions.

Trans Lux Reports Salary Increases for Officers

An increase of $5,000 per year in the salary of Percival E. Furber, president, effective from January 1st, last, and making his salary $20,000 a year, was reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday by Trans Lux Corporation, news-reel theatre operators.

The company's annual report for 1937 showed that President Furber's total remuneration, including directors' fees, was $15,400. Percy N. Furber, chairman of the board, received $16,320, and Leslie E. Thompson, president of a subsidiary and a director, received $13,158.

There was no change in the securities of the company during the year, it was reported, and the only options outstanding were those given George H. Robinson and Harold P. Farrington for 10,000 shares of common stock, each, at $4 per share up to two years from June 25, 1936.

A previously published statement showed a 1937 net income of $211,909.66.

NEW MOVE AGAINST CHANCE GAMES WOULD REVOKE LICENSES OF USERS

Authorities in Ohio Sue Toledo Exhibitor on Ground Its Permit Authorizes Operation of Theatre Only

A brand new line of attack against chance games is in the making, in Ohio, where authorities are pushing a suit to take away licenses of theatres employing the game on the grounds that a theatre license gives authorization to operate a theatre only.

Victory for the authorities would be the third serious blow at the practice, following the United States Post Office Department's recent denial of the mails to Affiliated Enterprises' "Bank Night" scheme and the subsequent banning of "Bank Night" advertising on the air by the Federal Communications Commission, both rulings having been based on federal lottery statutes.

In addition, there have been dozens of anti-chance game rulings by city and state authorities and by courts in each instance.

Affiliated Enterprises is preparing a case to contest the Post Office ban of the mails. If the Postal ruling is upheld in federal courts on an appeal by Affiliated, the result could be a national prohibition of the use of the games, in view of the existence of a federal statute permitting the Department of Justice to act against interstate transportation of lottery material.

Affiliated is expected to file its action in the district court in Washington, D. C., asking for a restraining order against the Postal Department. Since issuance of the order, Affiliated has been compelled to transact its business by telegraph and by express money order.

Will Deny It's Lottery

John M. Keating, attorney in New York for Affiliated, says that in the appeal argument will be made that Bank Night is not a lottery, was not specifically declared a lottery in the Postal ruling and hence is not a violation of the Postal laws. The appeal also will hold that the findings are not based on the evidence and that the Solicitor General misconceived the law.

Edward Goldstein, New York distributor of Bank Night, holds that the Government, in the Postal ruling, is making a test of the entire legality of all chance games at theatres and merely selected Bank Night as "an example."

Meanwhile distributors of other types of games are reputedly concerned over the Postal ruling, feeling that it may result in a wave of actions against all games similar to or having the same results as Bank Night.

The Ohio Test Case

In the Ohio test case now pending, action is centered at Toledo, where Ralph W. Lawler, manager of the Paramount theatre; E. M. Jump, president of Keystone Press, Inc., and J. B. Rosenbaum, publisher of the Toledo Advertiser, were subpoenaed by County Prosecutor Thomas O'Connor to give depositions after the prosecutor filed a suit in the court of appeals for a writ of "quo warranto" which means the theatre will be required to show by what right it operates the "Bank Night" activities under its franchise from the state which authorizes it to operate only a theatre.

Mr. O'Connor indicated the suit had been brought against the Paramount theatre because

OTHER CHANCE GAME DEVELOPMENTS

Philadelphia common pleas court on Monday reserved decision on a lower court's ruling against chance games. The appeal was taken by Davis Malias, counsel for the Palm theatre. The appellate judges during the hearing declared several of Mr. Malias' arguments that the game was not a lottery were "subterfuges."

Connecticut's supreme court of errors has ruled that Bank Night is illegal and a violation of state lottery laws, sustaining the conviction by Judge Edward Quinlan, superior court, of Ernest Dorau, Middletown exhibitor. Seventy-five theatres in the state immediately discontinued chance games and giveaways.

New York's Constitutional Convention is expected to receive a resolution banning chance games throughout the state. In New York City, municipal courts sentenced operators of Bingo.

it was the first to introduce the practice to Toledo. The county will be guided in its attitude toward other theatres by the court's ruling in this case, he said.

A Gambler's Guarantee

The prosecutor contends the holding of Bank Nights is violation of the state lottery laws. It also was revealed at the courthouse that a Toledo gambler has been profiting from the "Bank Night" operations of theatres, entirely independently of the theatres themselves. For a registration fee, this gambler will guarantee payment of the "pot" to winner, whether or not he is present in the theatre at the time of the drawing.

Prosecutor O'Connor said the court has the power to disfranchise the company, which would force the theatre to close, or it can order the theatre operating concern to stop "Bank Nights" under penalty of disfranchisement. He said the action was the result of several months of preparation and followed conferences with John N. Edy, city manager, and Martin S. Dodd, city law director.

Mr. O'Connor said he took the action at the request of Mr. Edy, who considered the prosecutor the proper authority to take steps to halt the theatre practice.

Ticket Buyers Photographed

It was revealed that city detectives, at the direction of the prosecutor, had been gathering evidence for several months. A check was made of names registered with the theatre and photographs taken of persons purchasing the theatre tickets and registering, he said.

The prosecutor said more than 300,000 names had been registered on "Bank Night" books there.

The prosecutor cited three major points in court action: that the company has been "vending, selling and dispensing ticket orders and devices for and representing an interest in a lottery, policy and scheme of chance"; that it has established "account books and vendors for selling an interest in the lottery"; and that it has been "writing and printing accounts for a lottery and scheme of chance."

Mr. Lawler, manager of the Paramount theatre, said he intended to continue Bank Nights unless ordered by the court to halt. He contends Bank Nights belong to the same classification as an attendance prize at a bridge.

Circuit Names Staff Changes

E. E. Whitaker, for five years city manager of Lucas and Jenkins theatres in Atlanta and manager of the Fox theatre during that period, has been named district manager of the company. Hudson Edwards, former Atlantan, will return from service with the company in Savannah to assume managership of the Fox theatre in Atlanta. O. H. Bradbury, manager of the Georgia in Atlanta, will fill the position in Savannah vacated by Mr. Edwards.

Mr. Whitaker has been connected with theatre management for 15 years, having gone to Atlanta in 1931 from Charlotte, N. C., where he was city manager of the Carolina, State and Imperial theatres. Mr. Edwards joined the circuit shortly after his graduation from Georgia Tech in 1928. Mr. Bradbury began his services with the circuit in 1931 as an usher in the Georgia theatre. The offices of the company have been transferred from the Walton Building to the Fox theatre building in Atlanta.

Reorganization of Academy Is Voted

Reorganization of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been voted by the board of governors and executive committee. The five branches, actors, writers, directors, producers and technicians, will combine in two groups. The arts group will include actors, writers, directors and producers. The scientific group will include technical branches and miscellaneous eligibles.

Details of the reorganization will be worked out by a committee composed of W. S. Van Dyke, chairman; Major Nathan Levinson, Lionel Atwill, David O. Selznick, Frank Lloyd, Howard Estabrook and Grover Jones, with Frank Capra and Don Gledhill as ex-officio members.

Acquires Virginia Theatres

Davis and Urling, operators of small town theatres in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, has acquired the Murphy circuit of theatres in Virginia. The houses are located in Appalachia, Big Stone Gap, Norton, Clintwood, Gates City and Coeburn. Company headquarters is in Wellsville, Ohio.

Garner To Open Emanuel Theatre

John N. Garner, vice-president of the United States, will press the button that will open formally the new Senate theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., Friday. The Senate is operated by Jay Emanuel of Philadelphia.

SILVERSTONE HEADS MANAGEMENT OF UA; PRODUCT EXPANSION VOTED

Giannini Continues as President; Increased Profit-Sharing and Lower Distribution Terms to Attract Producers

The future of United Artists Corporation, in business for 19 years, appears to be set, along lines of general expansion in management, finances, operation and production availability. Thus the company establishes a defined course after a year of uncertainties due to possible changes in ownership.

Formal and official action to effect a reorganization of operation and management was started on Tuesday, when the board, opening a five-day series of meetings in New York, approved the appointment by Dr. A. H. Giannini, president and board chairman, of Murray Silverstone as chairman of the executive committee, in charge of operations.

Elimination of reputed dissensions appears to have been accomplished by increasing profit-sharing, and more favorable terms of distribution to encourage affiliation of independent producers with the company will be adopted to expand future feature programs.

Dr. Giannini continues as president. He also has been the nominal operating head of the company, but in view of his continued residence in California, away from distribution and home office operations, Mr. Silverstone is taking charge of management and operations in New York with the other members of the executive committee, including George J. Schaefer, who is vice-president and general manager of distribution in United States and Canada; Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president in charge of exchange operations; Harry J. Muller, treasurer. Presumably Mr. Silverstone will handle many of Dr. Giannini's duties.

Mr. Silverstone, who is managing director of United Artists Corporation, Ltd., the English branch of the American company, will continue to hold that position, removing his headquarters to New York. He will spend several months each year in London. While in New York, Mr. Silverstone's present assistants will act for him, George Archibald handling British executive functions and Teddy Carr supervising sales.

A New Post

Mr. Silverstone's position is a new one, the executive committee having operated without a chairman since its inception more than a year ago. Operating and management matters not handled by respective departments will continue to be the affairs of the committee, and settled or adjusted, as heretofore, by majority opinion.

Having completed plans for the new operating policy at conferences in London, directors of the company returned to New York on Monday, including Samuel Goldwyn, Mary Pickford, Alexander Korda, David Rose, Goldwyn financial advisor, Maurice Silverstone and Edward J. Raftery, U. A. attorney. Conferences resulting in Mr. Silverstone's appointment followed on Tuesday, and immediately he left for California to confer with Dr. Giannini to work out the final details. Douglas Fairbanks also attended the London conference.

A dividend was declared by UA directors at their Tuesday meeting.

Under the new policy, United Artists "will provide for greatly reduced cost of distribution to producers (both member producers and any others) who, in turn, will thus further participate in the profits of the parent company according to their individual contributions," said a statement from the home office on Monday. "It is believed that this new method of operation will make the company particularly attractive to other independent producers who are seeking world-wide distribution."

Mr. Goldwyn, on shipboard Monday, indicated that this new arrangement was intended to attract additional producers to United Artists, and that this, and lowered distribution costs in the United Kingdom, were designed to "encourage British production," intimating that Mr. Korda's contributions from London would be even more important than in the past.

The United Artists feature schedule will continue at 24 to 28 a season.

The home office on Tuesday emphatically denied the reported "probable retirement" of Dr. Giannini after the reconstruction of management and policy. Dr. Giannini, head of the Bank of American National Association and one of Hollywood's most active motion picture financiers, was elected to the United Artists presidency one year ago. He will continue at the company's nominal headquarters in Hollywood, but the center of actual distribution operations will remain in New York, as heretofore.

Although still to be voted upon, the chief points of the revised arrangements, all retroactive to January 1st, provide that 50 per cent of United Artists' net earnings during the current year are to be distributed to the company's producer-owners in proportion to the returns of their pictures; the remaining 50 per cent to be shared equally by the five stock-owning partners: Samuel Goldwyn, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Alexander Korda and Douglas Fairbanks. Pickford, Chaplin and Fairbanks have been in virtual retirement for some time and there are no signs of their emerging. Other important contributing producers to the company, both non-owners, are David Selznick (Selznick International) and Walter Wanger.

Mr. Korda, who preceded the UA group to

New York from London, arriving last Thursday, said certain "problems of management" still are to be adjusted, but, as partners, according to Samuel Goldwyn, "United Artists is now definitely united." Besides making more money for the partners, the new arrangement will be an impetus to independent producers seeking a distribution outlet, he added.

To Include Financing Producers

An elaboration of the extent to which the company aims to create interest among independent producers for affiliation with United Artists was made by Mr. Silverstone, who said that the expansion in this connection will even include financing producers, such as the company's 50 per cent financing of Walter Wanger's pictures. With the exception of Mr. Wanger, UA's policy has been set against financing outsiders.

Miss Pickford, on shipboard, said that a larger number of pictures for United Artists than heretofore was the immediate aim, adding that Dr. Giannini already has started negotiations in Hollywood with prospective producer affiliations. Ernst Lubitsch, who has terminated his producing relationship with Paramount, was mentioned as a likely candidate.

Mr. Goldwyn said that the next year will see "more independent production and a greater market for it than ever before."

Korda's Eight "A's"

Mr. Korda said he probably would make eight pictures for the coming season for release in the United States at a total cost of $8,000,000. All the pictures, he said, definitely would be in the "A" class.

Mr. Korda said he was distressed over the reduced box-office grosses in this country, that British film attendance has increased from 10 to 12 per cent over last year. He estimated UA's revenue in England as 35 per cent of the total.

He said that Miss Pickford plans to make "The Bat" at the Denham studios this summer. Miss Pickford told reporters that she plans to make a film in England starring Buddy Rogers, her husband.

Mr. Korda said he plans to discuss a possible deal with Irving Asher, former British production head for Warners.

The new policy brings into effect as well, changes urged by Darryl Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck as early as 1931, which, when they failed to materialize at that time, led to the withdrawal of 20th Century from United Artists.

Mr. Goldwyn explained that the stockholders gave a formal vote of confidence to Oscar Deutsch for his management of the Odeon circuit, which comprises 340 theatres and in which U. A. has a 50 per cent interest.

He refused to discuss prospects for a continued affiliation with UA by David O. Selznick beyond his present contract, indicating nothing has been agreed upon. It was said, however, that in view of the new arrangements, Mr. Selznick may increase his present commitment from two to four more pictures than he delivered to UA last year. Apart from this possible increase, Mr. Selznick will fulfill his existing contract by delivering two films.

United Artists is ready to finance Selznick International pictures it was disclosed Wednesday.

Expansion of United Artists on the continent was disclosed by Mr. Silverstone. He said UA had purchased a substantial interest in Artisti Associati of Rome which will make three Italian films and two in French at a cost of $100,000 each, not for the United States.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Only Six Start

For weeks ironclad assurances have been flung about that intensive production would start any day now. But a cog must have slipped somewhere in the past week, or the town paused to get its second wind after last week's flurry, as only six pictures were started. Had not Twentieth Century-Fox found it convenient to start three, the schedules would have looked dreary indeed.

In two of the new pictures of the Westwood Hills studio, two leading box office stars will be seen. "Lucky Fanny," a modernized version of "Sunny Side Up" and what probably will be as different from the original as is "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," will star Shirley Temple. Bill Robinson, George Barbier, Benny Bartlett, Franklin Pangborn, Bert Lahr, Joan Davis and Charles Farrell will be in the supporting cast. The eighth ranking star, Sonja Henie, will return to picture making activity in "They Met in College." Richard Greene has the opposite lead and George Barbier heads the support. The third production, "Always Goodbye," will present Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Cesar Romero, Ian Hunter, Binnie Barnes and Lynn Bari.

Monogram started preliminary work on "Romance of the Limberlost." Jean Parker and Eric Linden will be featured.

At the same time, RKO-Radio started "The Fortuneers," with Alan Lane and Frances Mercer as the leads.

Universal gave the Trem Carr production, "Wheels of Destiny," the starting gun. Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds and Carlyle Moore are the principals.

20th Century-Fox Completes Four

The list of pictures finished tells a different story, as it marks 14 off the active list. It's a diversified list and one that should give exhibitors more than a little confidence.

Twentieth Century-Fox completed four films. Name power as well as unique story and production detail should make "Alexander's Ragtime Band" of more than ordinary importance. Built around the song writing accomplishments of Irving Berlin, it will present Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche (the "In Old Chicago" trio) with Ethel Merman, Jack Haley, Jean Hersholt, Helen Westley, Wally Vernon, John Carradine, Douglas Forley, Ruth Terry, Paul Hurst, Chick Chandler and Eddie Collins. The stars of "Josette" are Don Ameche and Simone Simon. Robert Young, Bert Lahr, Joan Davis, Paul Hurst, William Collier, Sr., Tala Birell and Jayne Regan also will be seen. Naturally, Peter Lorre is the central figure in "Mysterious Mr. Moto." Others in the cast are Mary Maguire, Henry Wilcoxon, Erik Rhodes, Harold Huber, Leon Ames, Forrester Harvey and Fredrik Vogeding. The fourth film, "One Wild Night" (formerly titled "Time Out for Murder"), will present June Lang, Dick Baldwin, Andrew Tombes, Sidney Toler, J. Edward Bromberg and Lyle Talbot.

MGM removed two productions from the active schedule. "Hold that Kiss" will offer Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Fay Holden, Mickey Rooney, Frank Albertson and Ruth Hussey as its principal personnel. Luise Rainer, Academy Award winner, is the star of "The Toy Wife." The supporting company lists Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara Little Billy, Jed Buell, producer; Johnny Winters, and Lady Little signing contracts for "The Terror of Tiny Town," with an all-midget cast.

O'Neil, H. B. Warner, Alma Kruger, Libby Taylor, Theresa Harris, Walter Kingsford, Clarence Muse and Margaret Irving.

Universal Finishes Two

Two pictures were finished at Universal. After bearing a succession of titles, the Borden Chase story, "Hell's Kitchen Has a Pantry," finally reached the finishing wire as "The Devil's Party." It will offer Victor McLaglen, Paul Kelly, William Gargan, John Gallaudet, Beatrice Roberts, Joe Downing, Frank Jenks, Ed Gargan and David Oliver. The character identifying prelude will feature Mickey Rentschler, Tommy Bupp, Scotty Beckett, Dickey Jones and Juanita Quigley. The serial "Flaming Frontiers" was finished, too. It features Johnny Mack Brown, Eleanor Hansen, Ralph Bowman, Eddie Waller and Charles Middleton.

Columbia finished two. "State Patrol" will present Robert Paige, Jacqueline Wells, Robert Middlemass, Arthur Loft, Al Bridge, Eddie Foster, Ann Doran and George McKay. The cast of "Valley of Violence," Larry Darmour production, contains Jack Luden, Joan Barclay, Slim Whitaker, Hal Taliaferro, Leon Beaumont and Marion Sais.

Two more were marked off the schedule at Grand National. "Renfrew Rides North" will feature Jimmy Newill and Terry Walker. "Trail's West" has Ken Maynard and Ruth Findley.

"The Muddled Deal" was finished at RKO-Radio. Joan Fontaine and English actor Derrick deMarney play the leads, with Cecil Kellaway, Lillian Bond, Cecil Cunningham, Robert Coote, Olaf Mytten, Claude Allister, Ann Shaw and John Sutton also involved.

Republic completed action on "Gangs of New York." The cast includes Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Alan Baxter, Wynne Gibson, Harold Huber, John Wray, Maxie Rosenbloom, Willard Robertson, Robert Gleckler, Jonathan Hale and Fred Kohler, Jr.

All-Midget Western

A gathering of the tiny clan started in Hollywood this week when the first of more than 200 midgets to be employed in an all-midget musical western picture "The Terror of Tiny Town," were signed by Jed Buell and his associate, Abe Meyer.

The midgets are being assembled by Buell productions from all over the world. Within two weeks fourteen will arrive from Hawaii and more are coming from New York, Boston, Chicago, Atlanta and other cities. First to be signed were Little Billy, Lady Little, Johnny Winters, Johnny Leo, Marie Winters, John Bamburg, Charlotte Sullivan, Pewee Johnson and Billy Platt.

"The Terror of Tiny Town" will be made with the wee folk playing roles ordinarily depicted by western actors in a typically western story, and will be a travesty on the Tom Mix, Buck Jones, Gene Autry and Fred Scott musical outdoor pictures.

Series Pictures

Once all alone in their field, the "Charlie Chans" now find themselves crowded in the series-character or series-story realm of production technique. Two or three years ago Twentieth Century-Fox launched the "Jones Family," then titled "The American Family" idea, and simultaneously Harry Sherman embarked upon the production of Clarence Mulford's "Hopalong Cassidy" stories.

The amazing popularity and profit which accrued to these series pictures quickly sent rival producers searching. Republic launched the "Three Mesquiteer" series, Warner Bros. evolved the "Torchy Blane" idea, Twentieth Century-Fox adopted J. P. Marquand's "Mr. Moto," Paramount joined the parade with "Bulldog Drummond," and MGM created "Judge Hardy."

Expensive production has continued with Paramount's "Big Broadcasts" and "Collegiate" musicals and another "Artists and Models," with MGM's "Broadway Melody," the "Thin Man," the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy operettas, and Warners' "The Goldiggers."

Indications are that the coming season will see seven more series pictures joining the eight already established. Twentieth Century-Fox is experimenting with two ideas. One is to be titled "The All American Girl," with June Lang tentatively slated for the title spot; the second is to be known as the "Star Reporter" series. MGM has definite intentions of going ahead with an idea for the "Newlyweds." At Universal they are casting about for stories for a "College Campus" series, and Warner Bros. has assigned Ronald Regan to the leading role in its "Secret Service" series. As companion pieces to the "Hopalong Cassidy's" Harry Sherman will produce a series of Zane Grey yarns. Sol Lesser, who has surrendered his rights to "Tarzan" to MGM, is considering a "Peck's Bad Boy" series.

Bread or Doughnuts, Blumberg Aims Flexible Product at Public Demand

Nate Blumberg, Universal president, on Wednesday suddenly interrupted Hollywood studio conferences and flew to New York in response to a telephone call from J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman, to confer on new product. He left word at the studio that he would return Monday.

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
in Hollywood

"One day they're buying bread, next day they all want doughnuts, so how's anybody going to know what they'll be clamoring for next week?"

Stocky, sturdy Nate Blumberg answers questions with questions. That's because his first 10 weeks as president of Universal, start of a five-year stint, have exposed him to such a grilling, offstage and on, as few men charged with less than murder are called upon to face. They haven't charged him with that, yet, but they're full of interrogation.

Nate Blumberg is steel grey and seasoned, but unseamed at 44. Steel in those bulky biceps, too, but he smiles easily. He could be a wrestler, the chunky, bulldoggish kind the Jiu Jitsui phenoms don't toss around much. Hollywood's catch-as-catch-can champs haven't won a fall to date. He's thrown a many.

Nobody Knows

This morning Nate Blumberg is told 16,320 subscribers of MOTION PICTURE HERALD want to know what a man whose 20 years in the industry have been spent in the exhibition branch thinks about after he takes over the presidency of a major company, and what's he's going to do about it. He is told they don't care particularly who's going to be fired or hired or who the new prexy likes to go out to lunch with, but are in the mood for an inkling of the policies he intends to install and the program level he has chosen for his product groove.

It's this crack about levels and grooves that evokes the one about bread and doughnuts. And it's the public, not exhibitors, he's referring to. He says nobody knows or can know today what kind of pictures will be in greatest demand tomorrow—any today and any tomorrow. So he isn't going to try to answer that one, nor in the product announcement due in a fortnight or so. But he is going to try to answer it during the coming season—not all at once, but in takes, as it comes—in terms of product adjusted to the whimsical public appetite for bread, doughnuts, corn bread or cream puffs.

Flexibility is the Blumberg policy for Universal. There will be light pictures and heavy, big and not quite so big. All will be exploitation pictures and he wishes they might all be "A's," but he nurtures no illusions about repealing the law of averages. They will be built for big theatres and little, but primarily for the public of the moment as he has come to know it from the hard side of the wicket.

Flexibility is being built into the Universal studio. Only this morning several veterans departed the premises. Nearly every day new ones move in. Hollywood calls the process "a shakeup." The president simply says there was overlapping, accrued duplication, which made for neither efficiency, imperative in a period of sagging grosses, nor flexibility, the thing he thinks a studio needs more now and always.

Huddles on Product

Earnest huddles in behalf of further streamlining are on the agenda for this weekend when William Scully and Joseph Seidelman, general and foreign sales managers, arrive to rig up the 1938-39 selling policy. The president doesn't expect it to be changed much, possibly made a little more flexible. John Joseph, director of advertising and publicity, will be here also, and the matter of transferring advertising and publicity headquarters here will be gone into.

The president says it's been discussed and he's for it, thinks publicity evolved on the set can be geared more accurately to product necessarily in daily revision.

Yes, there are some mechanical considerations to be explored. They will be.

Nate Blumberg says there's a new flexibility in programing of pictures, too. More and more showmen are holding over big pictures in preference to setting in merely good ones. This involves shelving. That helps many exhibitors who are, by limitation of sources, chronically in need of product. Nate Blumberg despises neither type of theatre. Both represent revenue. Universal will neglect neither.

Jerry Mayer Named MGM Studio Head

Jerry G. Mayer, brother of Louis B. Mayer, has been named by E. J. Mannix as studio manager at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He supplants William Koenig, whose contract with the company is still in force.

Mr. Mayer in the past has been head of the studio purchasing department and he will continue to direct that division.

Colonel Francisco Urrutia, minister of education for Ecuador, has lifted the ban there on "The Life of Emile Zola."

Testimonial Dinner Given Jack Byrne

A testimonial dinner was tendered Jack Byrne, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager in New Haven, Monday, on the occasion of his promotion as manager of the MGM Boston exchange. Harry F. Shaw was toastmaster. Barney Pitkin was chairman.

The motion picture, radio and television rights to the title "Ziegfeld Follies" have been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from Lee Shubert, producer, and Billie Burke, widow of Florenz Ziegfeld.

Pathe Elects Loach To Vice-Presidency

The post of vice-president of Pathe Film Corporation was filled Wednesday by the election of T. P. Loach by the directors. The office has been vacant. Mr. Loach formerly was secretary and also treasurer. He was reelected to the latter post and is succeeded by M. M. Malone as secretary. O. Henry Briggs was reelected president and A. F. Schwarz, assistant secretary.

Louis Philips of the law firm of Philips and Nizer was elected a member of the board at the annual stockholders' meeting preceding the directors' session. Gurdon W. Wattles, associated with White, Weld and Company, investment bankers, was elected a director to replace Charles B. Wiggin. Directors elected were Henry J. Guild, Robert M. McKinney, Charles A. Stone, Robert R. Young and Messrs. Briggs, Wattles and Philips. Frank Kolbe, former Pathe executive, retired from the board.

Peskey Says GN Will Deliver 75% of List

Grand National will deliver approximately 75 per cent of the pictures sold during the current season. Edward J. Peskey, vice-president in charge of distribution, said on his arrival in Hollywood Tuesday. Fifty salesmen are to be employed immediately to sell 36 features for the new season, he added.

Mr. Peskey will confer with Edward Alperson and Loyd Wright, co-trustees in the reorganization of Grand National. He said that reorganization of the company under Section 77B of the bankruptcy act was proceeding smoothly and a series of meetings are scheduled later this week, at which time plans to be submitted to the United States district court will be formulated. A possible sales convention to be held in Hollywood next month is also under consideration.

Tasker Out in Universal Studio Realignment Move

In the course of general changes in the Universal studio setup commencing with the Hollywood arrival of Nate J. Blumberg, president, for the purpose of gearing the production machinery to the rapidly fluctuating box-office requirements Homer G. Tasker, head of the sound department, has resigned and his post has been taken by Bernard B. Brown, pre-recording department head, who will consolidate both departments.

Harry Zehner, holding the censorship contact position, and Gil Kurland, business manager of the music department, have both left the lot. John Steinberg, operating the studio commissary, will leave to devote his entire time to the management of the Victor Hugo Cafe.

ASCAP Law Decision Appealed

The state of Florida has appealed to the United States supreme court from a three-judge Federal court ruling recently issued in New Orleans holding unconstitutional Florida's law prohibiting the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers from collecting fees for use of controlled musical numbers by radio stations, theatres and others. The Federal court temporarily enjoined enforcement of the Florida law.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Algiers

(United Artists - Wanger)

Melodrama

While the title and the locale might suggest a Foreign Legion theme, "Algiers" essentially is a cops and robbers story. Most of the action takes place in an Algiers district known as Casbah, a sanctuary for criminals. Within those bounds takes place a battle of wits and intrigue, with a danger menaced romance which moves to suspense, melodrama, action and thrills which promises one of the most interesting pieces of screen merchandise in some time. Non-formula in concept, it is being produced in a style which Walter Wanger believes will set it entirely apart. In the climax is expected a bewildering surprise.

The leading role, of the world's most skillful jewel thief and most wanted criminal, is being played by Charles Boyer, whose latest films are "Conquest" and "Tovarich." The two women most important in the action have been very much in the public eye. Sigrid Gurie was featured in "The Adventures of Marco Polo." Hedy Lamarr, brought to this country by MGM and borrowed by Wanger, was the leading light in the controversial "Ecstasy."

In other roles will be Alan Hale, Joseph Calleia, Gene Lockhart, Stanley Fields, Joan Woodbury, Johnny Downs, Claudia Dell, Bert Roach, Robert Greig, Nina Koshetz, Luana Watters, Charles D. Brown, Leonard Kinsky, Walter Kingsford, Paul Harvey and Armand Kaliz.

Based on a Continental story and play, the American transcription was made by John Howard Lawson and the work is being directed by John Cromwell, who made "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Release date: To be determined.

The Land of Fighting Men

(Monogram)

Musical Western

To a great many theatre-goers, particularly those who patronize the smaller houses, no screen entertainment promises so much as the outdoor adventure picture, chockful of heroism and villainy and including musical interludes.

"The Land of Fighting Men" is modeled to that pattern.

Jack Randall, Monogram's singing cowboy, seen in "Danger Valley," "Where the West Begins" and "Riders of the Dawn," is the hero. Louise Stanley is the girl. Herman Brix, a one time "Tarzan" and now western player, is the third principal. Dickie Jones, Bob Burns, Wheeler Oakman, John Merton, Lane Chandler and Rex Lease, all of whom have appeared in scores of outdoor productions, are the support. Choral music will be provided by the Colorado Hillbillies, popular on radio and in films, and now making personal appearances.

A Maurice Conn production, the original story is by Stanley Roberts, who did "Where the West Begins" and "Valley of Terror." The screen play is credited to Joseph O'Donnell, who has collaborated often with Roberts. Music numbers were composed by Edward Cherkose and Charles Rosoff and Connie Lee. The picture is being directed by Alan James, who has handled many similar productions.

Release date: May 13, 1938.

Alexander's Ragtime Band

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Memories

Thirty years ago there was a singing waiter in "Nigger Mike" Salter's place in New York's Bowery. Around the corner a friend of his worked in a drug store. They're Irving Berlin and Joseph M. Schenck, and a song that made Mr. Berlin famous is now the title of a motion picture rapidly nearing completion in Mr. Schenck's 20th Century-Fox studio.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" is not going to be a story of two men, but of Berlin's music, from three decades ago through the war period, prohibition, prosperity and depression to date. Romantic, melodramatic and comic episodes will be built around 30 or more of Berlin's hit songs. Among the numbers will be the title song which opens the piece, "All Alone," "Remember," "Oh! How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," "Blue Skies," "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" and three new swing numbers composed for the picture. Production detail will carry from San Francisco to New York, London, Paris and into Carnegie Hall. There will be 105 sets and more than 7,000 extras. The cast will include Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley, Helen Westley, Jean Hersholt, Wally Vernon, John Carradine, Douglas Fowley, Chick Crandler, Paul Hurst and many other favorites.

Henry King, maker of "In Old Chicago," is the director, and the spectacular dance ensembles are being staged by Seymour Felix. Darryl Zanuck is giving the production his personal attention.

Release date to be determined.

Shopworn Angel

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A Tarnished Lady

Ever since the screen discovered it was a story telling medium, "tarnished ladies" have supplied some of its greatest characterizations and best successes. "Stella Dallas," "Sadie McKee," "Possessed" and "Chained" are illustrative. These usually have combined an indicative title of showmanship value, a compelling story and strong cast.

Producer Joseph Mankiewicz, maker of "Fury," "The Gorgeous Hussy," "Double Wedding," "Mannequin" and "Three Comrades," assigned as director H. C. Potter, who did "Beloved Enemy" and "Romance in the Dark," and chose Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart and Walter Pidgeon for the principal roles. The cast includes Hattie McDaniel, Charles D. Brown, Jimmy Butler, Eleanor Lynn, Hudson Shotwell, Harry Tyler, Mary Howard, Virginia Gray and Roger Converse.

The story is an original by Dana Burnett which carried the title "Private Pettigrew's Girl" when it appeared in Saturday Evening Post. While there is a serious human interest keynote, substantiating effects include much comedy, music, dancing and spectacle.

Thematically it treats the experiences of a hard-boiled, gold-digging New York chorus girl, her sugar daddy paramour and a rookie soldier in whom she finds a kind of love she did not know existed.

Release date to be determined.

One Wild Night

(20th Century-Fox)

Wild and Thrilling

While comedy and romance will be accented in this forthcoming production, it oddly enough will be a semi-mystery crime picture in which there will be no murders, no missing bodies to find and consequently no clues to follow. Nevertheless, there will be plenty of action, thrills and chills.

A prominent small town citizen disappears and the police are baffled. The police chief's son, attending a criminology school, decides he has been sufficiently trained. He meets a pretty but not very bright newspaper woman who, throughout the action, succeeds only in getting in the way. She does, however, blunder into the kidnaper's hideout, from which point the picture builds to its riotous finale.

The featured players are June Lang, in the role of the blundering reporter, and Dick Baldwin, in "Mr. Moto's Gamble." The principal support lists Lyle Talbot as the suave suspect, J. Edward Bromberg and Sidney Toler, about whom much of the incidental comedy centers.

The original idea was provided by Edwin D. Torgerson, and the screen play was completed by Charles Belden and Jerry Cady. Both have collaborated on several "Mr. Moto" and "Charlie Chan" pictures and are specialists in developing comedy mystery yarns. The director, Eugene Forde, has handled a couple of "Chans."

Release date: May 27, 1938 (tentative).

The Toy Wife

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A Love Story

"The Toy Wife" is a melodramatic story of gaiety, folly, tragedy and sacrifice in the beautiful settings of New Orleans and Louisiana plantations in the 1850's. The heroine is a headstrong belle, coquette and romantic renegade, who wears the responsibilities of marriage and motherhood lightly.

MGM chose for the title role Luise Rainer, winner of the best actress award of the Academy in two consecutive years, to play the title role. Her appearance in "The Great Ziegfeld," "The Good Earth" and "Big City" have made her familiar to exhibitors and theatre goers. The two men in her life are Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young, previously co-featured in "She Met Him in Paris." The supporting cast will present H. B. Warner ("The Lost Horizon") and "The Girl of the Golden West"), Barbara O'Neil ("Stella Dallas"), Alma Kruger, Libby Taylor, Theresa Harris, Walter Kingsford, Clinton Rosemon, Clarence Muse, Leonard Penn and Margaret Irving.

As "Mlle. Frou Frou," the play enjoyed much success on the stage a generation or more ago. While all the essence is being retained, modern touches have been incorporated into the screen play by Zoe Akins, whose credits include "Camille," "Outcast Lady" and "Morning Glory." It is being made under the guidance of Merian C. Cooper, who was responsible for "Little Women" and "Morning Glory" as well as "Grass" and "Chang." Direction is in the hands of Richard Thorpe, whose latest picture is "The First Hundred Years."

Release date, June 3, 1938.

HIGH COURT DELAYS DALLAS RULING; MOMAND'S CHARGES UNDER FIRE

United States Supreme Bench Sends Conspiracy Suit Back to Texas District Court for Further Fact-Finding

The Government's Texas conspiracy case against large distributors was sent back to the Texas district court this week by the United States supreme court for further fact-finding.

Implying a rebuke to the lower federal court, the action by the supreme court is at least a temporary gain for distributors, delaying any action by the high tribunal in Washington until next fall, in view of the impending supreme court recess, in June.

It was the first litigation ever to reach the highest court involving motion picture trade practices and a film anti-trust matter, and was to have determined the right of distributors contractually to govern the dual billing of their pictures and the admissions under which their films are to be shown.

Specifically, final decision was delayed by the supreme court when it instructed Judge William Atwell, of the federal district court at Dallas to render a proper decision in conformity with established rules of equity practice, holding the lower court with omission in violation of Equity Rule No. 70½. The defendants must re-submit their appeal to the supreme court based on Judge Atwell's new decree.

Two Present Minority Opinion

While six members of the court joined in the implied rebuke to the Texas tribunal, Justices Stone and Black, while admitting that the lower court decision was informal, contended it was sufficient and urged that the case should be decided without further delay, particularly "because of the public interest involved." Justice Cardozo took no part in the decision.

"The court made no formal findings," the majority decision pointed out. "The court did not find the facts specifically and state separately its conclusions of law as the rule required. The statements in the decree that in making the restrictive agreements the parties had engaged in an illegal conspiracy were but ultimate conclusions and did not dispense with the necessity of properly formulating the underlying findings of fact."

"The opinion of the court was not a substitute for the required findings. A discussion of portions of the evidence and the court's reasoning in its opinion do not constitute the special and formal findings by which it is the duty of the court appropriately and specifically to determine all the issues which the case presents. This is an essential aid to the appellate court in reviewing an equity case and compliance with the rule is particularly important in an anti-trust case which comes to this court by direct appeal from the trial court."

Because of the deficiencies of the lower court decision, the supreme court, although it heard argument on all the points involved, refused to render any opinion as to the merits of the case, although commenting "they point the importance of special and adequate findings in accordance with the prescribed equity practice."

The Texas anti-trust suit, initiated by the Government in December, 1936, named as defendants Paramount, Vitagraph (Warners), RKO, Columbia, United Artists, Universal, M-G-M, Twentieth Century-Fox, M-G-M of

PUBLICITY PROMISED ON ANTI-TRUST DATA

Thurman Arnold, successor to Robert H. Jackson as assistant attorney general in the Department of Justice in charge of anti-trust matters, speaking at the annual banquet of the Trade and Commerce Bar Association of New York, said he believed the department should make public its reasons for selecting a particular situation for prosecution in order that business men might have both "guides and warnings in a field which is admittedly as uncertain in definition as the conception of reckless driving on the highway."

The Texas anti-trust suit brought against distributors and two circuits represents the application of a new policy of basing Government prosecutions upon the results rather than on the intent of competitive practices adopted by industries, Mr. Arnold said.

Texas, Twentieth Century-Fox of Texas, Interstate Circuit, Inc., and Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., and Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell.

The Government sought an injunction against the carrying out of an alleged conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce between the distributors and the exhibitors named as respondents. The restraint was alleged to consist in provisions in license agreements which prevented any of the distributors' features, which had been shown first-run by one of the chains at an admission price of 40 cents or more, from thereafter being exhibited in the same locality at an admission price of less than 25 cents or as part of a double-feature bill.

The distributors defended their practices as being privileges granted by the copyright laws for the owner of a copyright to determine the conditions under which his work could be publicly performed and contended the restrictions had no injurious effect.

Orange Circuit Files Details

Orange County Theatres, Inc., this week filed a 147-page bill of particulars setting forth its claim in detail in connection with its anti-trust suit in the United States District Court in New York. Defendants are Eugene Levy, George Walsh, Netco Theatres Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Joseph Lee, Big U Film Exchange, RKO Radio Pictures, and United Artists. Orange charges a "conspiracy" in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Act to prevent it from obtaining film.

Ritchey Survives Plane Crash

Norton V. Ritchey, manager of Monogram's export department, was among the survivors of the plane which was forced down and sank in the Caribbean on Monday, he cabled the home office from Kingston Tuesday. He is expected in New York Saturday.

Defense in Momand's Anti-Trust Actions Asks Court to Strike Out Charges of Conspiracy and Price Fixing

Attorneys for the defendants in two Federal anti-trust suits filed by A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Oklahoma exhibitor, against large distributors, producers and theatre circuits, have asked the United States district court for the Western District of Oklahoma to strike from the files Mr. Momand's petition filed March 19th in which he charges the defendants conspired to form a monopoly and to fix prices, thereby obtaining such a control of independent exhibitors that they would not operate.

Keaton, Wells and Johnston, defendant attorneys, ask dismissal of suit on grounds that present Momand suits are based on the same causes of action set forth in Momand's previous unsuccessful $4,000,000 suit against Paramount, et al., which action was dismissed without prejudice April 8, 1937, on questions of pleading.

Defendant attorneys representing 20th Century-Fox and seven other companies in one suit and Griffith Amusement Company and 11 other companies in the other suit now ask dismissal of the two suits on the ground that in the Paramount case the defendants filed a motion to strike out various parts of the petition and ask that other parts of the petition be made more definite and certain and that the courts sustained this motion and thereupon Momand notified the court he would make no effort to plead further to comply with the court's order. Defendant attorneys claim that Momand's present suits disregard the court's order as to pleading and Momand should not be permitted to file a petition disregarding the former orders of the United States district court as proper pleading of same charges on action between the same parties.

Momand is asking damages totaling $6,636,632 from 20 motion picture producing, distributing and exhibiting corporations charging violations of the Federal anti-trust laws.

Seven causes of action listing alleged instances of conspiracy and formation of monopolies were outlined in the 20th Century-Fox suit, totaling $1,676,119. Fourteen causes of action were listed in the Griffith Amusement Company suit, totaling $4,461,012.

The original suits against Paramount were filed in Oklahoma City in April, 1931, and after lengthy litigation were dismissed in July, 1936. An appeal to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver resulted in a reversal of action of the Federal Court at Oklahoma City. The Appeals Court ordered dismissal without prejudice which allowed renewal of the suit after technical changes in the petition.

Defendants in the present suit, besides 20th Century-Fox, include Fox Film, Loew's, Vitagraph, RKO, Universal, RKO Distributing Corporation and United Artists. Defendants in the suit against Griffith Amusement also include Consolidated Amusement Company, Consolidated Theatres, Paramount Pictures, Publix Theatres, First National, Warner Brothers' Theatres, Vitaphone, Pathe Exchange, Educational Film and Warner Brothers' Pictures.

In the suit against Griffith, et al., Regal Theatres, Inc., through their attorneys, Ernest McKenzie and Gibbons, in a special appearance, objected to jurisdiction of the court and claimed that the summons was not issued according to law.

REPUBLIC ANNOUNCES 55 FEATURES, 4 SERIALS, TO COST $7,500,000

All Franchise Holders Will Join Field and Home Forces in Convention Starting in Hollywood Monday

Republic Pictures' new season program of 55 features, including 24 westerns, and four serials, will be outlined Monday to the 200 attending the company's third annual convention in Hollywood. A four-day meeting, closing with the annual product banquet on Thursday night, is to be held on Stage Four of the company's studios in North Hollywood.

Republic's ambitious program for the 1938-'39 season is topped off by four "Anniversary Specials," 12 "Jubilees" and 15 "Showmen's Money-Makers." The first group will be top budget attractions with "name" stars.

All Republic franchise holders, branch managers, salesmen and bookers in the United States and Canada, and studio executives will attend the convention, with the following from the home office:

H. J. Yates, Sr., James R. Grainger, G. C. Schaefer, Al Adams, Morris Goodman, J. J. Coffman, William M. Saal, Sam Hacker, Leonard Sills, W. W. Vincent, Jack Bellman, Harry LaVine, Max Roth, Heck Everett and G. C. Parsons.

$7,500,000 Budgeted

Mr. Yates said this week in New York, prior to leaving for the coast, that the company has budgeted $7,500,000 for the 55 pictures and four serials. This is a budgetary increase over the current year, and approximates an average of $135,000 a unit.

The company's earnings for the current year will be reported after June 30th, when the fiscal year ends, Mr. Yates said, adding that recent weeks have been the best since the company started.

Autry Heads Western Program

Gene Autry, for the third year, heads a program of 24 westerns with eight pictures. There will be eight based on ideas by William Colt MacDonald and featuring the "Three Mesquiteers"; eight "All-Star" westerns, featuring Roy Rogers and Smiley Burnette.

The four serials include a third edition of Dick Tracy titled "Dick Tracy's G-Men."

Heading the company stars or players on a special picture basis are Gloria Swanson, Ramon Novarro, James Gleason, Alison Skipworth, Polly Moran, Gene Autry, Frieda Inescort, Neil Hamilton, Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette, Lew Ayres, John Wayne, Helen Mack, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune.

James Cruze, John Auer, James Gleason, Jack English, William Witney, Joe Kane, Gus Meins, George Nicholls and George Sherman will handle most of Republic's directorial assignments.

The names Richard Henry Dana, Dr. George Raymond, William Colt MacDonald, Barry Perowne, creator of the "Raffles" character, appear in the list of authors.

John Wayne is a newcomer on the company's program this year. He succeeds Bob Livingston in the "Three Mesquiteers" series, teaming with Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune. Livingston moves up to featured roles in the company's series of action pictures.

Monogram Sets 42 for 1938-39; GB Convention Starts Saturday

W. Ray Johnston, president, and Scott R. Dunlap, vice president in charge of production, this week announced a program of 42 features for Monogram Pictures in 1938-39. Both are now in Hollywood completing the lineup, which will be disclosed at the annual sales convention, May 8th to 10th, in Cincinnati.

Already assigned are two Jackie Cooper features, four Boris Karloffs, four Frankie Darros, three co-starring John Carroll and Movita, and eight to be directed by E. B. Derr. Releasing for 1938-39 starts August 1st.

With 24 features scheduled, GB Pictures this week set three regional sales conventions at which it will disclose sales policies and identities of new product for 1938-39. Arthur A. Lee, vice president, will preside at each meeting, opening April 30th, at the St. Moritz, New York, then at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, May 3rd and 4th, followed by Denver, May 6th and 7th. Each of the meetings will be attended by GB home office executives and entire sales forces on the respective territories. Assisting Mr. Lee will be Clinton M. White, assistant general manager, and Arthur Greenblatt, sales manager.

The complete program by groups and titles follows:

Four "Anniversary Specials"

DOCTORS DON'T TELL, from the Liberty Magazine serial by Dr. George Raymond.

SAYS NEELY BILL WOULD AFFECT SCHOOL SHOWS

MPPDA in Second Brief to Senate Charges Inequalities in Measure to Bar Block Booking

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, its members, and counsel for both, submitted to the United States Senate, on Monday, a second brief attacking what were claimed to be the illegalities and inequalities of the Neely Bill (S.153) to prohibit distributors of motion pictures from block booking and blind selling in their transactions of leasing motion pictures for exhibition under copyright.

On March 9th, the organized industry sent its first brief to Washington, formally protesting against the "railroading" of the bill out of the Interstate Commerce Committee, and into the Senate, by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, without public hearings, despite a request for hearings by the industry. The first brief also denied that any "moral issue" was involved in block booking and denied that a monopolistic practice exists within the industry.

In the new brief, the distributors charge: "The trade practices which this bill seeks to prohibit and prevent are such as arise from the special character of the industry; the provisions of the bill are clumsily drafted and either thoughtlessly or deliberately extended to include matters outside the scope of its declared purposes. The exactions of conduct to be adhered to, insofar as ascertainable, are thoroughly unworkable; the provisions are open to grave and serious charges of invasion of constitutional guarantees; the findings proposed to be legislated as a basis for the operative provisions of the bill are not warranted to be found as facts, in connection with such practices, either separately or as combined."

The highlights of the new brief are summarized as follows:

Section 2

Definitions: "Motion picture film" is poorly defined. The term "negative print" is not technically appropriate. The words "copies or reproductions of such prints" are superfluous. Sixteen millimeter film usually exhibited at schools and churches is included because the term "all motion picture film" is used without specification as to standard or substandard. Elimination of newsreels from the definition "film" appears illogical because just as other films they are distributed to motion picture theatres for public exhibition. Motion pictures are not "leased." The bill imposes burdens on American distributors in their commerce with foreign countries because the definition of commerce could include foreign commerce by making the word "State" include within its meaning any foreign country. No reason appears for imposing the prohibitions of the bill on negotiations for distribution in foreign countries, none appears in the proposed declaration of policy or in the proposed legislative finding or anywhere else.

Section 3

Section 3 copies an order made by the Federal Trade Commission in 1927 which was held invalid. The provision is not applicable at all to present methods of negotiation for contracts because offers or contracts at designated lump-sum prices are not made.

CAUSE AND REMEDY—AND WALTER WANGER

With nearly 20 years of experience as a producer to guide his opinions, Walter Wanger feels that the current low mark in production is but a temporary breather.

"Business is off considerably," concedes the only United Artists' filmmaker who is busy at the moment. "But this seasonal low mark in film making is but a lull. It should be the time when all decide that it is necessary to quit playing follow the leader. Now is the time to create big, distinctive and novel pictures, backing these experimental pictures with showmanship to assure them a public appeal. Unsuccessful pictures should not be followed with more pictures of the same type. Nobody has a monopoly on brains and imagination. If one producer can devise something new, the tendency should not be to follow in his footsteps. Theatregoers will spend money willingly if they know they are going to see something different. They have no desire for the same old thing merely dressed up in another suit."

Fox Theatres Lose $12,014 in Six Months

Consolidated operations of Fox Theatres for six months ended Dec. 31st, 1937, resulted in a loss of $12,014, according to a report filed by Milton C. Weisman, receiver, in U. S. District Court, New York, Wednesday. The loss brought to $513,209 the total losses since commencement of the receivership, on June 22, 1932.

Mr. Weisman placed a valuation of $8,207,414 on present assets, although the book value is $4,400,863. Mr. Weisman's estimate included a $7,500,000 claim against William Fox, which is still in litigation, but declined to pass on its collectibility. $40,333,209 is the book deficit.

Forms Equipment Company

Henry Sorenson, formerly of the Texas Theatre Supply Company, Dallas, has formed Modern Theatre Equipment Company in Dallas to distribute Motiograph Projectors and Mirrophonic Sound Equipment, Brenkert Lamps, International Seats, U. S. Air Conditioning Equipment, Baldor Rectifiers and Dalite Screens.

Roy Palmquist, Universal salesman, has been promoted to manager of the Omaha exchange, replacing LeRoy Miller, who will be transferred. Al Hill, booker, has assumed Mr. Palmquist's place as salesman.

1,100 More Music Jobs Under Ruling

Approximately 1,100 additional musicians have obtained employment since the five days per week ruling was put into effect on all radio stations, and the six days per week in theatres, hotels, first, second and third-class cafes, James C. Petrillo, president of Chicago Federation of Musicians, Local No. 10, American Federation of Musicians, and sponsor of the employment movement, said this week.

Meanwhile the week long conferences between the national committee of the Independent Broadcasters and the executive board of the AFM ended Saturday with the completion and acceptance of a plan modified along the lines of the agreement executed some months ago between the Independent Radio Network Affiliates and the AFM.

It is estimated that several hundred more union musicians will be placed in independent stations through the agreement. It is understood that the basis of allocation is to be 5½ per cent of the gross yearly income for each independent station covered by the plan. There are approximately 386 independent stations. Yearly grosses in some of these stations are so small they will be unaffected by the agreement.

The agreement contains a provision that it shall not be effective unless a majority of independent stations, substantial enough to satisfy the AFM, approves the plan within a set period.

AMPA Votes to Hold Annual Dance in Fall

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' annual dinner dance will be held in the fall, probably in October, according to a decision of members at a closed meeting at the International Casino, New York, last week. A committee will be appointed shortly to plan for the fall affair and arrangements will be made in the summer.

All officers of the organization were re-elected at the meeting. Paul Lazarus, Jr., presided in the absence of Ralph Rolan.

On Thursday, at the last regular meeting of the season, Warners, United Artists, Columbia and Amkino received awards for winning the recent Rockefeller Center poster exhibition conducted by The Transit Advertisers.

Cinecolor Renames Officers

Cinecolor, Inc., at its annual board meeting, held in Hollywood this week, reelected A. L. McCormick, president; Allen Gundelfinger, first vice-president; W. T. Crespinel, second vice-president; Howard C. Brown, third vice-president, and W. Pyrrne, secretary. Construction will start this month on the company's new laboratory in Burbank.

Cinecolor, Inc., has purchased the Gene Autry ranch on Olive Street in Burbank and will start construction of a new film laboratory within a month. The plot is 3¼ acres.

Karl Hoblitzelle, president of Interstate Circuit, Inc., Dallas, has been appointed to the board of governors of the Dallas Community Trust, a philanthropic organization.

16MM NEWSREEL TESTS COMPLETED; TWO NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN FIELD

Newspaper Publishers and Editors Evince Interest at Chicago Convention; Predict 100 Operating in Few Weeks

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

With the completion of more than a month of actual weekly test showings in a number of key towns in north central and central Illinois, the local newsreel plan of the Herman A. DeVry, Inc., projector equipment manufacturer, of Chicago, is coming into prominence as one of a year's most significant developments in the field of 16mm. film.

Operations of the DeVry newsreel camera were illustrated before delegates at the annual convention of the Inland Daily Press Association, at the Hotel Sherman, recently. Films were taken of a score of newspaper publishers and managing editors. Fritz Bassett is Illinois newsreel service supervisor for the DeVry Company.

Several publishers and editors of newspapers in towns whose populations are as low as 5,000 as well as a number representing papers in towns whose population borders on six figures, said they thought a local newsreel taken of "doings of the home folks" might go a long way toward building up goodwill and circulation. Others said that theatres running the local newsreel should do more business and probably would spend more money in advertising.

Planned 10 Years Ago

All this and more figured in the idea of Herman A. DeVry when he conceived it nearly ten years ago. His now completed project for production and projection of the weekly 16mm. local newsreel is premised upon permanent co-operation of the newspaper and the theatre.

Hugh Elsasser, managing director of the company's local newsreel division, explained:

"The theatre can have an exclusive local interest feature, a complete story of the community, each week. As part of the show it remains a steady attraction every week of the year. To help assure their success is the local newspaper with its available sources of news and its ability to create news plus its professional news-photographer who is appointed to act as the official newsreel cameraman.

Among the test towns where the taking and presentation of local 16mm. newsreels with DeVry equipment is underway are Morris (Ill.) as a typical town of 5,000, Taylorville (Ill.), 7,500 population, and Beloit (Wis.), 25,000.

In handling the film the plan works as follows:

As soon as the newspaper photographer has filmed 100 or 200 feet of the 16mm. film, he mails the negative to the DeVry laboratory in Chicago, where it is developed, printed, processed, serviced and returned to the newspaper within 48 hours. The newspaper cameraman then takes the film to the local theatre for a rehearsal preview, where he times the comment on each sequence over the theatre's loud speaker or public address system. The theatre operator then splices in the "leader," and the film is ready for public showing.

UNIVERSITY OFFERS TELEVISION COURSE

New York University recently launched a course in television as part of its adult education program.

For the opening session of the television technique course, Professor H. H. Sheldon analyzed television's historical background, most recent advances and probable future developments.

Formal entrance requirements are not demanded for the course.

In launching this first competitive move in the newsreel field since 1927, the DeVry sponsors report they were prompted by the growing popularity of local 16mm. newsreels produced by exhibitors, mostly independents, on events and personalities in the news of their immediate neighborhoods or towns. The company says that more than 100 individually-produced local newsreels will be operating within a few weeks. The DeVry company has set up a plan whereby the exhibitor may lease the equipment.

National and Local

It is estimated that the national newsreel will consist of a 400-foot reel each week and as this runs about four minutes it can be coupled with the same amount of local material and give the exhibitor a complete newsreel.

Considerable additional local newsreel activity is reported from theatres in Grand Junction, Col., in Pueblo, in T. C. Riddells' Erie theatre in Hugo, Oklahoma, at the Tosa theatre in Wawatosa, Wis., by Walter Green, theatre operator at Morgantown, N. C., also in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Minnesota. The Burton Jerrel "News Flashes" in Iowa is serving local newsreels to 190 theatres. In Minneapolis, Radio Station WTCN and the World theatre have been cooperating.

The following theatres will begin to be serviced with local newsreels immediately according to Mr. Miller: Rex, Elk City; Ritz, Clinton; A-Mus-U, Cordell; Rogue, Erick; Rogue, Tipton, and the Capitol in Mangum.

The Griffith Amusement Company, operators of 200 theatres in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, reported that newsreels taken and shown locally are being used in only about a half dozen houses in their circuit.

Filmack Trailer Company, Chicago, because of an increased use of 16mm. films in theatres, has installed a complete 16 mm. department, equipped for developing, printing and titling.

MBM Productions, producers and distributors of 16 mm. newsreels for Oklahoma theatres, plan to issue a regular statewide newsreel furnishing 300 feet of film with two issues a week, each issue to contain three items, according to Ray Miller, MBM official.

The company has been making efforts to secure some big company in the state to sponsor the reel, with the local exhibitor getting the film free. The only advertising would be a mention at the beginning of the reel saying the newsreel was sponsored by the advertiser.

Form 16 mm Company

National Film Programs, Inc., has been formed in New York for the purpose of furnishing complete programs on 16 mm. film for club, organization and college use.

500 Coin-in-Slot Machines for Cocktail Lounges; Second Group Plans Rental to Adver- tisers, Making Own Projector

Development of 16mm. projectors by two separate groups, outside the motion picture industry, led this week to a threat of competition to exhibitors and to the announcement of a plan for increasing the use of film for advertising purposes.

The competition to theatres, reputedly scheduled to materialize in about two months, will, as announced recently, come from bars and cocktail lounges where the Cinematone Varieties Corporation plans to install 16 mm. sound projectors for coin-in-slot operation. Immediate plans of the corporation call for the manufacture of 500 machines and a weekly production of 20 short subjects, each running two and a half minutes.

The second group, Leventhal Laboratories of New York, does not contemplate invading the amusement field. Instead it plans to manufacture its non-intermittent projector for rental to advertisers and to have the advertising pictures produced by commercial film companies. The films will not be shown in theatres.

Cinematone Varieties is headed by W. P. Falkenberg, president of Rayolite Distributing Company, which is said to have a photoelectric cell target gun already placed throughout the world, and by Dr. Gordon Keith Woodard, inventor of the projection device.

Mr. Falkenberg said in Hollywood that 5,000 machines will be turned out this year at a cost of $2,500,000 and that the production budget for the organization is expected to be about $750,000. He estimated there are 200,000 cocktail lounges seeking entertainment and that all of them are potential customers for projection machines.

Through his publicity director, Hank Levy, Mr. Falkenberg indicated he feared arousing the ire of the film industry but announced that he does not intend to book film personalities except name bands. Production crafts union rules will be observed and the union scale of wages will be paid at all times, he said.

An experimental machine already has been placed at Lindy's cafe in Los Angeles. For this experiment a cutdown Paramount short subject starring Bing Crosby, which was released to the 16mm. field, and several animated cartoons in reduced length were used.

The machine is eight feet high, projecting the images with sound to a screen four feet square. The Victor Animatograph Sound projection equipment is used with a continuous projection attachment.

C. H. Ralke, division manager of Victor Animatograph Corporation, recently visited the company's plant in Davenport, Iowa, and after seeing the equipment in operation said that it is "very practical and very usable."

The machine which Leventhal Laboratories plans to place on the market is of modernistic design and is about four feet high. The screen is about eight by ten inches. The tentative plans of the company are to rent the machines to companies for use in agencies.

DETECTIVE LAW MAY APPLY TO PRESS AGENTS

New York State Measure Requires Licensing; Effect on Checkers Is Debated

A possible "joker" in New York State's new private detectives law may make press agents, checkers and reporters in the motion picture business in the state, as in other lines, subject to the law as "private investigators," subject to finger-printing, a tax of $200 for a license, a $10,000 bond and liable to penalties of $500 fine or imprisonment for failure to comply.

Governor Lehman signed the bill last week.

Assemblyman Meyer Goldberg, sponsor of the bill broadening the provisions of the existing Private Detectives and Investigators License Law, has joined Nathan R. Sobel, counsel to Governor Herbert Lehman, in denying that the statute was intended to apply to newspapermen or publicity agents, but that it is aimed at "private investigators' participation in strike, picketing and other labor situations. However, consternation was caused by a letter from Abraham S. Wechsler, New York State Director of Licenses, to various press relations counselors in New York advising them that they might be required to license themselves as private detectives under the revised law.

Following are parts of the bill that conceivably might be construed as applying to newspapermen, theatre checkers, who are employed by distributors, and theatrical press agents follow:

"No person, firm, company, partnership or corporation shall engage in the business of furnishing or supplying for fee, hire or any consideration or reward, information as to the personal character of, or activities of any person, firm, company or corporation, society or organization or any person or group of persons, or as to the character or kind of business and occupation of any person, firm, company or corporation, or own or conduct or maintain a bureau or agency for the above mentioned purposes, except exclusively as to the financial rating, standing and credit and responsibility of persons, firms or corporations without first having obtained a license—"

Ross Doubts Application

Ross Federal Checking Service, one of the largest theatre checkers in exhibition, declared that its interpretation of the bill was that it does not apply to its type of business, because its checking is done with the knowledge of the exhibitor.

Some of the potentialities of the bill were brought out by the New York Times last Thursday, when it was said that although License Director Wechsler and Assemblyman Goldberg both insisted the legislature had no intention of applying the law to newspaper men or press agents, Mr. Wechsler conceded that in its present form the bill could be construed to applying to newspaper reporters and press agents as well as to investigators for private organizations.

The bill, which was suggested by Governor Lehman and drafted by his secretary, was intended to "enhance civil liberties rather than curb them," according to Mr. Goldberg, a Republican who was elected with American Labor party support.

The penalty for failure to comply with the law is a $500 fine, a year in prison or both. The fee for a detective agency license is $200 for an individual and $300 for a corporation or partnership. The license runs for two years. A $10,000 bond is required.

Further Provisions

The bill provides further that:

"Private detective business shall mean and include the business of private detective, private detective business, the business of investigator or the business of watch, guard or patrol agencies and shall also mean and include, separately or collectively, the making for hire, reward or for any consideration whatsoever, of any investigation or investigations for the purpose of obtaining information with reference to any of the following matters, notwithstanding the fact that other functions and services may also be performed for fee, hire or reward; crimes or wrongs done or threatened against the Government of the United States or any State or Territory of the United States:

"The identity, habits, conduct, movement, whereabouts, affiliations, association, transaction, deputation or character of any person, group of persons, association, organization, society, other groups of persons, firm or corporation; the credibility of witnesses or other persons; the whereabouts of missing persons; the location or recovery of lost or stolen property; the causes and origin of, or responsibility for fires or libels or losses, or accidents or damages or injuries to real or personal property or the affiliation, connection or relation of any person, firm or corporation, with any union, organization, society or association, or with any official, member or representative thereof; * * * or the securing of evidence to be used before any authorized investigating committee, board of award, board of arbitration or in the trial of civil or criminal cases."

Counsel Cites Intent

Informed of the concern the terms of the bill had caused, Mr. Sobel said in Albany:

"The phrases used in the bill were intended to apply to the private detective agencies and not to newspaper men or press agents. That was the intent of the Legislature and that point of view will undoubtedly be taken by the Secretary of State's office, which is given the licensing power, or by the courts, if the matter ever went into the courts. No one need be alarmed over the provisions, as their intent is quite clear."

Dickinson Circuit Plans Expansion

Glen W. Dickinson Theatres, Inc., Kansas City, is planning an expansion and improvement program. The circuit has acquired the Booth at Rick Hill, Mo., which brings the total to 38. The circuit expects to have at least 50 units in Missouri, Kansas and Iowa by the end of six months. Some of the deals represent partnerships, and in such cases the exhibitor remains as manager. Others represent outright acquisitions.

Currently the Dickinson at Chillicothe, Mo., is being completely remodeled, including the installation of a cooling plant, which will cost around $5,000. The Dickinson at Osage City, Kan., will be refurbished next.

BOYS SELECT "HURRICANE"

In a survey made by the Optimist International, a service club organization, among Junior Optimist Clubs in 22 cities in the United States and Canada, the boys, ranging from 12 to 18 years, chose "The Hurricane" as their favorite picture of the past year. "The Plainsman," "Good Earth," "Dead End," "Lost Horizon," "Submarine D-1," "Wells Fargo" and "The Life of Emile Zola," followed in that order.

Clark Gable was chosen as their favorite actor, followed by Buck Jones, Paul Muni, Gary Cooper, Robert Taylor and William Powell. The boys named Mae West as their favorite actress, followed by Alice Faye, Sonja Heine, Ginger Rogers, Myrna Loy, Shirley Temple and Jane Withers.

Most of the boys preferred western pictures, although adventure films were a close second. Mystery pictures and comedies placed third and fourth.

New Metro Theatre Opens Brazil Season

by L. S. MARINHO
in Rio de Janeiro

The new motion picture season had a gala premiere with the opening of MGM's new Metro Palace on March 15th in Sao Paulo with "Broadway Melody of 1938." It was an outstanding event.

Other pictures which launched the season were "Damsel in Distress," "Souls at Sea" and "It's Love Again." Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938 also was presented recently at the Ufa Palacio.

Sao Paulo before this season had few outstanding American pictures because of the paucity of good theatres. Four or five houses have been classed as first-runs and the second-runs are inadequate for such a city. Hence "Champagne Waltz" was released in Sao Paulo to represent the Adolph Jubilee, while in Rio de Janeiro it did very little after a long wait for opening.

"The Road Back" still is barred by the censors. "They Gave Him a Gun" was finally approved by the board, and "Sabotage," English picture, after its title had been changed.

Marionette Show Based On "Snow White" Planned

Jack Goldberg, general manager of International Road Shows, Inc., New York, said this week that he has made a contract with L. F. Delgado to construct 50 marionette shows of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." He said that units will be installed at Coney Island, Atlantic City, Asbury Park and a number of amusement parks from coast to coast.

The show will be presented in 40 minutes on a movable portable stage and operated by three experienced marionette workers, he said. Mr. Goldberg said that special units are being made and rehearsed for film theatres.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Joseph O'Brien, of Universal Newsreel, feels that the limit of motion picture enterprise has been reached by the coroner of a southern county, who has asked for an offer on the exclusive news-picture rights to a coming execution of six felons, with full access to the preparations, the death march, the scenes in the electric chair and the autopsies. It sounds like it would make up something neat in the way of a short. And doubtless the same enthusiasm which now urges gynecology on the screen would endorse such a picture as "education" for or against capital punishment.

Deanna Durbin's agents would have to pay 108 per cent of their income from the young Universal's star's radio and film contracts if they honored all the claims of the "discoverers" who have filed suits against them.

One suit, just ended in Los Angeles Superior Court, against Jack Sherrill and Frederick Falkin, who handle Deanna's business, was brought by Rita Warner, wife of Actor H. B. Warner. She claimed she made the plans for Miss Durbin's first audition, and asked 25 per cent of the Sherrill-Falkin 10 per cent commissions. She won the decision.

Oliver White wants 33 per cent, declaring that she, too, had a hand in bringing out Miss Durbin.

Milo Marchetti asks 50 per cent of the commissions, saying that it was he who arranged for the audition through which Deanna got her movie contract.

There probably isn't another theatre in the country like the Grand Opera House on New York's west side, in the Chelsea section, which RKO purchased the other week for $800,000. Built during the Civil War, and once the leading legitimate spot of old New York, the theatre has more than a dozen secret exits and underground passages through which former owners escaped when being pursued by sheriffs. There is a safe in the building that runs clear through the four stories, with openings on each floor. The Grand was our favorite movie-and-vaudeville rendezvous during school-hookey days.

New York City's "green book" describing the municipal government is now available for public distribution—50 cents the copy. Thirty-four pages are devoted to license requirements, showing that permits are required for everything from keeping cows and bear meat in cellars to operating a stage coach, holding masquerade parties and manufacturing hot dogs, to say nothing of showing motion pictures.

Many a motion picture press agent has told many a motion picture whopper for the cause of a motion picture, but none can compare with the Columbia Broadcasting blurb: "Telephone calls from listeners hit peaks whenever the moon is full."

Spontaneous and unpublished epigram from Frank Tilley, press director of the Cinematographers Exhibitors Association, London, during a conversation about Wardour Street film potentates:

"So many of them start as budding executives and end up by grafting."

The American Cinematographer, publication of Hollywood's motion picture cameramen, pays deserving tribute in print to Mr. Cecil Blount DeMille on the occasion of his 25 years in motion picture production. They point to the director's 64 films having grossed $130,000,000 in rentals, approximately $2,031,250 per picture.

Mr. DeMille is given credit for establishing an early reputation—"which he still retains"—"for lavishness, sophistication and bizarre exoticism." One of his early experiments was with a process for "new-fangled" lighting—photographing an actor's face half in light and half in shadow. His associates told him it couldn't be done, but DeMille went ahead anyway.

Significant or otherwise, Paramount is showing "Stolen Heaven" at the Bankers' Convention, Hutchinson, Kan., May 12th.

"What Is Your Pet Movie Peeve?" asked the New York Daily Mirror of its readers. To the question came 25,000 replies from as many movie fans, who aimed their pop-guns at those they were pleased to call "The movie moguls."

"The movie moguls," for example, were asked to cut out the habitual use of screen closeups. "Who cares to diagnose Jeanette MacDonald's tonsils, or count the bristles in Dick Powell's mustache?" wrote one reader.

"The movie moguls" also were asked to do something about those moviegoers who "chew gum so audibly all through the picture you can't hear what the players are saying."

Another fan complained, "In a number of pictures there are scenes where the actors and actresses in restaurants order a bite or a drink, and instead of eating their food merely take a sip or two, or a forkful of food, practically leaving the whole order."

Grace Moore told friends in Cleveland about the progress she is making redecorating her summer place in Connecticut. Seems that an Italian painter named Tony is helping her. They had a lengthy consultation about the work to be done, and then turned to the selection of suitable colors. Miss Moore handed Tony one of those multi-folded color cards. He looked it over and then cried out: "Meester Sherwin William—he is a great man. He okay by me! We use his paint. He singa for de Metropolitan Opera!"

Miss Moore did not tell Tony that the Sherwin-William Paint Company sponsors the Metropolitan Opera air broadcasts on Sunday afternoons.

Ambassador Joseph Patrick Kennedy, in London, is in receipt of a motion picture, from friends in New York. Newsreel pictures of the Ambassador are superimposed with the dialogue: "I'll be damned if I'll wear knee breeches in England," which is followed by a fadeout showing him clad in breeches and delivering a speech in a thick Oxford accent.

Victor Mansfield Shapiro hopes to make the jump from Hollywood Boulevard to the nation's bathrooms in one try.

Mr. Shapiro this week is leaving Hollywood motion picture press agenting to press agent Sulfraid 21, a sulphur concentration for bath use. He has ambitions of making the country sulphur-bath-salts minded with his clubby little slogan: "Happy Bathday to You." Just why anyone would want sulphur in his bath is another matter.

Robert Taylor tells "the real inside" about "the real" Clark Gable in Liberty magazine. Particularly edifying is Robert's description of how Clark sometimes "comes over to my place, dumps himself into a chair, and says, 'Bob, I feel low today!' In most cases," continues Taylor, "an onion sandwich and a can of cold tomatoes with salt and pepper on them will start Bob out of it."

From elsewhere we learn that as a sideline Clark Gable is raising Angora wool rabbits for the ladies' fur trade.

George Raft lost a 50-cent piece during the filming of "Scarface," six years ago. The other day he offered a five-dollar reward for its return, keeping to himself the fact that the piece had certain peculiar markings. Some 682 answers were received from persons who said they had Mr. Raft's original.

Richard Davidson is training his four-year-old cross between a German sheep dog and an Airedale for Hollywood. He says the dog already can sniff the playing cards in an opposition hand and extract a watch from a pocket.

Hollywood crooners generally explain that a crooner is one who hums or sings in a low tune. Webster's Dictionary says that "to croon is to make a continuous hollow sound, as cattle in pain."

Edgar Bergen's little Charlie McCarthy is going to have a competitive companion on the air, in the person of George Miller's little Willie McGinty.

Mr. Miller writes from his headquarters in Detroit's Book-Cadillac Hotel that he is going on the air "with Little Willie McGinty Family, who have won $150,000 on an Irish Sweepstakes." The "family" includes Little Willie's father, Goofy McGinty; his mother, Zooloo McGinty; a brother, Walrus McGinty, and Dosey McGinty, a sister. Mr. Miller did not make clear whether the McGintys actually won $150,000, or merely are "winners" for purposes of ventriloquist conversation. That might make a lot of difference later.

The following theatrical review appeared in a Boston newspaper last week after a company of village amateurs had put on a production:

"Last night the elite of our town gathered to witness a performance of 'Hamlet.' There was considerable discussion as to whether the play was written by Shakespeare or Bacon. All doubt can be set at rest by opening the graves of both. The one who turned over last night is the author."

Sounds old.

600 ATTEND ANNUAL VARIETY CLUB DINNER

18 Units Add $47,300 to Charity Work; Harris Re-elected National Chief Barker

Dispensation of charities totaling $187,326 during the past year, and future charitable activities over an even wider front were noted at the fourth annual national convention of Variety Clubs of America at the Netherland Plaza, in Cincinnati, last weekend. Exhibitors and exchangemen in the field are members of local Variety "Tents." Some 600 attended the convention, from all fields of the industry.

With John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, the "Father of Variety," in the chair, business was transacted during the Saturday session, at which it became known that the 18 tents comprising the national setup had in 1937-1938 spent $47,300 more for charities than in the previous year. Credit for one of the most far-reaching activities went to Dallas, Tent No. 17, which has equipped a $21,000 surgical, X-ray and social service wing in the Freeman Memorial Clinic. Chief Barker Bob O'Connell and Ed Wilson are on the clinic's board of directors. Mr. O'Connell explained that the membership of his tent pledged $450 monthly for charity. Mrs. Dora B. Foster, managing director of the clinic, enroute to New York to engage the services of an additional surgeon, stopped off to address the convention.

Other Charity Projects

Reports from Pittsburgh, Tent No. 1, submitted by John J. Maloney, showed that the original tent had distributed 1,484,240 half-pints of milk, on the basis of two-and-one half pints daily for 2,410 children in the last 12 months. This tent, through the aid of four broadcasts over station KDKA, lasting from 9 p.m. to 3 a.m., raised a total of $21,000 for the milk fund, the equivalent of this amount being matched by contributions of milk from local dairymen. Other tents made comparative reports outlining various and sundry activities, such as camp facilities for underprivileged children, school lunches, "seeing eye" dogs for the blind, iron-lung, and similar humanitarian projects. Combined pledges for charity aggregating approximately $300,000 were made by the various tents for the ensuing year.

Revoke Tent Charter

The convention voted to revoke the charter of Des Moines, Tent No. 15, for financial arrearages, leaving 17 tents in the national organization.

Baltimore was the only tent not represented. W. A. Steffes and Frank Mantzke were present for Minneapolis, No. 12.

Plans were reported in the making for organization of a tent in Chicago.

Five of the tents were reported to have purchased regulation sound trucks for showing pictures in institutions.

Ray Colvin, delegate from St. Louis, No. 4, said a proposal was under advisement from the juvenile court there to allow delinquent children on probation from the court to attend a neighborhood theatre at least once a week.

All national officers were unanimously re-elected: John H. Harris, Pittsburgh, national chief barker; M. R. "Duke" Clark, Columbus, first assistant, and John J. Maloney, Pittsburgh, second assistant national chief barker; James G. Balmer, Pittsburgh, dough guy, and Frank Drew, Cleveland, property master.

Canvassmen unanimously elected, and the tents they represent are: J. T. McGreevey, Pittsburgh, Tent No. 1; Allan S. Moritz, Cincinnati, Tent No. 3; Ray Colvin, St. Louis, Tent No. 4; H. M. Richey, Detroit, Tent No. 5; M. B. Horwitz, Cleveland, Tent No. 6; Jacob Lavene, Buffalo, Tent No. 7; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Tent No. 8; Marc J. Wolf, Indianapolis, Tent No. 9; J. Louis Rome, Baltimore, Tent No. 10; A. J. Brylawski, Washington, Tent No. 11; W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, Tent No. 12; Earle W. Sweigert, Philadelphia, Tent No. 13; Chas. W. Trampe, Milwaukee, Tent No. 14; Harry J. Shumow, Omaha, Tent No. 16, and Roy Wells, Dayton, O., Tent No. 17. Columbus, Ohio, will not be represented on the board, because M. R. Clark, the only chief barker of that tent, is a national officer.

The oath of office was administered by James G. Balmer.

1939 Convention in Detroit

Detroit was selected for the 1939 convention, winning over Cleveland.

Letters praising the work of Variety Clubs were read from Will H. Hays, Nate Blumberg, Jules Levy, Abe Montague, George J. Schaefer, Carl Milliken, William Scully, John Clark, Joe E. Brown.

A plan to select a film star annually by votes from the various tents was vetoed.

The proceedings were halted for one minute in silent tribute to members who had died in the past year: Al Barnett, Universal manager, Pittsburgh, Tent No. 1; Wm. G. Stiegler, theatre editor, Times Star, and Lou Bauer, manager Arrowhead Inn, both of Tent No. 3, Cincinnati, and Jack Dugin, southwest division manager for Paramount at Dallas, Tent No. 17.

U. S. Senator Robert J. Buckley told the banquet Sunday night that he was willing to make another effort to get Congressional approval of an admission tax exemption of 50 cents instead of the present 40 cents.

Tributes to the work of the organization were paid from the banquet dais by United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky; Governor Martin L. Davey, former Governor White, Mayor James Stewart of Cincinnati, and former Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey. Others at the speakers' table were Hugh Herbert, Ned E. Depinet, W. F. Rodgers, United States District Judge John Druffe, Councilman Russell Wilson, Sam Dembow and George Dembow, Ed Kuykendall, Rev. Harold J. Weaver, Rev. Letus A. Miller, Major L. E. Thompson, M. R. Clarke and Allan Moritz.

Allied Theatres of Illinois has moved its Chicago office to the Exhibitors Building at 1315 South Wabash Avenue.

RKO GIVES 'COURSE' ON BOGUS MONEY

Because of the persistence with which counterfeiters seek to victimize theatre box offices, executives of RKO Theatres are advising other exhibitors of a "post graduate" course in the detection of fictitious currency conducted for its cashiers, treasurers and managers. The medium was an illustrated lecture, given Wednesday, at the home office.

Allan Murphy, special agent, on invitation explained how counterfeit money can be recognized and the methods and trickery employed to pass it, later answering questions propounded by the theatre employees.

RKO theatre cashiers recently were instrumental in bringing several passers of bogus money to justice.

B&K's History Told by Balaban

John Balaban, head of the Balaban and Katz circuit, was the principal speaker at the annual luncheon held by the Better Films Council of Chicagoland last week. Mr. Balaban devoted his talk to the story of the founding of the B and K circuit.

He told how his parents started their first theatre venture in the old Kedzie theatre at 12th and Kedzie, a store building with 104 seats comprising folding chairs. Brother Abe Balaban and sister Ida supplied the musical part of the show. The total gross for the opening day was $1.80. The theatre prospered, however, and the first year of operation showed a profit of $4,000. That was 1907.

A year later the Circle, Chicago's first motion picture theatre, was built at a cost of $35,000. Following that the Balabans acquired more theatres and in 1916 built the Central Park theatre at a cost of $350,000. Sam Katz joined the circuit in that year. Other theatres were continuously added and today the circuit operates 46 houses in Chicago and 78 theatres outside the city with some in Indiana and Ohio. The seating capacity of these theatres totals 175,000 and in 1937 they catered to 66,000,000 people.

The payroll is $3,000,000 yearly for the Chicago circuit alone Mr. Balaban said, while the outlying theatres pay $1,500,000 for wages. The circuit pays $5,000,000 yearly to film companies in rentals and spends $1,000,000 for advertising, he said. Mr. Balaban said that $728,000 was spent in modernization and maintenance last year. With assets of $20,000,000 the circuit has more than $1,000,000 in air conditioning plants alone, he said.

Other speakers on the program, which was under the direction of Mrs. Richard M. McClure, were James Donahue, Paramount branch manager, who explained the Chicago film releasing system; William K. Hollander, B and K publicity chief, who spoke on the Council's work; Louis Blaine of RKO Theatres, who talked on the relations between the film group and theatres, and Dorothy Deere, of the Chicago American.

PARAMOUNT NET $6,145,103 FOR '37; LOEW 28 WEEKS $6,487,678

Paramount Estimates First Quarter Earnings This Year at $830,866; RKO Theatres' 1937 Profit $1,483,281

Financial reports of the week included the following highlights:

Paramount's net profit for 1937 was $6,145,103, a gain of $32,853 over the previous year;

Paramount estimated its earnings for the first quarter of 1938 at $830,866;

Loew's, Inc., had a net profit of $6,487,678 for 28 weeks.

Fixed indebtedness of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and subsidiaries was further reduced by $2,232,010 beginning in 1937. It had been cut $4,216,356 between July 1, 1934, and the end of 1936.

RKO Theatres profit in 1937 was $1,483,281. The consolidated net profit of the company for 1937 was $1,821,165.

The Paramount net of $6,045,103 for 1937 was after all charges, including interest, Federal taxes, depreciation and reserves.

In a letter to stockholders Barney Balaban, president, said the profit figure did not include approximately $625,000 representing Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the year of partially owned companies.

"After deducting $1,186,090 of dividends accrued for the year," Mr. Balaban said, "based on the first and second preferred shares outstanding as of Jan. 1, 1938, the consolidated earnings equal $1.97 per share on the 2,465,900 shares of common stock outstanding on Jan. 1, 1938. Calculated on the same basis, the combined consolidated earnings and share of undivided earnings of partially owned subsidiaries would be equal to $2.22 per share on said common shares.

"The above referred to earnings do not include (a) $1,652,000 which was credited to general reserve account, representing the proceeds from the settlement in 1937 by the reorganization trustee with the approval of the federal court, of litigation instituted during the period of reorganization referred to as "Reserved Actions," which amount includes notes of $492,500 and is after deducting expenditures during the year for expenses and allowances to trustee and attorneys and certain counter claims offset in the settlement, and (b) $150,000 which was also credited to the general reserve account representing a realized profit on the sale of a parcel of real estate.

"Consolidated interest expense for the year 1937 aggregated $1,995,430 as compared with $2,745,415 for the year 1936, a reduction of $749,985."

The consolidated balance sheet showed that cash and marketable securities on Jan. 1, 1938, amounted to $10,153,628.02, of which $2,680,827.10 represented balances in Great Britain and Dominions, and $110,677.86 in other foreign countries. The total inventory amounted to $22,884,780.02. Total current assets were $37,410,988.89 and current liabilities $10,520,474.88, leaving a net working capital of $26,890,514.01, an increase during the year of approximately $3,950,000.

Dividends paid aggregated were $1,669,237.83, representing dividends for the year 1936 and 1937 on the second preferred stock and for the year 1937 on the first preferred stock.

Consolidated Income Account of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp.

Consolidated income account of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp. (in reorganization) and subsidiaries for year ended Dec. 31, 1937, compares as follows:

The $830,866 estimated Paramount earnings for the quarter ended April 2, 1938, includes $806,000, representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries.

There were outstanding (as of April 2, 1938) 142,172 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value six per cent first preferred stock, and 555,101 shares of cumulative convertible $10 par value six per cent second preferred stock. The estimated earnings of $830,866 as above after deducting $296,523 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these preferred shares, were equal to approximately 22 cents a share on the 2,465,900 shares of common stock then outstanding.

The consolidated earnings for the first quarter ended April 3, 1937, were $2,011,000, while Paramount's share of undistributed earnings of partially owned subsidiaries aggregated $640,000, a combined total of $2,651,000.

Loew's 28 Weeks' Net

For the 28 weeks ending March 17th Loew's, Inc., had a net profit of $6,487,678. This was equal to $47.45 per share on the preferred and $3.76 per share on the common before provisions for surtax.

Last year the total for the same period was $8,606,130, or $62.95 per share on the preferred and $5.26 on the common. The reduction was $2,118,452.

The operating profit was $9,807,339 and $3,319,661 was charged to depreciation and taxes.

RKO Theatre Profits

The combined operations of the theatre operating subsidiaries of RKO in 1937 resulted in a net profit after all charges of $1,483,281, according to the sixth report of the trustee, Irving Trust Company, filed Friday in the U. S. district court.

Among the charges included was the accrual of interest, $357,467.23. The net profit of the theatre companies compares with a net for 1936 of $1,386,679.74, after all charges, including the accrual of $215,819.79, interest on indebtedness, to RKO.

The company's consolidated net profit for 1937 of $1,821,165.98 compared with $2,485,911.03 for 1936.

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the film unit, reported a net loss for 1937 of $236,909.10 after all charges, including the accrual of interest amounting to $1,024,647.98 on indebtedness to RKO. This compares with a net profit in 1936 of $893,580.23, after the accrual of interest amounting to $987,010.69 on indebtedness to RKO.

Pathe News, Inc., showed a 1937 net profit of $63,011.07, compared with a net loss of $241.78 in 1936. The accrual of interest on indebtedness to RKO was $13,297.65 in 1937, and $13,421.57 in 1936.

During 1937 RKO received $51,510 in distributions in liquidation of the Van Beuren Corp., in which RKO has a 50 per cent interest.

The reduction of RKO indebtedness included the payment of $450,000 principal amount of RKO secured six per cent gold notes and the reduction, subsequent to acquisition, of the fixed indebtedness of the active Orpheum companies. The interest on the indebtedness was paid in the amount of $1,250,813.63.

The cash of RKO and its subsidiaries declined from an aggregate of $7,928,810.69 on Dec. 31, 1936, to $5,282,613.25 on Dec. 31, 1937. The report explained the reduction of $2,646,- 197.44 in cash position as attributable to the fact that the fixed indebtedness was reduced approximately $2,230,000 during the period. Stadium Theatres Corp. made a payment of $700,000 for the assets of Orpheum Circuit, Inc., and the inventory of films, stories and continuities, etc., increased by approximately $2,800,000.

However, officials declared that the company's cash position probably is better today than it was on Dec. 31, 1937, largely as a result of inventory reduction.

The consolidated statement of profit and loss for 1937 shows theatre admissions of $23,640,464, film rentals and sales of $26,307,399. Expenses are put at $47,692,246.

Aiding Securities Issues

The Securities and Exchange Commission issued orders Friday providing exemption from registration of issues offered for cash not exceeding $100,000 and reducing materially the volume of information to be required of small established corporations registering securities.

In the case of corporations having total assets of less than $5,000,000 and which have been in business for at least five years, it will no longer be necessary for them to file historical information, or certify profit and loss statements for all of the last three years, while such statements will be required, only that for the most recent year need be certified.

Theatre Receipts Decline

Theatrical receipts have declined slightly since the turn of the year, it is indicated by analysis of the monthly report of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington.

Admission tax collections in March, the bureau reported, reached a total of $1,773,075.47, compared with $1,659,640.83 in February and $1,539,408.05 in March, 1937.

As against the increase of $113,435 in total receipts, however, was a gain of $137,170 in the Third New York (Broadway) district, so

A PROTEST FROM YOUR BRITISH MARKET

Your London distributors by playing politics are imposing yet another handicap on your product in foreign markets

At secret meetings in London The Kinematograph Renters Society have set up a dictatorship to grade your features into two price classes.

This secret "grading" degrades a large percentage of product—your PRODUCT—INTO THE LOWER BRACKETS.

Were you consulted? Certainly the theatre owners of Great Britain were not.

This "grading" applies rigidly to all sections of the country regardless of variations in local conditions and tastes—as if New York and El Paso, Pittsburgh and Jacksonville could all be treated alike.

We, The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, representing 4,350 picture theatres (95 per cent of the cinemas in the United Kingdom, your biggest foreign market) oppose this unethical selling combine because it decreases your share, decreases our share and decreases theatre attendances.

We, The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, are determined that this thing called "grading" shall not happen.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Adventures of Robin Hood

(Warner Brothers)

Historical Spectacle

This is what might be called an exploitation man's dream. It is such a picture as that master of box office salesmanship, A-Mike Vogel, might write a book about and still have enough ideas left over to float a brace of merely first grade attractions. No lesser pen than that which swung by the genial chairman of the Managers' Round Table is qualified to tell MOTION PICTURE HERALD subscribers the whole truth about this complete answer to the practical showman's prayer.

The exploitation story of "Robin Hood" is well along in the writing, however, ere now. S. Charles Einfeld's able gentlemen of the public relations department have been as busy as the valiant men of Sherwood Forest at keeping the public aware of what the picture is all about and how to know when it's coming to town. Devices and expedients employed in its behalf have been singularly of a kind with those which an industrious and perspicacious showman might have dreamed up for his personal use. The printed matter pertaining to it has been fashioned with rare fidelity to the manner and period of the picture.

The archery tournament at Palm Springs on Sunday last provided practical precedent for a stunt that cries aloud to be duplicated locally in every community, and established proof of its exploitation potency. Publicity disseminated via magazine and newspaper channels has been grooved to the style and tone of the production as accurately as the story of the altruistic nobleman who took from the rich to give to the poor is grooved to the mass mood of 1938.

Mr. Einfeld's merry men have got the picture off to a running start. W. G. Van Schmus' expert retailers of superlative entertainment may be counted upon to give it tremendous additional impetus when he spreads it upon the Radio City Music Hall's great screen. It could coast the rest of the way to its first million, but it generates enough momentum of its own to make two a conservative forecast.

The story of "Robin Hood" is rather too well known to require synopsis. The popularity of the theme in this generation is manifest. The treatment of that then could have been woefully miscalculated. It was not. There is no hint or trace of social, political or economic preachment. Sympathy is on the side of the poor, as in the legends from which Norman Reilly Raine and Seton I. Miller drew their screenplay. But the hero is presented as attacking only the specific injustice, avarice and persecution practiced by a definite group of persons who happen, as does he, to be of noble birth. Associate producer Henry Blanke, directors Michael Curtiz, and William Keighley, executive producer Hal Wallis, and dialogue director Irving Rapper have seen to it that there is no arraying of class against class. They also have seen to it that the picture contains no word, gesture or scene to bring any flush save that of pleasure to any cheek.

Probably not even the Music Hall's spacious marquee is big enough for all its three-street exposure, to contain all the display-worthy names in the cast. They are listed below and so well is the burden distributed among them that any showman anywhere is safe in picking out for emphasis the half dozen that sell best in his community. Errol Flynn's "Robin Hood" is more credible and no less stimulating than Douglas Fairbanks' was. Olivia de Havilland's "Maid Marian" is a rare blending of sheer beauty and consummate acting. Basil Rathbone's "Sir Guy" and Claude Rains' "Prince John" are masterly studies in evil. The others are as successful in their widely varied chores.

It is, of course, routine exploitation procedure nowadays to let the customers know that the picture is in full color, but in this case there is reason to go further. A showman would be quite safe in proclaiming this the finest example of applied pigmentation yet to reach the screen and to name W. Howard Greene, color photographer, with Cameramen Tony Gaudio and Sol Polito, as responsible for the most brilliant, artistic and realistic use of the process to date.

The picture opens briskly and the pace never lags. It is packed with exciting incident, thrilling combat, entrapment, escape, flight, pursuit, honest adventure and no revenge. It is magnificently staged and superbly coordinated. It is, we repeat, the complete answer to the practical showman's prayer.

Dr. Rhythm

(Paramount-Cohen)
Musical Comedy

At the preview in the Los Angeles Paramount theatre, a big house in which press and professional guests made up an audience minority, the paying public composing the majority laughed as hard or harder and as long or longer, hard enough and long enough, in any case to drown out substantial portions of the dialogue. Members of press, profession and public were heard to proclaim it Bing Crosby's best picture and many took in much more territory.

Mr. Crosby's radio program has introduced most or all of the songs and at least three are showing signs of hit quality. They are better than that when experienced with settings and gestures and two, "My Heart Is Taking Lessons" and "On the Sentimental Side," are of a kind to be heard just about as consistently when the picture's well down toward repeat date. John Burke and James V. Monaco write them precisely to Bing's measure.

In secondary prominence, although dominating the picture every minute she's on, is Beatrice Lillie, fulfilling in this the long promise of her stage success on both sides of the Atlantic. She sings, dances and clowns, but mostly clowns, and in a standout skit by Dion Titheradge she stops the show so conclusively that the rest of the cast, returning in the next sequence, look like strangers. Andy Devine, Sterling Holloway, Franklin Pangborn, Rufe Davis and Fred Keating are others active in the comedy department. Mary Carlisle plays the romantic feminine lead just seriously enough.

"Dr. Rhythm" is a modernized version of O. Henry's "The Badge of Policeman O'Roon," prepared for the screen by Jo Swerling and Richard Connell and directed by Frank Tuttle. It was produced by Emanuel Cohen under his recently dissolved contract with Paramount, with Herbert Polesie as associate producer. Dance ensembles of especially effective type are by Jack Crosby, and John Scott Trotter, of the Bing Crosby radio programs, made the musical arrangements.

Already more than 5000 theaters have installed high intensity projection. With high intensity projection in one theater out of every three, audiences are rapidly becoming aware of the difference. They are seeking out the theaters that provide better picture quality on the screen, more comfortable seeing and more pleasant general illumination. With old style low intensity projection there is seldom enough light on the screen for good, comfortable seeing even in the best seats. At the back of the house screen brightness is so much reduced that pictures are dim and unsatisfactory.

Modern fast action and the new color pictures call for Simplified High Intensity projection. "Simplified" means new type lamps and "Suprex" Carbons. These have so reduced the cost per light unit on the screen that any theater can now afford high intensity projection.

The illustrated booklet, "The Eternal Triangle in Picture Projection," will tell you about it. Write for a copy.

Outlaws of Sonora

(Republic)

Mesquiteers Opus

The supposedly inimitable "Stony Brooke" of the Three Mesquiteers series here has a double, as mean a creature as the original is an example of upright western masculinity.

With the exception of this change in personnel lineup, the Mesquiteer makeup remains the same. Ray Corrigan still plays "Tucson" as a hard riding and heavy fisted gent, while Max Terhune remains the comical and ventriloquistically talented "Lullaby."

There is a plentiful supply of fast and expert horsemanship, skilled gun play, vigorous hand-to-hand combat, and the sharply shot scenes of western countryside. Action and suspense seem to have been doubled due to the plot manipulation of giving Bob Livingston the dual role of a good and a bad man part.

When "Dude Brannen," outlaw of the Mesquite Country, captures "Stony Brooke" and the $22,000 he is conveying from the bank to the local headquarters of the Cattleman's Association, the gentlemen, and the audience, are struck by the remarkable resemblance the captor bears to the captive or vice versa. "Dude" hits upon the novel scheme of posing as "Stony" while perpetrating a string of robberies and killings. When "Stony" escapes from his jailers he clears up matters with the valuable aid of his comrades.

Fight for Peace

(Warwick Pictures)

Propaganda Film

In the foreword there is a dedication of the motion picture to Abraham Lincoln and at the end is Franklin Roosevelt's "America Hates War" speech of last fall in Chicago. Between, a powerful indictment of war, dictators and mass brutality has been assembled from newsreel shots and presented in all its horrifying reality. The setting is the world's arena, especially in Europe and Asia, and the characters are world figures, some living, some dead.

The film is presented in documentary fashion and as such has several episodes, which separately or as a whole show the changing world map and emphasize the human misery. The picture deals with Russia and Stalin, Lenin, Trotsky and the Czar; with Germany and Hitler; with Austria and Dollfuss and Schuschnigg; with Italy and Mussolini and Ethiopia; with China and Japan; with Spain and Franco; with France and Leon Blum; the League of Nations; the Saar.

Throughout is a picture of violence and warfare, marching men, rifle and machine gun bullets, big guns, airplanes and exploding bombs, destruction and mangled bodies. The scenes depicting these victims of war are gruesome. Perhaps all or their like have been presented in newsreels, but a strong constitution is necessary to view them at all.

Viewed in projection room in New York.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Produced under the direction of J. J. Milstein for Warwick Pictures distribution. The narrative was adapted by Don Bartlett from original material by Henrik Willem Van Loon. Al Young edited. The narration is by David Ross. Running time, 70 minutes. To be released next week. Adult audience classification.

Die Werft zum grauen Hecht

(Casino Film Exchange)

Comedy-Romance

Allowing for the excessive length characteristic of German-made productions and the lack of superimposed English titles, the film to play at the Yorkville Casino, in the heart of New York's Deutschland Uber Alles section, is fairly entertaining comedy-romance, capably performed.

The title translates literally to "The Dock of the Gray Hecht," a species of fish, but, freely, the English title was given as "The Dock on the Havel" (river), rather misleading, for the story has to do with truck drivers and mechanics, but not one fish. The locale is in a small pleasure boat village outside Berlin.

The principal players are Marianne Hoppe, Hermann Speelmans, Oskar Sima and Fita Benkhoff. The film was produced by Pallas-Film.

A truck driver, to avoid the attentions of a widow, quits his job and gets work as a mechanic in a small town. He falls in love with a girl there. The widow arrives and greets the mechanic with effusive affection. His fiancée breaks off the engagement, but the widow's plot fails after all.

The picture was well received by an audience of Teutonic origin.—P. M.

The Drum

(London Films-UA)

Spectacle Melodrama

British production moves back to spectacle and pageantry, from the quiet characters of the English school and high courts to the large scale action of the northwestern frontiers of India, in warfare and in rajah's court. It is a production of splendor and scenic brilliance, with thrills and action, intrigue and cruelty, and a polite note of romance.

The story is an original by the English novelist A. E. W. Mason, and is so called because of a ceremonial drum played by a friendly boy Prince as a signal to the British troops to prevent an ambush. This comes as sequel to a somewhat confused story, in which politics and machine guns play equal parts.

It is a veritable British triumph for a Hungarian born director, Zoltan Korda.

Use of color has given some of the interiors a tawny hue and sequences do not always match, but the mountain backgrounds are impressive.

Sabu, of "Elephant Boy," is the loyal young "Prince," Raymond Massey the sinister "Prince Ghul," and Roger Livesey "Captain Cunningham."

Even in details of costume and music, "The Drum" has the hallmarks of quality.

The Little Flower of Jesus

(Calcagni-Sunray Films)

Religious Biography

Due to its nature and material, the appeal of this film biography of the Little Flower of Jesus, St. Therese of Lisieux, will be restricted largely to Catholic Church circles, although the simple life of the Saint has its selling elements for exhibitors in specialized communities. From a performance standpoint the French-made picture suffers from technical deficiencies, stilted dubbed English voices, spotty editing and stiffly theatrical acting of some of the players.

Simone Bourday plays the title role.

The film was presented under the supervision of the Office Catholique International du Cinéma and has been recommended by Jean Cardinal Verdier, church dignitary of Paris. Exhibition is being handled jointly by David Calcagni, supervising theatre distribution and Sunray Films at 220 West 42nd Street in New York City for church screenings. Georges Chaperot directed. The picture runs 75 minutes.

Lola Lane succeeds Glenda Farrell as "Torchy," while Paul Kelly is now "Lieutenant Steve McBride," the spot formerly occupied by Barton MacLane. Tom Kennedy continues in the role of "Gahagan," the bewildered cop. Anthony Coldeway wrote the original story which was adapted by George Bricker. William Clemens directed.

The plot centers about a New York bank robbery committed during a parade of the Loyal Conscious that the art of talking motion pictures has not yet reached technical perfection, Electrical Research Products Inc. continues to devote its efforts to anticipating and solving the problems of tomorrow.

In so doing, Electrical Research Products Inc. reaffirms its fundamental policy of maintaining an aggressive, long-range program of development and research, to the end that public interest in motion pictures may be constantly stimulated and the prosperity of producers and exhibitors, alike, enhanced.

The Charm of La Boheme

(International Cinemat)

Music, Romance

An adaptation of the opera "La Boheme," by Puccini, this importation recommends itself to supporters of opera and has entertainment value for others in its tragic love story and the performances of the two principals, Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth. It is a story within a story, for the setting is modern while the synopsis is the same as the opera, and with the exception of the last act, set within a theatre, it is enacted in its original locations.

The dialogue is in French but adequate English titles have been superimposed by Herman G. Weinberg.

Songs include "Don't Cry" and "I Love You," originals; the aria of Rudolfo and Mimi in the first act, of Musette in the second act, Rudolfo's tale in the third act and the quartet, also in the third act.

Reviewed at the World Theatre, New York. The picture was well received by an afternoon audience, who completely filled this small theatre, which specializes in foreign productions and reissues of Hollywood productions.—P. C. M.

Distributed by International Cinema Corporation. Produced by Intergloria Film. Directed by Geza Von Bolvary. Scenario, Ernest Marischka. Musical direction, Robert Stolz. English titles by Herman G. Weinberg. Running time, 99 minutes. Release date, March 17, 1938. Adult audience classification.

The Ski Chase

Ski Sport Feature

A trifle seasonally late but nevertheless entirely welcome is this feature length film lecture on the fine art of the ski sport. The entertainment factor consists of sportive thrills, comedy moments and splendid scenes of snow-covered mountains.

Featured as examples par excellence are Hannes Schneider, Leni Riefenstahl, and the comedy team of Guzzi Lantchner and Walter Rimpl, who appeared in "Slalom."

Much of the footage is reminiscent of material used by several ski short subjects. Lest the exhibitor fear political retaliation, according to an explanation received from the New York Times from Martin J. Lewis, managing director of the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, which sponsored the initial showing in New York, the production was made in the St. Anton am Arlbert Alpine district of Austria in 1931, Fraulein Riefenstahl was hired as an actress and exhibition in this country has been approved by the anti-Nazi boycott league with the specific pledge that no financial return be made to the Nazi governmental hands.

Seen on a Saturday night performance at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, lower New York art theatre, where a packed house followed the film with intense interest and evident enjoyment of the comic interludes.—J. F. C.

Produced by H. R. Sokal Film. Presented by George Kraska in association with World Pictures Corporation. Directed by Dr. Arnold Fanck. Music by Paul Dessau. Photography by Richard Angst. Music Made Simple

(MGM)

Comedy

Don't look now, but that man Robert (How To) Benchley, raconteur extraordinary, is here again, this time as a full grown dyed-in-the-wool music critic. One minute he's rattling off a learned dissertation on the old masters and their compositions, even if his pronunciation is a bit off key, and the next minute he's all flustered. Well, anyway, you know Benchley. Running time, 8 minutes.

The Penguin Parade

(Vitaphone)

Cute Cartoon

A well constructed colored cartoon results from this imaginative visit to a Penguin Night Club, one of the North Pole's hottest cold spots. The gay birds are seen making merry and a takeoff by the frigid fowl on the lunatic behavior of Broadway night owls is delightful fun, particularly for metropolitan centers.—Running time, seven minutes.

Latin Hi-Hattin'

(Universal)

Poor

Set in Latin American cafe, this musical rumble would offer colorless entertainment flavor regardless of its scenic background. Del Campo sings some soulful numbers; Eddie Bruce delivers a line of pale comedy, and Dorothy Stone and Charles Collins execute a rumba routine.—Running time, 17 minutes.

A Mountain Romance

Hillbilly Cartoon

A Terry-Toon animated subject, this has to do with the feud of the Calhouns and the McCoy's. The youngest Calhoun, a boy, serenades the youngest McCoy, a girl, which ignites the smoldering hate of the two mountaineer clans and the battle is on. When the smoke of battle has cleared and amid the ruins of both their homes, the boy and the girl continue their romance, unimpressed by family traditions. Running time, 6½ minutes.

Crossroads of the Orient

(Vitaphone)

Fair

Consisting of a visit to the city of Singapore, in which the contrast of the modern and ancient mode of living is effectively presented, a view of a Chinese funeral procession, an inspection of a Hindu temple, this Colortour Adventure number is mildly entertaining exploratory matter. Full enjoyment is prevented by some excessive and garish color pigmentation.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stooge Mess (or Riot)

The lads are mistaken by a ritzy society woman for representatives of an exclusive interior decorating firm. When the boys arrive on the scene to redecorate the palatial mansion, the rest can be imagined by the pro- or anti-Stoogian spectator.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Music from the Stars

Orchestra Subject

Horace Lapp and his orchestra contribute the music in this subject in an ornate setting. The music runs from swing and negro spirituals to a medley of tunes done in the modern manner. Photographic angles are emphasized in the subject. Singers include Madeleine Pedler and William Morton. Directed by Gordon Spauling. Running time, 9¾ minutes.

Interesting

This time the stop off in the Going Places series is in Holland and from this announcement of locale can be surmised the general run of travelogue material. There are some impressive statistics on the people and places of this quaint country, scenes of dikes and water-mills, shots of cheese making and tulip gardens.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Michael Selwyn Dies; "Discovered" Chaplin

Michael Selwyn, 66, of the Selwyn theatrical family, died Tuesday night in a New Rochelle, N. Y., hospital, after a year's illness.

Born in New York, Mr. Selwyn was stage manager, manager of vaudeville acts, and once, for five years, was with a circus in Europe.

While stage manager of Oscar Hammerstein for the old music hall Victoria theatre at Times Square, Mr. Selwyn is said to have discovered Charlie Chaplin. That was in the early 1900's.

As related by Adam Kessel, early in the film business but now an automobile dealer in Brooklyn, Mr. Selwyn suggested to Mr. Kessel that he "catch" an act in which Chaplin was appearing. Mr. Kessel did and signed Chaplin for motion pictures.

Durkee Testimonial Guests Protest Judge's Criticism

Frank Durkee, Baltimore circuit owner, was honored by 400 friends Tuesday night at a testimonial at the Hotel Belvedere in Baltimore, on his appointment to the presidency of the Park Board.

Toward the end of the dinner one-third of the guests walked out when toastmaster Judge Eugene O. Dunne in his speech said: "Hollywood film makers' standards are below national taste and the industry faces a public uprising unless standards are raised." The judge advocated the "peaceful picketing" of theatres by the public.

Now Mr. Myers Charges Industry Is Miscegenetic

A Boston audience at the Twentieth Century club on Tuesday heard Abram F. Myers, of the Allied States Association, make argument for the enactment of the Neely Bill as an instrument of delivery of control of the motion picture to the people.

Mr. Myers' dispassionate and detailed presentation made obeisance to the classic tradition of Boston by reference to motion pictures "as an art and as a business. They come to us through the joint efforts of those who create and those who exploit. They are the fruits of a miscegenetic union between Muse and Mammon."

The speaker did not indicate his authority for the assumption that such a union is to be considered miscegenetic. The most that could be charged, in the opinion of some students of biology or mythology, would be diverse citizenship, in that the Muse is Greek and Mammon apparently Aramaic. They are certainly neighbors, anyway. As this issue of THE HERALD went to press neither could be reached for a statement.

In his outline of the rise and prosperity of the industry of the motion picture, Mr. Myers touched again on the domestic relations when discussing the sequels to an early honeymoon of prosperity: "Those charged with the financing of the enterprise and the marketing of the product, sought to introduce into the studios an unfamiliar word 'economy.' . . . This estrangement already has reached the stage known to the lawyers as a mensa et thoro, Art being domiciled in Hollywood and Business in New York. Ultimate control resides with the money bags, in New York. . . ."

Mr. Myers did not say when is ultimate.

In his argument for the Neely bill Mr. Myers repeated for his Boston audience the familiar diagrammatic charges of vertical trust operation by "the Big Eight," etc., with reiteration of discussions of "block booking" and "blind selling." He charged that the industry is under a dictatorship, with citations of aspects of political dictatorships and concentrations of power—this in a plea to give the power to the Federal government.

In the course of his discourse Mr. Myers also reiterated his charges of subserviency to Mammon on the part of the trade press enjoying advertising patronage.

The speaker found occasion to remark: "Under the pressure of public indignation the industry, through the Hays Association, has acted to curb undesirable tendencies in the business. For example, after the Legion of Decency had been hastily organized and had declared an open boycott on salacious films, the Hays association in 1935 established the Production Code Administration to enforce the standards of decency which the industry had professed many years. This board is doing creditable work and will continue to be effective as long as public attention is centered on it."

Wilmington Handbill Action Is Deferred

Action on a proposed resolution, affecting theatres in Wilmington, Del., banning the distribution of handbills, circulars and other advertising matter on the city streets outside the building line, has been deferred by directors of the Street and Sewer Department. Action on the proposed amendment, which was given a first and second reading, was deferred until the city solicitor's office has had ample time to study a recent ruling of the United States supreme court in Washington.

The supreme court held that an ordinance of Griffin, Ga., requiring persons distributing circulars to obtain a license from the city manager violated constitutional guarantees of the freedom of the press. The court held that the distribution of leaflets may not be licensed much less forbidden.

Supreme Court Upholds State's Right to Censor

The right of state authorities to determine the type of motion picture to be permitted exhibition within the state was upheld Monday by the United States Supreme Court at Washington in affirming a decision of the U. S. District Court at New York upholding the action of the New York State censor board in refusing to issue a license for the exhibition of "Ecstasy," so-called sex film.

"Ecstasy," subject of long legal controversy, was imported from Czechoslovakia by Samuel Cummins' Eureka Productions, of New York. Mr. Cummins appealed to Washington on March 21st on the ground that, the picture having been permitted to enter the country by the United States Treasury Department, the New York censors' ban was a restraint upon foreign commerce, and could not supersede the Treasury permit.

The Supreme Court's decision was rendered in the form of an order affirming the District Court's findings with no opinion expressed either orally or in writing.

"Sex" films were involved in further controversy in New York, where the special picture preview committee of the Board of Regents was to view "Souls for Sale" and "The Pace That Kills," on Thursday, on appeal of the producers from the state censor board's refusal to grant permits in both cases.

"Souls for Sale" is on appeal by Jack Goldberg, of International Road Shows. Originally offered for a license on October 28, 1937, it was denied on November 3d, the state censor holding that it was "immoral" and would tend to corrupt morals.

Appellant's motion says that "The grounds upon which this appeal is based is an abuse of the discretionary power given to the Motion Picture Division." Mr. Goldberg asks that the censor's ruling be reversed and that license be issued.

Appeal on "The Pace That Kills," third revision, is signed by Bernard Kulick, of Syndicate Exchanges. Application for license was made on March 24, 1938, and was subsequently denied by the state censor as being "indecent, immoral and will tend to corrupt morals."

Petitioner contends the picture is not indecent since there is no attempt to portray anything lewd. However, "The Pace That Kills" has been offered to the Motion Picture Division for licensing on several occasions.

Another Grant by Rockefellers for Educational Films

The second grant, of $65,000, has been made by the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation to the film project of the Progressive Education Association, to continue for one more year, beginning July 1st, the preparation of class-room films by means of editing selected portions from commercial motion pictures, in cooperation with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

This work was first begun in July, 1936, on the basis of a two-year grant of $75,000, and 36 class-room shorts have been completed so far by Joseph Losey, as production director, with the assistance of Helen Van Dongen, as film editor, and Margaret Kneerim and Irving Lerner.

With the additional grant, 40 more films for class-rooms are to be made. The project is a part of the work of the Commission on Human Relations of the Progressive Education Association, of which Dr. Alice V. Kelliher is chairman.

By arrangement with Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers, 20th Century-Fox, the March of Time, Fox Movietone News, French Motion Picture Corporation and other companies, the project selects from productions of those companies ("a year after their first release, when they are no longer in active circulation") sections deemed to have educational value in human relations. These are edited to bring out social implications. Twenty public and private schools within the metropolitan area have been employing the project's films, which are in 16 mm width.

N. Y. Allied Unit Ready to Start

On May 3rd, at New York's Hotel Astor, independent exhibitors reputedly representing 100 theatres in the New York City and Albany territories, will launch the first Allied unit to operate in the state.

Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel, and Nathan Yamins, president, will speak.

Elsewhere, Allied affiliates were furthering plans for the organization's national convention, to be held May 17th to 19th, in Pittsburgh. M. A. Rosenberg, convention chairman, indicated this week that 50 per cent and other "high-percentage" contracts would be a chief topic.

Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana this week elected Ernest L. Miller, of the Cinema, Indianapolis, to the board of directors, succeeding Manny Marcus, resigned.

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia announced June 13th and the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach, as the date and place for the annual mid-summer convention, at which 200 are expected, headed by William Crocket.

Arthur K. Howard, business manager of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of Boston, who has been delegated by National Allied to further its expansion program said this week that the New York group will be the first to be organized under the expansion policy adopted at Allied's national convention. Separate organizations will be maintained for New York City and Albany, and a Buffalo group will be formed, all to be combined within the state unit.

In retaliation the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association decided Wednesday to invade New Jersey.

HIGH SPEED EMULSIONS FEATURED BY SMPE COMMITTEE ON PROGRESS

Development of New Film Listed as Outstanding Event; Roper Says Industry Must "Transcend Its Entertainment Qualities"

New high speed film emulsions of greater efficiency than any previously developed were the outstanding development in the technical progress of the motion picture industry during the year, according to the report of the progress committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, presented to the members as the Society opened its annual four-day spring convention in the Wardman Park Hotel, Washington, D. C., this week.

The convention program did not include wide discussion of any single development but was drawn rather to give a comprehensive survey of progress in photographic and laboratory procedure, color, sound, optics and projection. Included, however, were a discussion of documentary films as an aid to public relations and a paper on industrial and advertising films.

In an address at a luncheon which followed the opening of the convention on Tuesday, Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce, told members of the Society that "the American film has become an influential missionary and emissary whose objective must transcend its entertainment qualities if it is to fulfill properly its mission of constructive service."

"Research within the industry must be continuous," Mr. Roper said. "The motion picture must meet an increasing number of types of competition for the consumer dollar and the consumer is becoming increasingly discriminating. The profit motive needs to be subordinated to public service. This approach will prove to be the more satisfactory to all concerned."

William G. McAdoo, Senator from California and Colonel Daniel I. Sultan, engineer commissioner for the District of Columbia were other speakers at the luncheon.

The report of the progress committee listed the high speed panchromatic emulsions of the Agfa Anso Corporation as the outstanding technical development during the year. Also of importance was the development of two fine grain film stocks by Eastman Kodak, and a sound emulsion by Du Pont. In the sound recording field interesting developments included the introduction of linear decibel volume indicators by the United Artists studio and the introduction by RCA of the modulated high frequency method of determining optimal processing conditions.

Documentary Films

At the morning session on Tuesday A. A. Mercey of the School of Public Affairs of the American University at Washington told the several hundred delegates that documentary films are proving of increasing importance as a factor in informing and mobilizing public opinion. In a paper on "Documentary Film Study—A Supplementary Aid to Public Relations," Mr. Mercey stressed the importance of the motion picture in public relations and pointed out that the American University conducts courses in documentary films. The subjects covered are newsreels, federal educational

LOWEST KANSAS WAGE PAID THEATRE WOMEN

Of nine industries in Kansas, theatres pay women employees the lowest average weekly wage, it is indicated in a study by Miss Bessie B. Cole, director of the women's division of the Commission of Labor and Industry.

Theatres pay women employees an average of $8.99 a week. Laundries pay $9.12; hotels and rooming houses, $10.08; restaurants, $10.34; wholesale and retail stores, $12.90; beauty parlors, $13.79; manufacturing, $14.73; telephone companies, $15.84, and clerical (including only larger employers), $19.26.

The study covered more than 17,000 women employees, who represent 30 per cent of women over 18 employed in the state in the nine industries, in 62 towns with more than 2,500 population and 200 towns with population less than 2,500. The study will be used as a base for determining minimum wage codes.

Theatremen point out that in most cases women employees, usually cashiers and in some instances usherettes, do not work long hours.

and scientific films, U.S. Government documentaries, documentary aspects of Hollywood films, and industrial, sales and domestic propaganda films. For the first time, Mr. Mercey said in reporting on various activities in the field, the federal government is making a complete survey of all films handled by various departments.

Considerable interest was shown by the delegates in a discussion by R. W. Carter of the Taylor-Sloane Corporation on motion picture projection from metallic film. All problems affecting such projection and the methods used to solve them in experiments conducted by Mr. Carter were discussed as were present defects in the method.

Exposure and Ultra Speed Negative

The formal papers session started Tuesday afternoon when eight papers were read. Of greatest importance were two, one by L. A. Jones of Eastman Kodak on "The Determination of Correct Exposure in Photography," and the other by P. H. Arnold of Agfa Anso Corporation on "Problems in the Use of Ultra Speed Negative Film."

A new densitometer was described by H. Neumann of Klangfilm G.m.b.H., Germany, intended mainly for use in studios and laboratories but which is so accurate that it may be used also for scientific research. The absorption of light by the object is determined by means of a current set up in a blocking layer photoelectric cell which is measured by a very sensitive galvanometer giving direct density readings.

H. E. Ives of the Bell Telephone Laboratories described the transmission of motion pictures over a coaxial cable in one of the few papers devoted to television developments. His talk was illustrated with slides and motion pictures.

Among the papers on color developments one, by Mr. Jones of Eastman Kodak, outlined clearly the necessity for complete understanding of the physical nature of color before any study of methods of photography can be understood. A second discussed thoroughly the theory of color reproduction and gave a brief history of the various processes developed from the original suggestion of Clerk Maxwell, British physicist, who first suggested the additive process in 1885. T. T. Baker of Dufaycolor described a screen film negative-positive process.

Multiplane Camera Described

A description of the multiplane camera used in the Walt Disney studios for cartoon production in color was given by W. E. Garity of the Disney organization in a paper which told of the development of the apparatus from the familiar glass-shot technic and described its advantages in rendering out-of-focus diffusion and differential movements of the backgrounds.

The progress committee reported uncompleted items at present under consideration as: drawings for standard cores for cine film; further consideration of the proper separation distance between the two halves of the push-pull sound track; drawings of sprockets for 16mm sound film; revision of the standard release print to correspond with the revisions made by the Academy; review and possible revision of the glossary of technical terms, and carrying out actual tests on the new sprocket perforation for 35 mm. film which, it is hoped, will displace the old Bell & Howell perforation.

The design and operation of theatre loud speaker systems was discussed by J. F. Blackburn of the Lansing Manufacturing Company with reference to the problem engendered by the necessity for wide wavelength range to secure accurate reproduction.

The production of industrial films was the subject of a paper by J. A. Norling of the Loucks & Norling Studios. The increased demand for color in these films and other problems arising from present day demands of advertisers were discussed and a large portion of the paper was devoted to a detailed case history of the making of a typical industrial film from the original scenario to its ultimate use. On this general subject also was a paper by J. G. T. Gilmour of the General Electric Company on the history, methods of operation and equipment of the General Electric division that prepares, produces and distributes the pictures used by the Apparatus and Supply Division of the company.

Projectionists and Efficiency

F. H. Richardson, of Quigley Publications, emphasized the necessity of insuring the use of thoroughly capable and well trained projectionists to insure maximum efficiency of the apparatus. Supplementing this talk was a paper by J. R. Prater of the Congress theatre, Pabouse, Washington, on the importance of equipping booths with an ample supply of tools designed to test and make minor repairs in projection and sound apparatus.

A new projector mechanism incorporating many new safety features was described by H. Griffin of the International Projector Corporation.

The Society's semi-annual banquet was held in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel Wednesday evening. Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees, vice-president in charge of research and development of the Eastman Kodak company was the principal speaker. Entertainment and dancing followed the dinner.

EXHIBITORS OPEN STRONG CAMPAIGN AS RENTAL WAR LOOMS IN ENGLAND

Breach Opened by Argument on Grading Widened by Publicity Barrage; Both Sides Show Unprecedented Unity in Fight

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Action has come swiftly and with the ominous thunder of advancing artillery in the British industry's "civil war," a war which, now the smoke of battle over the quota has died down, looms over the trade and establishes the vexed and fundamental question of rentals as the major issue.

Following the protracted and abortive talks between exhibitors and renters on the subject of graded films and percentages asked for them, the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, while keeping the door diplomatically open on the wider issues, virtually has declared war on the Kinematograph Renters' Society by organizing what is tantamount to a partial but flexible boycott. Empowered by the general if not necessarily unanimous vote of its members, the exhibitors' General Council is planning its own grading or "degrading" scheme and, with a mass campaign of education and propaganda as the first weapon, is planning to tell exhibitors which "A" films not to book under any circumstances.

Following publication by the CEA of the distributors' supposedly secret list of "A" films, a publication intended by the exhibitors' war council as a broad hint that films not to be found on the list must be "B" films and should then be booked only at a flat rate, the distributors' organization, the KRS, decided to abandon issuance of regular classification lists for rental and booking purposes and to confine such grading to verbal advice to its members.

The CEA campaign got under way this week when Ken Nyman, president, and Charles P. Metcalfe, ex-president, organized a group of speakers to address meetings of exhibitor units in the provinces.

Claiming that this is the first time the KRS as a body has taken collective action on rentals, the CEA has come to the conclusion that only collective action will be understood and felt. It is the Association's belief, a belief voiced at General Council meetings by exhibitors of the calibre of Sydney Bernstein and Theo Fligelstone, that if such action is taken and a boycott of certain films organized, the economic effect will be felt in the United States, and that when the American offices observe a depletion of income from Great Britain they will want to know why.

The feeling that the British market is being exploited as a financial reserve against American losses has long been prevalent, and was voiced by Sydney Bernstein at the meeting which, on April 13th, decided on war. Bernstein claimed that, thanks to the solidarity of American exhibitors, high rentals were almost unknown in the U.S., and Loew's theatres were showing double feature bills, with films graded "A" on this side of the Atlantic.

A significant aspect of the new situation is that for once in a while the Association's rank and file have not needed the crack of the executive whip. General Council action follows a sharp and widespread feeling of resentment and of a need for protective action on the part of CEA members all over the various territories, and it is known that many wilder spirits have had to be held in check.

Circuits in this instance remain solidly with the independents, believing they will be gainers no less from any fruits forthcoming from the battle. It is understood that any advance which may be gained can only be with complete Association unity.

None the less there are dissentients from the CEA policy, just as there are renters who refuse to subscribe to the KRS grading scheme and the ultimate result of the new battle rests probably more delicately on this question of unity than on any other factor in the situation. If complete solidarity could be assured—and by that term is meant one hundred per cent and inflexible unity of front and action—the effect on the renters' finances would be noticeable, and protective action on their part would be imperative. The faint but slightly nervously toned voices which have been heard in the CEA Council indicate that there is no particular certainty that this has been or will be achieved. Indeed inside information hints at very tepid and mechanical rather than heartfelt support from some of the Association's own executives. Against this must be weighted the refusal of G.F.D., Associated British, 20th Century-Fox and others, to have any truck with grading.

Most significant spirit inspiring this new campaign into which has gone and is going much exhibitor energy long directed to fighting the quota battle, is the increasing belief that the grading of films is but a mask for higher rentals all round. It will take a great deal of campaigning to implant this theory deeply into the minds of some of the Association's far flung provincial members and delegates, whose distance from the smoke of battle may have lent enchantment to the view but has undoubtedly removed the essential spirit of realism which victory demands. Nonetheless the conviction has gained ground that talks with the KRS are no longer likely to prove useful, and that the need is for immediate and corporative action. If action is not taken now, claim the rebels, to stop the grading of films, then the inevitable corollary will be the control, not only of the methods and terms of booking, but of the prices of the films themselves. The problem has thus become one of economics rather than politics.

The last word rests of course with the paying public, who will continue to grade the films they see irrespective of renter or exhibitor inflation of their values. Whilst admitting this, the CEA retorts that the exhibitor must meanwhile take "A" films and put them forward as first features irrespective of what the patron thinks. "Instead of catering for their public exhibitors will be forced to submit to the rapacity of the renters." Unfortunately the slump which has affected the trade so badly since February last and which has virtually paralysed some picture houses and circuits shows that the customers always have the last word.

Studio Resumes After Strike

Work has been resumed at the Gainsborough studio, Islington, following a delay occasioned by the strike of members of the Electrical Trades Union who had gone out in sympathy with projectionist members of the union who walked out of London cinemas two weeks ago. The operator strike, however, resulted in no theatre closings and the men were reported returning to work this week.

The Electrical Trades Union last week protested to the Office of Works against the alleged employment of non-union projectionists at a private screening for King George VI at Windsor Castle.

Rogers Memorial Fund Short Subject Previewed

The Will Rogers Memorial Fund short subject, "Auld Lang Syne," produced by Warner Brothers, and which will be shown in theatres the week beginning Friday, was previewed at the company's home office this week. The film will be distributed free to all theatres remitting audience collections. The collections will be used for the future support of Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, Saranac Lake, N. Y., and for its kindred philanthropies.

The cast of the subject is studded with star names. James Cagney introduces various celebrities: Rudy Vallee, Dick Powell, Donald Crisp and Benny Goodman and his swing orchestra. Appearing briefly are John Barrymore, Freddie Bartholomew, Louise Fazenda, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert, Humphrey Bogart and others. Paul Muni explains the purpose of the drive and invites the audience to contribute to the Fund.

The film runs approximately 10 minutes.

A. P. Waxman, director of the drive, returned to New York from Hollywood this week and said a minimum of 5,000 theatres will participate in the Will Rogers Memorial Week.

Solly Kann has become affiliated with the Strand Press, New York, theatrical and motion picture printers.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

Radio Talent

Billy Bennett, one of Britain's most popular radio star comedians, whose apparel includes spotless evening dress and brown hob-nailed boots, is to play a comedy role in a film entitled "Almost a Gentleman," which is being directed at the Nettlefold Studios at Walton on Thames by Oswald Mitchell, and is to be released by Butchers.

"Almost a Gentleman" is Bennett's recognized subtitle, and the story was devised around and especially written for the comicker. Bennett appears as Bill Barker, night watchman who is mistaken for a captain of industry at a fancy dress ball and is decoyed into becoming chairman of a bucket shop organization.

Kathleen Harrison, English cockney comedian, plays opposite the star, and the cast also includes Gizz McLaughlin and Marcelle Røgez.

Replacement

Diana Churchill who was to play the leading role in "Yellow Sands," the Associated British production, chief feature of which is the West Country of England, has had to relinquish her part owing to ill health. Replacing her in the role is Belle Chrystall, who has appeared with notable success in one British picture, "Edge of the World."

Dame Marie Tempest, distinguished doyen and British actress, Wilfred Lawson, Patrick Barr and Robert Newton are others who will play in this adaptation of Eden Phillpotts' comedy, which is being directed by Herbert Brenon.

Made in Italy

A film with an all masculine cast, and a thriller with a war time background, has been made recently in Italy under Anglo-Italian auspices by Two City Films, Ltd., to be known as "13 Men and a Gun."

It is announced that this is the first of seven to be made by the same company and to be produced at the Tirrenia Studios, Italy.

Over 40 English stars and technicians were taken to Italy by Two City Films to work there under the aegis of Mario Zampi, producer and director. The artists include Arthur Wontner, who plays one of the leading roles, Allan Jeayes, Gibb McLaughlin and Wally Patch.

Exteriors

Scenes recently completed on "Lost Lady," the new Alfred Hitchcock production of Gainsborough Pictures (nee "The Wheel Spins"), include the interior of the Hotel Peter, a travellers' inn in the Balkans, and exterior shots outside the hotel lounge. More recently the unit has been hard at work reconstructing a set depicting a full length train on the Continental Near East line whose dining-cars, rest-rooms, corridors, bathroom and second and first class compartments has been built from the original on a well known Austrian line.

Playing in the film are the new British romantic team Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave, Paul Lukas, American stage and screen star, and Dame May Whitty, veteran British character actress. Also in the cast are Basil Radford, Cecil Parker, Naunton Wayne, Emile Boreo and Linden Travers.

The story has been adapted by Gainsborough's scenario editors, Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat, from Ethel Lina White's novel "The Wheel Spins." Jack Cox is in charge of the cameras and settings are by Vetchinsky.

Bathtub for Shaw

Gabriel Pascal, producer of the film version of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," has achieved the seemingly unachievable in introducing a bath-tub scene into the famous Shaw play.

The bath is referred to in the original play only in dialogue, but Mr. Pascal and Mr. Shaw have apparently agreed that the scene has delicate comedy and pictorial possibilities, so the playwright sat down and wrote in a new scene in which Miss Wendy Hiller will be seen by picture theatre patrons wallowing in suds and water in a dramatic manner, not unprecedented on the motion picture screen, but certainly new to the works of George Bernard Shaw.

Sawyer to Deane

"The Return of Carol Sawyer," first Warner Brothers First National film to take the floor at the Teddington studios since the recent close-down, is being shot under the new title of "The Return of Carol Deane."

The studios has been closed since January 8th, but this week the wheels of production started to turn again, and with Arthur Woods, recently back from Hollywood, directing, and Basil Emmott at the camera, work has started on the new Teddington production.

The part of Carol Deane is being played by Bebe Daniels, and opposite her is Arthur Margetson, who will be remembered for his work with Clive Brook in "Action for Slander." Chili Bouchier goes blonde in "The Return of Carol Deane." Other supporting players include Zena Dare, Wyndham Goldie, and Lesley Brook.

Pirates

Now in production at the Elstree studios of Associated British is "Queer Cargo," screen version of Noel Langley's story of the China Seas, in which John Lodge plays the part of Captain Harley, skipper of a tramp steamer involved in piracy and mutiny.

Red-headed Judy Kelly has the leading feminine role—daughter of a British vice-consul who essays to travel on the tramp steamer.

Among others in the cast of "Queer Cargo" are Kenneth Kent, who makes his first screen appearance in the role of a gentlemanly pirate who sports carnations in his buttonhole as he watches his crew commit murder. Louis Borell, handsome Dutch actor, Bertha Belmore, Wylie Watson, Jerry Verno and Frank Pettingell.

Harold Schuster, director of "Wings of the Morning" is in charge with Otto Kanturek at the camera.

IN COURTS FROM READERS OBITUARIES

Bondholders File Objections To Proposed Midland Plan

The charge that Midland Investment Company, which owns Loew's Midland theatre in Kansas City, may be insolvent is made in the objections filed by a bondholders' committee to the plan of reorganization under 77B proposed by the Securities Service Corporation.

"The debtor's own Exhibit 'A' in the printed circulation letter of the reorganization manager, Profits or Annual Earnings Statement, reflects insolvency. It concludes with 'Surplus Before Depreciation, $28,815.' The annual audit reports show depreciation deductions of over $100,000 per year," the bondholders stated.

April Productions Files Ten New Suits

April Productions, Inc., has filed 10 additional suits in the New York supreme court against Harms, Inc., seeking $1,100,000 damages, a permanent injunction and an accounting of profits. Ten suits asking a similar amount and bringing the total demanded to $2,200,000 were filed last month. April contends that its predecessor, Shubert Theatres Corporation, Shubert Theatrical Corporation and the Winter Garden Company contracted for the publication and mechanical reproduction of songs, but that the contracts did not include radio rights.

Harms contends that radio rights were included and has filed a counter claim for $100,022 in each action. Plays involved in the latest suits are "Riquette," "Lady in Ermine," "Caroline," "Hitchy Koo," "Springtime of Youth," "Katja," "Passing Show of 1923," "Dew Drop Inn," "Innocent Eyes" and "Passing Show of 1924."

Permitted To Retain Property

French Motion Pictures, Inc., distributors of French films in North and South America and now in 77B reorganization proceedings, was permitted to continue in possession of its property until May 19th by Special Master John E. Joyce at a hearing in the United States district court in New York this week. Louis Soll, attorney for the debtor, told Mr. Joyce that income for the month ending April 15th was $1,834 against expenses of $1,374.

Suit Against Warners Dismissed

The $10,000 infringement suit brought by Select Theatres Corporation against Warner Brothers was dismissed in the United States district court in New York this week by Federal Judge John C. Knox on the grounds that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. Select was granted 20 days to file an amended complaint. The action alleged infringement of the play "The Audition" in the Warner film, "Ready, Willing and Able."

Bankruptcy Plea Filed

Walter Mitchell Morosco, film producer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in Federal court in Los Angeles, listing $1,744 in assets and $40,987 in liabilities. Listed among the debts were $910 owed to Consolidated Film Laboratory, and $32,000 in delinquent income tax.

Ben Henry in New York

Ben Henry, general manager of Associated British Film Distributors, has arrived in New York for conferences with Jack Barnstyn, Grand National foreign manager.

PICTURE REPORTS WIDELY READ

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I am enclosing reports on "What the Picture Did for Me" on features and shorts up to date.

I never did realize that these were read so widely; just supposed that exhibitors were the only interested parties, but have received a number of clippings printed in newspapers and they were taken from "What the Picture Did for Me."

I had a letter from an Eleanor Powell fan berating me for saying that she wasn't a good drawing card, a clipping from an exhibitor in Canada, a paper from some friends in Hollywood wherein a columnist had filled his column with my reports and he had picked out the bad ones. It looks like the column is read by a lot of people.

Business here is not so good and rentals are much too high for the amount of business that the pictures draw. I hope the producers and distributors see the light before another selling season, and do some cutting on both ends.

Most of the exhibitors in this country have been getting by, but they haven't had any new furniture, haven't fixed up their homes, if they owned one, and will have to replace equipment some time. With what? Not the profits from sale of pictures.

—MRS. MAYME P. MUSSELMAN,
Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan.

PRODUCT NOT FOR THEATRE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD

In the issue of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD dated April 23, 1938, you ran a story "product of 40 Companies in Independent Field in Sight for '38-'39," in which you mention Castle Films as a "prominent possibility" for the independents' market. This is not a fact.

Castle Films has no intention of entering the theatrical field. Our province is to supply the home movie market with 16mm. and 8mm. films and also to produce industrial pictures.

We are too busy in our specialized work to even consider entering any other field.

—EUGENE W. CASTLE,
President, Castle Films.

Mistrial Asked in Georgia Suit

Warner Brothers this week in Fulton County superior court, Atlanta, Ga., moved for a mistrial of the $100,000 libel suit brought against the company by Prison Commissioner Vivian L. Stanley when he was quoted as saying that six other Georgia officials had received "substantial sums" out of court as the result of suits they filed against the company. A mistrial was asked on the grounds the quotation prejudiced the case. The action involves the Warner film, "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang."

Hotels Elect F. C. Walker

Frank C. Walker, vice-president of the Comerford theatre circuit, has been elected to the directorate of the Bowman-Biltmore Hotels Corporation.

Jacob Rosenthal Dies

Jacob C. Rosenthal, Troy exhibitor, died April 20th in Leonard Hospital after a long illness. Mr. Rosenthal had been in the industry since 1909, when he operated the Lyceum theatre in Troy. At the time of his death he owned three independent houses, Fifth Avenue, Rivoli and Rose.

Mort Harris

Mort Harris, assistant to Louis K. Sidney in the production of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Maxwell House Coffee radio series, was killed in an automobile accident in Hollywood Sunday. Mrs. Harris was critically injured and is in a hospital.

Grace L. Furniss

Miss Grace Livingston Furniss, playwright of a generation ago, died in Rye, N. Y., April 20th, in her 74th year. Among her plays were "Gretna Green," "Mrs. Jack," "Robert of Sicily," "Tandem" and "The Man on the Box."

Joseph Steinkertz

Joseph Steinkertz, Brooklyn exhibitor, who operated the New Broadway theatre, died April 22d.

Henry Meister

Henry Meister, 40, stage manager at the Bay theatre, Green Bay, Wis., for the last six years, died last week.

Edward Smith

Edward Smith, treasurer of the Strand theatre on Broadway, New York, died April 21st. He was 42 years old.

Writ Against Warners Refused

Hollywood Hotel Revue, Inc., producer of stage shows for film theatres, has been denied a temporary injunction pending trial in New York supreme court in its suit against Warner Brothers. The plaintiff claimed infringement of the title "Hollywood Hotel" in the film of the same name. The defense contends that the name is the property of the Campbell Soup Company from whom permission to use the name was obtained.

Issues Writ on Film

United States District Judge Edward J. Moinet in Detroit this week issued a temporary injunction against Hershel Johnson, Jack Moss and Frederick Raoul Cleaver, and Ferguson and Krul, owners and operators of the White Star in Detroit, in connection with alleged pirating of prints on "The Lash of the Penitents," owned by Michael J. Levinson, according to Al Krellberg, attorney for Mr. Levinson. Ferguson and Krul were restrained from releasing the print and turning over rental money to the other three defendants, from whom the operators allegedly rented the film, and the three were restrained from further rental of the picture.

National Theatre Meet at Del Monte

The second annual convention of National Theatres Corporation, embracing all circuits operated by Skouras Brothers for Twentieth Century-Fox, will be held the first week of August at Del Monte, Cal. Spyros Skouras and William Powers, home office executives, will attend.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Extra advertising offset the normal slump due to Holy Week, and a large number of patrons enjoyed to the fullest this sparkling comedy. This is a picture that should be played regardless of the lateness of the date. Played April 15-16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KING STEPS OUT, THE: Grace Moore, Franchot Tone—Very good and was well liked. Cannot understand it. They just won't come out to see Grace Moore, and yet her pictures are the best. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 28-29.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

OLD WYOMING TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—Charles Starrett is increasing in popularity here. Little bit better than normal business. Played March 12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE ORIENT: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Very good and pleased the Holt fans. Played this on the weekend with another feature and the show sure made them talk.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

OVERLAND EXPRESS, THE: Buck Jones—Great shades of William S. Hart; here it is! Indians, Pony Express and all the trimmin's. Can't help but please the western fans. I'm wondering if this script wasn't written after "Wells Fargo" was released.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

RACKETEERS IN EXILE: George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable—Comedy and suspense, and sure pleased. Used it with "Fugitive in the Sky" and both made up a good program. Nowadays patrons expect a mighty good feature or else a double program if you want to pay expenses. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 30-31.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SPEED TO SPARE: Charles Quigley, Dorothy Wilson—Pleased my Saturday patrons. Don't believe it would draw any other day of week in average town. Played April 16.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

TWO FISTED GENTLEMAN: James Dunn, June Clayworth—Very nice and pleased. Used this on a double bill and it held its own. If you intend using this as a single, better be sure you get good shorts to fill the bill.—George Khattar, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

UNDER SUSPICION: Jack Holt, Katherine De Mille—Not very interesting or exciting in spite of so many shady goings on. No more than average draw. Played February 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Crescent

RAW TIMBER: Tom Keene—Another Keene subject that really is "keen." In this the star departs from the western formula and steps into the role of a forest ranger; an excellent move on the part of the producer. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 10.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

First National

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran—Very good western and pleased. Foran is getting well liked here and seems to always please. Played with this a group of shorts consisting of serial, two two-reel comedies, Floyd Gibbons reel and two cartoons, and was afraid. Got a big surprise on the second night when the receipts were much higher than the opening. It must be good. Played March 11-12.—Running time, 56 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—Thoroughly enjoyed by my patrons. Play it in any spot. Running time, 10 reels. Played April 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

In this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—Here is a picture that has everything that a small town exhibitor could ask for, but for some reason has failed to draw for us. The work of Brent, Tim Holt and Raines is outstanding. This young Holt has much promise. I cannot see why this picture should be a flop, but I notice that I am not the only one who fell down with it. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—An excellent picture that would have been much better if more care had been taken in direction. Many faults can be found with it, but it drew good business and pleased, and that's more than many of the supers are doing.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

MARKED WOMAN: Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart—Our remarks are no different from other exhibitors. Very good and brought many comments. Drawing power good. Bogart deserves much credit for his acting, and when we announce a coming attraction with this star the fans just can't stop praising him. Bette Davis also very good. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 21-22.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MISSING WITNESSES: John Litel, Dick Purcell, Jean Dale—Our patrons disappointed and we did not blame them. Racketeering clean-up following a cookie-like pattern, a cast or director that made the picture look amateurish. Producers must be trying to drive us all to doubling, in an effort to keep our patrons satisfied. These weak pictures won't deliver enough.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris—Down the alley for the small town. Something introduced in the navy line that the country people like to see; that is the sea and ships and the men that man them. Action and comedy very interesting. Play it. Running time, 10 reels. Played April 21.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris—I was afraid this was a very weak Sunday booking, but was pleasantly surprised to see the folks come in from the highways and by-ways and all who saw it were pleased, even the women. Played April 10.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemon, S. D. General patronage.

Grand National

GIRL SAID NO, THE: Robert Armstrong, Irene Hervey—Very nice and pleased. Used this as the second feature on a double bill and satisfied. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 4-5.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

SWEETHEART OF THE NAVY: Eric Linden, Cecelia Parker—Was liked and had a good crowd on hand. Played it on a double bill with Tex Ritter. This makes a good feature for your double program. Not too big and yet not too small. A good change from the average feature. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 18-19.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

TEX RIDES WITH THE BOY SCOUTS: Tex Ritter—Not what you would call outstanding but what difference does that make when they come in and cheer for Tex. This is what counts and means box office plus. This was our first Ritter and was well received. Played it on a double bill and satisfied capacity houses. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 18-19.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Liberty Pictures

CHEATERS: Bill Boyd, June Collyer—Never pleased, and you should have heard the patrons as they passed out, after expecting Boyd to give some He-Man stuff and get disappointed. You can see just what to expect. Double billed this and glad the other feature was very good.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe—The best Wallace Beery picture in a long while. Business was somewhat better than we anticipated due to Beery's other two most recent flops. Dennis O'Keefe is fine and Miss Bruce is at her best. Played February 19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe—Good picture of its kind. We did a pretty nice business. Wallace Beery is well liked. Dennis O'Keefe good also. Virginia Bruce very pretty as usual. Do not be afraid of this one. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 24-25.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—Play it and you will see red. At that I am still in favor of the CCC: Cancel Crawford Contract.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler Mo. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice—Here is a picture that has everything in it one could ask for but still did not click here at all. Swell entertainment and Miss Garland and Miss Brice are wonderful. One patron said: "Put in Miss Garland's black face stunt and the last reel, throw the balance in the ash can, and then perhaps they would have enjoyed it better." Maybe he was correct. I do feel that there was too much Billie Burke and Reginald Owen. One said, "The noisiest picture I ever saw." Running time, 89 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—An excellent production, but a great many patrons, as well as myself, would rather see Jeanette teamed with Nelson Eddy. Allan Jones can sing, but he is not nearly so good as Nelson Eddy. Scenery good and Jeanette's dancing is great. Some thought the picture a little too long, but it was entertaining all the way through. Running time, 131 minutes. Played March 25-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—Business average, but numerous disappointed customers. Just a fair program picture which won't stand much bally. Played April 10-11.—Jimmie Denham, Rex Theatre, Fort Lavaca, Tex. General patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone—I would like to ask if there was ever a picture with the word love in the title that clicked. Please name one.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy, Alan Curtis, Leo Gorcey—Splendid acting by Tracy. Curtis is really good. Should be starred very soon. Business terrible, because of weather. Crawford is slowly playing out. She started her downward pace in "The Bride Wore Red." If Leo Gorcey had a longer part he would have stole the show. Give us more like "Dead End" with Gorcey. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 6-7.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—This failed to justify rental classification. As a picture it's just fair. It's actionless. Played February 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN-FROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—Not a bad picture, but did very ordinary business. If MGM expects to keep Miss Loy's pictures in the high bracket they better keep her with Mr. Powell.—A. F. Allen, Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Colo. Small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—Very good. This is much the best performance Franchot Tone has ever given, while Myrna Loy is always good. Story entertaining and an excellent supporting cast. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 1-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Buelah Bondi—A thoroughly enjoyable picture which should do better at the box office than it did for us. Pleased our patrons 100%. It made a dandy to bid for Holy Week business.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Florence Rice, Robert Young, Frank Morgan—Entertaining picture. Robert Young always good and pleasing. Florence Rice very pretty and a good little actress. Frank Morgan good as usual. Lots of laughs. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 22-23.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Very good. I cannot, however, say that I thought it was a big special. My patrons evidently thought different, though, as we did exceptional business and, after all, the customer is always right.—A. F. Allen, Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Colo. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—This is splendid entertainment. Fair box office. Played February 22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan—This picture shows that Robert Taylor can really act. I have always thought so myself, but have read reports knocking him and he is the most handsome fellow, I believe, in pictures. This is a swell show from start to finish. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 17-18.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney—A great picture of family life. Each star perfect in his role, especially Mickey Rooney. He is becoming quite popular here. No extra business, but no fault in the picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper—This picture stands out like a Republican gold dollar among a bunch of Democrat tax tokens. I believe the best to date from this star did not draw more than average business, but pleased 100 per cent.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME: Grant Richards, Evelyn Venable—The Hall Johnson Choir was beautiful in this picture, and well worked into the story, which was interesting to all. The picture drew well. Played April 6.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—Pretty good Saturday picture, though "Hopalong Cassidy" would have been better received. Carrillo steals show in spite of his ungodly accent. If they had cut the mike when he began to sing, everything would have been well. Played April 9.—Jimmie Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Tex. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—"The Big (Outcast)." Paramount titled this one "The Big Broadcast." In the days of vaudeville, we called them "turkeys." Times really haven't changed much.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Ben Blue—Business good. Picture would have been better if W. C. Fields would have taken a vacation. In other words, he's out. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 6-8.—Jack Hazlett, Chief Theatre, Marceline, Mo. Small town patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert—Audience reaction to this one very good. Situations and dialogue ready built for laughs and these two stars certainly put it over. Don't be afraid of this one. Played April 14-15.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

FOUR MORE REPORT FOR FIRST TIME

Exhibitors from three states have their first reports on pictures they have played in the columns of "What the Picture Did for Me" this week. They are:

A. F. ALLEN, Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Colo.

CHARLES L. FISK, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo.

JACK HAZLETT, Chief Theatre, Marceline, Mo.

FRANK TEMPLIN, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind.

Read the comment of these theatre-men in the theatremen's own department.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt—A fair western, but this town is Hopalong Cassidy and Gene Autry crazy. Not up to standard Saturday business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 16.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt—Except that this was unreasonably short on running time, it's a good attraction. It did a better Tuesday business than many more highly rated epics would have. The photography was something to write home about. It makes for unconscious added visual enjoyment. Played March 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff—This is the granddaddy of all the sea pictures. I have run them all and this is the best of the lot, not excepting the great "Bounty." Drew less than average business, but pleased all who came. Boost it and you will be glad you ran it.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff—Splendid picture from every angle and with an adequate cast to put over a story that had both entertainment and historical interest. The new girl, Franciska Gaal, looks to be the best of the imports for many years. She really has something.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Frank Darion—Not quite as good as some of his previous ones. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Frances Farmer—Played this to a low tide. Beautiful color, but don't mean a thing at the box office.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—Mae West is washed up here. I suppose this is about as good as her previous ones. We used to do some business with Mae's pictures, but they refuse to see any of them any more. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 29-30.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—The Mae West fans (if there are any left) were on their holiday. We didn't see them at our theatre. It's average entertainment. Bad gross. Played February 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLD 'EM, NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Good little program picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell—Reissue. Fine production. A good drawing card anywhere. Gary Cooper's first start to stardom. Played April 15.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE DARK: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore—Comedy drama with real singing by Boles and Miss Swarthout. Our weekend audience would have liked more action. Think this would have better midweek.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE DARK: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore—Don't make the mistake I made by trying to make 'em like this one, because if you do you may show same like I did, to empty seats. It's too bad to report below zero business on this most excellent picture, but that's the works. Everyone in this delivered the best that they had, but this type is a house emptier.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Yacht Club Boys—Fair picture, but can't the Yacht Club Boys sing but one style of songs? Might be better.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Very good picture, especially for men. The ladies like a little more of a love story. No doubt the best Paramount has made this season. Running time, 115 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

Republic

BOOTS AND SADDLES: Gene Autry, Judith Allen—SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Polly Rowles—This is a fair series of westerns. It seems that these pictures are a trifle slow. If Autry got down to earth, he could really gain back some of the popularity he is losing.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

ESCAPE BY NIGHT: William Hall, Anne Nagel—A good program picture with a capable cast and good plot, makes this entertaining film fare. No adverse comment. Running time, 65 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

GIT ALONG LITTLE DOGIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Having read repeated reports regarding the merits of Gene Autry's westerns, we sat back looking for a natural for the weekend, but never greeted such a poor crowd after the show. Business usual. The appreciative farmer who, as a rule, lets you know how well he enjoyed the western, didn't seem to be his old self on this one. Buck, get us better results.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GUNSMOKE RANCH: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—Not up to the standard of previous pictures of the Three Mesquiteers. Business fair for Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 2.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

HIT THE SADDLE: "Three Mesquiteers"—Was very pleasantly surprised by this western, the music was very appropriate; it had some fine western outdoor scenery. "Elmer," the dummy, was a very fine imitation of "Charlie McCarthy," and the wild horses in the picture fascinating. This is a long ways from being an ordinary western.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak—Played this picture in zero weather. Picture the same. Don't forget one April shower will not make many May flowers. Get some more stars. Autry can't hold up the ship alone.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Leo Carrillo, Ann Dvorak—Republic certainly did come across in this one. Here is a real picture that will appeal to all patrons. The only bad feature is that Republic gives us only one or two of these a season. Why are they so scarce with good product? Running time, 85 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN: Wynne Gibson, Warren Hull—Very pleasing picture. Much better than expected. Can recommend it for whole family. Played April 18.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Maine. Small town patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Polly Rowles—See Theodore J. Friedman's report on "Boots and Saddles."

THREE MESQUITEERS: This is a very good series of westerns with good production value, good acting by the trio and action throughout. I really believe that these are the best westerns that Republic can boast of.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

WRONG ROAD, THE: Richard Cromwell, Helen Mack—This picture has a good cast, but only proves passable entertainment. It does not have the necessary fire and rapidity to class it above program fare. Running time, 61 minutes.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns and Allen—Excellent picture. Plenty of action, comedy and good acting and dancing. Good anywhere. But, like a good many other productions, there was in it almost a whole reel of dark pictures. Dark pictures are no good. They should eliminate the dark scenes. Played March 5.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT FROM GLORY: Chester Morris, Whitney Bourne—An average picture; no great drawing power. Did not draw well, but was mildly pleasing. Played March 19.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen—A dandy little picture which should please the entire family. Good for any spot in a small town where Breen is liked.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen, Ned Sparks—A better than average program picture that drew a few extra tickets to the box office. Breen and Sparks both good in their parts. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 13-14.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen, Juanita Quigley—Good little program picture. This drew quite well. It would have done much better had the roads and weather been better. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Wheeler and Woolsey have a regular following who enjoyed their offering. Business normal. Played March 19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie—Terrible is the word for it. Nothing to compare with Lily Pons' last picture. I do not believe anyone who saw this in our theatre liked it. No business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

MAID'S NIGHT OUT: Joan Fontaine, Allan Lane—Played this as a midnight show. Picture very ordinary and no comments from patrons. Personally consider it much below average program fare. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 8-9.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

NIGHT SPOT: Parkyakarkus, Allan Lane, Joan Woodbury—Good double feature number. Production is excellent and picture is capable of holding its own on any two-picture program. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 15-16.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller—Well liked in this situation and, while it did not pull extra business, managed to hold to the average in spite of bad weather conditions. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 20-22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie—Excellent comedy drama. Another hit from RKO. Keep the good work going. A box office natural. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Jack Oakie, Bob Burns, Kenny Baker, Milton Berle, Ann Miller—Here is one picture that has everything and one any exhibitor may be proud to present. Personally, I would like to see it again. Every star in this is grand. I hope to see more of Ann Miller. She is really cute and a fine dancer. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 3-4.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller—Well received; many favorable comments. Business 95 per cent of average Friday-Saturday. I believe the title kept them away, as it sounds like a musical extravaganza and the public is tired of giant musicals. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 7-9.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou, Ann Miller—Good entertainment. Undoubtedly the best we have had from RKO this season. Miss Rogers very good, but our people expected her to be good. The surprise they got was in Ann Miller. They liked her very much and are wondering why they have not seen her before and when they will see her again. We hope to see her often and that she is given more chance to display her talent.—A. F. Allen, Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Col. Small town patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—This very light drama seemed to please so we have no complaint, but it seemed to belong in the current cycle of slightly "nutty" pictures. Played April 13-14.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Think they sent me the foreign version. Could not understand enough of it to find out what it was all about. No wonder Oland had to take a rest.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—This is the first "Charlie Chan" picture I have run for a long time and will not be inconsolable if I do not run another one for the same length of time. Fair picture with plenty of thrills and chills, but did not go over too well. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—Jane Withers is always good. This picture drew better than any production we have had this year. Plenty of everything in it that makes a pleasing and attractive show. Good anywhere. Played March 12.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—Played on a Sunday date. One of those pictures that you can sit in the office right out where they can all see you. And long enough. Not one of these pictures where the producer tried to spend another million and make it last one-half hour longer than his competitor regardless of the box office appeal.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—This is a natural for small spots. Clean and wholesome. This little girl is the only one of the imported stars that can compete with our own American talent, so why bring them over?—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—What a honey. This goes for the picture and also the cast. Sonja is about the cutest girl on the screen and Don Ameche is a handsome fellow and what a soothing voice. I am hoping he sings again in his next picture. Step on this one. It is great. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—Swell show. Everyone enjoyed, even I, and very seldom do I watch a picture, but I watched this one. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 13-16.—Jack Hazlett, Chief Theatre, Marceline, Mo. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—A school children's matinee Friday afternoon brought up the box office receipts. Counter attractions and sickness among children in town cut down the patrons for this delightful offering. Opinion was divided as to whether this is Temple's best picture. Played April 8-9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—One of Shirley's better attractions. Disappointing to many, however, due to the fact they strayed so far from the simple beauty and rural charm of the story. Played February 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (reissue): Will Rogers, Anita Louise—In my opinion this is the best Will Rogers picture ever produced. Anita Louise was good, too. Business rained out. Played April 8.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—Pretty weak picture and did not draw. People are tiring of Winchell and Bernie arguing. Not as good as "Wake Up and Live." Simone Simon singing very boring. She does not draw at all for us. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—Everybody satisfied with this fast-moving picture. Plenty of action and comedy, and if you want to be amused, go see it. Good anywhere. Played April 9.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Fred Allen, Joan Davis, Marjorie Weaver—Delightful comedy drama with music and romance. Pleased. Joan Davis and Marjorie Weaver clever support also. Played April 17-18.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Fred Allen, Joan Davis, Jimmy Durante—Very good musical. Alice Faye at her best. Joan Davis very good drawing card. Jimmy Durante makes comeback. Tony Martin good. Good box office appeal. Business fair. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 4-5.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Had many compliments on this picture. There was one unnecessary drunk scene, otherwise I considered it a very fine picture, and almost worthy of a Sunday. It drew well for midweek. Played April 7.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—Good programmer. Played April 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Arthur Treacher, Joan Davis, Raymond Walburn—Although not up to the standard set by "One in a Million," that twinkling toed prima donna of the ice, Sonja Henie, lifts this picture from mediocrity to above average entertainment. Ably assisted by Tyrone Power, Arthur Treacher and Joan Davis, the light frothy plot moves along to the inevitable conclusion. There are two great comedy numbers by Joan Davis, "I'm Olga from the Volga" and "My Swiss Hilly Billy," two beautiful and graceful ice skating sequences by Sonja Henie, and some side splitting comedy by Arthur Treacher and Raymond Walburn. It's enjoyable entertainment and worth booking. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WALKING DOWN BROADWAY: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—The men didn't go for this one, but the women did. Since the men go for the women, it proved okay in the spot we played it. However, don't recommend it for a lone feature, unless with dishes.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—This is a very good picture and business was fair. Played February 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—Very good feature, but struck two of the worst nights of the year, hence it was zero for the box office. No fault of the picture, however. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THRILL YOUR CUSTOMERS WITH TODAY'S NEWS

Here's how: Hundreds of exhibitors in 48 states now feature spot news releases daily—farthest overnight, nearest in two hours—by specifying AIR EXPRESS, straight to their door. Cost? A trifle more—but it's a box-office wow! Ship all your films by the "natural" route. Nation-wide service, also to Canada, Latin America, Honolulu, and Far East. Phone the nearest RAILWAY EXPRESS office and merely say "AIR EXPRESS Division."

United Artists

ABRAHAM LINCOLN (reissue): Walter Huston, Una Merkel—Despite the fact that this picture was made in 1930, it still possesses potential drawing power if properly sold. We used it as a school benefit attraction and the results were exceptionally fine. The sound is a bit harsh, but the theatre patrons who come to see it will not criticize that. Played it three days during Holy Week in a city that is 40 per cent Catholic and did capacity business two nights. The picture must have something! Played April 12.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, May Robson—Extraordinary business. It's a showmen's dream. Play it, boys. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 27-29.—Jack Hazlett, Chief Theatre, Marceline, Mo. Small town patronage.

52ND STREET: Pat Paterson, Ian Hunter—More complaints on this picture than any picture we have played the last six months. Leave it in the can.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Kenny Baker, Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Brothers, Phil Baker—"Charlie McCarthy" great. Also Kenny Baker. Too much opera and ballet for this town. Business fair. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 20-22.—Jack Hazlett, Chief Theatre, Marceline, Mo. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—No doubt you are familiar with the story about the goose that laid the golden eggs. Well, this is one of them.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett—Fair picture. Joan Bennett at her best. Henry Fonda good, too. Joan Bennett and Henry Fonda do not draw good here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 11-12.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

STAND-IN: Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell—Another flop. When will we get something from this product that will justify the rentals? Certainly this isn't one. And it even failed to please those who did turn out. They thought it silly. Played March 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAND-IN: Joan Blondell, Leslie Howard, Humphrey Bogart—Only a fair program picture. The story is poor. Humphrey Bogart miscast, Joan Blondell tries hard to put this over, but there is nothing for her to work with. Leslie Howard talks too much, as usual. Running time, 93 minutes.—J. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Played on Sunday date. Played it way late to good business and more than pleased.—Charles L. Fisk, Fisk Theatre, Butler, Mo. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Frederic March, Adolphe Menjou—The best United Artists picture we have had for some time. The picture is in full color and the photography is excellent. You will see Miss Gaynor at her very best and she is ably assisted by the other actors. As the lights go up after the ending, you will see many wiping away the tears. A good picture for the box office. Play this one. Full of humor and pathos and has dramatic quality out of the ordinary. Played April 15-16.—O. Ingmar Olsson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones, Kay Linaker—Pleased the Jones fans and this is what we expect from westerns. Drawing power fair. Is Buck slipping? Played a Dick Foran last week and before bigger crowds. Guess the fans must have taken the weekend off. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 25-26.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

LET THEM LIVE: John Howard, Nan Grey—Those who saw it liked it. The only trouble, not enough saw it. Didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—This picture did not prove as satisfactory to our fans as was to be expected. Some complained that it was not as good as advertised. Business normal. Played March 26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MIDNIGHT INTRUDER: Louis Hayward, Barbara Read—A good comedy and will hold up its end on a double feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MY MAN GODFREY: William Powell, Carole

Lombard, Alice Brady—Very entertaining and brought many comments. Used as feature No. 1 on a double bill and sure was proud of it. Carole Lombard and William Powell make a wonderful team. More power to you both. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 4-5.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SHE'S DANGEROUS: Cesar Romero, Tala Birell—Very nice little picture. Used this on a double and was well received as feature No. 2. Not strong enough for a single. Stars in this don't mean a thing at the box office. Needs a good companion feature, and it will satisfy.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

WINGS OVER HONOLULU: Wendy Barrie, Ray Milland—Played with new serial, "The Mysterious Pilot," and did fair business on first night. Good action picture suitable for midweek or Saturday. Pleased almost 100 per cent. Running time, 72 minutes.—Jimmie Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Texas. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BENGAL TIGER: Barton MacLane, June Travis—Used this with "China Clipper" and heard many comments. Played to capacity houses. "Bengal Tiger" should please 100 per cent with another feature. Running time, 60 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

BLAZING SIXES: Dick Foran—As usual, Foran was very good and kept the house in good humor. Too bad Dick is not making any more westerns, as you can always get a satisfied crowd to see his pictures. Running time, 56 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—Old, very old, and what difference does this make. The picture is first rate and used this on a double bill and pleased just 100 per cent. Come on, Vitagraph, give me all the old pictures you have and we can't help but be satisfied and make money. Thanks, Lou McKenzie, give us more like "China Clipper" or "Marked Woman." Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 23-24.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

FIRST LADY: Kay Francis, Preston Foster—A very boring picture. Kay Francis is washed up here. No business and the few who did see it did not care for dialogue and nothing more from start to finish. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

FUGITIVE IN THE SKY: Warren Hull, Jean Muir—Used this on a double bill and must say it pleased 100 per cent. Plenty of excitement and thrills to satisfy. Good as such. Played March 30-31.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland—Not up to Bette Davis standard. Leslie Howard has different type role. The picture as a whole is entertaining. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 13-14.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

OVER THE WALL: Dick Foran, June Travis—A good double header. Not up to advance claims made by the producer, for a single bill.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

PATIENT IN ROOM 18, THE: Ann Sheridan, Patric Knowles—An out-and-out waste of celluloid and our playing time. We can't see how this will satisfy any situation. It's not funny, although they intended it to be. It's not mystifying unless you consider the mess of trying to figure what it's all about justifies the word mystery. In short, we didn't care for it at all and doubt any of our audience did. Played March 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PATIENT IN ROOM 18, THE: Ann Sheridan, Patric Knowles—Just a program picture. Fair entertainment. Running time, seven reels. Played April 14.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SERGEANT MURPHY: Ronald Reagan, Mary Maguire—This will entertain and please if you can get 'em in to see it. Played February 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SERGEANT MURPHY: Ronald Reagan, Mary Maguire—A nice little animal picture with plenty of action that should satisfy all small town exhibitors. We ran it on a weekend and did not do the business that a western usually does. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SMART BLONDE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Used this with "Two Fisted Gentleman" and it seems to have pleased. Would suggest you use another good feature with this on a double bill. "Smart Blonde" isn't strong enough to stand on its own. Played April 6-7.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise

Fazenda, Penny Singleton, Elvira, Leon, Frank Weaver—This will pass. Some liked it; others did not. About the best part of it was Elvira and the Weaver Brothers singing. Penny Singleton good. This hill billy stuff will go over in some towns okay. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins—A delightful comedy drama with a hillbilly background, but so well directed and acted that there was not a dull moment in the production. The Weaver Bros. and Elvira must not be forgotten in "Swing Your Lady."—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—Terrible, and Warner had this in the top allocation, which I have not been able to figure out why. Our patrons remarked upon leaving the theatre that this was the sorriest show they had ever seen. I agree with them. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 20-21.—Miss Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BACK TO THE WOODS: Three Stooges—Another slapstick comedy with those nonsensical Stooges. It had everyone in stitches. Nuf sed! Play it and listen to the gales of laughter sweeping over the audience. This trio is tops in the comedy field. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BIG SQUIRT, THE: Charlie Chase—An average comedy in the two-reel style.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CADET CHAMPIONS: Special Sport Thrills—Very interesting short of sports life at West Point.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, No. 4: This is good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOOLISH BUNNY, THE: Color Rhapsodies—A good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN BITES LOVE BUG: Charlie Chase—A fair comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1: Always acceptable on any program.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SITTERS DOWNERS, THE: Three Stooges—About cut to their usual pattern. Folks are still laughing at these antics, so guess everything's jake.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TROTTING THOROUGHBREDS: Special Sport Thrills—Very instructive for everyone.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: No. 2: Many opinions vary on this. This one is well worth playing. Don't pass it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WEE WEE MONSIEUR: Three Stooges—Another Stogie comedy and the audiences seem to like them. Not the best or worst. Just average for this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

ALL'S FAIR: Song and Comedy Hits—Excellent single reel. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BILLY GOAT'S WHISKERS, THE: Terry-Toons—Fair cartoon, but since running the colored ones I find it hard to sell them the black and white ones. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HAPPY AND LUCKY: Terry-Toons—A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JUST THE TYPE: Two-Reel Comedies—The man that said "30 years ago Hollywood was picking lemons, now they're releasing them," sure hit this one on the head. Running time, 20 minutes.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAU HUNKS (Reissue): Laurel and Hardy—In my opinion, this is about as near nothing as one can get, but it certainly pleased the cash patrons and "the customer is always right," so I'm strong for more like this one. Running time, 37 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOSKO IN BAGDAD: Harman-Ising—Just like the balance of this series and it is no good. Too much noise and jazz. Not enough story. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Rather poorer than are Pete's usual offerings.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CANNED FISHING: Our Gang—An average Gang comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—The first of this series I have run and I can't give it a very good report. Not much to it. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—A good Gang comedy.—L. A. Irwin Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Our Gang goes to town again in a big way. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHIP THAT DIED, THE: Historical Mysteries—Very interesting short built around the story of the ship that was deserted. Well produced but rather gruesome. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SPORTS ON ICE: Pete Smith Specialties—A real thriller, especially the bobsledding.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THREE ON A ROPE: Pete Smith Specialties—A very good sport reel. One of the best of the Smiths this season. Interesting and photography excellent. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BALL TOSSERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Basketball. Very good subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

I LIKE BABIES AND INFINKS: Popeye the Sailor—Nothing much new here.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—Very good and plenty of thrills. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

LET'S CELEBRAKE: Popeye The Sailor—As good a Popeye as ever made, and that is saying a lot. For once there was no fighting in it. What a relief. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE LAMBY: Color Classics—Excellent color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 6—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

RIVER, THE: U. S. Government Three-Reel Subject—Most wonderful short ever filmed. Paramount has something there and so has everybody else that runs it. Running time, 20 minutes.—Joe F. Wright, Cedar Theatre, Cedartown, Ga. Small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: No. 3—Okay material.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ZULA HULA: Betty Boop Cartoon—This Betty Boop is much better than most of them. If you want a cartoon, this is O. K. Running time, 7 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: No. 9—A wonderful timely reel that shows Hitler in Austria and warns the world what to expect from this man in the future. The subject on crime was most educational. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

QUINTUPLAND: Dionne Quintuplets—It's truly a "honey." Capable of stealing the feature spot if you don't look out. Running time, 18 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

RADIO HOOKUP, A: Dorothy Stone, Charles Collins—Not so hot. With Stone and Collins, I thought we would have a real musical, but was disappointed. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHITE MAGIC: RKO Pathe Sportscope—A good travel reel in the ski country.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

THREE BLIND MOUSEKETEERS: Silly Symphonies—Not as good as some Disneys, but well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

ALL ABOARD: Mentone Musical Comedies—Fair collection of acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: No. 47—A very interesting and instructive reel. Shows the uses of glass, etc., also the pearl industry of Japan. Running time, 10 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Small town patronage.

OSTRICH FEATHERS: Meeny-Miny-Moe Cartoons—A fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAKS ENGLISH: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—No need of commenting because these always please. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ARNOLD JOHNSON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Not a bad musical. Pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

JOE PALOOKA IN "CALLING ALL KIDS": Broadway Brevities—These are not as good as the first Warners put out, but they will entertain them. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

LOUISIANA KINGS: Melody Masters—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

PORKY AT THE CROCADERO: Looney Tunes—The best black and white cartoon we have played in a long time. Congratulations, Vitaphone, on this one. It is better than most you have given us in two years. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PURE FEUD: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—If it hadn't been for this short, I believe our house would have been empty. We played it with "The Man Who Could Work Miracles."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROPING 'EM ALIVE: Vitaphone Varieties—Interesting and unusual. Running time, nine minutes.—Robert S. Farrell, Jr., New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

ROPING 'EM ALIVE: Vitaphone Varieties—Seemed to interest all. Scared the children, though. Running time, nine minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SKI FLIGHT: Vitaphone Varieties—This is superb entertainment. Thrilling ski scenes and a lesson in skiology to boot.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STARLETS: Broadway Brevities—Very good kiddies' reel. Running time, 2 reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S BUNGALOW: Merrie Melodies—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Ken Murray—Plenty of laughs and pleased. Running time, 18 minutes.—George Khattar, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

Serials

Columbia

JUNGLE MENACE: Frank Buck, Charlotte Henry—Bought this and thought it would attract the crowds but fail to see it. Playing episode six and it seems to be getting better. Personally think it will start to get interesting from now on. What good is this now. Don't bank too much on this to help a fair picture. Running time, 20 minutes, each episode. Played March 11-12.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—Starts off like it's going to be much better than the average serial. Almost got through first chapter without anyone being killed. Kids went for it big. They all got in free for first chapter. Running time first chapter, 36 minutes. Played April 12-13.—Jimmie Denham, Rex Theatre, Port Lavaca, Tex. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—About the poorest acted serial we ever played. Only a couple of actors in the whole cast. Story o.k., but action drags. One speaks, then the others wait for somebody to tell them what to do or say next. Columbia better pass up the serial game.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—Serial from Republic. This is, without a doubt, the best serial we have played from Republic to date. Taking advantage of the popularity of "The Lone Ranger" on the air, Republic has produced a very fine serial that proves itself top-notch. I wish to report on an improvement made. There are no fantastic endings and ridiculous escapes with each successive chapter. I also find that this serial has a great deal of adult appeal.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to inform you that "Monastery" has been booked for the entire R.K.O. Metropolitan circuit starting in May.

I am sure you will also be pleased to know that the picture opens for a first-run engagement in Philadelphia at Warner's Karlon Theatre, April 29th, and that the Buffalo Theatre will take place at Shea's Hippodrome Theatre on May 15th.

The reaction of all the circuit buyers to this picture has been extremely enthusiastic, and I am sure that "Monastery" will establish new records in many theatres.

Sincerely yours,

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

FIRST QUARTER

On the following pages is spread the record of results in the first quarter of the 1938 Quigley Awards. Some 40 skilled and earnest theatremen in the five different classifications have been chosen by the Judging Committee to be honored with the Silver Plaques, Citations of Merit, Firsts and Honorables.

As was anticipated when the Awards rulings were refashioned, the top honors went to those entrants who displayed the most consistency in their efforts over the initial three-months period. The Judges favored the men who had done the most thorough week-to-week job; who had displayed proof of their accomplishments through their many contributions to the Round Table detailing what had been done to build grosses from January through April.

In other words, the Committee, representing distribution, advertising and exhibition, emphasized industry approval of those entrants who gave evidence of being behind their shows every week.

Since this is a business depending upon the theatreman 52 weeks a year, every year, the manager who measures up best to that exacting standard rates more immediate recognition from the powers that be. It appears then that the Quarterly Awards present a perfect setup for the lad who does a first-rate 52-weeks job and wants it known outside of his immediate boundaries.

Based on percentage of possibilities, is the theatreman in other than the key cities doing the better all-around job of showmanship? Dollar for dollar and picture for picture, entries in the first quarter might indicate he is.

While it is conceded that contributions to these pages do not necessarily convey an absolute cross-section of the nation's showmanship, there is enough of a representation from communities of all sizes to warrant a nod in favor of showmanship displayed generally in the lesser spots. From among those who profess to know, come various reasons offered in substantiation. They point out, for instance:

The smaller city theatreman by limited budget is forced to make capital of this restriction by employing a higher degree of ingenuity born often of sheer necessity.

The purposes for which small town advertising dollars are intended are so closely scrutinized that returns must be more certain, definite and immediate.

Without the aid of transient trade, the limited draw in the smaller community area calls for keener showmanship in getting the same people to the theatre more often.

Since personal contact is an important part of showmanship, the theatreman in the lesser spots recognizes this by developing more business through his friendships.

The little fellow must create a higher quality of showmanship to combat the tough competition of costless outdoor activities in the open months and the hazards of transportation in the winter.

How widely these conclusions are to be accepted, cannot be determined without further discussion from both sides. Showmanship is first a matter of talent rather than location. But to what extent circumstances influence showmanship, obviously is a question for which there is more than one answer.

GOOD OLE GOODWILL

Now, there's that manager in a midwest city who is taking a crack at goodwill building by offering free admissions to children with perfect monthly school attendance records. In March, according to our correspondent, that good ole goodwill was built up by giving 881 ducats.

Wonder what prizes merchants gave the kids for learning their lessons? No doubt, the youngsters also got free suits of clothes, groceries, sporting goods, bus rides, and what not from other business men in town who wanted in.

You don't think so? You don't mean to say a lot of smart, far-visioned merchants would let a theatre manager get away with all that goodwill by himself, do you?

Credit for this colorful front of the Orpheum Theatre, Seattle, Wash., on "Gold Is Where You Find It" goes to Vic Gauntlett and Eddie Rivers of the Hamrick Evergreen forces. Replica of tepee was constructed and planted atop marquee and surrounded by artificial shrubs and underbrush to complete atmospheric effect.

Reported as attracting considerable attention was J. Galy Varnell's display on "Her Jungle Love" at the Erie Theatre, Hugo, Oklahoma. Charlie McCarthy doll announced to the world at large that his girl friend, Dorothy Lamour, could be seen in the picture. Display was used in foyer and downtown window during run.

Utilizing the mammoth figures of Gary Cooper on the 6- and 24-sheets prepared by United Artists, Sam Gilman, Loew's State, Harrisburg, Pa., created this inexpensive lobby display for "Marco Polo". Theatreman cut out the giant figures of Fredric March and pasted them on heavy cardboard for boxoffice use in advance of showing. Cut-outs were also mounted on either side of the marquee roof.

At right is reproduced Easter lobby display created by Joe Di Pesa, publicity director, Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres, Boston. Pen was provided in which live bunnies cavorted; promoted flowers dressed up the display, bottom of which carried hand-painted ducks, chicks, etc. Art work atop plugged Harris' forthcoming attractions in addition to Easter greeting to patrons.

Photo at right shows attractive and eye-arresting window display promoted by Milt Harris, publicity director, Loew's Cleveland Theatres, for "The Buccaneer" engagement at the State Theatre. Promoted from one of the leading department stores was window which included giant blowups used for background, fencing rapiers, pistols, etc., etc. Credit cards on playdates were prominently displayed, store meeting cost of blowups.

THEATRES-NEWSPAPER VOTE CONTEST CLICKS

Over 400 Entries Reported in RKO Midwest Tiein; Winner
To Receive Screen Contract

by E. H. MAYER
in Cincinnati

Seldom, if ever, within the memory of the "oldest inhabitant" in the southern Ohio sector has a routine of theatre exploitation created such widespread enthusiasm and interest as the "Glamor Girl Search," currently in progress at the RKO theatres, in Cincinnati.

This exploitation—emanating from E. V. Dinerman, regional director of advertising and publicity, RKO Midwest, Cincinnati—is, in reality, a contest without judges, an election based on popularity, decided by vote with the winner awarded an all-expense trip to Hollywood for herself and chaperone (who must, of necessity, be approved by the contest committee), plus a two-week movie contract at $100 per week at the RKO-Pathé studios, the trip to the west coast to be made in the "Sky-sleeper," the flagship of the American Airlines.

Aided by his assistant, M. J. Whitmar, Dinny perfected the basic idea of the contest suggested by executives of WCPO, radio station of the Cincinnati Post with which Scripps-Howard daily the tiein was worked. From the beginning, the paper publicized the "Search" heavily and continues to do so.

The procedure: Nomination ballots were published daily in the Post in advance of the contest, thus permitting nominations being made by friends of the contestants, or by the contestants themselves. More than 400 were thus registered as "Glamor Girls."

Each Contestant Photographed

The contest runs 10 weeks, of which the first 14 days were devoted to photographing each girl individually, each photograph being personally autographed by the contestant for reasons explained later. This period, too, was given to pre-publicizing the contest. During the two weeks the original roster of 400 shrunk to 210, who now are actively participating.

Each adult admission at any Cincinnati RKO theatre entitles the patron to cast a ballot of 25 points. Children's admissions count for 10 points. The ballots are deposited in specially provided ballot boxes in lobbies of all nine theatres in the city. Incidentally, and this is important, to insure the honesty and impartiality of the contest, and obviate the possibility to any discrepancy, the ballot boxes are constructed according to specifications furnished by the Cincinnati Board of Elections, and have been locked and sealed under the supervision of the Election Board clerk, who will officially act as supervisor throughout the entire contest.

During the time the contest is in progress, "Double Days" will be designated in various theatres, when an adult admission will count for 50 instead of 25 points, and children's 20 instead of the usual 10. The methods of publicizing the contest consist of 10 weeks of radio time, with one-half hour programs daily, from 6:30 to 7 P. M., the period being known as "Glamor Girl," over WCPO, Cincinnati Post station. The programs consist of interviews with contestants, appearances of stage professionals, as available, and news and biographical material on contestants. Care, however, was exercised to see that the radio publicity used in advance of the actual voting weeks was kept anonymous as to the contestants in order to obviate any possibility of some particular girl receiving publicity which could not be accorded to all. Additional publicity is in the form of advance breaks, human interest stories, news, art layouts, etc., in the Post, and "voting period publicity" consisting mainly of daily publication of contestants' photographs containing individual signatures as previously mentioned. These photographs do not all appear at the same time, but on some day during the contest each girl's picture will appear once. She must be on the lookout for it, because each photograph clipped from the Post and deposited in the theatre ballot box gives that particular girl 100 extra points or votes.

Theatres Run Trailers

In advance, and during the voting time of the contest, the theatres periodically run short, concise trailers on the contest. In addition, before the voting period, each theatre lobby displayed a one-sheet sign on the "Glamor Girl Search," which subsequently was replaced by the ballot boxes. In each theatre, near the ballot boxes, the complete list of "Glamor Girls" names are posted in alphabetical order, with a number appearing opposite each name. Voting is done by number only. The patron needs only to scan the list to determine the numerical reference of his favorite candidate. He merely jots the number down on the ballot. Neither the ballots nor the pictures are valid for votes unless deposited in the theatre ballot box.

Record of Ballots Made

Extra precautions have been taken to insure the honesty of the contest and to obviate any unfavorable or unwarranted gossip. Doormen who pass out ballots have received strict instructions regarding procedure. All members of the theatre staffs have been instructed to be constantly on the lookout for ballots thrown away. These are to be picked up from the floor, torn up in front of the patron, and thrown into a waste paper receptacle. Besides, each manager keeps a written record of ballots issued to his staff for distribution.

Quick Reports From the Field

Radio Tieup

Effective tieup was arranged for "Lone Ranger" over Station WRR by Louie Charninsky, Capitol, Dallas, serial receiving plugs over air each Monday, Wednesday and Friday on the "Ranger" program. Announcements started two weeks ahead of opening and will continue during the showing of the fifteen episodes.

In return for mention, theatre had special trailer made plugging the air program. Other exploitation slants included giveaway of masks, candy and gum to kids on opening date and having a masked rider go to various schools and perform rope tricks and pass out heralds.

For "Daughter of Shanghai," Charninsky constructed special front with 15-foot papier mache buddha. Base of figure contained scene stills, title and picture plugs. Top of marquee carried Chinese lanterns and parasols. Entire house staff was dressed in mandarin coats. Man in costume was also used.

Newspaper Break

Reported as making a decided hit with both the locals and newspaper staff was gag used by Francis Gooch, Opera House, Bath, Maine to publicize "The Big Broadcast of 1938." Through cooperation of W. C. Fields, photo was taken of the star in Hollywood reading a copy of the Bath Daily Times, mailed to him by the theatreman. Cut together with two column story was run in Bath paper.

Newspaper Aids

Because "Radio Patrol" has long been a Sunday comic feature in the Miami Tribune, Gordon Spradley, Biltmore Theatre, when playing that strip which has been brought to reel life, tied up with the paper. Fleet of trucks carried banners plugging the opening, advance stories ran in paper and carrier boys attended special showing. In exchange for newspaper break, Spradley ran special trailer after each serial, urging all to follow the adventure of the Radio Patrol every Sunday in the Tribune.

Warner Zone Managers Meet

Business anticipation for the next three months and methods of meeting conditions during the summer were discussed at a meeting of Warner theatre zone managers and home office staff Monday in New York, with Joseph Bernhard, general manager of the circuit, presiding.

QUIGLEY JUDGES ELECT WINNERS FOR QUARTER

Committee Names Choices in All Divisions for Silver Plaques and Certificates; Limerick Is Voted Additional Honors

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Well, the winning numbers are up, folks. As the bands play and crowds cheer, let's all stand and give that great big hand to the five Round Tablers who take down top honors in the initial Quarter of the 1938 Quigley Awards, finishing first in their respective classifications.

By majority vote of the judges, Bill Bell, Nathan Wise, Sid Holland, George Limerick and John Burhorn are the headmen today and little did they leave undone to put over their shows.

To George Limerick, to be sure, an extra bow for his fine work that brought the coveted Citation of Merit given additionally to the Silver Plaque winner whose entry was voted the best regardless of classification.

Following closely on the heels of the Plaque winners and refusing to concede an inch until the finish line was crossed come five other entries voted Certificates of Merit, signaling runner-up honors. Ed Miller and Manny Pearlstein, Dave Kamsky, Jack Markle, Moon Corker, William Nitschke and Peter F. McCarty, win this well-merited distinction. Miller and Pearlstein are both credited equally on one entry, as are Nitschke and McCarty.

Thirteen men share the 12 First Mentions awarded in the first quarter and the 18 Honorable Mentions go all to individual entrants. Complete details of all Awards, including theatres and situations, are carried on this page and the two following.

The Judging Committee which carried through patiently and efficiently in doing a difficult job comprised Edward Golden, vice-president, Monogram Pictures; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, RKO Radio Pictures, and Irving Lesser, managing director, Roxy Theatre.

All in all, the initial Competitions were spirited and brought widespread participation from all sections of the country, from circuits as well as the independents. Though entries proved more numerous in Classes "C" and "D", the effort shown in all divisions was on a par, with the Plaques and Merit Citations going naturally to those by their entries displaying the most consistency in their work from week to week.

During the past weeks many of the individual contributions entered in the Awards have been publicised in these pages. In the adjoining columns and on following pages are set down the highlights of other exploitations arranged by the winners. These necessarily are brief since space does not permit detailed accounts.

Plaques and Citations of Merit Voted in First Awards Quarter

Class "A" (Cities 250,000 and Over)

Silver Plaque: BILL BELL, Majestic, Houston, Texas

Citation of Merit: ED MILLER, MANNY PEARLSTEIN, Hippodrome, Cleveland

Class "B" (Cities 100,000 to 250,000)

Silver Plaque: NATHAN WISE, RKO Theatres, Dayton, Ohio

Citation of Merit: DAVE KAMSKY, Byrd, Richmond, Va.

Class "C" (Cities 25,000 to 100,000)

Silver Plaque: SID HOLLAND, Elco, Elkhart, Ind.

Citation of Merit: JACK MARKLE, Coolidge Corner, Brookline, Mass.

Class "D" (Cities Up to 25,000)

Silver Plaque: GEORGE LIMERICK, Yale, Cleburne, Texas

(Also awarded additional Citation of Merit for best campaigns among Plaque winners regardless of classification.)

Citation of Merit: MOON CORKER, Palace, Athens, Ga.

Class "E" (Subsequent Runs)

Silver Plaque: JOHN BURHORN, Gayety, Chicago, Ill.

Citation of Merit: WILLIAM NITSCHKE, PETER F. MCCARTHY, Loew's Tri-Boro, Long Island City

Parades Feature Bell Campaigns

Aiming for the full support of the local school board, Bill Bell for the date on "Buccaneer" at the Majestic, Houston, obtained what he reports as the fullest cooperation from these sources. As a result of two years of goodwill build-up, schools for the first time permitted a wide distribution of study guides with the sponsorship of the local P. T. A. Students attending the picture were given extra class credit. Public libraries tied in by placing framed study charts in exhibit cases and on foyer walls. Additionally, boys' secretary of the Y.M.C.A. promoted date among 5,000 members by recommending the picture and having announcements made at all meetings. Letter campaign to club leaders followed. All Boy Scouts were also informed through troop leaders and for word-of-mouth, Bell held a special screening for leading citizens, civic leaders, et al.

BILL BELL

Parade of American Express trucks and a fleet of new bannered Studebakers was top outside stunt for "Wells Fargo." Put on morning of opening day, with police motorcycle escort, caravan with sirens wide open circled the main section of the city and wound up at the theatre where leading truck delivered print of the picture. Car dealers also placed door panels on all demonstrators and gave window displays. Historical pamphlets were distributed by the American Express and Western Union and the sides of all delivery trucks placarded.

Relics having to do with the period of the picture were exhibited in lobby and blowup of Fargo coach loaded with old-time luggage was center piece of display in leading trunk company window. Chamber of Commerce devoted weekly radio program to picture as means of tracing development of express company. Special day was set aside for all express employees after Bell held meeting with entire railway personnel to sell the date further. All important educational and church groups were contacted.

Three-way tie on "Big Broadcast" was a special modernistic cosmetic bar placed in theatre mezzanine where on tie-in with local paper and department store boxes of new face powder were given to all women attending. The stunt broke a lot of extra space with papers going for feature fashion stories and photos. Store took large co-op ad for extra buildup and standees were planted in prominent windows and lobby of newspaper plant. Top hookup for "Swing Your Lady" was personal appearance at midnight preview of local wrestler who appeared in the picture.

HIGHLIGHTS OF WINNING CAMPAIGN

Wise Promotes 8-Week Contest

Nathan Wise, publicity director, RKO Colonial Theatre, Dayton, won in the "B" classification, starting off with an amateur contest planted on his stage. Worked on a four way tieup between the sponsors, station WHIO, the theatre and alumni group of the University of Dayton. Each Monday night a group of amateurs are presented on his stage. These contestants present a half hour program which is broadcast weekly and two winners are chosen by telephone calls received following the program, audience applause and judges weighed reactions.

Contest which is now in progress will run for eight weeks, 16 amateur winners will be selected and presented with a cash award. These winners then to compete at the University of Dayton June Jamboree presented at the Stadium where the finals will be selected and cash prizes totaling $350 presented. The air time and newspaper advertising is paid completely by the sponsors and Station WHIO cooperates with an abundant barrage of buildup announcements. The Dayton News, which is allied with the station, is also cooperating with publicity and art breaks.

Since Jane Withers made a personal appearance at the RKO Shubert in Cincinnati a week prior to the opening of "Checkers" at the Colonial, Wise took the critics of two leading papers over to catch the "personal."

The special radio line in the theatre from WHIO was put to use for two special broadcasts recently from the stage. The first featured Deacon Moore and his orchestra and the second Barney Rapp and his band. One of the features of Rapp's shows was a local girl, who had made a minor name for herself during the past year dancing in several of the leading theatres and night clubs.

For "Snow White," Wise concentrated on his newspaper coverage, starting several weeks in advance, four-column stories with art work were run stressing the technical features of the film, describing the development of many of the characters and concluding with possible release date at Keith's. Pictorial serialization of "Snow White" was planted in the Sunday comic section and a double pictorial truck was also landed.

Arrangements were made by Wise and followed through by News critics to talk directly to Donald Duck in Hollywood by long-distance, entire conversation revolved about Donald's peeve at "Uncle Walt" for not being included in the film.

For "Awful Truth," Holland decided upon a midnight preview to start word-of-mouth plugging which proved helpful in giving the date a quick start. Preview advertised at regular prices, started at 11:30. Novelty ads on the date were ingenious. One featured a letter to Sid from a brother manager who had played the picture and praised it highly. Another ad was given over to Chubby, Holland's wire-hair puppy, the pooch plugging the work of Mr. Smith, the dog, in the picture.

A Burns-Allen gag writing contest was tied in with local daily on "Damsel in Distress." Above cuts of the stars, run daily, were balloons for inclusions of gags conceived by readers for prizes offered by the theatre. Outstanding among windows on the date was an animated display of dancing shoes in the leading shoe store.

"Zola" was sold through a conservative newspaper campaign and a timely editorial written by the editor of the leading daily. Business was also aided by a benefit show sponsored by local clubwomen. Worthy of comment also was newspaper ad with blank space left at top and referred to by Sid in an endorsement by saying that reason for the blank was that no still picture could do justice to the date.

Special street bally with usher enclosed in special cutout and costumed as bellhop called attention to "Hollywood Hotel." Trick hats were worn by the entire house staff. Featured during the date was observance of National Boy Scout Week with local troops exhibiting displays of Scout work in lobby and replacing the regular house staff for one evening. "Second Honeymoon" opened on Valentine's Day which allowed Holland to tie his campaign appropriately around that occasion. He also had a couple driving around town in with "just married" banners covering the car.

"Every Day's a Holiday" received the benefit of a praise editorial and "Happy Landing" publicity was topped with a goodwill tiein wherein theatre was host to patrol boys and girls in a benefit sponsored by local police.

Puts on Industrial Exhibit

Among his individual picture campaigns, Sid found time to put on an industrial exhibit of locally manufactured products in his Grand Lounge. Display ran about two weeks and besides extra attention attracted among patrons, theatre received much extra newspaper notice. "Gold Is Where You Find It" was tied to a Spring Treasure Hunt for children. Envelopes containing pennies among which there were a number good for free admissions when presented at the theatre were planted around City Park. Co-op page on same date was put over with a misspelled word contest and a costless stage show put over by a radio amateur act tied in with local station.

Holland, as to be expected, turned loose a giant campaign on "Snow White." He was fortunate in playing the date to break with the issue of Liberty carrying the Snow White front cover and tied in by rubber-stamping theatre and date on every copy.

Holland Arranges Numerous Tieins

plugged by promoted flash ads, pages of tieups in local shopper's guide, spectacular front display, special window cards and bannered truck. Other publicity was in keeping. Booked on the following program at short notice, the Panay newsreel bombing pictures were given a buildup by immediate newspaper attention, flash front and special heralds rushed into every local home by messenger.

"Wells Fargo" was given the benefit of a co-op newspaper advance and editorial mention which called attention to the unique lobby display of authentic photos, bills of lading, etc., from the picture's period, executed with the assistance of American Railway Express. The express company also bannered delivery trucks for the date, distributed heralds. Jumbo wires and window displays secured further coverage.

VOTED FIRST QUARTER SILVER PLAQUES

Burhorn Sponsors Local Activities

Located in a steel mill district and playing third run, Manager John Burhorn, Gayety Theatre, Chicago, won his laurels in the "E" classification by a series of varied activities put over by him and his able staff.

JOHN BURHORN

To exploit "Stella Dallas" this showman promoted a six-day serial strip in the Daily Calumet, which included photos, stories, theatre and playdate credits. House to house distribution of programs, which were also inserted in all parcels checked at theatre, plugged the date. For his lobby, Burhorn constructed a 40 by 60 transparent display containing scene stills and large photo of Barbara Stanwyck.

On "Vogues of 1938," large department store was contacted and window display of various styles in vogue from 1878 up to this year were featured; prominent mention also given to picture opening. Dress section of the store carried title on every pillar and merchant paid entire cost of printing and distributing heralds plugging the date in addition to buildup in newspaper ads.

Kiddie Patronage

Concentrating on his kiddie patronage, John promoted free ice cream from cooperating candy shop for giveaway to first 1000 children attending Sunday matinee of "Prisoner of Zenda." Contest was held in connection with the showing of "Public Cowboy Number 1," with cash and ticket prizes going to South Chicago's best dressed cowboy. Youngsters were invited to attend show in cowboy suits, and other western regalia and march to the theatre in what Burhorn dubbed his "Gene Autry Parade." Theatreman forwards photo of youngsters in costume who turned out for the march, ranging from about two years up to 15, each carrying lassos, sixshooters, etc.

Borrowing an open car from local agency, Burhorn bannered it with copy reading "Some Blondes Are Dangerous" and planted five attractive blondes in it. Car stopped at corners while gals distributed programs.

During the recent Boy Scout week, "Tex Ritter Rides with the Boy Scouts" was booked into the Gayety, officials were contacted and permission granted for a monster scout parade. Boys marched to the theatre carrying banners with title, theatre, etc.

Tying in with the "10th Ward Save a Life Week," sponsored by the local post of American Legion, Burhorn reports garnering plenty of goodwill for his house. Car wreck was stationed in front of theatre with Legion men distributing literature and pledge cards for safe driving. Auto stickers were used all that week in Chicago; special program was conducted on stage with attendant newspaper breaks and endorsements.

Proving highly successful is the Gayety Early Bird Club, numbering some 1800 kids. Each child is presented with a membership card, which when punched at 12 consecutive matinees, entitles bearer to one free admission. Cashier keeps a record of the children's names, addresses and birthdays, at which time they are mailed passes to attend the current show. Chicago school teachers are not permitted to announce pictures played at the theatres, however, Burhorn gives passes to deserving pupils on a suitable picture, through cooperation of teachers. Promoted prizes are given to those members of the club who have the best attendance record.

Papers Cooperate With Limerick

Winner in the "D" Classification, George Limerick, Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas, booked "You're a Sweetheart" to play his house on Valentine's Day and capitalized on this event in all his advertising. This theatreman, who specializes in cartoon ads many of which have been reproduced in our pages, again used this medium to sell his picture. First day's ad carried cut of messenger boy with wings and valentine rushing to the theatre; copy read "I'm on my way to see." This was followed next day with photo of Cupid holding a valentine, copy reading "Cupid has this heart; Alice Faye will have yours in," etc., etc.

House artist Tom Kirkham built a mechanical display which was placed in window of drug company week ahead. Around display board was placed valentine candy and behind the board was motor, enabling hips and shoulders of life-size cutout of Alice Faye to undulate. Teaser hearts with just picture title were planted in downtown windows ahead of opening.

Ten days ahead of "Manproof," Limerick ran an ad in the classified section of local paper advertising for a pelican. Ad ran two days and on third theatreman got the stuffed bird from local antique dealer. Newspaper received credit for securing the pelican through their ads which brought writeup in the editor's column. Bird was placed in lobby with placard overhead reading "Just dropped in and I'm staying to see," etc., etc. Since the city's two golf courses were holding their annual tournaments, George planted imprinted pennants on hole markers on the greens and on all sand boxes.

For "Bad Man of Brimstone" boy was used for street bally, dressed in western regalia, carrying two large pistols made out of beaver board on which was printed title, etc. Giant board cocked pistol was hung under marquee and for his lobby display, Limerick used a gun rack on which all shapes and makes of pistols were shown.

On "The Buccaneer," Limerick dressed his front with pirate flags, and large compo cutout of Fredric March. Imprinted tire covers were put on fleet of cabs, study guides supplied to all grade and high schools. Contest was planted in which scene stills were cut into five pieces, each piece then being mailed to as many persons, giving clues as to who held the missing parts. Guest tickets were awarded those who had sought out the other four holders and presented the complete still at boxoffice.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Since we don't know very much about the subject, we presume we should leave the matter to the society editors, but when we hear people commenting on women's bonnets and costumes today it recalls when the girls wore chignons at the back of their heads which were enclosed in a fish net and that tapered off like a hay stack; when they wore baled hay for a bustle; when they wore corsets that made them look in the middle like a wasp; when they wore white bloomers under a knee high skirt that came clear down to their shoetops; when they wore hats trimmed with all the flowers they could get in the garden, and some vegetables.

Back in those days was when Jake Nottingham bought his son's wife for 100 rails and 50 posts, and it was not considered good form to have more than one wife.

We remember tendin' a baby once while its mother went to a bridge party, and when she returned she found we had tied the blanket around the baby's head.

▽

Right now, as we remember Princeton, Minnesota, it is a cracking good town of something like 2,500 folks who believe in Santa Claus, the 4th of July and the Constitution. They also believe in having a good theatre. They believe, too, in having Ed Reynolds manage it, and Ed believes in having the MOTION PICTURE HERALD to keep him well informed on theatrical matters. That's why he sent us a check to have his subscription renewed. As we remember it now, we called on Ed when we were on our way home, having been overheated from traveling when it was 114 in the shade, and no shade. We didn't get to visit him very long, as he was just leaving to fill an appointment, but he told us that the lakes up there were opening up and that fishing would soon be good and invited us up to see him, and that makes him O. K. with us.

▽

It has always been our belief that it was pretty hard to beat those Minnesota exhibitors, but here comes a letter and a check from a Jayhawker down at La Crosse, Kansas, asking us to renew his subscription to the HERALD. This convinces us that the good people didn't all move to Minnesota. D. A. Russell says he has been reading our Colyum and the HERALD for a long time and wants to keep it up. Additional proof of his sanity is entirely unnecessary. Thanks, D. A. Tie up your bulldog, we expect to be down there soon.

▽

Our old friend Gus Harms writes us that he has severed his connection with the Scott-Ballantyne Co. and will be a salesman for National Theatre Supply Company at Omaha. We are willing to stake our reputation as public enemy No. 1 that Gus will make good, for two reasons; one that he is a swell guy himself and the other that he will be working for another good company. Gus wants the HERALD sent to his home address and we betcha that'll be done.

Documentary Film Series In 14th Week; Ends May 11

The series known as "The Documentary Film as History and Journalism," sponsored by the New School for Social Research, now in its 14th week, has included showings of "The Birth of a Nation," "This Is America," "The First World War," "The River," "The Plow That Broke the Plains," Russian, French, British, German and Dutch documentaries and selections from the "March of Time."

The school has installed a new RCA sound reproducing system, which was used last week for the first time at the showing of "The Wave," Paul Strand's documentary film financed by the Mexican government.

Among the speakers have been Gilbert Seldes, Jean H. Lenauer, Pare Lorentz, Frederic W. Ullman, Jr., Louis de Rochemont, Jay Leyda, Max Eastman and Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The series will close May 11th with the showing of "Fury."

Thomas Opens Law Office

Abel Cary Thomas, former general counsel for Warner Brothers-First National, has opened an office for the practice of the law at 11 West 42th Street, New York.

Lily Pons has been made an officer of the French Legion of Honor. The decree, which was signed by the retiring Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour, was presented to Miss Pons at a charity concert she gave in Paris last week.

Eight of 14 Films Seen By Legion Are Foreign

Eight of 14 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week are foreign product. Of the 14, six were approved for general patronage, five were listed as unobjectionable for adults, two were cited as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Four Men and a Prayer," "Lady in the Morgue," "Moonlight Sonata," "Mujer Mexicana" (Spanish), "Outlaws of Sonora," "Under Western Stars." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Call of the Yukon," "Der Lachende Dritte," "Der Maulkorb" (both German), "El Traidor" (Spanish), "There's Always a Woman." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Pearls of the Crown" (French, Italian and English), "Urlaub auf Ehrenwort" (German). Class C, Condemned: "Aus den Wolken Kommt das Glueck" (German).

Not German Product

The 55th Street Playhouse, New York, has played several Austrian motion pictures in the last few months, but no German films in three years. In an article in the April 16 issue on the American market for foreign product the Playhouse was listed as playing French, German and Mexican productions.

Max H. Galfunt has resigned from Columbia to enter the general practice of law.

Yes, when Hollywood Studios come to their most exacting photographic job—the photography of moving picture backgrounds—they project these background pictures with Brenkert Projection Lamps. Because the Background Screen must be perfect, more than 90% of major studios in Hollywood and many throughout the world, use Brenkert Lamps ONLY, for this job that requires the most perfect engineering. When spending millions of dollars on picture production, they take no chances on perfection of projection.

That Brenkert Engineering has evolved projection lamps for perfect results, is recognized by those who know.

These are standard Brenkert Projection Lamps—YOU can get the same quality of Projection in YOUR theatre—NOW—by specifying Brenkert Lamps—and they cost no more!

Coolness NOT ENOUGH FOR Summer Customers

A COOL theatre may still be unattractive to summer crowds—if the seats are uncomfortable.

Don't let business fall off this summer because people "simply can't sit out a program in those seats." Follow the lead of successful exhibitors everywhere who recognize the box office appeal of smartly styled, completely comfortable American Seating Company chairs.

You will find that installations by "American" take the hardest service with minimum maintenance. That's why they offer the greatest ultimate economy.

Let us show you how your theatre can be re-seated with business building chairs to harmonize with architecture and interior decorations—at prices to suit your requirements. Write us for complete information.

JOINING FOYER AND LOUNGE THROUGH GLASS

A design

By S. CHARLES LEE

■ In this sketch from the prominent Los Angeles theatre architect we have an attempt to effect a luxurious feeling of spaciousness and splendor without departing from the stricter interpretations of modernism in design. Decoration would depend principally upon dramatic lighting from concealed sources, indicates Mr. Lee. But perhaps the dominant element in his design is a wall section of glass blocks, joining, as it separates, the foyer and a lounge, thus eliminating a partition in the true sense and contributing to the feeling of expansiveness aimed at in the general design. . . . The lighting scheme could make good use of the translucent blocks in serving its decorative purpose. . . . The photographs of glass blocks used, somewhat symbolically, on this page, reproduce two designs of the Pittsburgh Corning Corporation—their "Decora" (above) and the "Argus."

Perfection of Mercury Vapor Lamp To Bring New Lighting Technique

THE PERFECTION of electric discharge type lamps employing mercury vapor in an exhausted tubular glass bulb, providing artificial light approaching the quality of daylight and also colored light in shades heretofore unattainable, was announced April 21 in New York at a joint meeting of leading electrical and illuminating engineers' organizations. The development, which has immediate bearing upon the kinds of lighting especially adapted to theatres, is regarded in engineering and architectural circles as one of the most impressive of the modern advances in illumination technique.

Addressing the New York Electrical Society, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the Illuminating Engineering Society, Ward Harrison, engineering director of General Electric's Incandescent Lamp Department at Nela Park, Cleveland, described the new light sources, which have been placed in manufacture by General Electric and also by Westinghouse, a GE licensee, for marketing under the name Fluorescent Lumiline Lamps.

In a statement from Nela Park, however, General Electric points out that the lamps will not be generally available "for some little time," the necessary auxiliaries not being readily obtainable now. Much of the first production, it is added, will be for the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs.

Mr. Harrison told the engineers that because of their ability to produce a wide range of colored light with greatly reduced heat—in some cases as much as 120 times the illumination for the current consumed as filament lamps—the fluorescent lamps are expected to bring many changes into lighting practice.

Powders Re-Radiate Ultra-Violet Energy

Especially treated powders of fluorescent substances synthetically produced and having the power to absorb the short ultra-violet light waves, then to re-radiate this energy in the wave lengths comprising the visible portion of the color spectrum, are applied to the inner surface of the glass bulb. Each type of powder has its own characteristic color response to ultra-violet.

"The amount of light produced," Mr. Harrison said, "and the efficiency of the re-radiation in the longer wave-bands, is governed by the intensity and quantity of the ultra-violet energy absorbed. For example, one powder will re-radiate the absorbed energy in the short wave-band of the spectrum, forming blue light; another, in the long wave-band, giving pink light. Thus by the proper combination of powders, it is possible to produce re-radiation in practically any desired part of the color spectrum, permitting the production of light in hitherto unobtainable pastel tints as well as pure colors."

A comparison of tungsten-filament lamps with fluorescent lamps as to efficiency in the production of colored light shows, Mr. Harrison said, that the latter may have an advantage of at least a hundred to one over the former "from a lumen-per-watt standpoint."

Regarding the production of "daylight color," he declared that the lamp made for this purpose has a "color temperature" closely approximating 6,500° Kelvin, which is the standard daylight color of the U. S. Bureau of Standards. "Color discrimination—in fact, many forms of color matching—will be practicable under light from these lamps," Mr. Harrison added.

There is also a type of fluorescent lumiline lamps listed as white, which provides illumination similar to regular filament lamps, the light being "warm," under which objects appear about the same as under light from Mazda lamps, with blue objects less changed in apparent coloration by light from a fluorescent white-light than from a filament source.

Among the applications of the new lamps, theatre interiors and marquees were specified.

[Technical data on the Fluorescent Lumiline Lamp are given on page 24.]

Academy Issues New Sound Recommendations

THE INCREASING interest of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in the practical problems of exhibition, involving a closer coordination between studio practices and normal theatre requirements, has resulted in further recommendations of new standards for theatre sound equipment. Through adherence to these standards, it is expected that studio recording methods and theatre reproducing equipment will be matched to each other to secure the maximum in sound quality.

The new specifications for theatre apparatus are the result of a series of tests and experiments conducted by a committee of standardization under the direction of the Academy's Research Council, and cover every part of the theatre sound system from the photo-electric cell to loud speakers. The standards relating to two-way speaker systems, previously drawn up for the Academy (reported on page 32 of BETTER THEATRES for May 1, 1937) have been incorporated into the present specifications as an integral part of the complete requirements for an ideal theatre installation.

The soundhead, according to these specifications, should combine photo-cell and optical system into an integral physical unit inserted in the sound head on vibration-proof mounting. Shock-proof mounting assembly is specified for the driving motor. Adequate shielding is called for all sound wiring in the head, as well as optical system design or a masking arrangement to prevent introduction of sprocket hole hum. (Dividing line hum is not mentioned.)

Minimum Track Variation

The specifications provide that sound track illumination shall be laterally uniform, to the extent that variation in sound volume, as reproduced from different portions of the track width, shall not be greater than plus or minus 1½ db. The lateral weave of film in motion through the sound head shall not be more than plus or minus .002". Projection and sound apparatus shall not at any time come into contact with the sound track on either the emulsion or celluloid side of the film—all idlers, sprockets and pads to be recessed accordingly. Electrical wiring is to be oil-proof throughout, and electrical and optical apparatus so located as to reduce the chances of trouble due to misplaced lubrication. Standard and push-pull sound track dimensions and location are specified in detail. Flutter limits are given, as measured by apparatus now available, but a supplementary report covering standardized flutter measurements is promised for the future.

Ward Harrison of the General Electric Company, displaying one of the regular lengths of fluorescent lumiline lamps announced in New York April 21.

Volume control requirements are set at 50 decibels, variation in steps of 2 db., at least 16 db. of which shall be available to the projectionist at the front-wall change-over location. Equalizing facilities shall allow balance of projector sound outputs to within 1 db.

Anticipate Future Improvements

All amplifying systems shall have 20 db. reserve amplification. The frequency response of the electrical system shall be within plus or minus 1 db from 40 to 10,000 cycles. Distortion characteristics specify that the root mean square sum of all harmonic components between 50 and 5,000 cycles, when the system is excited by a sinusoidal input, shall not exceed 2% of the fundamental. The low pass filter shall be adjustable over a wide range provided for anticipated future improvements.

Hum and noise above 300 cycles shall be more than 35 db. below .006 watts; hum and noise above 300 cycles may equal minus 35 db. below the same reference level. These specifications are intended to insure that no hum or noise will be audible even in the front row of seats.

Overall frequency range, reading loud speaker output with calibrated microphone equipment, shall be flat with plus or minus 3 db. from 50 to 2,000 cycles, falling off by not more than 5 db. at 4,000, 10 db. at 8,000 or 12½ db. at 10,000 cycles; with not more than 10 db. decrease between 50 and 30 cycles. Horns shall be available to distribute sound over a horizontal angle of 105° and a vertical angle of 65°. Speakers shall have a minimum of rear radiation. The dividing network shall have an attenuation of approximately 12 db. per octave.

Urge Convenience in Replacement

Vacuum tube current meters, and accessible terminals for a volume indicating test meter, are recommended in the interest of good servicing. It is also suggested that parts subject to wear shall be readily replaceable, and all parts and wiring accessible for inspection and maintenance. All parts subject to measurement should be so built as to make measurement in the projection room convenient. The committee considers that all equipment, including speaker field supply rectifiers and speaker dividing networks, should be installed in the projection room, leaving only the unavoidable minimum of apparatus behind the screen.

The Research Council has included in its report on the new recommendations, the following statement:

"The specifications and recommendations contained in the report have been prepared for the guidance of the engineering departments of the producing companies participating in the Research Council co-operative technical program, and the engineering departments of the associated companies affiliated with these producing companies, in purchasing new sound projection equipment.

"Copies of the report are also available upon request to all sound equipment manufacturers, to be used as a guide in designing, testing or manufacturing new equipment, or to theatre servicing organizations and exhibitors who may be interested in the opinions of the Council on sound reproducing equipment.

"Copies of the report have been distributed through each company's representative on the Council to the proper officials in each producing company."

Patent Device to Give Synopsis With the Film

A DEVICE for the convenience of motion picture theatre patrons who arrive in the middle of the feature film, has been patented by a British firm of electrical engineers. By its means the patron arriving after the film has started will be able to read a brief synopsis of what has gone before, and which will be projected by travelling tape, or otherwise, on to the lower edge of the screen.

The apparatus, which is sponsored by Bannister & Fitton of Rochdale, England, consists in a timing mechanism housed in the projection room which controls a supplementary device for exhibiting the synopsis to the audience. On the first occasion—say, ten minutes after the start of the film—only a small portion is displayed, outlining briefly to newcomers just that part of the picture they have missed. At each successive showing of the synopsis a progressively greater portion of it is revealed, until on the last occasion it is shown in full.

It says by the printing she don't love him. But look! Tsk, Tsk—wot a hypocrite!

At the conclusion of the cycle of operations—that is, at the end of the picture—the mechanism automatically returns to zero, ready to repeat the whole operation when the picture is next projected. The duration of the cycle may be adjusted to suit films of different lengths.

Theatre Building But Little Under Last Year's

DESPITE curtailed business operations generally during the first three months of the year, contracts awarded during that period in 37 eastern states, for the construction of new theatres, had a value only $598,000 less than that for the same period of 1937, which amount is less than 10% of the last year's first-quarter valuation. Last year, contracts for the period amounted to $6,218,000 in value, covering 196 projects; this year there were 186 projects valued at $5,620,000.

These figures, published in Motion Picture Daily, are based on reports to the Dodge Reports division of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York.

The Dodge analysis of theatre building contracts for March shows 75 projects with a total floor area of 328,000 square feet and an aggregate valuation of $2,064,000. In March 1937, there were 78 projects with a total valuation of $2,824,000.

The March 1938 theatres' contracts were also slightly under those reported in February. March contracts for all types of building, according to the Dodge analysis, were 19% over those for February, while non-commercial construction was up 81% over that for February.

The Luxury Idea

IN THEATRE INTERIORS OF MODERN FEELING

THE idea of luxury in the motion picture theatre is derived from the common belief among showmen: "Give the public what it doesn't get at home." It is an idea that was extravagantly developed during the 1920's. Then Modernism, plus the Depression, advised simplicity. But we find The Luxury Idea reasserting itself, and on this and the following four pages are pictured how it has been applied by John Eberson, New York theatre architect, with equal emphasis to Warners' 1,600-seat Colony in Shaker Heights, Cleveland; and to the Earle, 600-seat Brandt Theatres house in Jackson Heights, New York City.

■ Pictured above is the foyer-lounge beneath the stadium in the Earle theatre. Entered from a main floor foyer down several steps and giving access to men's and women's rooms, it is a brilliantly lighted corridor in pastel shades of green, maroon and orange, with a cosmetic room providing a lovely vista through an arch. Furniture is of pickled maple with coverings in corduroy and frieze. The main foyer of the Colony (left) achieves a striking air of phantasy through eccentrically curving light coves which divide the ceiling into sweeping tiers of peach, green, pink and midnight blue. Lower walls are of crushed velour in red, rust, gold.

First contrasting with modern luxury the idea of modern simplicity, as exemplified in the theatres illustrated in the upper two pictures. Here no attempt to emphasize sensuous appeal, but only that of harmonious forms and a subtle play of light. And pictured immediately above is The Luxury Idea in a pre-modern interpretation that was conceived some years ago for the Paramount in Lynchburg, Virginia.

■ The Earle cosmetic room, which was observed located off one end of the foyer-lounge, has walls finished in Salubra paper of a floral pattern in silver, pale blue and old rose. From the tinted ceiling is suspended a "powder puff and lipstick" lighting fixture. Cosmetic tables are plate glass panels bracketed to the wall, thus blending with it, and above each is a frameless mirror. . . . The Earle auditorium (a forward view appears on page 11) has a warm, colorful treatment employing cotton art fabric in green, bronze and white stripings on all main wall surfaces, and red damask in a "sunburst" recess at each end of the cross-aisle.

IN A LARGE THEATRE

■ The Colony auditorium (a forward view appears on page 11) has side walls of damask (in both theatres the wall fabric is laid over rock wool) arranged in panels of the same modern pattern, but each in a different shade—eggshell, pale blue, pale green, rust and maroon, proceeding from rear to proscenium. Each is eccentrically designed in relation to ceiling cowl containing a cove, cowl and light being of a color corresponding to that of the panel.

The Luxury Idea

Colony: Lounge and (opposite page) Auditorium.

■ The Colony lounge, located under the foyer, is a spacious chamber which (very much like the sub-level foyer-lounge of the Earle) is brilliantly lighted in consideration of the fact that some people have an aversion to going downstairs into a dimly lighted room. This lounge, moreover, is related physically to the foyer upstairs through the mural decorations, which begins its "Aladdin and His Lamp" theme on the foyer wall at the head of the staircase (see page 7). The lighting fixtures, of glass and dull chromium, direct light upon the murals. Carpeting is a solid henna color (the weave is an Alexander Smith Axminster; all other carpeting in the Colony, and all carpeting in the Earle, is Crestwood Velvet in a late modern pattern). Furniture is pickled maple with coverings of moire silk and mohair. . . . The front view of the Colony auditorium shows a ceiling cowl, which is 16 feet from the proscenium and has three-color dimmer-controlled striplights directed upon the stage curtain (which is operated by Vallen control equipment). Chairs (by Ideal) have full-spring backs and spring-edge seats, covered in mohair, backs in coral, seats in blue.

■ The view of the Earle foyer looks toward one end, with entrance from lobby at right, and passages to the auditorium at left, on either side of a "mystic light" niche, a decorative device greeting patrons upon entrance from the lobby. It consists in a projecting cove lighted in pink and effecting a canopy over a panel treated similarly to the Formica doors, with a blue mirror centered. Outside corners have a fluted motif to eliminate an appearance of "bareness." At either inside corner are stairs to the sub-level foyer-lounge. . . . The forward view of the Earle auditorium, from the stadium, effectively indicates the feeling of luxury, despite the physical limitations, aimed at in the design. Wall surfaces are interrupted by murals in a modernistically stylized woodland theme surmounted by concealed light sources, and astral motifs stenciled on acoustic plaster panels at the proscenium, in addition to the panels of similar theme at the cross-aisle. Seating (by American) has padded backs and spring-edge seats, with backs covered in striped blue corduroy, while the seats are covered in imitation leather.

The DeFiore Rx For Theatre Ills

• DeFiore being Wilmington's A. Joseph, S.D. (Doctor of Showmanship)—though he was on the way to an M.D. when the theatre, his first love, called him back

ONE EVENING in 1920, a well set-up swarthy young man, home from the day's classes at Temple University in Philadelphia, sat trying, once again, to make up his mind about what he wanted to do in life. To be a doctor or a showman?

He had faced critical situations before, but they had mostly been those which called for immediate action, as in the government service during the World war. Now the issue was not so clear-cut; however, the happiness of Joe DeFiore depended upon a wise decision, and he was only a youth.

There were other times like that. Then Joe had his answer. He followed his heart. And he's been, happily, in showbusiness ever since.

Today? General manager of the Park theatre in Wilmington, Del., and president of the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Delaware and Eastern Shore of Maryland, which he has been since its organization several years ago.

A. Joseph DeFiore had got his first taste of showbusiness long before his final rejection of Medicine as a career. Back in 1910, when he was only eleven years old, a lad in short pants, he got a job as assistant projectionist at the old Verdi Hall in Philadelphia. A year of that and he went to Bristol, Pa., to be service boy in the local Opera House, where he remained until 1913, when he got a chance to be assistant manager of Nixon-Nirdlinger's Trenton, N. J., Opera House.

Long Pants Went with the Job

"That's when I got my first pair of long trousers," said Mr. DeFiore. He was being interviewed at his office in the

The Doc—and the Park after taking his medicine.

Park theatre. "Nixon-Nirdlinger told my mother the Opera House couldn't have a manager, even an assistant, in short pants."

Acquiring experience at the Trenton Opera House, young DeFiore decided in 1915 to strike out for himself, purchasing the Victor theatre, a Philadelphia neighborhood house. This was what he had been aiming for, his own theatre. . . . Then America joined the Allies in the World war, and Joe DeFiore gave up showbusiness to be an investigator of labor and industries in the services of his adopted country.

The Community Theatre: Some DeFiore Ideas

His association with the theatre seemed to be behind him, for after the war he entered Temple University, to study Medicine. But, as we have seen, he decided, in good time, otherwise, leaving school to roadshow a motion picture. In 1924 he took over the managership of the Broadway theatre in Wilmington. He became manager of the Park, a few blocks from the Broadway, in 1929. Both are neighborhood houses.

"One of the advantages that neighborhood theatres have over those downtown," remarked Mr. DeFiore, "at any rate in Wilmington, is parking facilities. Another thing is that the neighborhood house is handy when people are at their leisure—they go to it because they want motion picture entertainment, not merely because they particularly want to see a certain film."

Because of this, Mr. DeFiore pointed out, the theatre itself must be an attraction—it must reflect community interests, have, so to speak, a winning "personality" of its very own. More than $40,000 were spent last year in modernizing the Park theatre throughout the interior.

An interesting traffic plan was instituted at the Park following this remodeling, and Mr. DeFiore now recommends it particularly for theatres that have three aisles. The center aisle is used exclusively for incoming patrons, led to directly from the middle set of three pairs of vestibule doors. The outgoing patrons are guided from the side aisles to the doors at either side of the entrance doors.

In remodeling the Park, an auditorium floor slope of 5 feet in 125 feet was increased to 7 feet.

"Theatre men should realize," commented Mr. DeFiore, referring to this change, "that it is time measures were taken to eliminate the necessity of peering around the heads of people who are seated immediately in front."

The Park, which has a capacity of 700—a balcony to seat 300 may be added later—was resealed. Observed Mr. DeFiore:

"Contrary to the belief that children mar seats, we find that little if any such mutilation has taken place since the installation of the new chairs. There is a good reason for this: Even kids are encouraged to act nice by nice things. When a theatre looks shabby, nobody has much respect for it."—George L. Patzer.

Q In Simon Galitzki's new Coed, the capital of Kansas has its tenth motion picture theatre. The population of Topeka today is approximately 68,000. The first theatre to be built in the fine residential section surrounding Washburn college, the Coed has been designed to cater to the class of patronage indicated by its name. The ten theatres of Topeka have an aggregate capacity of a little less than 7,000. Of these seats, 4,000 are in Fox Midwest houses.

Topeka — and, above, its first "suburban" theatre, the Coed, serving a collegiate and residential community.

A Novel Interior Scheme With Lighting in Neon

Washburn college campus and the residential section in which the Coed is located.

THE COED theatre in Topeka is the first theatre in the capital of Kansas that can be called suburban. It is located a few blocks from the campus of Washburn college, a co-educational institution, hence the theatre name. The Coed was built and is operated by Simon Galitzki, who also operates the Princess theatre in North Topeka. It is of a relatively simple modern architectural and decorative scheme, and particularly devoid of conspicuous theatrical devices at the facade, an omission advised by the location of the theatre in a cultured residential and collegiate section. Trevor C. Jones of Topeka was the architect.

In addition to its general plan and architectural design, and also its location, the Coed is interesting for its lighting scheme. The auditorium, for example, is entirely lighted with neon, which in combination with a surface of another color produces an effect sometimes vastly different from one related to its own color, as in the case of red neon with a blue surface, which transforms the blue surface into a dirty gray.

The Lighting Plan Of the Auditorium

THREE COLORS of neon, and half a dozen surface colors are combined in the 45x108-foot auditorium of the Coed. The ceiling, which is of Weatherwood, is turquoise blue. On this are reflected two colors, red and blue, which create an effect of indefinite brightness rather than color. The two tubes of red and blue extend the full length of the auditorium along both sides of the stringer, and circuit the uppermost one of the three fins in the center.

The fins are in the natural buff color of acoustic plaster (to reflect the actual color of neon), except the underside of the lower one, which is deep turquoise to harmonize with the ceiling. Neon lights are inset in the top surface of each fin to reflect from the bottom of the fin above; in the bottom fin the neon is green; in the center, red; and in the top, red and blue.

A problem of surface treatment and light was presented by the stringer itself, which runs down the center. The original plan to use aluminum metal had to be abandoned because the metal was so bright it reflected light from the screen downward, which would have shone in the faces of patrons. Instead, the stringer was made of linoleum and wood fibre veneer, and eight coats of aluminum paint were applied to get the proper surface. The result is a dull aluminum sheen that avoids reflection and still achieves the bright effect of aluminum. Application was by spray, and after each coat the surface was sanded and puttied to eliminate small hollows that appeared.

Neon Tinting of Veneer Surfaces

Three panels at the top of the side walls are of wood fibre veneer in shades of magenta, darkening as they go down, and separated by slotted bands of dark paint.

Blue neon reflected from below gives them a lavender tint. The surface photographing gray below the panels, which runs from light to dark, possesses some red, so that a lavender tint develops under the blue neon. Incidentally, the red is not apparent in daylight or under ordinary lamps. The gray surface is slotted in much the same manner as the magenta panels above, the dividers extending along the line established by the top of each wainscot section. (This does not show in the photograph, which was taken before this final phase of the interior was completed.)

Blue neon lights are inset in the top of the wainscoting to reflect upward on the side walls. The wainscoting itself is thinly veneered in figured mahogany, which is left in its natural color. With no lights reflected directly on it, the dark mahogany makes an effective dividing line of side walls. Plaster beneath the wainscot is a deep chocolate brown.

The 1,500 feet of neon tubing on the ceiling employs fourteen transformers, which are concealed in the ceiling.

General Plan and Facade Treatment

AN UNUSUAL feature of the plan is the absence of doors between the lobby 24x25 feet and the auditorium. Space runs uninterruptedly from the screen to the rear of the box office, with the exception of standee rail drapes and drapes hung from the ceiling at the juncture of lobby and foyer, which only partially close off the lobby and which are used at matinees only. The rear pylons of the auditorium are curved into the lobby and are finished in acoustic plaster.

Mr. Galitski and Mr. Jones feared that the hard surfaces in the auditorium would produce a tinny effect in sound reception. The only acoustical plaster used is below the wainscoting, on the two rear pylons of the auditorium, and on the fins in the ceiling. The fear was not, however, justified. One thing that helped, declares Mr. Jones, was the use of a naphtha base in the paint on the ceiling; the naphtha ate into the porous material, he states, and left the wood with its natural acoustical properties.

The Coed has only enough stage space to accommodate screen and horn system. Washburn College has a large auditorium, and the theatre's suburban location precludes use of stage shows. Leaving only eight feet for the stage depth provided space for two storerooms.

The concrete floor is recessed in the aisles to make the Crestwood Velvet carpet of blue and red in a modern pattern, even with the rest of the auditorium floor. Seating (by American) has spring-edge seats and is covered in blue mohair.

The entire facade of the Coed is carried out in limestone, except for a central panel, which is in glass blocks separated by stone tile. The same effect is repeated in the base of the box office, where the glass blocks are illuminated from behind.

Construction for Marquee Curved Lettering

The marquee, which is finished in white porcelain enamel to blend with the limestone, is essentially of a V-shape, but with rounded corners. The mechanical problem of placing attraction letters in the rounded area was solved by creating a slot in the top of the aluminum border, then designing a letter with a metal tab on the back that fits snugly into the slot. The letters are of wood and were dipped in creosote to prevent deterioration due to weather, then painted black; they are two inches thick and six inches high, and of silhouette type.

Topeka fire regulations require a minimum distance of ten feet between auditorium walls and the buildings (or property line) adjacent. To save space inside, toilets were built just outside and forward from the exit that opens off each side of the foyer. This gives the auditorium 45 feet of width.

The projection room is directly above the lobby. On each side of it are lounges, reached by a stair opening off one side of the foyer. The lounges are connected by a passageway running between the booth and the front of the theatre, and both have a 6x4-foot encased opening into the auditorium.

An 8½x18-foot equipment building was built at the rear of the building to avoid the necessity of a basement. In the first floor room is the oil furnace; in the second are the ventilation fans and overhead washers feed air through a slot cut in the roof. The same distribution system is used for both hot and cold air. The furnace room is compact, and ducts are close to outlets and lined with asbestos. The theatre is heated at a cost of about $35 a month.

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

J. R. FORSYTHE has sold the New theatre, Falfurrias, Texas, to R. N. SMITH of Mission, Texas. The new owner, who is vice president and director of the Allied Theatre Owners Association of Texas, plans to remodel the front and lobby and possibly install a small balcony, new upholstered seats and make other changes.

FRED LEVEY has been appointed manager of the Alpha theatre at Bell, Calif.

L. P. GILLIGAN, who operates the Tall Corn theatre at Kanawha, Ia., has leased the Grand theatre in Sheffield, Ia., from DR. F. H. RODEMEYER. The Grand, which was built last Fall, has been run by Dr. Rodemeyer in recent months.

Golden State Theatres, Inc., of San Francisco, has commissioned A. A. Cantin, architect from the Golden Gate city, to draw up plans for the remodeling and enlarging of their theatre at San Bruno.

The Strand theatre at Clarksville, Ark., operated by Malco Theatres, Inc., is being remodeled. The work, to cost about $6,000, is being done under the direction of TOM STEWART.

SAM CAPORAL has opened the Mayflower in Oklahoma City, Okla. The house, with a seating capacity of 700, is equipped with two new Simplex E-7 projectors mounted on Simplex bases.

A. L. ROBARGE is remodeling his Cosmo theatre in Merrill, Wis., and installing new carpets and decorating. Additional renovations include a new marquee, sign porcelain front, poster panels and box office, which latter is being done by Ben B. Poblocki & Sons Company of Milwaukee, successors to Electrolite Signs, Inc.

W. T. BROCKMAN of Anderson, S. C., has leased the Ritz in Barnwell, and the Carolina at Allendale, S. C., from G. FRANK LUNDY.

E. SHOEMAKER has opened his Isis theatre, which was completely rebuilt after being damaged by fire two months ago.

R. P. CONDRON has sold the Bijou theatre at La Feria, Texas, to the Hall Industries of Beeville, Texas. The latter concern, of which F. D. NANCE is business manager, now operates 23 theatres. Extensive remodeling is planned for the Bijou.

G. W. PAGE has awarded contracts for the erection of a theatre at Corcoran, Calif.

California Drive-In Theatres, Inc., will erect a drive-in theatre at Glendale, Calif., at an estimated cost of $30,000.

HI BENDER plans to erect a new 300-seat house in Cleveland, Okla.

How to Determine if a Sunday Or Special Closing Law is Valid

● Too often theatre closing statutes are the expressions of minority prejudices, which is likely to be their weakness. Here's how they may be tested

By LEO T. PARKER

OFFICIALS IN small towns, and not infrequently in cities, attempt from time to time, unreasonably and unjustifiably, to curtail and restrict the operation of theatres on Sundays and during certain periods of weekdays. Frequently these officials enforce void regulations which are formulated in accordance with their personal ideas and desires. Theatre owners, who are not familiar with methods of determining whether a state law, city ordinance, or municipal regulation is valid, very often comply with the invalid requirements because they do not feel inclined to expend money, time and effort in litigation without positive information of higher court decisions upon which to base a suit. Therefore, the purpose of this article is to supply higher court citations which can be used to meet such situations.

First, it is important to know that in order that a state law be valid, which restricts the operation of theatres, it must be shown that the interests of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, require such interference; and that the law is reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the intended purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon theater owners.

In other words, a state legislature may not, under the guise of protecting the public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business, or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations.

Moreover, as is more or less well known, a law which is discriminatory is void. For instance, in City of Alexandria v. Hall (131 So. 722) a state law which required only one specific class of business to close on Sunday, was held invalid.

The Basis of a Valid Closing Law

LAWS WHICH designate Sunday as a day of rest, and prohibit the doing of specified acts on that day, have for their object the promotion of the health, peace and good order of society by requiring man to take a day of rest.

Sunday closing laws are essentially civil, not religious regulations. For this reason, under no circumstances will a law be held valid where the theatres have been singled out and legislated against, and the classification is so arbitrary and the discrimination so unreasonable as to fall under the head of "class legislation."

This condition existed in the recently decided case of City of Springfield (19 S. W. [2] 1). The facts of this case are that a theatre owner in Missouri was arrested and convicted for operating his theatre on Sunday in violation of a city ordinance which in part provided that no person should keep open any theatre, playhouse, or any other place where theatrical performances, vaudeville shows or motion picture exhibitions were given or conducted. This city ordinance did not list, enumerate, or restrict any other kind of business. Therefore, the higher court promptly held the law void saying:

"A law may not include less than all who are similarly situated. If it does, it is special and, therefore, invalid, because it omits a part of those which in the nature of things the reason of the law includes. . . . The general classification of all activities may fall into the many sub-classifications; viz., the operation of stores and general trade, the operation of public amusement businesses, the engaging in labor, the engaging in sports, games, hunting, etc. . . . The question at once arises, why was there an omission from the ordinance of the city keeping open and operation of such public amusement businesses as concerts, circuses, amusement parks, public halls, sparring exhibitions, wrestling exhibitions, and like public amusement businesses which under its charter the City of Springfield also had the power to regulate? . . . The keeping open and operation of each requires similar labor activities . . . and each is fairly and reasonably comparable with theatres, vaudeville shows, and moving picture exhibitions in their possibilities of disturbing a day of rest."

Law Must Specify Restricted Business

THE FACT, however, that a law, ordinance or regulation is enacted which restricts all classes of business alike does not in the least indicate that it is valid and enforceable. Penal statutes are intended to regulate and control the conduct of individuals, and therefore it is essential that they should be expressed in definite and explicit language so that all persons might readily comprehend and fully understand the specific act the statute undertakes to prohibit.

It is settled that all doubts shall be resolved against a penal statute, and in favor of the theatre owner. Moreover, the courts will not depart from the plain meaning of words in a statute or ordinance. In fact, all higher courts hold that a state legislature owes the public a duty of making clear all restrictions. The courts, in construing penal statutes, apply a rule of strict construction in order to safeguard the individual rights of all.

For instance, in Kislingbury v. Plainfield (160 Atl. 654), it was disclosed that a city council enacted an ordinance as follows:

"No person shall . . . keep open any shop or store or place . . . or in which the occupation of barber, shoemaker, blacksmith, silversmith, or other trade requiring the exercise of manual labor is carried on . . ."

Ordinance Found Ambiguous

The operator of a theatre was arrested for violating this ordinance. He employed counsel which defended him on the plea that the ordinance was discriminatory and at the same time ambiguous. After carefully considering the wording of the ordinance the higher court rendered the same void, and stated the following important law:

"Certainly supervising and conducting a motion picture exhibition cannot by any stretch of the imagination be considered as offering for sale the ware and merchandise specifically enumerated in the ordinance or to conducting a shop or store in which such articles are sold, or as following the occupation of a barber, shoemaker, blacksmith, silversmith, or the conducting of trade requiring the exercise of manual labor. . . . Such a provision is violative of the Federal and State constitutions." . . .

Of course, if either a state law or a city ordinance fails specifically and clearly to forbid the operation of theatres on Sundays, it is not applicable. For instance, in People v. Mooney (290 Pac. 271), it was disclosed that a state enacted a law that required theatre owners to obtain licenses. The law further stated, "No person shall be allowed by virtue of any such license to open any place of public amusement, such as a theatre, circus, or show, on the Sabbath or Lord's day; but any person who shall so offend on such day shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars, for every such offense."

A theatre owner did not obtain a license but conducted his theatre on Sunday. He was charged with violation of this statute and appealed to the higher court, which promptly held him not guilty of violating the law. This court said:

"It should be observed, in reading and construing the statute . . . the provision is that 'no one shall be allowed by virtue of any such license' so to do. Nothing which the defendant (theater owner) did was by virtue of any license whatever, because the defendant did not possess a license. . . . We would be violating one of the well recognized rules of construction if we held that the statute applies to those who fail to procure a license as well as to licensees, because the language used in the statute itself is applicable to those only who procure licenses, and those who violate other provisions of the statute, by failing to procure a license, might open their theatres on the Sabbath or Lord's day without fear of punishment. . . ."

City Law Must Have State Authority

ANOTHER IMPORTANT point of the law is that municipalities have only such authority to adopt ordinances as is expressly or impliedly authorized by the state. Also, an ordinance is void if for any reason it is not reasonably advantageous and likely to benefit the morals, health or enjoyment of the general public, and particularly if it is destructive to a lawful business. So held a higher court in the recent case of Knight v. Johns (137 So. 509).

In this case it was shown that a city enacted an ordinance which forbids certain kinds of businesses to be open for business before 7:30 in the forenoon, and forbids them to remain open for business after the hour of 6:30 in the afternoon. The validity of this ordinance was contested on the grounds that it was unreasonable and not adapted to benefit the general public. Also, it was shown that the ordinance was not authorized by the state laws. Therefore, the court held the law invalid.

Obviously, a state law would be void which either unreasonably restricts the operation of theatres, as in the above case, or authorizes municipal officials to do so.

Moreover, any unreasonable laws or ordinances are void which are likely to prove destructive to a business.

Devices to Thwart Valid Law Ineffective

If either a state law, city ordinance, or municipal regulation is valid, it is impossible to avoid it by acts designed especially by a theatre owner to prevent enforcement of the law.

For instance, in Albany Theatre v. Short (154 S. E. 895), it was disclosed that a state law provides:

"Any person who shall pursue his business, or the work of his ordinary calling, on the Lord's Day, works of necessity or charity only excepted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

An organization made arrangements with a theatre owner whereby all expenses of operation of the theatre were paid out of the admission fees, and the balance was turned over to organization for the benefit of "underprivileged children." However, the higher court held the operation of the theatre illegal.

Flood and Control Equipment In Film Theatre Stage Lighting

• Continuing a series of articles, begun in the April 2nd issue, on apparatus and fittings suited to effective occasional stage shows

By O. T. TAYLOR

FOR AUGMENTING fixed general lighting equipment for the stage—that is, equipment such as borderlights, which can be raised and lowered but is otherwise not directional, footlights permanently fixed of light direction, and proscenium lights permitting only limited directional lighting—the floodlight is the most popular and perhaps most useful device for either general or localized lighting. Stands carrying one or more floodlight units equipped with grooves for color medium frames can be quickly and effectively spotted in the wings. The telescopic stand and adjustable supports permit the lights to be raised, lowered and set at any desired angle. The complete unit occupies a minimum of floor space. Another model of reflector type floodlight of maximum efficiency is fitted with a glass lined reflector.

Combination Spotlights

Specifically, the spotlight is used for other than just illuminative purposes. Its real purpose in general stage work is to direct attention to a performer or object on the stage by means of a strong beam of concentrated light. The spotlight is fitted with a single condenser lens, making it possible to adjust the size of the light beam or spot at will.

An interlocking dimmer bank of a simple type adapted to stage lighting control installations meeting the requirements of occasional stage shows, needing little space per unit of load and operating at a high power factor with adequate flexibility of control.

Combination spot and floodlight of late type adapted to both general and localized stage lighting, with either 250- or 500-watt lamp.

If great improvements are noticeable in stage lighting equipment in general, it is even more so in spotlights. The new types of spotlights are marvels of efficiency, utility and flexibility. They are so constructed that they can be used for floodlighting as readily as for spotlighting. Some models are equipped with adjustable framing and iris shutters, and are mounted on rubber-tired telescopic, adjustable stands that can be quickly and silently moved to any position on the stage.

Still more elaborate models are equipped with electro-magnetically controlled color-frames, making instant color changes possible from the stage switchboard. Spotlights include a wide variety of types from the small "baby" spot to the large spotlight fitted with color wheel or mechanical scenic effect slides.

Spotlights used on the stage are now, with few exceptions, of the incandescent type. For the long-throw from projection room to stage the arc spotlight is indispensable. The arc light projects an intensely brilliant, evenly illuminated light beam, from a 4-foot spot to a flood covering the entire stage.

Dimmer Equipment

Without dimmers many of the present day stage lighting effects would become impossible. Unlimited variety in lighting effects and color changes are made possible only with modern dimmers. Blending of colors as well as volume and intensity of light are controlled at will from a single point, and changes wrought smoothly and gradually. Dimmers are made in a wide range of styles and sizes, from the small portable dimmers to banks controlling a large number of circuits, interlocking and fitted with master handles for control of groups of dimmers, and the entire board. Dimmers of some kind are essential equipment of a modern stage, regardless of how modest the productions presented.

Pockets for Portable Lamps

Pockets, plugs and cable are other necessary stage paraphernalia. Pockets are electrical floor and wall outlets provided to permit "plug-in" of portable lights for general localized lighting and for effects, at points close to positions from which such lights are to be operated. Stage pockets are of special construction, requiring special plugs. The average stage should be furnished with at least two double floor pockets on each side of the stage; one double wall pocket centrally located on the back wall, and a pocket on each side of the proscenium opening.

Each pair, right and left stage, as well as back wall pocket and proscenium pockets should be on separate circuit and dimmer. Plugging boxes are used to provide extra "plug-in" facilities. Stage cables, heavily insulated and of ample lengths, fitted with connectors, and with branch connectors when additional circuits are to be provided from one feeder cable, are part of the necessary stage lighting equipment.

Summary of Lighting Equipment

To light the average stage adequately for attractions such as standard vaudeville, dancing school recitals, revues etc., the minimum of equipment should generally include:

Two reflector type borderlights (three if the stage is very deep).

Footlights, or banks of floodlights on the balcony front.

Proscenium lights consisting of reflector type strips or vertical banks of floodlights.

Four portable floodlights.

Two 1000-watt spotlights.

One 35-70-ampere arc light with color wheel, in the projection room.

The necessary dimmer banks, cables and accessory paraphernalia.

To the above may be added, for special effects and artistic lighting, a number of "baby" spots, a spotlight border, and a sciopicon for scenic effects.

The cost of installing stage lighting equipment necessary for effective stage lighting is obviously governed by the size of the stage, and by the type of equipment selected. It will, of course, be found advantageous in most cases to contract with a reputable stage lighting concern for the entire installation.

B & L Super-Cinephors are the first anastigmatic projection lenses. They permit critically sharp focusing over the whole area of the screen regardless of its size.

In addition they are completely color corrected—a feature which the increased number of full color pictures scheduled for production this year makes vitally important to you. Write for full particulars to Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 679 St. Paul St., Rochester, N. Y.

Characteristics of the New Fluorescent Lumiline Lamps

Producing a fluorescent lamp at the General Electric Company's Nela Park laboratories. One stage calls for heating the powders with which the bulbs are coated to a high temperature. In the first view is shown an attendant placing casseroles containing the powders, which are prepared synthetically, into an oven. The powder, with a suitable "binder," is poured into the tube (second picture); a special treatment removes adhering binder, leaving a thin coating of powder on the glass. Then a small amount of mercury is introduced into the tube, also a trace of argon (which acts as a "starter"), after which the tube ends are capped with radiotron-type bases. The third picture shows finished lamps following exhausting of tubes and attachment of caps and base-pins. The attendant has lighted a group of lamps which have been racked for inspection.

THE NEW fluorescent lumiline lamps announced recently before engineering groups in New York, are described by the General Electric Company, in whose Nela Park laboratories the lamp was developed, as of electric discharge type using mercury vapor as the medium for sustaining the arc. Physically, the lamp is a glass tube, to the sides of which certain chemical substances in powder form are applied. A large amount of fairly short ultra-violet radiation is produced in the tube, which radiation so acts upon the powders that it is transformed into radiation at wave lengths producing the visible portion of the color spectrum.

The lamps, which are available in three lengths—18, 24 and 36 inches—operate only on a. c. circuits. Being essentially arc lamps, control equipment is necessary, and it is stated by the General Electric Company that at least for the present, each lamp requires its own separate control auxiliary. Experimental work is now being conducted to determine the most suitable type of auxiliary.

Two Wattages for Standard Voltage

The available lamps are in nominal wattages of 15, 20 and 30. The 15- and 20-watt lamps can be operated on standard 110-120-volt lines; for the 30-watt type, however, a small 2-to-1 ratio transformer is necessary for standard electric light socket attachment. The wattage loss in the auxiliaries is likely to range from 15% to 30% of the lamp wattage.

Specification sheets released by the General Electric Company note that the wattage of each lamp now available is approximately 10 watts per foot, which means "that if we think of them purely as generators of light similar in color quality to Mazda lamps, the 18-inch lamp is approximately equal to a 40-watt regular [Mazda] or 60-watt [filament] lumiline lamp. . . . For the lighting of relatively large areas to high foot-candle values, the use of low-wattage Mazda lamps would be fairly expensive due to the number of sources required. This cost would be even higher with fluorescent lamps due to the cost of the operating auxiliary. We believe, therefore, that the fields, at least for the present lamps available, will be largely for decorative lighting."

One of the many applications of fluorescent lumiline lamps—in a ceiling trough fixture, providing indirect "daylight" illumination.

An exception to such restriction is the "daylight" fluorescent lamp, which gives illumination approaching daylight quality "at something better than 30 lumens per watt."

Five Classes of Color Available

The colors now available are red, gold, pink, blue and green, which are in addition to "daylight" and "white" light. The powders effecting the color production vary in the efficiency with which they convert ultra-violet energy into visible light. The green lamp is most efficient, producing 60 lumens per watt in the 30-watt size. The blue lamp is least efficient, its light production amounting to about one-third of that of the green.

In outdoor installations, the new lamps are sensitive to temperature change. They operate best in exterior locations at temperatures ranging from 60° to 90°. Extreme temperatures materially reduce the light output, and it is therefore recommended that for the present, exterior installations be confined to warm climates and seasons.

The Nela Park engineers estimate the average useful life of a fluorescent lumiline lamp to be well over 1,000 hours in ordinary lighting service.

Ticket Mutilator With Cutting Rolls Of Higher Capacity

A TICKET mutilator representing partial redesigning of previous remodels, has been placed on the market by the Globe Ticket Company of Philadelphia. The cutting rolls have been revised to provide greater destroying capacity and to reduce power consumption. They are made of hardened and ground steel, and are actuated by a mechanism employing a V-belt with an idler mounted on a swing arm adjustable to take up stretch. The motor is 1/2-h. p. induction-repulsion type for a.

c. operation at 110-120 volts; however, a d. c. motor can be provided.

The mechanism is protected by a circuit breaker containing a thermal element which, should the machine be choked, automatically breaks the circuit.

All bearings are of bronze and are lubricated from grease cups.

The cabinet is entirely of steel, with a chrome-plated top containing the hopper. The top is hinged to permit convenient access for lubrication and emptying.

Manager Finds Way to Play New Hi-Range Prints

NEW YORK—"Like many other exhibitors, I have recently faced the problem of playing the new low-level sound prints and have often been forced to choose between inferior sound as reproduced from the old-style recordings, or attempt to play new prints with the sound so low that patrons complained they could not hear," declared Harry Karesh, owner of the Park West Theatre here.

"I asked my Altec Inspector, W. B. Essex, if anything could be done about it. He examined my sound system, and informed me he could make the needed modifications as a part of my regular service policy without additional cost.

"I now play the new prints perfectly. I figure my Altec service, in this instance alone, has more than paid for itself for months to come."

Let the Altec Service Inspector explain how he sets up a Performance Standard for your individual equipment (an exclusive Altec Service agreement feature), and how that gives you greater protection.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• With development work still proceeding, the International Projector Corporation expects to have a 16-mm. unit sound projector ready for the market by the end of this year. The new product, the exact design of which is far from being definitely determined, is not likely to be available before that time, according to Herbert Griffin, vice president of the company and head of engineering. Distribution arrangements have not been made, but inasmuch as the projector will be designed exclusively for non-theatrical use, it may be marketed through some other concern than the National Theatre Supply Company, distributors of all other International Projector product.

• Contracts calling for emergency protection and regular servicing of the 76 theatres of the Minnesota Amusement Company, have been signed by the circuit with the Altec Service Corporation.

• Joe Hornstein, Inc., of New York, has been named exclusive distributor of U. S. Air-Conditioning Corporation equipment, for theatre installations, in New York City and Eastern New Jersey.

• A new catalog, covering ticket choppers, lobby hardware, display frames, speaking tubes and directional signs, has been issued by Newman Brothers, Inc., of Cincinnati.

• A spring catalog, numbered 71, has been issued by the Wholesale Radio Service Company, Inc., of New York. Theatre equipment listed, illustrated and described include amplifiers and other elements of theatre sound systems, and complete public address systems.

• The Allied Seating Company, Inc., which has been located at 358 W. 44th Street, New York City, has removed to 36 W. 13th Street.

• Reduction in prices of high-wattage incandescent lamps, amount to 17.3% of the former prices, has been announced by Westinghouse. The reductions apply to lamps of from 75 to 500 watts.

• RCA Photophone reports that over twice as many theatres contracted for RCA sound equipment servicing during the first three months of this year than in the corresponding period of 1937. Three out of four of all present RCA servicing contracts, according to Edward C. Cahill, service manager, include parts replacement.

MODERN PROJECTION

PROJECTION • SOUND REPRODUCTION ACOUSTICS

A New Sound System Designed By a Projection Organization

Examining the new sound reproduction equipment of the International Projector Corporation, engineered with access to patents of Western Electric and RCA

A STRIKING number of original features of great practicality are presented in the recently announced Simplex sound systems, which show themselves at first glance to the product of men who have had long experience with real theatre operation. Extreme simplicity of design and construction, light weight, small size and inexpensive components available everywhere at moment's notice are combined with the best modern sound quality. The accessibility of every part to instant inspection and repair is outstanding.

An example of the way practical problems have been recognized and reduced to the simplest solution is shown in the fact that every system, from smallest to largest, uses identical equipment throughout. The larger theatres merely add a greater number of the same amplifiers and speakers. Thus sound results (aside from auditorium acoustics) are absolutely uniform, whether the theatre seats 300 patrons or 5,000.

To choose another point at random, the exciter lamps are lit with direct current, drawn from a rectifier, for the sake of high quality. But weight, bulk and cost are saved by using a rectifier just large enough to supply a single lamp, while the idle one is partially heated with a.c. to avoid change-over lag, and a switch permits full a.c. operation in emergencies caused by rectifier trouble. Similarly practical design is found in the use of loud speakers with permanent magnet fields—whereby a bulky, expensive and possibly troublesome item of apparatus, the speaker field supply rectifier, is eliminated entirely.

Design of the Soundhead

The soundhead is shown in Figures 1 and 2. Film motion is controlled by the familiar free-running double flywheel known variously as rotary stabilizer or kinetic scanner. Double sprockets insure against sound flutter originating in the take-up action. The exciter lamp is concealed behind the shield in the left-hand compartment. It is mounted on a fully adjustable, instantly replaceable socket. The photo-electric cell is concealed in the vertical tube in the main film compartment. A mirror reflects the light to the cell after it has passed through the sound track. The optical system, hidden in the picture behind the photocell housing, can be adjusted in the theatre. The optical system, photoelectric cell, exciter lamp and rotary stabilizer constitute an independent unit which is mounted in the sound head but completely cushioned from the sprockets and other drive parts, for the purpose of minimizing vibration. The photo-cell and its leads are guarded against oil, and completely shielded against noise pickup.

The coaxial cable from the photo-cell goes to the volume control amplifier, shown in its casing on the front wall in Figure 1. This is a two-stage unit, incorporating an adjustable resistor equalizing projector volume levels, in addition to the volume control shown in the picture, which is used for ordinary operation. The amplifier has no power pack, but receives heater and plate voltage from the system amplifier. Photo-cell excitation voltage and exciter lamp current, also originating in the main amplifying rack, pass through this cabinet on their way to the projector. One such cabinet, with amplifier, volume control, equalizer and bulls-eye signal lamp, is provided for each sound head. The changeover switch is at the top of the cabinet, and functions to change over sound regardless of which of the two switches is used or which projector is running. Changeover switching is "electronic," operating on a grid in the volume amplifier, and not subject to click.

but two stages and no power pack, is so small that two such amplifiers can be fitted in the cabinet shown. Only one is supplied normally. A second can, however, be added at any time, to provide complete emergency facilities from the photo-cell to the loud speakers. (Few dual channel theatre systems, up to now, included dual channel photo-cell amplification). The second volume control amplifier, if added, will also care for such future requirements as push-pull or stereophonic sound.

Drive and Amplifier "Rack"

The drive motor and gears are of conventional type, but the method of mounting the projector head includes a new mechanical feature that eliminates all "shimming" or other difficulty in effecting a perfect gear mesh. The projector head can easily be taken down and replaced between reels; meshing gears perfectly has been made a matter of only two or three seconds instead of several hours as in most early systems and some rather recent ones. New lubricating provisions protect against oil.

Figure 3 shows a system "rack," small and light enough to be hung on the projection room wall at any convenient location. It contains the power amplifier (or ampli-compartment. Meters equipped with multiple-position switches read the plate current of each tube, while a multiple-color dial behind the needle shows whether each is performing as it should.

The front cover (Figure 3) lifts off, exposing the individual compartments. Each unit can be made to slide forward out of the cabinet, as shown in Figure 4, and after it has been drawn forward can be rotated as in Figure 5. Every part and wire is thus exposed to the quickest and most convenient inspection. The smaller volume control amplifiers on the front wall are made accessible by a similar cabinet design.

All parts of these amplifiers, including tubes, are common radio and public address types that can be found anywhere if needed in a hurry; and inexpensive because they are not made for theatre use alone, but in quantities to meet a wide demand. Circuits are ultra-modern, including reverse feedback.

The filter network panel, the central panel in Figure 3, is equipped with a jack connection for headphone monitoring and for connection of an output meter, as commonly used in servicing to check response.

The monitor loudspeaker can be operated either through its own amplifier, or, for testing purposes or trouble-shooting, directly from the system amplifier. This provision enables the projectionist to determine at once if any noise, bad quality or other fault heard in his monitor is also heard by the audience.

The dual loudspeaker system, shown in Figure 6, is of ultra-modern theatre design, but features permanent magnet units and baffles or horns made of plywood and therefore exceptionally light in weight, imposing a minimum of strain on the theatre rigging wherever the speakers must be flown with the screen. In systems using more than one high-frequency or low-frequency speaker unit, the network panel of Figure 3 is equipped with special switches that permit each unit to operate singly for routine testing purposes or prompt location of a defect.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

THE LARGEST PROJECTION UNION MARKS ITS SILVER ANNIVERSARY

WITH 2,150 active members, New York's local Union No. 306, IATSE & MPMO, is by far the largest projectionists' trade organization in the world, which fact merits notice in these columns at this time when it is celebrating the 25th anniversary of its founding.

'Way back in the early days of our industry (1908, to be exact), Local Union No. 35 of the International alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (Moving Picture Machine Operator was not added until July, 1915) conceived the idea that motion picture projectionists should be organized and that since No. 35 was itself composed wholly of spotlight operators, the moving picture operators (as they then were known) should be under their jurisdiction. The idea was carried into effect and the men organized into a body known as Auxiliary Branch of Local Union No. 35, IATSE.

The auxiliary, however, was not permitted to elect its own executive officers—the officers of No. 35 acted for it! This and some other objectionable features incited so much turmoil that finally Charles Shay, then president of the IATSE, revoked the auxiliary charter in August 1912, whereupon a body of projectionists was organized and chartered as a branch of Local No. 35. Joseph D. Basson was elected its first president, and Fred Stoffregen, secretary-treasurer. (Incidentally, I became a member of this union.)

While this arrangement was an improvement over the Auxiliary, it was not wholly satisfactory, and on July 9, 1913, a new charter was issued, divorcing the two locals and making the projectionists' Local Union No. 306, IATSE. Again I answered the first roll call.

Well do I remember the night the final arguments were made demanding complete separation from No. 35. By invitation, that old war horse, Samuel Gompers, came to address the body. The meeting was a riot of argument, and was not ready to receive the distinguished visitor until 3 o'clock in the morning, almost two hours after his arrival!

I was one of a committee selected to entertain Mr. Gompers during the wait. There was a bar room beneath the meeting hall, and there the "entertainment" took place. How in Heaven's name I remained beside, instead of under the table I don't quite know, for Samuel Gompers, believe you me, had capacity! At the end of the wait while myself and the other committeemen were barely able to negotiate the stairway, Mr. Gompers entered the hall amid tumultuous cheering and made as magnificent a speech as I have ever listened to.

From that occasion forward, Local 306 has steadily grown. In 1935, Joseph D. Basson was again chosen president. Besides the officers, which include a recording secretary, financial secretary, and four business representatives, there is a staff of nine assistants.

This may seem unnecessarily large but I drop in quite frequently to chat with President Basson and the other officers and notice there is but little "loafing." Every one is busy—so much so in fact that not infrequently, while always made welcome, I do not tarry.

The local has the responsibility not only at least three huge cities and dozens of smaller ones. The members of Local 306 earn, in wages, a yearly total in excess of five and a half million dollars.

Celebrating its 25th birthday at a banquet at the Hotel Astor in New York on May 8, Local 306 had to prepare for more than 3,000 guests, requiring that the party be given in two sections.

LOCAL 277 CELEBRATES ITS 25th ANNIVERSARY

RESPONDING to an invitation from Local Union 277, IATSE & MPMO, Bridgeport, Conn., I traveled to that important manufacturing city to take part in its Silver Anniversary party. Local 277 was organized March 27, 1913; today it has 54 members and is on such friendly terms with exhibitors and managers that when they have a party, the projectionists are invited to attend, and when the union "throws" one, the exhibitors and managers turn out, which is as it should be. It is infinitely better to make no unreasonable demands, and far better for exhibitors and managers to consider demands in the light of justice, fair dealing and common sense, than for employer and employe to be continually bickering. With a single exception, all the theatres in the territory covered by Local 277, employ its members.

The celebration started at the Shratfield Hotel where there was buffet lunch and open house to all, beginning at 7:30 p. m. At 11:30 400 projectionists, exhibitors, theatre managers, state officials and friends of the local gathered at the Seven Gables Inn, five miles from Bridgeport, where there was dancing and dining and a few speeches, the chief of which was by Joseph Tone, Connecticut Labor Commissioner, who represented Governor Wilbur L. Cross. Mayor Jasper McLevy of Bridgeport, also spoke. Among others attending were:

Capt. W. F. Stiles of the State police, who, assisted by Earl Morin, Inspector, has general charge of motion picture theatres, including examination and licensing of projectionists; Mr. Morin; Wally Byrnes, president, and Charles Beckman, secretary of the American Projection Society; Richard F. Walsh, International Vice President, IATSE & MPMO; Joseph Basson, president, and Joseph Kelbau, business representative, of Local 306; Lester Isaac, supervisor of projection of Loew Theatres, who was toastmaster; P. A. McGuire, advertising director of International Projector Corporation; Samuel A. Lefkowitz, representing the American Federation of Actors; Thomas Shea, Connecticut Unemployment Commissioner; Edward J. Buckingham, Compensation Commissioner; William Hutchinson of the National Theatre Supply Company; J. O'Neil of the Connecticut A. F. of L. organization, and various Bridgeport newspaper editors.

The officers of Local Union 277 are: president, John Connor; vice president, Louis Levy; business agent, James V. Fensore; recording secretary, Frank Musante; financial secretary, John A. Martin; treasurer, Fred F. Lewis.

You need high intensity projection for good black-and-white pictures and satisfactory projection of the new color pictures demands a white light—light of the same characteristics as that used in the studios.

DISTRIBUTOR ISSUES BOOKLET ON FILM CARE

ONE OF THE major producer-distributors has commendably seen fit to address projectionists on the projection of prints. The company is 20th Century-Fox, who has prepared a seven-page brochure entitled "A Friendly Chat and a Few Suggestions to the Projectionist" for distribution by the various exchanges, for the purpose of giving information that "will lessen the probabilities of damaged film."

Among the suggestions for the care of film while it is in the theatre, the booklet warns against continued use of sprockets having undercut teeth, and against aperture and takeup tension that is too great.

The booklet is available at the 20th Century-Fox branches, or from the company's supervisor of exchange operation, 444 West 56th Street, New York.

A DEVICE OF PROMISE FOR DETERMINING VOLUME

FOR A LONG time I have declaimed against obliging projectionists to be responsible for good sound without direct contact with the auditorium. Projectionists have had absolutely no means of judging correctness of auditorium volume level. They have been compelled to rely upon second-hand information supplied by an "observer."

At a recent meeting of the Projection Practice Committee I induced a manufacturer to demonstrate a sound meter that might bridge the gap; however, it gave small promise. But perhaps that demonstration served to stir things up, for at a later meeting S. K. Wolf, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and acoustics engineer, demonstrated what he terms a "visual loudness indicator" which in spite of some "bugs" yet to be ironed out, impressed the committee as having distinct promise.

The instrument is a glass tube 18 inches long and 1 inch in diameter. In this tube there are placed three electrodes, one of which extends the entire length of the tube. A vacuum is pumped in the tube and a mixture of inert glass is placed in it at a very low pressure. The inside of the glass tube is coated with a material which will react to excitation of both ultra-violet and positive ion bombardment, which is caused by the d. c. voltage being applied to the electrodes of the tube. The coating which is used is of three different types; each type will "fluoresce" at a different color. The colors being used are green, blue and red, the blue being used for 7 inches at the lower end of the tube, followed by 4 inches of green, then 7 inches of red. The operation of the tube is as follows:

A d. c. voltage of 250 volts is placed on the two small electrodes to produce a striking voltage and to establish a zero point on the tube, then the a. c. voltage is placed on the long electrode from the output of a voltage amplifier, to which a microphone is attached to pick up the sound under observation. The range of the tube is approximately 40 decibels.

The tube can be used, for example, to check the level of the human speaking voice.

"When the sound intensity is too low," Mr. Wolf explained, "the blue portion of the tube lights up; when the sound intensity is brought up to a proper level, the green portion of the tube lights up, and this green portion of the tube represents the three decibel changes that are required to modulate a broadcast station from 65 per cent to 85 per cent, so if the green portion of the tube is illuminated at all times, the loudness is maintained at the proper level. If the sound intensity is too loud, then the red portion of the tube lights up."

It takes approximately 250 volts, a. c., to operate the tube over its full range. The tube can be calibrated to read directly on a decibel scale and by using a special type of logarithmic amplifier, the scale is made linear. Mr. Wolf stated that the tube has a great many practical applications in the acoustical field and that its great advantage is that the entire audio intensity range is on one scale—no switching scales need be made.

REVERSING OR REPLACING INTERMITTENT SPROCKETS

A. J. HAWK, projectionist at Schine's Bucyrus theater in Bucyrus, Ohio, offers a suggestion regarding the trouble described by R. W. Kiser, projectionist at the Van Wert theatre in Van Wert, Ohio, in the April 2nd issue of BETTER THEATRES. He had the same trouble and found it to be due to defective carbon cores. The manufacturer requested the return of all carbons then in stock, replacing them with others. Such defects very seldom get past the rigid inspection given carbons before they are permitted to leave the factory, but still a "fluke" will happen, though only at rare intervals. After giving this information Friend Hawk asks, "Is it good practice to reverse an intermittent sprocket every six months in a three-a-day theatre?"

That is a question that the Projection Practice Committee of the SMPE still is struggling with. There is as yet no standard on the amount of wear of intermittent sprocket teeth permissible. If there were such a standard their still would be no instrument by means of which such wear could be measured by the projectionist. As to "six months," that period is a wholly indefinite thing unless the exact amount of aperture tension is known.

Projectionists can readily see that, given sprocket teeth of the same material and hardness, the wear will be in exact proportion to film footage and tension applied. The time element is secondary. The best advice I am as yet able to give is that the sprocket teeth be examined every 30 days, using a strong reading glass or some other fairly strong magnifying glass, the projectionist to effect replacement or reversal as soon as (a) any undercut appears more or less in the form of a notch at the base of the teeth, and (b) if the wear is smoothly rounding in form and apparently begins to effect screen image steadiness or the sprocket holes in the film.

MR. HERSEY NOTES THE OTHER FELLOW'S TROUBLES

FRANCIS E. HERSEY, president of Local 707, Hermet, Calif., offers some practical suggestions to projectionists reporting troubles in these columns.

"I note," writes Hersey, "that Malger H. Gray, Center theatre, Mount Airy, N. C., has intermittently, what he describes as a 'thin black strip' at the right side of his screen. Not a very clear description, but I think I know what is meant. If my diagnosis of his fault is correct, the fault is not necessarily in his projectors; he will observe it most frequently when projecting prints made from a negative that is a com-

Projection room of the only Trans-Lux theatre with standard front projection that opened a few months ago at 49th Street and Broadway, New York. bination of two negatives as, for example, stock shot of a boat used as a background, with another negative superimposed. It may also appear when news or travel reel shots are spliced into feature pictures. Close inspection may discover that at the right side the picture space, for some reason known only to studio super-minds, is in a small degree blocked out. It is a condition projectionists have encountered more and more frequently during the past six months.

"I also notice that R. W. Kiser complains of his 'suprex' carbons giving trouble. Well, Dad, why shouldn't they? He is using 44 amperes through a 9-12 mm. trim. The 6-7 trim is rated at 40-50 amperes. His 9-12 trim might handle twice his amperage and still not be over-loaded. I suggest he use proper trim and if there is trouble, to split the positive carbon copper coating and see what happens. If that stops the 'spitting', either take the matter up with the carbon manufacturer or bake the carbons thoroughly before using. If baking does not scare the trouble ghost away, then possibly the electromagnets are not working as they should.

"In conclusion, a year ago I consulted you concerning the installation of low-intensity versus 'suprex' carbon arc lamps for a 500-seat house. I finally selected the latter type (Brenkert Enarc) and have been delighted with the results. Use 44 amperes for average prints. For dense ones we increase amperage to maintain same picture brightness at all times, or nearly so at any rate. And believe me, the customers appreciate and like it. Our screen image is 16', 6"; Projection angle 3.5°."

To satisfy myself concerning the "thin line" matter, I consulted a film laboratory expert, who approved what Brother Hersey has said, but added, "Such a condition might also appear when projecting old, badly shrunk prints."
